The terms “dual status offender” and “Review Board” are defined in s. 672.1. “Minister” is defined in s. 672.68(1). For further cross-references with respect to dual status offenders, see references under s. 672.68.

SYNOPSIS

This provision requires notice to be given to the Minister or the Review Board where either party wishes to discharge the dual status offender from custody.

A warrant of committal must be issued which may be in Form 50 by the Review Board once a placement decision is determined.

DETENTION TO COUNT AS SERVICE OF TERM / Disposition takes precedence over probation orders.

672.71. (1) Each day of detention of a dual status offender pursuant to a placement decision or a custodial disposition shall be treated as a day of service of the term of imprisonment, and the accused shall be deemed, for all purposes, to be lawfully confined in a prison.

(2) When a dual status offender is convicted or discharged on the conditions set out in a probation order made under section 736 in respect of an offence but is not sentenced to a term of imprisonment, the custodial disposition in respect of the accused comes into force and, notwithstanding subsection 738(1), takes precedence over any probation order made in respect of the offence. 1991, c. 43, s. 4.

NOTE: Subsection (2) amended 1995, c. 22, s. 10 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council) by replacing the references to ss. 736 and 738(1) with ss. 730 and 732.2(1).

CROSS-REFERENCES

The terms "accused", "disposition" and "dual status offender" are defined in s. 672.1. Reference should be made to s. 672.67 which states that in the case of a dual status offender, the latter disposition, whether it be a sentence or a custodial disposition pursuant to s. 672.54(c) prevails pending any placement decision by the Review Board. For further cross-references pertaining to dual status offenders, see references under s. 672.68.

SYNOPSIS

Where a dual status offender is detained pursuant either to a placement decision or custodial disposition, each day served in the facility is treated as a day served of the term of imprisonment. If a dual status offender is given a conditional discharge or a suspended sentence, the custodial disposition takes precedence and the probation order is deemed to come into effect after the custodial disposition is completed notwithstanding s. 738(1) which states that a probation order comes into force on the date that the order is made.

Appeals

GROUND FOR APPEAL / Limitation period for appeal / Appeal to be heard expeditiously.

672.72. (1) Any party may appeal against a disposition or placement decision made by a court or Review Board to the court of appeal of the province where the disposition or placement decision was made on any ground of appeal that raises a question of law or fact alone or of mixed law and fact.

(2) Notice of an appeal against a disposition or placement decision shall be given in the manner directed by the applicable rules of court within fifteen days after the day on which the parties are provided with a copy of the placement decision or disposition and the reasons for it or within any further time that the court of appeal, or a judge of that court, may direct.

(3) The court of appeal shall hear an appeal against a disposition or placement decision in or out of the regular sessions of the court, as soon as practicable after the day on which the notice of appeal is given, within any period that may be fixed by the court of appeal, a judge of the court of appeal, or the rules of that court. 1991, c. 43, s. 4.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The term “court of appeal” is defined in s. 2 of the Criminal Code. See s. 672.1 for definition of “disposition”, “party” and “Review Board”.

Rights of appeal are conferred by the Criminal Code which also defines the authority of the court to hear and determine the appeal from a disposition or placement decision by a court or Review Board under s. 672.78. The powers of the court of appeal in respect of disposition or placement orders are defined in s. 672.76. An appeal shall be determined based on the transcript subject to the power of the court to admit any other evidence pursuant to s. 683(1). See s. 672.73. Note also that upon receiving the notice of the appeal, the clerk of the court must notify the court or Review Board responsible for the decision so that all exhibits and other materials are forwarded to the court of appeal. See s. 672.74. In addition to the rights of appeal contained in s. 672.72, the Attorney General has a right of appeal against the dismissal of an application to find the accused is a dangerous mentally disordered accused on a ground of law alone. See s. 672.8. The accused may appeal from a finding that the accused is a dangerous mentally disordered accused and increasing the cap on a question of law, fact or mixed fact and law. See 672.79.

Reference should be made to ss. 672.75 to 672.77 which outline the powers of the court of appeal with respect to the accused pending appeal. Upon filing of the notice of appeal, an absolute discharge or treatment order is automatically stayed subject to the court of appeal’s authority to require that the discharge or treatment order be carried out pending the determination of the appeal. See s. 672.75. Where the order is not automatically stayed, any party may apply to the court to stay or enforce a disposition order or placement decision pending the appeal and the court of appeal may require the order to be carried out, suspended and make any other disposition which is appropriate. See s. 672.76. Note that, if the court of appeal simply suspends the disposition or placement order, any disposition, interim release or detention order, that was in place prior to the disposition or placement decision appealed from took effect, is in force. See s. 672.77.

Reference should also be made to s. 672.82 which allows the accused or other party to request that the Review Board review a disposition, however, such a request is deemed to be an abandonment of any appeal against disposition pursuant to s. 672.72. There are no analogous provisions with respect to placement decisions.

SYNOPSIS

Subsection (1) creates a right of appeal from a disposition or placement order by a court or Review Board for any party on a question of law, fact or mixed fact and law to the court of appeal. A notice of appeal must be filed within 15 days from the date when the parties are provided with reasons for the disposition. This period may be extended by the court of appeal or a judge of the court of appeal. The provision requires that the court of appeal must hear the appeal as soon as practicable within any period that is fixed by the court, a judge of the court of appeal or the rules of that court. The effect of this section is that all appeals from dispositions of placement decisions are to the court of appeal, even those made in respect of summary conviction matters. Appeals in respect of the verdict of not criminally responsible and the finding of unfitness, however, follow the normal appeal routes under Parts XXI and XXVII, as the case may be.

ANNOTATIONS

No appeal lies from the decision of the Review Board refusing to make a recommendation for transfer of the accused out of the province pursuant to s. 672.86: Krueger v. Ontario (Criminal Code Review Board) (1994), 95 C.C.C. (3d) 88, 73 O.A.C. 390 (C.A.).

APPEAL ON THE TRANSCRIPT / Additional evidence.

672.73. (1) An appeal against a disposition by a court or Review Board or placement decision by a Review Board shall be based on a transcript of the proceedings and any other evidence that the court of appeal finds necessary to admit in the interests of justice.

(2) For the purpose of admitting additional evidence under this section, subsections 683(1) and (2) apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require. 1991, c. 43, s. 4.

CROSS-REFERENCES

"Court of appeal" is defined in s. 2 of the Criminal Code. The terms "court" and "Review Board" are defined in s. 672.1. As to the powers of the court of appeal to admit evidence other than the transcripts, see s. 683(1) and (2). For further cross-references with respect to appeals, see references under s. 672.72.

SYNOPSIS

In most instances, the court will make the determination of the appeal based on the transcript of the proceedings. Note that the appellant must provide the court of appeal and the respondent with a transcript by virtue of s. 672.74(4). The court of appeal, however, has the discretion pursuant to s. 683(1) of the Criminal Code to admit any other evidence which is necessary in the interests of justice.

NOTICE OF APPEAL TO BE GIVEN TO COURT OR REVIEW BOARD / Transmission of records to court of appeal / Record to be kept by court of appeal / Appellant to provide transcript of evidence / Saving.

672.74. (1) The clerk of the court of appeal, on receiving notice of an appeal against a disposition or placement decision, shall notify the court or Review Board that made the disposition.

(2) On receipt of notification under subsection (1), the court or Review Board shall transmit to the court of appeal, before the time that the appeal is to be heard or within any time that the court of appeal or a judge of that court may direct,

- (a) a copy of the disposition or placement decision;
- (b) all exhibits filed with the court or Review Board or a copy of them; and
- (c) all other material in its possession respecting the hearing.

(3) The clerk of the court of appeal shall keep the material referred to in subsection (2) with the records of the court of appeal.

(4) Unless it is contrary to an order of the court of appeal or any applicable rules of court, the appellant shall provide the court of appeal and the respondent with a transcript of any evidence taken before a court or Review Board by a stenographer or a sound recording apparatus, certified by the stenographer or in accordance with subsection 540(6), as the case may be.

(5) An appeal shall not be dismissed by the court of appeal by reasons only that a person other than the appellant failed to comply with this section. 1991, c. 43, s. 4.

CROSS-REFERENCES

For further cross-references with respect to appeals, see references under s. 672.72.

SYNOPSIS

Upon receiving the notice of appeal, the clerk of the court of appeal must notify the court or Review Board responsible for the decision and upon receipt of the notice, the court or Review Board shall forward to the court of appeal a copy of the decision, exhibits and other material with respect to the hearing. The appellant must provide the court of appeal and the respondent with a transcript of the evidence. Non-compliance by a person other than an appellant is not grounds for dismissing the appeal.

AUTOMATIC SUSPENSION OF CERTAIN DISPOSITIONS.

672.75. The filing of a notice of appeal against a disposition made under paragraph 672.54(a) or section 672.58 suspends the application of the disposition pending the determination of the appeal. 1991, c. 43, s. 4.

CROSS-REFERENCES

“Court of appeal” is defined in s. 2. “Court”, “disposition” and “Review Board” are defined in s. 672.1. Reference should also be had to s. 672.76 allowing any party to apply to the court to stay or enforce a disposition order or placement disposition pending an appeal. In addition, where a disposition or placement decision is suspended, any pre-existing dispositions, detention orders or interim release orders are deemed to be in effect by virtue of s. 672.77. For further cross-references respecting appeals, see references under s. 672.72.

SYNOPSIS

An absolute discharge subsequent to a finding of not criminally responsible on account of mental disorder pursuant to s. 672.54 or a treatment order pursuant to s. 672.58 is automatically stayed upon filing of a notice of appeal. Notwithstanding this provision, however, the court of appeal has the authority pursuant to s. 672.76(2)(a) to require that the discharge or treatment order be carried out pending the determination of the appeal.

APPLICATION RESPECTING DISPOSITIONS UNDER APPEAL / Discretionary powers respecting suspension of dispositions / Copy of order to parties.

672.76. (1) Any party who gives notice to each of the other parties, within the time and in the manner prescribed, may apply to a judge of the court of appeal for an order under this section respecting a disposition or placement decision that is under appeal.

(2) On receipt of an application made pursuant to subsection (1) a judge of the court of appeal may, if satisfied that the mental condition of the accused justifies it,

- (a) by order, direct that a disposition made under paragraph 672.54(a) or section 672.58 be carried out pending the determination of the appeal, notwithstanding section 672.75;
- (b) by order, direct that the application of a placement decision or a disposition made under paragraph 672.54(b) or (c) be suspended pending the determination of the appeal;
- (c) where the application of a disposition is suspended pursuant to section 672.75 or paragraph (b), make any other disposition in respect of the accused that is appropriate in the circumstances, other than a disposition under paragraph 672.54(a) or section 672.58, pending the determination of the appeal;
- (d) where the application of a placement decision is suspended pursuant to an order made under paragraph (b), make any other placement decision that is appropriate in the circumstances, pending the determination of the appeal; and
- (e) give any directions that the judge considers necessary for expediting the appeal.

(3) A judge of the court of appeal who makes an order under this section shall send a copy of the order to each of the parties without delay. 1991, c. 43, s. 4.

CROSS-REFERENCES

“Court” and “disposition” defined in s. 672.1. Reference should be made to s. 672.75 providing for an automatic stay of an absolute discharge subsequent to a verdict of not criminally responsible on account of mental disorder or a treatment order. For further cross-references respecting appeals, see references under s. 672.72.

SYNOPSIS

Where the order is not automatically stayed pursuant to s. 672.75, any party may apply to a judge of the court of appeal to stay of enforcement of a disposition order or placement decision pending appeal. The judge may, if satisfied that the mental condition of the accused so justifies, do any of the following: (1) order that a disposition made under s. 672.54(a) or s. 672.58 be carried out notwithstanding s. 672.75; (2) suspend a placement decision or a disposition made under s. 672.54(b) or (c) until the determination of the appeal; (3) make any other disposition or placement decision [with some exceptions] where the disposition or placement decision is suspended pending appeal; (4) give directions expediting the appeal. Copies of the order must be given to all parties without delay.

EFFECT OF SUSPENSION OF DISPOSITION.

672.77. Where the application of a disposition or placement decision appealed from is suspended, a disposition, or in the absence of a disposition any order for the interim release or detention of the accused, that was in effect immediately before the disposition or placement decision appealed from took effect, shall be in force pending the determination of the appeal, subject to any disposition made under paragraph 672.76(2)(c). 1991, c. 43, s. 4.

CROSS-REFERENCES

For further cross-references relating to appeals, see references under s. 672.72.

SYNOPSIS

Where a disposition or placement decision is suspended and no order for the interim release or detention of the accused is issued by the court of appeal, any disposition, interim release or detention order, that was in place prior to the disposition or placement decision appealed from took effect, is in force.

POWERS OF COURT OF APPEAL / Idem / Orders that the court may make.

672.78. (1) The court of appeal may allow an appeal against a disposition or placement decision and set aside an order made by the court or Review Board, where the court of appeal is of the opinion that

- (a) it is unreasonable or cannot be supported by the evidence;
- (b) it is based on a wrong decision on a question of law; or
- (c) there was a miscarriage of justice.

(2) The court of appeal may dismiss an appeal against a disposition or placement decision where the court is of the opinion

- (a) that paragraphs (1)(a), (b) and (c) do not apply; or
- (b) that paragraph (1)(b) may apply, but the court finds that no substantial wrong or miscarriage of justice has occurred.

(3) Where the court of appeal allows an appeal against a disposition or placement decision, it may

- (a) make any disposition under section 672.54 or any placement decision that the court or Review Board could have made;
- (b) refer the matter back to the court or Review Board for rehearing, in whole or in part, in accordance with any directions that the court of appeal considers appropriate; or
- (c) make any other order that justice requires. 1991, c. 43, s. 4.

CROSS-REFERENCES

“Court of appeal” is defined in s. 2. The terms “court”, “disposition” and “Review Board” are defined in s. 672.1. For further cross-references respecting appeals, see references under s. 672.72.

SYNOPSIS

This provision sets out the powers of the court of appeal with respect to a disposition or placement decision and incorporates the appeal powers contained in the Criminal Code. The court may set aside the order on the grounds that it is unreasonable and cannot be supported by evidence, is based on a mistake of law or there was a miscarriage of justice. Alternatively, the court may dismiss the appeal where these conditions are not met or where there is no substantial wrong or miscarriage of justice. If the court allows the appeal, it may make any disposition or placement decision that is appropriate, order a new hearing in the court or Review Board or make any other order that justice requires.

ANNOTATIONS

In determining whether a disposition by the Board is unreasonable, the Court of Appeal must recognize that the Board enjoys several advantages not available on appellate review especially as a result of the Board’s special medical expertise and knowledge of the various facilities available within the mental health system Peckham v. Ontario (Attorney General) (1994), 93 C.C.C. (3d) 443, 34 C.R. (4th) 227, 19 O.R. (3d) 766 (C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused 94 C.C.C. (3d) vi, 37 C.R. (4th) 399n.

APPEAL BY DANGEROUS MENTALLY DISORDERED ACCUSED / Disposition of appeal.

672.79. (1) Where a court finds an accused to be a dangerous mentally disordered accused and increases the cap applicable to the accused pursuant to section 672.65, the accused may appeal to the court of appeal against the increase in the cap on any ground of law or fact or mixed law and fact.

- (2) On an appeal by an accused under subsection (1), the court of appeal may
(a) quash any increase in the cap and impose any other cap that might have been imposed in respect of the offence, or order a new hearing; or (b) dismiss the appeal. 1991, c. 43, s. 4.

CROSS-REFERENCES

“Attorney General” defined in s. 2. “Capping of dispositions” defined in s. 672.64. “Dangerous mentally disordered accused” defined in s. 672.65. Pursuant to s. 672.8(3), the procedures contained in Part XXI of the Criminal Code apply to appeals under this provision.

SYNOPSIS

This provision provides a right of appeal from a finding that the accused is a dangerous mentally disordered accused increasing the cap. The accused may appeal on a question of law, fact or mixed fact and law. The court of appeal may quash the increase in the cap, impose any other cap or dismiss the appeal.

APPEAL BY ATTORNEY GENERAL / Disposition of appeal / Part XXI applies to appeal.

672.8. (1) The Attorney General may appeal against the dismissal of an application for a finding that the accused is a dangerous mentally disordered accused on any ground of law.

- (2) On an appeal by the Attorney General under subsection (1), the court of appeal may
(a) allow the appeal, designate the accused as a dangerous mentally disordered accused, and increase the cap in respect of the offence to a maximum of life, or order a new hearing; or

(b) dismiss the appeal.

(3) The provisions of Part XXI with respect to procedure on appeals apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, to appeals under this section or section 672.79. 1991, c. 43, s. 4.

CROSS-REFERENCES

"Attorney General" defined in s. 2. "Capping of dispositions defined in s. 672.64. "Dangerous mentally disordered accused" defined in s. 672.65. Reference should be made to Part XXI of the Criminal Code as to procedures to be followed.

SYNOPSIS

The Attorney General has a right of appeal against the dismissal of an application for a finding that the accused is a dangerous mentally disordered accused on a ground of law alone. The court of appeal may allow the appeal and so designate the accused and increase the cap or dismiss the appeal.

The procedures on appeals contained in Part XXI apply to appeals under this section with such modifications as are necessary.

Review of Dispositions

MANDATORY REVIEW OF DISPOSITIONS / Additional mandatory reviews in custody cases / Idem.

672.81. (1) A Review Board shall hold a hearing not later than twelve months after making a disposition and every twelve months thereafter for as long as the disposition remains in force, to review any disposition that it has made in respect of an accused, other than an absolute discharge under paragraph 672.54(a).

(2) The Review Board shall hold a hearing to review any disposition made under paragraph 672.54(b) or (c) as soon as is practicable after receiving notice that the person in charge of the place where the accused is detained or directed to attend

(a) has increased the restrictions on the liberty of the accused significantly for a period exceeding seven days; or

(b) requests a review of the disposition.

(3) Where an accused is detained in custody pursuant to a disposition made under paragraph 672.54(c) and a sentence of imprisonment is subsequently imposed on the accused in respect of another offence, the Review Board shall hold a hearing to review the disposition as soon as is practicable after receiving notice of that sentence. 1991, c. 43, s. 4.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The terms "disposition", "dual status offender" and "Review Board" are defined in s. 672.71. Reference should be made to s. 672.93 which requires the Review Board to review the disposition where the accused has been arrested as a result of a breach of a disposition or any condition of the disposition. The Review Board sitting in review of a prior disposition is empowered to make any other disposition or variation that is considered appropriate. See s. 672.83. The procedural rules for disposition hearings contained in s. 672.5 apply to review hearings. Note that, although any party may request the review of a disposition, the request is deemed to be an abandonment of any pending appeal by the party against the disposition. See s. 672.82.

SYNOPSIS

Section 672.81 deals with the review of dispositions. Pursuant to subsec. (1), the Review Board must conduct a review hearing every 12 months that the disposition remains in force subject to an absolute discharge. In addition, the Review Board is required to hold a review hearing as soon as is practicable subsequent to receiving notice in the following three circumstances: (1) where the place that the accused is detained has significantly increased restrictions on the liberty of the accused for more than seven days; (2) where the hospital requests a review; and (3) where the accused is detained in a hospital or in custody and becomes a dual status offender.

ANNOTATIONS

Any disposition made under this section must be made applying the criteria and scheme created by s. 672.54: Pinet v. Ontario (1995), 100 C.C.C. (3d) 343, 40 C.R. (4th) 113, 23 O.R. (3d) 97 (C.A.).

DISCRETIONARY REVIEW ON REQUEST / Review cancels appeal.

672.82. (1) A Review Board may hold a hearing to review any of its dispositions at any time, at the request of the accused or any other party.

(2) Where a party requests a review of a disposition under this section, the party is deemed to abandon any appeal against the disposition taken under section 672.72. 1991, c. 43, s. 4.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The terms “accused”, “disposition”, “party” and “Review Board” are defined in s. 672.1. As to appeals from dispositions, see s. 672.72. For further cross-references respecting review hearings, see references under s. 672.81.

SYNOPSIS

An accused or other party may request that the Review Board review the disposition at any time. A request for a review of a disposition, however, is deemed to be an abandonment of any appeal against disposition pursuant to s. 672.72.

DISPOSITION BY REVIEW BOARD / Idem.

672.83. (1) At a hearing held pursuant to section 672.81 or 672.82, the Review Board shall, except where a determination is made under subsection 672.48(1) that the accused is fit to stand trial, review the disposition made in respect of the accused and make any other disposition that the Review Board considers to be appropriate in the circumstances.

(2) Subsection 672.52(2), and sections 672.64 and 672.71 to 672.82 apply to a disposition made under this section, with such modifications as the circumstances require. 1991, c. 43, s. 4.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The term “unfit to stand trial” is defined in s. 2. The terms “Review Board” and “disposition” are defined in s. 672.1. Reference should be made to ss. 672.52(2), 672.64, 672.71 and 672.82. Reference should also be made to s. 672.48(1) which requires a Review Board which holds a hearing to review a disposition in respect of an accused who has been found unfit to stand trial to determine whether the accused is not fit. Where the accused is found fit to stand trial, the accused shall be sent back to court to try the issue.

SYNOPSIS

Except where the accused is determined to be fit to stand trial, the Review Board sitting in review of a prior disposition is empowered to make any other disposition or variation that is considered appropriate.

ANNOTATIONS

In holding a hearing under this section, the Board should apply the test set out under s. 672.54: Peckham v. Ontario (Attorney-General) (1994), 93 C.C.C. (3d) 443, 34 C.R. (4th) 227, 19 O.R. (3d) 766 (C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused 94 C.C.C. (3d) vi, 37 C.R. (4th) 399n.

PROCEDURE FOR REVIEW.

672.84. The Review Board shall hold a hearing to review a disposition under section 672.81 or 672.82 in accordance with the procedures described in section 672.5. 1991, c. 43, s. 4.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The term "Review Board" is defined in s. 672.1. Refer to s. 672.5 as to procedures to be followed by Review Board in conducting hearings.

SYNOPSIS

The procedural rules for disposition hearings contained in s. 672.5 apply to review hearings.

BRINGING ACCUSED BEFORE REVIEW BOARD.

672.85. For the purpose of bringing the accused in respect of whom a hearing under section 672.81 is to be held before the Review Board, the chairperson

- (a) shall order the person having custody of the accused to bring the accused to the hearing at the time and place fixed for it; or
- (b) may issue a summons or warrant to compel the accused to appear at the time and place fixed for the hearing, if the accused is not in custody. 1991, c. 43, s. 4.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The terms "accused", "chairperson" and "Review Board" are defined in s. 672.1. For further cross-references as to review of dispositions, see references under s. 672.81.

SYNOPSIS

The chairperson of the Review Board must compel the accused to attend court either by ordering the person having custody of the accused to bring the accused forth or by issuing a summons or warrant to the accused where the accused is not in custody.

Interprovincial Transfers

INTERPROVINCIAL TRANSFERS / Transfer where accused in custody / Transfer where accused not in custody.

672.86. (1) An accused who is detained in custody or directed to attend at a hospital pursuant to a disposition made by a court or Review Board under paragraph 672.54(c) or a court under section 672.58 may be transferred to any other place in Canada where

- (a) the Review Board of the province where the accused is detained or directed to attend recommends a transfer for the purpose of the reintegration of the accused into society or the recovery, treatment or custody of the accused; and

(b) the Attorney General of the provinces to and from which the accused is to be transferred give their consent.

(2) Where an accused who is detained in custody is to be transferred, an officer authorized by the Attorney General of the province where the accused is being detained shall sign a warrant specifying the place in Canada to which the accused is to be transferred.

(3) Where an accused who is not detained in custody is to be transferred, the Review Board of the province where the accused is directed to attend shall, by order,

(a) direct that the accused be taken into custody and transferred pursuant to a warrant described in subsection (2); or

(b) direct the accused to attend at a specified place in Canada, subject to any conditions that the Review Board considers appropriate. 1991, c. 43, s. 4.

CROSS-REFERENCES

“Attorney General” is defined in s. 2. The terms “accused”, “court”, “hospital”, and “Review Board” are defined in s. 672.1. As to inter-provincial jurisdiction of the Review Boards over the accused, the Attorneys General of the two provinces may enter an agreement allowing the Review Board of the province from which the accused has been transferred to retain jurisdiction. In addition, where the accused is transferred to another province other than by virtue of s. 672.86, such as where the accused is a dual status offender and offences occurred in different provinces, the Review Board from which the accused is transferred has exclusive jurisdiction over the accused. See s. 672.89. Similar to s. 672.88, the Attorneys General may derogate from this provision by agreement. Pursuant to s. 672.87, a warrant signed by the Attorney General constitutes sufficient authority for the person in charge of the accused to transfer the accused and for the person specified in the warrant to take charge of the accused.

SYNOPSIS

An accused who is directed to attend at a hospital for treatment or detention may be transferred to another province on the recommendation of the Review Board where the transfer is necessary for the purpose of the accused’s reintegration into society, recovery, treatment or custody of the accused. The transfer requires, however, the consent of the Attorneys General of both the province from which and to which the accused is being transferred. The Attorney General in the province from where the accused is to be transferred must sign a warrant specifying the place of transfer where the accused is in custody. If the accused is not in custody, the Review Board will direct that the accused be taken into custody and transferred or direct the accused to attend at the specified place subject to any conditions that are appropriate.

DELIVERY AND DETENTION OF ACCUSED.

672.87. A warrant described in subsection 672.86(2) is sufficient authority

(a) for any person who is responsible for the custody of an accused to have the accused taken into custody and conveyed to the person in charge of the place specified in the warrant; and

(b) for the person specified in the warrant to detain the accused in accordance with any disposition made in respect of the accused under paragraph 672.54(c). 1991, c. 43, s. 4.

CROSS-REFERENCES

“Attorney General” is defined in s. 2. The terms “accused”, “court”, “hospital”, and “Review Board” are defined in s. 672.1. As to further cross-references respecting interprovincial transfers, see references under s. 672.86.

SYNOPSIS

A warrant signed by the Attorney General constitutes sufficient authority for the person in charge of the accused's custody to convey the accused to the person in charge of the place specified in the warrant and for the person specified in the warrant to detain the accused in accordance with any disposition outstanding against the accused.

REVIEW BOARD OF RECEIVING PROVINCE HAS JURISDICTION OVER TRANSFEREE / Agreement.

672.88. (1) The Review Board of the province to which an accused is transferred pursuant to section 672.86 has exclusive jurisdiction over the accused, and may exercise the powers and shall perform the duties mentioned in sections 672.5 and 672.81 to 672.83 as if that Review Board had made the disposition in respect of the accused.

(2) Notwithstanding subsection (1), the Attorney General of the province to which an accused is transferred may enter into an agreement subject to this Act with the Attorney General of the province from which the accused is transferred, enabling the Review Board of that province to exercise the powers and perform the duties referred to in subsection (1) in respect of the accused, in the circumstances and subject to the terms and conditions set out in the agreement. 1991, c. 43, s. 4.

CROSS-REFERENCES

"Attorney General" is defined in s. 2. The terms "accused", "court", "hospital", and "Review Board" are defined in s. 672.1. Note that where the accused is transferred to another province other than by virtue of s. 672.86, for example, where the accused is a dual status offender and the offences occurred in different provinces, the Review Board from which the accused is transferred has exclusive jurisdiction over the accused. The Attorneys General may, however, enter into an agreement to transfer jurisdiction to the receiving Review Board. As to further cross-references respecting interprovincial transfers, see references under s. 672.86.

SYNOPSIS

This provision confers exclusive jurisdiction over the accused to the Review Board of the province to which the accused has been transferred. This general power, however, may be superseded by the agreement of the Attorney General of the province to which the accused has been transferred and the Attorney General from which the accused has been transferred. The Attorneys General may enter into an agreement authorizing the Review Board from which the accused has been transferred to retain jurisdiction over the accused.

OTHER INTERPROVINCIAL TRANSFERS / Agreement.

672.89. (1) Where an accused who is detained in custody pursuant to a disposition made by a Review Board is transferred to another province otherwise than pursuant to section 672.86, the Review Board of the province from which the accused is transferred has exclusive jurisdiction over the accused and may continue to exercise the powers and shall continue to perform the duties mentioned in sections 672.5 and 672.81 to 672.83.

(2) Notwithstanding subsection (1), the Attorneys General of the provinces to and from which the accused is to be transferred as described in that subsection may, after the transfer is made, enter into an agreement subject to this Act, enabling the Review Board of the province to which an accused is transferred to exercise the powers and perform the duties referred to in subsection (1) in respect of the accused, subject to the terms and conditions and in the circumstances set out in the agreement. 1991, c. 43, s. 4.

CROSS-REFERENCES

“Attorney General” is defined in s. 2. The terms “accused”, “court”, “hospital”, and “Review Board” are defined in s. 672.1. Note that where the accused is transferred pursuant to s. 672.86, the Review Board in the province to which the accused is transferred retains exclusive jurisdiction over the accused. The Attorneys General may enter into an agreement to require that the Review Board of the province from which the accused is transferred retains exclusive jurisdiction over the accused. See s. 672.88. As to further cross-references respecting interprovincial transfers, see references under s. 672.86.

SYNOPSIS

Where the accused is transferred to another province other than by virtue of s. 672.86, for example where the accused is a dual status offender and the offences occurred in different provinces, the Review Board from which the accused is transferred has exclusive jurisdiction over the accused. Notwithstanding this provision, however, the Attorneys General of the respective provinces may enter into an agreement enabling the Review Board of the province to which the accused has been transferred to obtain jurisdiction over the accused.

Enforcement of Orders and Regulations

EXECUTION OF WARRANT ANYWHERE IN CANADA.

672.9. Any warrant or process issued in relation to an assessment order or disposition made in respect of an accused may be executed or served in any place in Canada outside the province where the order or disposition was made as if it had been executed or served in that province. 1991, c. 43, s. 4.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Reference should be made to s. 672.92 which authorizes a peace officer to make a warrantless arrest anywhere in Canada where there are reasonable and probable grounds that the accused has failed to comply with a disposition or a condition thereof or is about to commit a breach. Upon arrest, the accused must be taken before a justice within 24 hours or as soon as practicable and the accused must be released unless the justice has grounds to believe that the accused did in fact contravene the disposition. See ss. 672.92 and 672.93. Upon notice of the detention, the Review Board must hold a hearing to review the disposition in accordance with s. 672.5. See s. 672.94.

SYNOPSIS

A warrant or process issued in relation to an assessment or disposition order is valid anywhere in Canada outside the province in which the order or disposition had been made.

ARREST WITHOUT WARRANT FOR CONTRAVENTION OF DISPOSITION.

672.91. A peace officer may arrest an accused without a warrant at any place in Canada if the peace officer has reasonable grounds to believe that the accused has contravened or wilfully failed to comply with the disposition or any condition of it, or is about to do so. 1991, c. 43, s. 4.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The term “peace officer” is defined in s. 2. Reference should be made to s. 672.92 which requires the accused to be taken before a justice within 24 hours of the arrest or as soon as practicable and the accused may not be detained unless the justice is satisfied that the accused has contravened or failed to comply with a disposition. See ss. 672.92 and 672.93. Reference should also be made to the following arrest provisions contained in the Criminal Code. Section 28 protects the peace officer in case of arrest of the wrong person when executing a warrant. Section 29(1) requires the person executing the warrant to have it with him where feasible and to produce it upon request and s. 29(2) imposes a duty on a person making an arrest to give notice of the warrant under which he makes the arrest and the reason for the arrest.

SYNOPSIS

Section 672.91 provides peace officers with broad arrest powers, including the power to make a warrantless arrest anywhere in Canada where there are reasonable and probable grounds that the accused has failed to comply with a disposition or a condition of the disposition or is about to commit a breach.

ACCUSED TO BE BROUGHT BEFORE JUSTICE / Idem.

672.92. (1) An accused who is arrested pursuant to section 672.91 shall be taken before a justice having jurisdiction in the territorial division in which the accused is arrested, without unreasonable delay and in any event within twenty-four hours after the arrest.

(2) If a justice described in subsection (1) is not available within twenty-four hours after the arrest, the accused shall be taken before a justice as soon as is practicable. 1991, c. 43, s. 4.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The terms "peace officer" and "justice" are defined in s. 2. An accused may be detained by the justice pursuant to s. 672.93 where the justice is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds to believe that the accused has contravened or failed to comply with a disposition. Where the accused is detained, notice must be given to the Review Board pursuant to s. 672.93(2). Upon receipt of notice of detention, the Review Board must hold a review hearing pursuant to ss. 672.81 and 672.83.

SYNOPSIS

An accused who is arrested as a result of a breach or impending breach of a disposition or assessment order must be taken within 24 hours before a justice in the jurisdiction in which the accused was arrested or as soon as practicable where a justice is unavailable.

WHERE JUSTICE TO RELEASE ACCUSED / Order of justice pending decision of Review Board.

672.93. (1) A justice shall release an accused who is brought before the justice pursuant to section 672.92 unless the justice is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds to believe that the accused has contravened or failed to comply with a disposition.

(2) If the justice is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds to believe that the accused has contravened or failed to comply with a disposition, the justice may make an order that is appropriate in the circumstances in relation to the accused, pending a hearing of the Review Board of the province where the disposition was made, and shall cause notice of that order to be given to that Review Board. 1991, c. 43, s. 4.

CROSS-REFERENCES

"Justice" is defined in s. 2 of the Criminal Code. Pursuant to s. 672.94, upon receipt of notice of detention, a Review Board may exercise its powers under s. 672.

SYNOPSIS

This provision requires that the accused be released unless the justice is satisfied that the accused has contravened or failed to comply with a disposition. Where there are reasonable grounds to believe that the accused has contravened or failed to comply with the disposition, the justice may detain the accused pending a Review Board hearing and issue notice of the order to the Review Board.

POWERS OF REVIEW BOARD.

672.94. Where a Review Board receives a notice given pursuant to subsection 672.93(2), it may exercise the powers and shall perform the duties mentioned in sections 672.5 and 672.81 to 672.83 as if the Review Board were reviewing a disposition. 1991, c. 43, s. 4.

CROSS-REFERENCES

“Review Board” is defined in s. 672.1. Reference should be made to s. 672.5 and the cross-references contained therein with respect to the procedures followed at a Review Board hearing. Reference should also be had to ss. 672.81 and 672.83 which outline the powers which the board may exercise in the review of any disposition.

SYNOPSIS

Upon receiving notice of detention, the Review Board must hold a hearing in accordance with the provisions of s. 672.5 in order to review the disposition as prescribed by s. 672.81 or 672.83.

REGULATIONS.

672.95. The Governor in Council may make regulations

- (a) prescribing anything that may be prescribed under this Part; and
- (b) generally to carry out the purposes and provisions of this Part. 1991, c. 43, s. 4.

SYNOPSIS

This provision permits the Governor in Council to make any regulations regarding Part XX.1 of the Criminal Code.

Part XXI / APPEALS – INDICTABLE OFFENCES

Interpretation

“court of appeal” means the court of appeal, as defined by the definition “court of appeal” in section 2, for the province or territory in which the trial of a person by indictment is held;

“indictment” includes an information or charge in respect of which a person has been tried for an indictable offence under Part XIX;

“registrar” means the registrar or clerk of the court of appeal;

“sentence” includes

- (a) a declaration made under subsection 199(3),
- (b) an order made under subsection 100(1) or (2), section 161, subsection 194(1) or 259(1) or (2), section 261 or 462.37, subsection 491.1(2), section 725, 726 or 727.9, subsection 736(1), 736.11(1) or section 744, and
- (c) a disposition made under subsection 737(1) or 738(3) or (4);

Note: The definition “sentence” re-enacted by 1991, c. 43, s. 5 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council), however, 1991, c. 43, s. 5 itself repealed by 1995, c. 22, s. 12 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The unproclaimed text printed in lightface italics reads as follows:

- (a) a declaration made under subsection 199(3),
- (b) an order made under subsection 100(1) or (2), 194(1) or 259(1) or (2), section 261 or 462.37, subsection 491.1(2), section 725, 726 or 727.9, subsection 736(1) or 736.11(1) or section 744, and
- (c) a disposition made under subsection 737(1) or 738(3) or (4);
- (d) an order made under subsection 16(1) of the Controlled Drugs and Substances Act;

Note: Para. (b) of the definition “sentence” re-enacted 1993, c. 45, ss. 16 and 19 (to come into force on the coming into force of 1991, c. 43, s. 5). The text, which is not yet in force and therefore printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

- (b) an order made under subsection 100(1) or (2), section 161, subsection 194(1) or 259(1) or (2), section 261 or 462.37, subsection 491.1(2), section 725, 726 or 727.9, subsection 736(1) or 736.11(1) or section 744, and

Editor's note: It appears that 1993, c. 45, s. 19 duplicates the amendment made by s. 16.

NOTE: The definition “sentence” replaced by 1995, c. 22, s. 5(1) (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council, but not in force as of May 15, 1996), and further, the re-enactment of the definition “sentence” by 1991, c. 43, s. 5 amended 1996, Bill C-8, s. 74(2) (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council) by striking out the word “and” at the end of para. (b), by adding the word “and” at the end of para. (c) and by adding new para. (d). The texts of paras. (a) to (c) as enacted by 1991, c. 43, s. 5 and of new para. (d) whose text may change before receiving Royal Assent, which are not yet in force, are therefore printed in lightface italics, and read as follows:

“sentence” includes

- (a) a declaration made under subsection 199(3).
- (b) an order made under subsection 100(1) or (2), 194(1) or 259(1) or (2), section 261 or 462.37, subsection 491.1(2) or 730(1) or section 737, 738, 739, 742.3 or 745.2, and
- (c) a disposition made under section 731 or 732 or subsection 732.2(3) or (5), 742.4(3) or 742.6(9);

NOTE: Paragraph (b) of the definition “sentence” replaced by 1995, c. 22, s. 5(2) (to come into force when s. 747.1 as enacted by 1995, c. 22, s. 6 comes into force). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

- (b) an order made under subsection 100(1) or (2), 194(1) or 259(1) or (2), section 261 or 462.37, subsection 491.1(2) or 730(1), section 737, 738, 739, 742.3 or 745.2 or subsection 747.1(1), and

NOTE: Paragraph (b) of the definition “sentence” replaced 1995, c. 39, s. 155 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

- (b) an order made under subsection 109(1) or 110(1), section 161, subsection 194(1) or 259(1) or (2), section 261 or 462.37, subsection 491.1(2), section 725, 726 or 727.9, subsection 736(1) or section 744, and

NOTE: Paragraph (b) of the definition “sentence” replaced 1995, c. 39, s. 190(a) (to come into force on the later of the day on which 1995, c. 22, s. 5(1) comes into force and the day on which 1995, c. 39, s. 155 comes into force). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

- (b) an order made under subsection 109(1) or 110(1), section 161, subsection 194(1) or 259(1) or (2), section 261 or 462.37, subsection 491.1(2) or 730(1) or section 737, 738, 739, 742.3 or 745.2, and

NOTE: Paragraph (b) of the definition “sentence” replaced 1995, c. 39, s. 190(b) (to come into force on the later of the day on which 1995, c. 22, s. 5(2) comes into force and the day on which 1995, c. 39, s. 155 comes into force). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

- (b) an order made under subsection 109(1) or 110(1), section 161, subsection 194(1) or 259(1) or (2), section 261 or 462.37, subsection 491.1(2) or 730(1), section 737, 738, 739, 742.3 or 745.2 or subsection 747.1(1), and

NOTE: The definition “sentence” amended 1996, Bill C-8, s. 74(1) (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council, but not in force as of May 15, 1996) by striking out the word “and” at the end of para. (b), by adding the word “and” at the end of para. (c) and by adding new para. (d). The text of para. (d), which is not yet in force and also may change before receiving Royal Assent, is therefor printed in lightface italics and reads as follows:

- (d) an order made under subsection 16(1) of the Controlled Drugs and Substances Act;

“trial court” means the court by which an accused was tried and includes a judge or a provincial court judge acting under Part XIX. R.S., c. C-34, s. 601; 1972, c. 13, s. 52; 1973-74, c. 38, s. 6.1, c. 50, s. 3; 1974-75-76, c. 93, s. 72; 1976-77, c. 53, s. 4; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 138; c. SYNOPSIS

By reason of the definition of "sentence", appeals are available in indictable matters from not only the imposition of jail terms, fines, etc., but also from: (a) firearms prohibition orders (s. 100(1), (2)); (b) punitive damages awarded following conviction for unlawful interception or disclosure of information in respect of private communications (s. 194(1)); (c) forfeiture orders with respect to seized property (s. 199(3)); (d) driving prohibitions (s. 259(1), (2), 261); (e) forfeiture orders with respect to the proceeds of crime (s. 462.37); (f) orders for the restitution or forfeiture of property obtained by crime (s. 491.1(2)); (g) restitution orders (s. 725); (h) compensation to bona fide purchasers (s. 726); (i) victim fine surcharges; (j) conditional and absolute discharges (s. 736(1)); (k) probation orders (ss. 737(1), 738(3), (4)); and (l) parole ineligibility (s. 744).

ANNOTATIONS

"Sentence" – The decision of a trial Judge refusing to make an order forfeiting a motor vehicle pursuant to s. 16(2) of the Narcotic Control Act (Can.) is not within the ordinary meaning of sentence, nor is it included in the extended definition under this section. Accordingly, the decision is not appealable by the Crown on an appeal against sentence: R. v. Pope (1980), 52 C.C.C. (2d) 538 (B.C.C.A.).

An order setting the period of parole ineligibility under s. 741.2 may be appealed as part of the sentence pursuant to s. 675(1)(b): R. v. Chaisson, [1995] 2 S.C.R. 1118, 99 C.C.C. (3d) 289, 41 C.R. (4th) 193.

Right of Appeal

PROCEDURE ABOLISHED.

674. No proceedings other than those authorized by this Part and Part XXVI shall be taken by way of appeal in proceedings in respect of indictable offences. R.S., c. C-34, s. 602.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See ss. 812 to 839 of Part XXVII "Summary Convictions" for appeals in summary convictions proceedings. Sections 675 to 676 contain rights of appeal in proceedings by indictment and ss. 678 to 685 govern procedure on appeals. Sections 686 to 689 prescribe powers of a court of appeal. Sections 691 to 696 govern appeals to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Appellate rights in respect of an appeal from a disposition or placement decision or a finding that the accused is a dangerous mentally disordered accused made under Part XX.1 are contained in ss. 672.72 to 672.78.

Recourse to the extraordinary remedies of Part XXVI is restricted to matters involving jurisdictional error.

ANNOTATIONS

In R. v. Loba, [1994] 3 S.C.R. 965, 94 C.C.C. (3d) 385, 34 C.R. (4th) 360 the Court of Appeal allowed the Crown's appeal from a stay of proceedings entered when the trial judge held the provision under which the accused was charged was of no force and effect. However, the Court of Appeal held that a portion of the provision was still unconstitutional. While no appeal lay to the Supreme Court at the instance of the Crown under this Act, it was open to the Crown to apply for leave to appeal under s. 40 of the Supreme Court Act. An appeal against a ruling on the constitutionality of a law that cannot be piggy backed onto any proceedings set out in the Criminal Code is a judgment of the highest court of final resort in a province in which judgment can be had in the particular case for the purposes of s. 40(1). Also see: R. v. Keegstra (1995), 98 C.C.C. (3d) 1, 124 D.L.R. (4th) 289, 180 N.R. 120 (S.C.C.).

For a third party, such as the media, who have been affected by a publication ban, where the ban has been imposed by a provincial court judge then the third party may apply to the superior court by way of certiorari and may then follow the appellate routes prescribed in the Criminal Code. When the order has been made by a superior court judge, then the third party may apply for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada under s. 40 of the Supreme Court Act: Dagenais v. Canadian Broadcasting Corp., [1994] 3 S.C.R. 835, 94 C.C.C. (3d) 289, 34 C.R. (4th) 269.

See also R. v. Beharriell (1995), 103 C.C.C. (3d) 92, 44 C.R. (4th) 91, 130 D.L.R. (4th) 422 (S.C.C.) where it was held that a complainant and sexual assault victim organization had a right to apply for leave to appeal from an order compelling production pursuant to s. 40(1) of the Supreme Court Act.

RIGHT OF APPEAL OF PERSON CONVICTED / Appeal against absolute term in excess of ten years / Appeal against s. 741.2 order / Appeals against verdicts based on mental disorder / Where application for leave to appeal refused by judge.

675. (1) A person who is convicted by a trial court in proceedings by indictment may appeal to the court of appeal

(a) against his conviction

- (i) on any ground of appeal that involves a question of law alone,
- (ii) on any ground of appeal that involves a question of fact or a question of mixed law and fact, with leave of the court of appeal or a judge thereof or on the certificate of the trial judge that the case is a proper case for appeal, or
- (iii) on any ground of appeal not mentioned in subparagraph (i) or (ii) that appears to the court of appeal to be a sufficient ground of appeal, with leave of the court of appeal; or

(b) against the sentence passed by the trial court, with leave of the court of appeal or a judge thereof unless that sentence is one fixed by law.

(2) A person who has been convicted of second degree murder and sentenced to imprisonment for life without eligibility for parole for a specified number of years in excess of ten may appeal to the court of appeal against the number of years in excess of ten of his imprisonment without eligibility for parole.

(2.1) A person against whom an order under section 741.2 has been made may appeal to the court of appeal against the order.

(3) Where a verdict of not criminally responsible on account of mental disorder or unfit to stand trial is rendered in respect of a person, that person may appeal to the court of appeal against that verdict on any ground of appeal, mentioned in subparagraph (1)(a)(i), (ii) or (iii) and subject to the conditions described therein.

(4) Where a judge of the court of appeal refuses leave to appeal under this section otherwise than under paragraph (1)(b), the appellant may, by filing notice in writing with the court of appeal within seven days after the refusal, have the application for leave to appeal determined by the court of appeal. R.S., c. C-34, s. 603; 1974-75-76, c. 105, s. 13; 1991, c. 43, s. 9; 1995, c. 42, s. 73.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See s. 673 for definition of “court of appeal”, “indictment”, “sentence” and “trial court”. See s. 672.1 for definition of “verdict of not criminally responsible on account of mental disorder” and s. 2 for definition of “unfit to stand trial”.

Rights of appeal are conferred by the Criminal Code, which also defines the authority of the court to hear and determine the appeal under ss. 686 to 687. Under s. 482(1), appeal procedure is governed by rules of the court established by a majority of the judges of the court of appeal which vary from one jurisdiction to another. Sections 676 and 696 govern rights of appeal of the Attorney General from dispositions made in proceedings by indictment. Section 759 confers rights of appeal in dangerous offender proceedings and s. 784 applies to applications for the extraordinary remedies of mandamus, habeas corpus, certiorari and prohibition.

Appellate rights are determined by the nature of proceedings in the trial court, not the nature of the conviction or the level of the trial court. Where proceedings must be or have been taken by indictment before a provincial court judge or judge alone under Part XIX or a court composed of judge and jury under Part XX, upon indictment or information, Part XXI is applicable.

Appellate rights in respect of an appeal from a disposition or placement decision or a finding that the accused is a dangerous mentally disordered accused made under Part XX.1 are contained in ss. 672.72 to 672.79.

SYNOPSIS

This section sets out the matters which an accused convicted of an indictable offence may appeal to the court of appeal.

A conviction may be appealed on: (a) grounds of law alone; (b) grounds of fact or mixed law and fact, with leave of the court of appeal or a judge thereof or with a certificate of the trial judge; and (c) any other ground, with leave of the court of appeal (subsec. (1)(a)).

The trial judge's certificate is now virtually never used as a means of bringing an appeal. Local practice will dictate whether the question of leave needs to be spoken to independently of the appeal itself. In some jurisdictions grounds which technically require leave are simply argued as part of the appeal.

An accused may also appeal a "sentence" (see s. 673) unless the same is fixed by law. Leave of a judge or the court is required (subsec. (1)(b)). Local practice will again determine whether a separate leave hearing will be held.

A person convicted of second degree murder may appeal against the period of parole ineligibility, in excess of the mandatory 10 years (subsec. (2)).

Findings of unfitness, or not criminally responsible on account of mental disorder, may be appealed (subsec. (3)).

With the exception of sentence appeals, the refusal of leave to appeal by a single judge may be appealed to the court of appeal within seven days of the dismissal of the original application (subsec. (4)).

ANNOTATIONS

Application of provisions – It is not the nature of the conviction but the nature of the proceedings that determines the forum for appeal. Thus in R. v. Yaworski (1959), 124 C.C.C.151, 31 C.R.55 (Man.C.A.), an accused convicted of a summary conviction offence in proceedings originally charging an indictable offence may only appeal under Part XXI of the Code.

In R. v. Rowe (1955), 39 Cr.App.R.57, [1955] 2 All E.R.234 (C.C.A.), it was held that an appeal on behalf of a deceased prisoner may only be brought by his personal representative and only if the penalty was monetary, for otherwise no one other than the prisoner was affected by his conviction.

An application to the trial judge for a certificate should be on notice to the Crown and a proper record kept of the submissions made: R. v. Green, [1987] 3 W.W.R. 173, 80 A.R. 236 (C.A.).

Guilty plea / Withdrawal of guilty plea [Also see notes under s. 606] – In Colligan v. The Queen (1955), 113 C.C.C.168, 21 C.R.120 (Que. C.A.), leave to appeal from a conviction for manslaughter upon plea of guilty was refused (3:2), the majority holding that in the absence of any misunderstanding on his part or inducement by anyone in authority, especially where he allowed his counsel to offer the plea, the pressure of his co-accused upon him to enter such a plea was not a sufficient ground.

The heavy onus upon an appellant seeking leave to change his plea and requesting a new trial was met where it was shown that after arrest and during investigation legal advice was actively and deliberately denied to him by the police: R. v. Ballegeer, [1969] 3 C.C.C.353, 1 D.L.R. (3d) 74 (Man. C.A.).

Where on the sound and faithful advice of counsel, who was retained by one accused, two co-accused pleaded guilty an appearance of unfairness exists: R. v. Stork and Toews (1975), 24 C.C.C. (2d) 210, 31 C.R.N.S. 395 (B.C.C.A.).

It was not a basis for permitting the accused to withdraw his guilty plea that his former co-accused was subsequently acquitted following trial, where the conviction of the accused could be upheld on the basis that he was a principal in the offence and not a mere party to the co-accused's conviction: R. v. Hick (1991), 67 C.C.C. (3d) 573, 7 C.R. (4th) 297, 130 N.R. 267 (S.C.C.).

Sentence appeal [Also see notes under s. 687] – In R. v. Clifford, [1969] 2 C.C.C.363, [1969] 1 O.R. 76 (C.A.), it was held that an appellant may abandon his appeal before it comes on for hearing and the Crown, although having submitted in its factum that the sentence should be varied upwards, not having proceeded by its own notice of appeal, cannot contest the abandonment, which prevented the hearing of the sentence appeal. However, in R. v. Mahon, [1969] 2 C.C.C.179 (B.C.C.A.), the accused appealed the quantum of a sentence illegally imposed as concurrent rather than consecutive to his unexpired parole term and the Court, holding that the disposition of a sentence appeal was in its hands, and not in the control of the appellant, refused to allow him to abandon and corrected the illegality of sentence.

As part of its jurisdiction over sentence appeals an appellate court has the power to adjudicate upon a trial Judge's decision either granting or refusing a discharge: R. v. Christman (1973), 11 C.C.C. (2d) 245, [1973] 3 W.W.R. 475 (Alta.S.C.App.Div.). Folld: R. v. Fallowfield (1973), 22 C.R.N.S. 342, [1973] 6 W.W.R. 472 (B.C.C.A.).

Since a conviction includes an adjudication of guilt and sentence a Court's decision not to grant a discharge may be the subject of an appeal against sentence: R. v. McInnis (1973), 13 C.C.C. (2d) 471, 23 C.R.N.S. 152 (Ont. C.A.).

No appeal lies to the Court of Appeal from the determination of the jury under s. 745 refusing to reduce the period of years of parole ineligibility: R. v. Vaillancourt (1989), 49 C.C.C. (3d) 544, 71 C.R. (3d) 43, 33 O.A.C. 234 (C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused January 18, 1990.

RIGHT OF ATTORNEY GENERAL TO APPEAL / Acquittal / Appeal against verdict of unfit to stand trial / Appeal against ineligible parole period / Appeal against decision not to make s. 741.2 order.

676. (1) The Attorney General or counsel instructed by him for the purpose may appeal to the court of appeal

- (a) against a judgment or verdict of acquittal of a trial court in proceedings by indictment on any ground of appeal that involves a question of law alone;
- (b) against an order of a superior court of criminal jurisdiction that quashes an indictment or in any manner refuses or fails to exercise jurisdiction on an indictment;
- (c) against an order of a trial court that stays proceedings on an indictment or quashes an indictment; or
- (d) with leave of the court of appeal or a judge thereof, against the sentence passed by a trial court in proceedings by indictment, unless that sentence is one fixed by law.

(2) For the purposes of this section, a judgment or verdict of acquittal includes an acquittal in respect of an offence specifically charged where the accused has, on the trial thereof, been convicted or discharged under section 736 of any other offence.

NOTE: Subsection (2) amended 1995, c. 22, s. 10 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council) by replacing the reference to s. 736 with s. 730.

(3) The Attorney General or counsel instructed by the Attorney General for the purpose may appeal to the court of appeal against a verdict that an accused is unfit to stand trial, on any ground of appeal that involves a question of law alone.

(4) The Attorney General or counsel instructed by him for the purpose may appeal to the court of appeal in respect of a conviction for second degree murder, against the number of years of imprisonment without eligibility for parole, being less than twenty-five, that has been imposed as a result of that conviction.

(5) The Attorney General or counsel instructed by the Attorney General for the purpose may appeal to the court of appeal against the decision of the court not to make an order under section 741.2. R.S., c. C-34, s. 605; 1974-75-76, c. 105, s. 15; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 139; 1991, c. 43, s. 9; 1995, c. 42, s. 74.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The Attorney General of Canada has equivalent rights of appeal under s. 696, in proceedings instituted by the Government of Canada and conducted by or on behalf of the government, as has the Attorney General of the province under Part XXI.

Appellate rights in respect of an appeal from a disposition or placement decision made under Part XX.1 are contained in ss. 672.72 to 672.78. The right of appeal by the Attorney General from dismissal of an application for a finding that the accused is a dangerous mentally disordered accused is provided for in s. 672.8.

See s. 2 for definitions of "Attorney General" and "unfit to stand trial". Definition of Attorney General includes his lawful deputy for the purposes of s. 676.

A number of provisions deem certain determinations by a judge to be questions of law, including the decision as to admissibility of sexual conduct evidence in the trial of a sexual offence [s. 276.5] and whether or not to permit an amendment to an information or indictment [s. 601(6)].

See also references cited under s. 675.

SYNOPSIS

This section sets out what the Crown may appeal to the court of appeal in respect of indictable matters. These are: (a) grounds of law alone (grounds of fact or mixed law and fact are not open to the Crown); (b) an order of a superior court quashing an indictment or refusing to exercise jurisdiction; (c) an order by a trial judge staying or quashing an indictment; and (d) sentence (with leave of a judge or the court), unless the punishment is fixed by law (subsec. (1)).

An appeal may be taken where the accused, although acquitted of the offence charged, has been found guilty of an included offence (subsec. (2)).

A finding that the accused is unfit to stand trial may be appealed on grounds of law alone (subsec. (3)).

In cases of second degree murder the Crown can appeal the length of the parole ineligibility period if it is less than the maximum 25 years (subsec. (4)).

ANNOTATIONS

Constitutional considerations – The right of the Crown to appeal against an acquittal as provided by this subsection does not offend the guarantee against double jeopardy in s. 11(h) of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms: R. v. Morgentaler, Smoling and Scott (1988), 37 C.C.C. (3d) 449, 44 D.L.R. (4th) 385, [1988] 1 S.C.R. 30, 62 C.R. (3d) 1.

Exercise of Crown right to appeal – Duties of an Attorney-General may be exercised under his authority by a responsible subordinate official who may instruct counsel to appeal: R. v. Harrison (1976), 28 C.C.C. (2d) 279, 66 D.L.R. (3d) 660, [1977] 1 S.C.R. 238 (9:0).

A notice of appeal signed by a person as “agent” of the Attorney-General is proper: R. v. Baldall et al. (1974), 17 C.C.C. (2d) 420, 47 D.L.R. (3d) 478, [1975] 2 S.C.R. 503 (9:0).

Verdict of acquittal – The question of law, to be appealable, must be directly and concretely related to the acquittal: R. v. Huot, [1969] 1 C.C.C. 256, 70 D.L.R. (2d) 703 (2:1) (Man. C.A.).

The right of the Attorney General to appeal under this section includes the right to appeal against the special verdict of not criminally responsible on account of mental disorder: R. v. Sullivan (1995), 96 C.C.C. (3d) 135, 37 C.R. (4th) 333, 88 W.A.C. 241 (B.C.C.A.). See also R. v. Skrzydlewski (1995), 103 C.C.C. (3d) 467, 87 O.A.C. 174 (C.A.).

An order declaring a mistrial is not a judgment or verdict of acquittal giving the Crown a right of appeal: R. v. Holliday (1973), 12 C.C.C. (2d) 56, 26 C.R.N.S. 279, [1973] 5 W.W.R. 363 (Alta. C.A.).

Dismissal of an information upon the plea of autrefois acquit is appealable by the Crown: R. v. Suleyman Sanver (1973), 12 C.C.C. (2d) 105, 28 C.R.N.S. 10, 6 N.B.R. (2d) 192 (S.C. App. Div.).

A trial judge’s quashing of an indictment on his interpretation of the governing substantive offence section, rather than for some procedural or technical defect, such as duplicity, misjoinder or omission of an essential ingredient in the indictment, is tantamount to a judgment of acquittal to permit the Attorney-General to appeal under subsec. (1)(a): R. v. Sheets (1971), 1 C.C.C. (2d) 508, 15 C.R.N.S. 232, [1971] S.C.R. 614 (9:0).

Where after plea the defendant successfully argued that the offence was not known to law and the trial Judge then ruled that he did not have jurisdiction, that result amounted to a verdict of acquittal: Cheyenne Realty Ltd. v. Thompson (1974), 15 C.C.C. (2d) 49, 42 D.L.R. (3d) 733, [1975] 1 S.C.R. 87 (5:0).

A finding by the trial judge prior to plea that the charge is a nullity because the federal enactment under which it was laid is ultra vires Parliament is tantamount to an acquittal under subsec. (1)(a): R. v. Kripps Pharmacy Ltd. And Kripps (1981), 60 C.C.C. (2d) 332, [1981] 5 W.W.R. 190 sub nom. Canada (Attorney General) v. Wetmore Co. Ct. J. (B.C.C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused 38 N.R. 180 sub nom. R. v. Wetmore.

It was held, prior to the recent amendment of this section which added para. (1)(c), that quashing an indictment is tantamount to an acquittal where (a) the decision to quash is not based on defects in the indictment or technical procedural irregularities, and (b) the decision is a final decision resting on a question of law alone, such that if the accused were charged subsequently with the same offence he or she could plead autrefois acquit. Similarly, if the order of the court, whatever the terminology used, effectively brings the proceedings to a final conclusion in favour of the accused, then it is tantamount to a judgment or verdict of acquittal. This would include a stay of proceedings ordered after a plea of not guilty upon the basis of a successful “defence” of entrapment: R. v. Jewitt (1985), 21 C.C.C. (3d) 7, 47 C.R. (3d) 193, [1985] 2 S.C.R. 128 (7:0).

The Crown and the affected witnesses had a right to appeal an order of a chambers judge requiring that the witnesses attend to be questioned by defence counsel. The order was made because the Attorney General had preferred a direct indictment but was made without notice to the witnesses. The right of appeal exists either under provincial statute or through application of the doctrine of ex debito justitiae: R. v. Sterling (1993), 84 C.C.C. (3d) 65, [1993] 8 W.W.R. 623, 17 C.R.R. (2d) 122 (Sask. C.A.).

Question of law / Generally – Even though the reasons for acquittal were couched in terms of reasonable doubt, where the trial Judge sitting alone has misdirected himself as to the legal effect of facts found by him, an appeal on a question of law is open to the Crown: R. v. Davis and Sokoloski (1973), 14 C.C.C. (2d) 517 (Ont. C.A.), affd 33 C.C.C. (2d) 496, [1977] 2 S.C.R. 523 (5:4).

Where a Crown appeal appears by its form to be a question of law, but upon examination the question is not rooted in the factual situation at trial or upon scrutiny it proves to be a question of fact rather than law, then the appeal is invalid: R. v. Odeon Morton Theatres Ltd. and United Artists Corp. (1974), 16 C.C.C. (2d) 185, [1974] 3 W.W.R. 304 (Man. C.A.) (3:2).

An error of law by a trial judge in assessing the facts as they apply to the law so as to found a Crown appeal may arise in three ways: (1) the trial judge finds all the facts necessary to reach a conclusion in law but the court of appeal disagrees with the conclusion reached, the disagreement being with respect to the law not the facts nor the inferences to be drawn from the facts; (2) failure by the trial judge to appreciate the evidence, provided that failure is based on a misapprehension of some legal principle; (3) where the reasons of the trial judge demonstrate a failure to consider all of the evidence in relation to the ultimate issue [however, the mere failure by the trial judge to record the fact of having taken into account all of the evidence is not a proper basis for concluding that there was an error of law in this last respect]: R. v. Morin (1992), 76 C.C.C. (3d) 193, [1992] 3 S.C.R. 286, 16 C.R. (4th) 291 (8:0).

Question of law / Exclusion of evidence – The absence of legal justification for excluding evidence at trial involves a question of law alone: R. v. Dshaies, [1966] 3 C.C.C. 176, 45 C.R. 49 (Que. C.A.).

A finding by a trial judge that the Crown had failed to prove that a confession was voluntary is essentially a finding of fact and not appealable by the Crown unless the trial judge had misdirected himself as to the governing principles or his reasons for judgment disclose that he failed to appreciate, or disregarded, relevant evidence: R. v. Moreau (1986), 26 C.C.C. (3d) 359, 51 C.R. (3d) 209 (Ont. C.A.).

No evidence to support acquittal – While a finding of fact that is made in the absence of any supportive evidence is an error of law, such an error will occur with respect to an acquittal only if there has been a transfer to the accused by law of the burden of proof of the given fact. Absent a shifting of the burden of proof upon the accused there is always some evidence upon which to make a finding of fact favourable to the accused, and such a finding, if an error, is an error of fact: Schuldt v. The Queen (1985), 23 C.C.C. (3d) 225, 49 C.R. (3d) 136, [1985] 2 S.C.R. 592 (7:0).

The finding of a trial judge that an inference cannot be drawn because its foundation has not been proven is not a question of law alone: R. v. Weir, [1970] 3 C.C.C. 254, 71 W.W.R. 309 (B.C.C.A.).

In Sunbeam Corp. (Canada) Ltd. v. The Queen, [1969] 2 C.C.C. 189, 1 D.L.R. (3d) 161, [1969] S.C.R. 221, it was held (4:3) that “a question of law” does not include whether the trial verdict was unreasonable or could not be supported by the evidence. The matter of sufficiency of proof is a question of fact for the trial Judge and not a question of law.

Finding of lack of intent – In Lampard v. The Queen, [1969] 3 C.C.C. 249, 6 C.R.N.S. 157, [1969] S.C.R. 373, the full Court (9:0) followed Sunbeam, supra, holding that an inquiry as to the commission of certain acts with a certain intent involved a question of fact.

The failure of the trial Judge to draw the appropriate inference of intent from the facts found by him is an error of fact, not law: R. v. Sorrell and Bondett (1978), 41 C.C.C. (2d) 9 (Ont. C.A.).

Charter violation – It is a question of law whether the trial judge has drawn the correct conclusion from the facts found by him that there has been a breach of s. 11(b) of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms: R. v. Heaslip et al. (1983), 9 C.C.C. (3d) 480, 36 C.R. (3d) 309 (Ont. C.A.).

Similarly it is a question of law whether based on the facts found by the trial judge the accused's right to be informed of his right to counsel as guaranteed by s. 10(b) of the Charter has been infringed: R. v. Anderson (1984), 10 C.C.C. (3d) 417, 39 C.R. (3d) 193, 45 O.R. (2d) 225 (C.A.). R. v. Baig (1985), 20 C.C.C. (3d) 515, 46 C.R. (3d) 222 (Ont. C.A.).

It is a question of law whether evidence should be excluded pursuant to s. 24(2) of the Charter of Rights: R. v. Genest (1986), 32 C.C.C. (3d) 8, 54 C.R. (3d) 246, [1986] R.J.Q. 2944 (Que. C.A.).

Other issues – The determination of jurisdiction of a provincial court questioned under s. 478(1), involving a consideration of the evidence is not a question of law alone: R. v. Philips Appliances Ltd., [1969] 2 C.C.C. 328, [1969] 1 O.R. 386 (C.A.).

Right of accused to uphold acquittal on other grounds – On a Crown appeal against acquittal, while the Crown is restricted to questions of law alone, the accused, in an effort to uphold the acquittal, may raise error of fact allegedly made by the trial judge which if properly decided would have resulted in an acquittal notwithstanding the errors of law relied upon by the Crown: R. v. Atlantic Sugar Refineries Co. Ltd. et al. (1978), 41 C.C.C. (2d) 209, 91 D.L.R. (3d) 618 (Que. C.A.).

Crown appeal against sentence generally – The Attorney-General may appeal against a disposition of a discharge as of right on a question of law alone or with leave of the Court of Appeal as a sentence appeal under this subsection: Hunt v. The Queen (1979), 45 C.C.C. (2d) 257, [1979] 2 S.C.R. 73, 7 C.R. (3d) S-38.

In view of the definition of "sentence" in s. 673, the Attorney General may appeal from the decision of a trial judge refusing to make an order of forfeiture under s. 462.37(1): R. v. Pawlyk (1991), 65 C.C.C. (3d) 63, 4 C.R. (4th) 388, 72 Man. R. (2d) 1 (C.A.).

On a Crown appeal against sentence it will not be permitted to introduce new evidence unless there is something which trial counsel could not have reasonably been expected to introduce, or, perhaps in a case where the accused constitutes a real danger to the public: R. v. Irwin (1979), 48 C.C.C. (2d) 423, 10 C.R. (3d) S-33 (Alta. S.C. App. Div.).

Similarly, in R. v. Hogan (1979), 50 C.C.C. (2d) 439, 34 N.S.R. (2d) 641 (S.C. App. Div.), the Crown was refused leave to introduce fresh evidence as to aggravating circumstances of the offence as it would be unfair to the accused and not in the interests of the proper administration of justice.

Where the sentence originally imposed has already been served the Court of Appeal will not allow a Crown appeal against that sentence which would have the effect of sending or returning the accused to jail unless it is satisfied that the sentence is so manifestly wrong that it must intervene in the interests of justice: R. v. Richards (1979), 49 C.C.C. (2d) 517, 11 C.R. (3d) 193 (Ont. C.A.); R. v. Bartkow (1978), 1 C.R. (3d) S-36, 24 N.S.R. (2d) 518 (S.C. App. Div.).

Intervention by third party – A third party will not be given leave to intervene in a Crown appeal to raise a ground of appeal not being raised by the Attorney-General in his appeal: Re Regina and Morgentaler, Smoling and Scott (1985), 19 C.C.C. (3d) 573, 44 C.R. (3d) 189 (Ont. C.A.).

SPECIFYING GROUNDS OF DISSENT.

677. Where a judge of the court of appeal expresses an opinion dissenting from the judgment of the court, the judgment of the court shall specify any grounds in law on which the dissent, in whole or in part, is based. R.S., c. C-34, s. 606; 1994, c. 44, s. 67.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Under ss. 691(1)(a), 692(3)(a) and 693(1)(a), a dissent on a question of law may found an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, as of right.

ANNOTATIONS

The irregularity of the formal judgment in not formally specifying the grounds for dissent will not be fatal to the appellant's right of appeal under s. 691(1)(a) particularly as the points of law upon which the minority Judge dissented were clearly set out in his reasons for judgment: Warkentin, Hanson and Brown v. The Queen (1976), 30 C.C.C. (2d) 1, 35 C.R.N.S. 21 (S.C.C.) (5:4).

Procedure on Appeals*NOTICE OF APPEAL / Extension of time.

678. (1) An appellant who proposes to appeal to the court of appeal or to obtain the leave of that court to appeal shall give notice of appeal or notice of his application for leave to appeal in such manner and within such period as may be directed by rules of court.

(2) The court of appeal or a judge thereof may at any time extend the time within which notice of appeal or notice of an application for leave to appeal may be given. R.S., c. C-34, s. 607; 1972, c. 13, s. 53; 1974-75-76, c. 105, s. 16.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The court of appeal may make rules relating to criminal appeals which are consistent with the Code. Under s. 678.1, substitutional service of a notice of appeal or notice of application for leave to appeal may be made on a respondent who has not been located after reasonable efforts.

See also references cited under s. 675.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides that an appellant shall give notice of appeal, or apply for leave to appeal, according to the rules of court. The court of appeal or a judge of that court may extend the time for notice.

ANNOTATIONS

Service of notice of appeal – In Re Kipnes and A.-G. Alta. et al., [1966] 4 C.C.C.387 (Alta. C.A.), it was held (2:1), that in the absence of a specific rule under the Alberta Rules of Court, the rule governing civil matters would apply for service of a notice of appeal under this section.

Trial counsel in filing a notice of appeal to preserve the accused's appeal rights cannot be required to proceed with the appeal at his own expense where Legal Aid is subsequently refused and in such circumstances he should be permitted to withdraw from the case: R. v. Dorion (1978), 40 C.C.C. (2d) 549 (Man. C.A.).

Reopening Appeal – An application may not be made after an accused's appeal has been dismissed to re-open the appeal on the ground of the discovery of new evidence: Liscomb v. The Queen (1961), 131 C.C.C. 418, 37 C.R. 7 (Alta. C.A.).

An accused may in Quebec invoke the civil rules of procedure and apply to revoke the order dismissing his appeal, even where the appeal was originally dismissed on other merits following an appeal to the Court of Appeal. However, the conditions for revoking the original order are similar to the conditions which would apply in the case of a civil appeal and the accused must show that such an order is necessary to remedy a serious injustice not due to the gross negligence of the affected party or that there are exceptional circumstances: R. v. Vaudry (1989), 51 C.C.C. (3d) 410 (Que. C.A.).

However, in a subsequent case, R. v. Tenorio (1991), 66 C.C.C. (3d) 429 (Que. C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused 67 C.C.C. (3d) vi, 47 Q.A.C. 163n, 142 N.R. 80n the court held that it would not revoke a judgment which had been dismissed on the merits where there was some other useful recourse available, such as an application to the Minister of Justice under s. 690.

The dismissal of an appeal by an appellate court upon receipt of an appellant's notice of abandonment is not an adjudication upon the merits and thus the court is entitled upon his subsequent application to rescind its order and extend the time within which to appeal: R. v. Watson (1975), 23 C.C.C. (2d) 366 (Ont. C.A.).

Similarly, the court may set aside an order dismissing the appeal for want of prosecution for failure of counsel to provide the necessary transcripts: R. v. Blaker (1983), 6 C.C.C. (3d) 385, 46 B.C.L.R. 344 (C.A.).

Extension of time / Application of subsection – In R. v. Stokes and Stevenson (1966), 49 C.R.97, 57 W.W.R.62 (Man. C.A.), it was held that this subsection does not empower the Registrar to make an order extending the time for appeal.

Grounds for granting extension of time – In R. v. Grover, [1967] 3 C.C.C.387, 1 C.R.N.S.129 (Ont. C.A., in Chambers), Laskin, J.A., made an order for extension of time for a Crown appeal against a suspension of the passing of sentence, which was clearly contrary to the provisions of s. 737, on the basis that the respondent had not yet been lawfully sentenced for his offence.

Where the Crown has demonstrated a bona fide intention to appeal within the appeal period, has exercised reasonable diligence in attempting to locate the accused for service of the notice of appeal and has shown there are arguable grounds for appeal, then the extension of time should be granted. Moreover, the Crown is not required to establish that the appeal would probably succeed: R. v. Gruener (1979), 46 C.C.C. (2d) 88 (Ont. C.A. in Chambers). This case is also of note because the Crown also applied, unsuccessfully, for an order permitting substitutional service because the accused could not be found for personal service. [On this latter issue now see s. 678.1.]

It is a cardinal principle that the party seeking the extension must have displayed a bona fide intention to appeal within the time limit. The Crown was refused an extension of time where although it was clear that the Crown intended to continue the prosecution against the accused there was no intention to do so by appealing the decision dismissing the charges, within the statutory time. In this case the Crown had originally proceeded by relaying the information but these informations were stayed as an abuse of process: R. v. Scheller (No. 2) (1976), 32 C.C.C. (2d) 286, 37 C.R.N.S. 349 (Ont. C.A. in Chambers).

However, in R. v. Hetsberger (1979), 47 C.C.C. (2d) 154 (Ont. C.A. in Chambers), an extension of time was granted notwithstanding the absence of an intention to appeal within the time limit where the consequences of the conviction (deportation) were out of all proportion to the penalty imposed and it was arguable that in law no offence was committed.

In R. v. Valiquette (1988), 62 C.R. (3d) 363 (Que. C.A.), the court allowed an extension of time to appeal a sentence imposed pursuant to s. 5(2) of the Narcotic Control Act following a decision of the Supreme Court of Canada holding the minimum sentence of imprisonment prescribed by that section unconstitutional.

Subsection (2) gives the judge a very full discretionary power to grant an extension of time and there are no absolute rules for when the application should be granted. However, some of the criteria applied are whether the applicant has shown a bona fide intention to appeal within the appeal period, whether the applicant has accounted for the delay and has shown that the other side was not seriously prejudiced, that the applicant has not taken the benefits of the judgment he seeks to appeal and that the appeal has a reasonable chance of success. The relevance and relative importance of each of these criteria are for the judge to determine. It is also incumbent on the applicant to provide the judge with sufficient material upon which he can exercise his discretion. Facts accounting for the delay would ordinarily be placed before the judge by way of affidavit evidence. Facts concerning the merits of the appeal could be by way of affidavit or through counsel's statement to the court, except that if there is any disagreement between counsel as to what the record will contain then it should be resolved by evidence as to what occurred in the court below: R. v. Henry (1989), 52 C.C.C. (3d) 470, [1990] 2 W.W.R. 470 (Man. C.A.).

Extension of time where prisoner has executed waiver – In Charest v. The Queen (1957), 119 C.C.C. 197, 26 C.R. 250 (Que. C.A.), Montgomery, J., held that the signing of a waiver of appeal by the accused so that he could be removed to the penitentiary to commence serving his sentence does not constitute an absolute bar against the delayed application for leave to appeal.

However, such a waiver should not be treated lightly. The exercise of the Court's discretion to relieve against its effect will depend on the special circumstances of each case. Where there does not appear to be much merit in the accused's appeal and the accused has served a previous penitentiary sentence at which time he had also taken advantage of an early transfer to the penitentiary so that he could hardly plead ignorance of the clear effect of a waiver, the application for relief should be dismissed: R. v. Kelly (1976), 33 C.C.C. (2d) 248 (Ont. C.A.).

Jurisdiction to rescind order refusing extension – A Court of Appeal has jurisdiction to rescind a previous order, even one made by a full Court of three Judges, refusing an extension of time to appeal where the interests of justice so require: R. v. Audy (No. 1) (1977), 34 C.C.C. (2d) 228 (Ont. C.A.).

Further, a single Judge of the Court of Appeal has jurisdiction to rescind his own order previously made refusing an extension of time: R. v. Dunbrook (1978), 44 C.C.C. (2d) 264 (Ont. C.A. in Chambers).

An application for an extension of time, previously refused by a single Judge, may be reviewed before the full Court where conditions have changed since the initial refusal: R. v. Walker (1978), 46 C.C.C. (2d) 124 (Que. C.A.), or there are other special circumstances: R. v. Coulombe (1988), 64 C.R. (3d) 58 (Que. C.A.).

SERVICE WHERE RESPONDENT CANNOT BE FOUND.

678.1 Where a respondent cannot be found after reasonable efforts have been made to serve the respondent with a notice of appeal or notice of an application for leave to appeal, service of the notice of appeal or the notice of the application for leave to appeal may be effected substitutionally in the manner and within the period directed by a judge of the court of appeal. R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 140.

CROSS-REFERENCES

An order for substitutional service should include the date of hearing and determination of the appeal and should attempt to ensure receipt of notification by the respondent.

SYNOPSIS

This section allows for substituted service on a respondent of notice of appeal, or application for leave to appeal, as directed by a judge of the court of appeal.

ANNOTATIONS

In R. v. Gruener (1979), 46 C.C.C. (2d) 88 (Ont. C.A. in Chambers), a case decided prior to the enactment of this section, the Judge, while prepared to assume that there was jurisdiction to make an order for substitutional service under the rules of the court, held that the order should only be made where personal service upon the accused is demonstrably not possible through no fault of the Crown authorities and where if such an order is made it will, in all probability, if not certainly, be effective to bring notice to the accused. A relevant factor in deciding whether to make the order is whether the accused dropped out of sight to avoid service because he was aware of a firm intention by the Crown to appeal the acquittal.

RELEASE PENDING DETERMINATION OF APPEAL / Notice of application for release / Circumstances in which appellant may be released / Idem / Conditions of order / Application of certain provisions of s. 525 / Release or detention pending new trial, new hearing or hearing of reference / Application to appeals on summary conviction proceedings / Form of undertaking or recognizance / Directions for expediting appeal, new trial, etc.

679. (1) A judge of the court of appeal may, in accordance with this section, release an appellant from custody pending the determination of his appeal if,

- (a) in the case of an appeal to the court of appeal against conviction, the appellant has given notice of appeal or, where leave is required, notice of his application for leave to appeal pursuant to section 678;
- (b) in the case of an appeal to the court of appeal against sentence only, the appellant has been granted leave to appeal; or
- (c) in the case of an appeal or an application for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, the appellant has filed and served his notice of appeal or, where leave is required, his application for leave to appeal.

(2) Where an appellant applies to a judge of the court of appeal to be released pending the determination of his appeal, he shall give written notice of the application to the prosecutor or to such other person as a judge of the court of appeal directs.

(3) In the case of an appeal referred to in paragraph (1)(a) or (c), the judge of the court of appeal may order that the appellant be released pending the determination of his appeal if the appellant establishes that

- (a) the appeal or application for leave to appeal is not frivolous;
- (b) he will surrender himself into custody in accordance with the terms of the order; and
- (c) his detention is not necessary in the public interest.

(4) In the case of an appeal referred to in paragraph (1)(b), the judge of the court of appeal may order that the appellant be released pending the determination of his appeal or until otherwise ordered by a judge of the court of appeal if the appellant establishes that

- (a) the appeal has sufficient merit that, in the circumstances, it would cause unnecessary hardship if he were detained in custody;
- (b) he will surrender himself into custody in accordance with the terms of the order; and
- (c) his detention is not necessary in the public interest.

(5) Where the judge of the court of appeal does not refuse the application of the appellant, he shall order that the appellant be released

- (a) on his giving an undertaking to the judge, without conditions or with such conditions as the judge directs, to surrender himself into custody in accordance with the order, or
- (b) on his entering into a recognizance
  - (i) with one or more sureties,
  - (ii) with deposit of money or other valuable security,
  - (iii) with both sureties and deposit, or
  - (iv) with neither sureties nor deposit, in such amount, subject to such conditions, if any, and before such justice as the judge directs, and the person having the custody of the appellant shall, where the appellant complies with the order, forthwith release the appellant.

(6) The provisions of subsections 525(5), (6) and (7) apply with such modifications as the circumstances require in respect of a person who has been released from custody under subsection (5) of this section.

(7) Where, with respect to any person, the court of appeal or the Supreme Court of Canada orders a new trial or new hearing or the Minister of Justice gives a direction or makes a reference under section 690, this section applies to the release or detention of that person pending the new trial or new hearing or the hearing and determination of the reference, as the case may be, as though that person were an appellant in an appeal described in paragraph (1)(a).

(8) This section applies to applications for leave to appeal and appeals to the Supreme Court of Canada in summary conviction proceedings.

(9) An undertaking under this section may be in Form 12 and a recognizance under this section may be in Form 32.

(10) A judge of the court of appeal, where on the application of an appellant he does not make an order under subsection (5) or where he cancels an order previously made under this section, or a judge of the Supreme Court of Canada on application by an appellant in the case of an appeal to that Court, may give such directions as he thinks necessary for expediting the hearing of the appellant's appeal or for expediting the new trial or new hearing or the hearing of the reference, as the case may be. R.S., c. C-34, s. 608; R.S., c. 2 (2nd Supp.), s. 12; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 141.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Authority for the review of a decision of a judge of the court of appeal under s. 679 may be found in s. 680. An undertaking and a recognizance may be in Forms 12 and 32 respectively. A release order will usually include terms governing the appellant's conduct pending the appeal, breach of which may result in dismissal of the appeal. Also, liability under s. 145(2) and (3) may be attracted by a breach of a term of the undertaking or recognizance.

Note that s. 672.1 defines "court" for the purposes of Part XX.1 [Mental Disorder] to include a judge of the court of appeal and, thus, a judge of the court of appeal may make the various orders provided for in that Part including an assessment order under s. 672.11. Under s. 672.17, no order may be made under this section during the period that an assessment order of an accused is in force. The assessment may, however, be varied under s. 672.18.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides for the granting of bail pending an appeal to the court of appeal or the Supreme Court of Canada.

A judge of the court of appeal may make an order releasing an appellant from custody where: (a) an appeal from conviction/application for leave has been filed; (b) leave to appeal sentence has been granted; or (c) in the case of appeals to the Supreme Court, the notice of appeal or application for leave to appeal has been filed and served (subsec. (1)).

Notice must be given to the Crown (subsec. (2)).

On applications relating to conviction appeals to the court of appeal or appeals/applications to the Supreme Court the appellant must establish that: (a) the appeal is not frivolous (i.e., it is arguable); (b) he or she will surrender into custody as and when required; and (c) detention is not necessary in the public interest (subsec. (3)).

On applications relating to sentence appeals the appellant, having obtained leave, must establish that: (a) the appeal has sufficient merit that hardship would result if bail was not granted (e.g., the sentence would be served before the appeal could be heard);

(b) the appellant will surrender into custody as and when required; and (c) detention is not necessary in the public interest (subsec. (4)).

The order for release may require that the appellant give an undertaking, or enter into a recognizance, with such terms and conditions as the judge sees fit to impose (subsec. (5)).

An appellant who breaches his or her bail may be arrested, with or without warrant, and dealt with in the same way as an accused who is awaiting trial (subsec. (6)).

A judge of the court of appeal also has jurisdiction to grant bail where a new trial or hearing has been ordered by either the court of appeal or the Supreme Court of Canada, or where the Minister of Justice directs a new trial or hearing. In such cases the application shall proceed as if the appellant was appealing a conviction (subsec. (7)).

Bail may also be granted in connection with summary conviction matters before the Supreme Court of Canada (see Supreme Court Act, s. 40) (subsec. (8)).

Where bail is refused a judge of the court of appeal may give directions for expediting the hearing of the appeal, new trial, etc. Where the appeal is to the Supreme Court of Canada a judge of that court may give similar directions (subsec. (10)).

ANNOTATIONS

Jurisdiction to order release – The court of appeal has jurisdiction to grant release pending appeal of an accused who has been convicted and has filed a notice of appeal against conviction, though the accused had not yet been sentenced and was remanded into custody for sentencing: R. v. Smale (1979), 51 C.C.C. (2d) 126 (Ont. C.A.).

However, the order for release can only apply to the custody to which the accused is then subject and must provide that it expires at the time of sentencing or the disposition of the appeal, whichever is earlier: Re Morris and The Queen (1985), 21 C.C.C. (3d) 242 (Ont. C.A.).

Burden of proof – The appellant has the burden of establishing or proving on a balance of probabilities the requirements of this subsection: R. v. Ponak and Gunn, [1972] 4 W.W.R. 316 (B.C.C.A. in Chambers).

Grounds for granting release – The public interest is the public's confidence in and respect for the Court in its administration of the criminal law: R. v. Demyen (1975), 26 C.C.C. (2d) 324 (Sask. C.A. in Chambers).

An appellant is to be released if it is safe to do so and by a preponderance of evidence and argument his appeal is shown not to be frivolous: R. v. Davis (1976), 32 C.C.C. (2d) 526 (Alta. S.C. App. Div. in Chambers).

The "public interest" ground in subsec. (3)(c) for detention pending appeal is not unconstitutional. In the context of bail pending appeal, the public interest provides a clear standard relating both to the protection and safety of the public and to the need to maintain a balance between the competing dictates of enforceability of judgments and reviewability for correction of errors. Thus, there will be cases where the hearing of the appeal will be so delayed and the probability of success so strong that it would be contrary to the public interest to refuse release even for a serious offence. On the other hand, the public interest may require that a person convicted of a very serious offence, particularly a repeat offender who is advancing grounds of appeal that are arguable but weak, be denied bail: R. v. Farinacci (1993), 86 C.C.C. (3d) 32, 25 C.R. (4th) 350, 109 D.L.R. (4th) 97 (Ont. C.A.). Similarly: R. v. Branco (1993), 87 C.C.C. (3d) 71, 25 C.R. (4th) 370, 57 W.A.C. 201 (B.C.C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused 90 C.C.C. (3d) vi, 22 C.R.R. (2d) 192n. Also see: R. v. Parsons (1994), 30 C.R. (4th) 169, 117 Nfld. & P.E.I.R. 69 (Nfld. C.A., Marshall J.A.) [affirmed 30 C.R. (4th) 189, 117 Nfld. & P.E.I.R. 69] where, however, the constitutional issue was not raised.

Naming sureties – It was held in R. v. Martin (No. 2) (1980), 57 C.C.C. (2d) 31 (Ont. C.A. in chambers) that a judge of the Court of Appeal has no power to give directions to a justice that certain persons should be accepted as sufficient sureties. However, that decision should probably now be read in light of the subsequently enacted s. 515(2.1). Unlike the provisions of s. 515, which deal with release pending trial, this section does not set out in detail the type of conditions which may be attached to the release order. However, there is no reason to believe that the jurisdiction of a judge of the Court of Appeal is any narrower than that of a justice and, in particular, note s. 515(2.1) which permits a "justice, judge or court" that orders the release of a person upon a recognizance with sureties to name particular persons as sureties in the order.

Revocation of release order [subsec. (6)] – There is no power to issue a warrant under s. 525(5) where the violation of the appellant's release order was not discovered until after that order had expired and the appellant was released on a new order. However, where the new order was obtained by fraud, by reason of the false assertion in the material in support of the application for the new order that the appellant had not violated the terms of his previous release order, then the court has an inherent power to set aside the new order and any subsequent release order. A warrant may therefore issue for the arrest of the appellant. The appellant will then be dealt with pursuant to s. 525(7): R. v. Stoltz (1993), 84 C.C.C. (3d) 422, 53 W.A.C. 147 (B.C.C.A.).

Release pending new trial – Once the accused's conviction has been set aside, he is now a person charged with an offence and awaiting trial and, as such, is entitled to the benefits of s. 11(d) and (e) of the Charter. Subsection (7) must accordingly be held to be constitutionally invalid to the extent that it applies to such a person. The accused's continued detention therefore falls to be determined as if he were a person charged with an offence in accordance with s. 522 and 515. Those provisions entitle the judge to take into account the protection or safety of the public in determining release: R. v. Sutherland (1994), 90 C.C.C. (3d) 376, 30 C.R. (4th) 265, 120 Sask. R. 94 (Sask. C.A.).

Where a new trial is ordered following a successful Crown appeal a judge of the trial court has jurisdiction to deal with release of the accused pending that new trial: Re Graham and The Queen (1986), 30 C.C.C. (3d) 176 (Ont. H.C.J.).

Release pending appeal to Supreme Court of Canada – A judge of the Court of Appeal has jurisdiction to order the release of an accused pending his application for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court, where a notice of motion for leave to appeal has been filed with the court, even if all the documents necessary to perfect the leave application have not yet been filed: R. v. Zundel (1990), 54 C.C.C. (3d) 400, 38 O.A.C. 51 (C.A.).

On an application to review a release order made by a judge of the court of appeal, the reviewing court has the authority to substitute its opinion for that of the single judge after considering the record, the principles that govern the grant of bail and the conclusions and findings made by the judge. The nature of the review is correctness, not reasonableness. The court may also receive and consider additional evidence that bears upon the application, provided the evidence is relevant and arose subsequent to the time the bail order was granted. While a judge has a wide discretion in determining what the public interest is, that discretion does not extend to exclude the public interest as a criterion of equal weight and importance with the other two criteria of merit of the appeal and likelihood of surrender into custody. In determining whether it is contrary to the public interest to release the accused, the court should consider a number of factors including the nature of the offence, the age of the victim, the circumstances surrounding the commission of the offence and the public attitude to such an offence: R. v. Benson (1992), 73 C.C.C. (3d) 303, 14 C.R. (4th) 245, 112 N.S.R. (2d) 423 sub nom. R. v. B. (F.F.) (C.A.).

REVIEW BY COURT OF APPEAL / Single judge acting / Enforcement of decision.

680. (1) A decision made by a judge under section 522 or subsection 524(4) or (5) or a decision made by a judge of the court of appeal under section 261 or 679 may, on the direction of the chief justice or acting chief justice of the court of appeal, be reviewed by that court and that court may, if it does not confirm the decision,

(a) vary the decision; or

(b) substitute such other decision as, in its opinion, should have been made.

(2) On consent of the parties, the powers of the court of appeal under subsection (1) may be exercised by a judge of that court.

(3) A decision as varied or substituted under this section shall have effect and may be enforced in all respects as though it were the decision originally made. R.S., c. 2 (2nd Supp.), s. 12; 1974-75-76, c. 93, s. 73; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 142; 1994, c. 44, s. 68.

CROSS-REFERENCES

While misconduct may attract liability under s. 145(2) and (3), there is no express provision authorizing misconduct hearings.

The discretionary substitution authority of s. 680(1)(b) incorporates s. 679(10), thus permitting an order expediting the hearing of an appeal.

SYNOPSIS

This section gives the court of appeal jurisdiction to entertain applications to review certain bail decisions.

Where bail has been granted or refused by a Supreme Court judge in connection with an offence listed in s. 469 (e.g., treason, murder) (see ss. 522, 524(4), (5)) or pending appeal, by a judge of the court of appeal (see s. 679), an application can be made to the chief justice of the court of appeal (or acting chief justice) for an order directing the hearing of an appeal from the earlier ruling (subsec. (1)). The similar procedure must be followed where an order is made under s. 261 respecting a stay of a driving prohibition.

The parties can consent to the review being heard by a single judge of the court of appeal (subsec. (2)).

A decision on such a review is treated, for all intents and purposes, as a decision of the court of first instance.

ANNOTATIONS

The Chief Justice should direct a review under this section if in his view the appeal Court, properly applying the law, could possibly conclude that the application for release should have been allowed. The review by the Court under this section is a review on the record not a de novo hearing: R. v. Moore (1979), 49 C.C.C. (2d) 78, 33 N.S.R. (2d) 631 (S.C. App. Div. in Chambers).

A review under this section should take the general form of an ordinary appeal and is not a hearing de novo in which either side has the right to submit additional materials. However, the Court, as in appeals, can grant leave in the usual way and upon the usual grounds to a party to produce new evidence: R. v. West (1972), 9 C.C.C. (2d) 369, 20 C.R.N.S. 15 (Ont. C.A.).

The duty of the Court under this section is to examine the record below and render the decision that "should have been made" by the Judge below giving proper regard to his findings of fact and the inferences which he has drawn: R. v. Smith (1973), 13 C.C.C. (2d) 374, 6 N.B.R. (2d) 494 (N.B.S.C. App.Div.).

After giving due regard to the decision in the first instance the Court of Appeal is entitled to substitute its opinion where, for example, it is of the opinion that the judge at first instance did not give sufficient credence to the public interest: R. v. Desjarlais (1984), 14 C.C.C. (3d) 77, 28 Man. R. (2d) 153 (C.A.).

In R. v. Perron (1989), 51 C.C.C. (3d) 518, 73 C.R. (3d) 174 (Que. C.A.), the members of the court expressed somewhat different views as to the nature of the review under this section. Malouf J.A. was of the view that the Court of Appeal has a very wide discretion which gives the court the power to substitute its opinion for that of the superior court judge. Tourigny J.A. was of the view that while the court of appeal may substitute its decision for that of the decision of the judge below, the review remains essentially an appeal and the decision of the superior court judge may only be modified where the Court of Appeal comes to the conclusion that the judge did not exercise her discretion judicially in the appreciation of the criteria set out in s. 515(10). Mailhot J.A. held that, while the Court of Appeal is given a broad power, it should generally accept those conclusions of the superior court judge which are based on credibility.

It was held prior to the enactment of subsec. (2) that a single judge had an inherent jurisdiction (apparently not dependent on consent of both parties) to vary a judicial interim release order of another judge of the Court of Appeal provided that he could have made the order, as varied, initially: R. v. Pappajohn (1977), 38 C.C.C. (2d) 106 (B.C.C.A. in Chambers); R. v. Nutbean (1980), 55 C.C.C. (2d) 235 (Ont. C.A.). It was further held, however, that a new recognizance must be entered into or a new undertaking given before any such amended order becomes effective: R. v. Nutbean, supra.

REPORT BY JUDGE / Transcript of evidence / Notes of proceedings / Copies to interested parties / Copy for Minister of Justice.

682. (1) Where, under this Part, an appeal is taken or an application for leave to appeal is made, the judge or provincial court judge who presided at the trial shall, at the request of the court of appeal or a judge thereof, in accordance with rules of court, furnish it or him with a report on the case or on any matter relating to the case that is specified in the request.

(2) A copy or transcript of

(a) the evidence taken at the trial,

(b) the charge to the jury, if any,

(c) the reasons for judgment, if any, and

(d) the addresses of the prosecutor and the accused, if a ground for the appeal is based on either of the addresses, shall be furnished to the court of appeal, except in so far as it is dispensed with by order of a judge of that court.

(3) A copy of the charge to the jury, if any, and any objections that were made to it shall, before the copy or transcript is transmitted to the court of appeal pursuant to subsection (2), be submitted to the judge who presided at the trial, and if the judge refuses to certify that the charge and objections are accurately set out, he shall immediately certify to the court of appeal

(a) the reasons for his refusal; and

(b) the charge that was given to the jury, if any, and any objections that were made to it.

(4) A party to an appeal is entitled to receive, on payment of any charges that are fixed by rules of court, a copy or transcript of any material that is prepared under subsections (1) to (3).

(5) The Minister of Justice is entitled, on request, to receive a copy or transcript of any material that is prepared under subsections (1) to (3). R.S., c. C-34, s. 609; 1972, c. 13, s. 55; 1974-75-76, c. 105, s. 17; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 143.

CROSS-REFERENCES

In most instances, the court of appeal will make a determination based on a transcript, agreed statement of facts, charge to the jury or reasons for judgment and any additional proceedings, together with a report of the trial judge.

SYNOPSIS

This section deals with some of the material which is required for the purposes of an appeal (see also the court of appeal rules).

Pursuant to subsec. (1) the court of appeal can request a report from the trial judge concerning the proceedings in that forum.

Subsection (2) allows a judge of the court of appeal to dispense with the filing of portions of the trial record which are not needed for the purposes of the appeal.

Subsection (3) directs that the transcript of a jury charge, and any objections thereto, be certified by the trial judge before the same is filed. If the trial judge is of the opinion that the transcript is inaccurate he or she shall so indicate to the court of appeal and shall provide a correct version of the charge and any objections.

Material filed for use on an appeal is available to the parties at a cost specified in the rules of court (subsec. (4)). The same shall be provided to the Minister of Justice upon request (subsec. (5)).

ANNOTATIONS

Subsec. (1) – To a large extent this provision is an historical anachronism. There should not be a standing request from the courts of appeal to trial judges to routinely make a report. The request should only be made in rare cases where something has occurred which is not reflected on the record upon which opposing counsel cannot agree. In those cases, trial counsel ought probably to be afforded an opportunity to appear before the trial judge in order to make submissions with regard to the requested report. When the report is made, copies should be provided to counsel appearing on the appeal. An unsolicited report by the trial judge expressing the opinion that the verdict of the jury was unsafe and indicating that, had he felt entitled to do so the judge would have commented on the testimony of the complainant, should not have been considered by the court of appeal: R. v. E.(A.W.), [1993] 3 S.C.R. 155, 83 C.C.C. (3d) 462, 23 C.R. (4th) 357.

Subsec. (2) – Where one ground of appeal is based upon the address of Crown counsel for which no stenographic notes were taken a conviction for non-capital murder was quashed and a new trial ordered: R. v. Robillard, [1969] 4 C.C.C.120, [1968] Que. Q.B.255n (Que. C.A.).

Merely because there is a gap in the transcript due to malfunctioning of the recording equipment does not in every case require that there be a new trial, even where a portion of the charge to the jury is missing. As a general rule there must be a serious possibility that there was an error in the missing portion of the charge, or that the omission deprived the appellant of a ground of appeal: R. v. Hayes (1989), 49 C.C.C. (3d) 161, 68 C.R. (3d) 245, 89 N.R. 138 (S.C.C.) (4:3).

An indigent appellant has no absolute right guaranteed by the Charter of Rights to have the transcript supplied to him by the state: R. v. Robinson (1989), 51 C.C.C. (3d) 452, 63 D.L.R. (4th) 289, 73 C.R. (3d) 81, 70 Alta. L.R. (2d) 31, 100 A.R. 26 (C.A.).

Subsec. (3) – Where there is no dispute between the parties as to the accuracy of the transcript of his charge the death of the trial Judge preventing his certification will not affect the hearing of the appeal: R. v. Johnston (1975), 28 C.C.C. (2d) 222, 35 C.R.N.S. 164 (N.B.S.C. App. Div.).

POWERS OF COURT OF APPEAL / Parties entitled to adduce evidence and be heard / Other powers / Execution of process / Power to order suspension / Revocation of suspension order.

683. (1) For the purposes of an appeal under this Part, the court of appeal may, where it considers it in the interests of justice,

- (a) order the production of any writing, exhibit, or other thing connected with the proceedings;
- (b) order any witness who would have been a compellable witness at the trial, whether or not he was called at the trial,
  - (i) to attend and be examined before the court of appeal, or
  - (ii) to be examined in the manner provided by rules of court before a judge of the court of appeal, or before any officer of the court of appeal or justice of the peace or other person appointed by the court of appeal for the purpose;
- (c) admit, as evidence, an examination that is taken under subparagraph (b)(ii);
- (d) receive the evidence, if tendered, of any witness, including the appellant, who is a competent but not compellable witness;
- (e) order that any question arising on the appeal that
  - (i) involves prolonged examination of writings or accounts, or scientific or local investigation, and
  - (ii) cannot in the opinion of the court of appeal conveniently be inquired into before the court of appeal,be referred for inquiry and report, in the manner provided by rules of court, to a special commissioner appointed by the court of appeal;
- (f) act on the report of a commissioner who is appointed under paragraph (e) in so far as the court of appeal thinks fit to do so, and
- (g) amend the indictment, unless it is of the opinion that the accused has been misled or prejudiced in his defence or appeal.

(2) In proceedings under this section, the parties or their counsel are entitled to examine or cross-examine witnesses and, in an inquiry under paragraph (1)(e), are entitled to be present during the inquiry, and to adduce evidence and to be heard.

(3) A court of appeal may exercise, in relation to proceedings in the court, any powers not mentioned in subsection (1) that may be exercised by the court on appeals in civil matters, and may issue any process that is necessary to enforce the orders or sentences of the court, but no costs shall be allowed to the appellant or respondent on the hearing and determination of an appeal or on any proceedings preliminary or incidental thereto.

(4) Any process that is issued by the court of appeal under this section may be executed anywhere in Canada.

(5) Where an appeal or an application for leave to appeal has been filed in the court of appeal, that court may, where it considers it to be in the interests of justice, order that

- (a) any obligation to pay a fine,
- (b) any order of forfeiture or disposition of forfeited property,
- (c) any order to make restitution under section 725 or 726, or

NOTE: Subsection (5)(c) amended 1995, c. 22, s. 10 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council) by replacing the reference to ss. 725 or 726 with ss. 738 or 739.

(d) any order to pay a victim fine surcharge under section 727.9
be suspended until the appeal has been determined.

NOTE: Subsection (5)(d) amended 1995, c. 22, s. 10 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council) by replacing the reference to s. 727.9 with s. 737.

(6) The court of appeal may revoke any order it makes under subsection (5) where it considers such revocation to be in the interests of justice. R.S., c. C-34, s. 610; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 144; c. 23 (4th Supp.), s. 5.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Authorization for the determination or disposition of an appeal on its merits may be found in s. 687. Section 695(1) confers similar authority upon the Supreme Court of Canada in an appeal brought under ss. 691 to 694 and 696.

SYNOPSIS

This section sets out some of the powers which may be exercised by a court of appeal.

Pursuant to subsec. (1) the court can: (a) order the production of any writing, exhibit, etc., connected with the proceeding; (b) admit “fresh evidence”; (c) refer matters to a special commission for examination; (d) act on the report of a special commissioner; and (e) amend the indictment.

Where witnesses appear, the parties are entitled to examine or cross-examine. In a commissioner’s inquiry the parties are entitled to be present to adduce evidence and to be heard (subsec. (2)).

In addition, the court generally can exercise the incidental powers it has in connection with civil matters. However, no costs are to be awarded (subsec. (3)). Any process issued by the court may be executed anywhere in Canada (subsec. (4)).

The court can stay the payment of a fine, forfeiture order, etc., pending the outcome of an appeal (subsec. (5)). However, it can revoke any such order if the circumstances warrant (subsec. (6)).

ANNOTATIONS

Admission of evidence wrongfully excluded at trial – Where the trial Judge incorrectly refused to admit a document into evidence, it was accepted upon appeal by the appellate Court and considered in allowing the appeal and entering a verdict of acquittal: R. v. Partridge (1973), 15 C.C.C. (2d) 434, 5 Nfld. & P.E.I.R. 420 (P.E.I.S.C.).

Rather than simply ordering a new trial because of the error by the trial judge in refusing to permit access to the sealed packet containing the affidavit used to obtain an authorization to intercept private communications, the court of appeal ordered that the accused be given the affidavit and provided with an opportunity to cross-examine the affiant before a person designated by the Chief Justice. The transcript of the cross-examination would then be filed into the record and the court of appeal would be able to determine whether the error required a new trial: R. v. Hiscock (1991), 68 C.C.C. (3d) 182 (Que. C.A.).

Admission of evidence to complete the record – Approval was given to an appellate Court receiving viva voce evidence of analysts whose certificates had been admitted as evidence at trial: Kissick et al. v. The King (1952), 102 C.C.C. 129, 14 C.R. 1 (S.C.C.) (4:1).

Where the trial Judge refused to allow a deceased preliminary inquiry witness’ evidence to be read in because the Crown had overlooked first proving that the accused had been present there, an appellate Court allowed this technical defect to be cured before it: R. v. Huluszkiw (1962), 133 C.C.C. 244, 37 C.R. 386 (Ont. C.A.).

Those cases where the Crown has been permitted to tender further evidence are, generally speaking, cases where the appellate court is doing nothing more than what would clearly have happened at trial had the error or omission been noted and rectified at trial. Where, however, it was not clear that the course of the trial would not have been in any respect different if the error had been discovered at trial, then the application by the Crown should be refused: R. v. Cheung (1990), 56 C.C.C. (3d) 381 (B.C.C.A.).

Test for admission of fresh evidence – If the fresh evidence is considered to be of sufficient strength that it might reasonably affect the verdict of the jury it should not be excluded on the grounds of an earlier failure to exercise reasonable diligence to present it at trial: McMartin v. The Queen, [1965] 1 C.C.C. 142, 43 C.R. 403 (S.C.C.) (9:0).

In Horsburgh v. The Queen, [1968] 2 C.C.C. 288, 2 C.R.N.S. 228 (S.C.C.), it was held

(4:3) that the fact that two witnesses had testified and been cross-examined at trial is not a valid ground for refusal by the Appeal Court to admit their affidavits retracting and contradicting their own evidence.

The power of an appellate Court to admit new evidence is broad and where this evidence, clearly relevant to the issue of guilt, was known to the accused but unknown to his counsel at trial, then considering the young accused's inexperience and unfamiliarity of the finality of the trial process it should be admitted: R. v. Taylor (1975), 22 C.C.C. (2d) 321, [1975] 3 W.W.R. 485 (Alta. S.C. App. Div.).

The Court of Appeal's power under this section is limited to admitting as fresh evidence admissible evidence only and manifestly does not authorize a Court of Appeal to dispense with the law of hearsay evidence: R. v. O'Brien (1977), 35 C.C.C. (2d) 209, 76 D.L.R. (3d) 513, [1978] 1 S.C.R. 591 (9:0).

In Palmer and Palmer v. The Queen (1979), 50 C.C.C. (2d) 193, [1980] 1 S.C.R. 759, 14 C.R. (3d) 22 (S.C.C.) (9:0) the Court reviewed the principles upon which fresh evidence should be admitted as follows: (1) the evidence should generally not be admitted if, by due diligence, it could have been adduced at trial, although this principle is not applied with the same strictness in a criminal trial as in a civil trial; (2) the evidence must be relevant in that it bears upon a decisive or potentially decisive issue; (3) the evidence must be credible; and (4) it must be such that if believed, it could have affected the result. In that case the accused's appeal was dismissed, the Court holding that the Court of Appeal did not err in rejecting the fresh evidence, which concerned the dealings of the chief Crown witness with the Crown and police, on the basis that it was not credible. Also see: R. v. McAnespie, [1993] 4 S.C.R. 501, 86 C.C.C. (3d) 191n, 68 O.A.C. 185.

In R. v. C.(R.) (1989), 47 C.C.C. (3d) 84, 31 O.A.C. 375 (C.A.), the court considered the difficult problem of reconciling the due diligence requirement with the interests of justice and concluded that, while that requirement should not be watered down, lack of due diligence cannot override accomplishing a just result in a particular case. The answer to this "apparent conundrum" may only be found in the totality of circumstances and a balancing of factors respecting the ends of justice.

The fact that the evidence which is tendered neither confirms nor corroborates the testimony of the accused does not mean that it could not have had an impact on the verdict and thus be capable of constituting fresh evidence: R. v. D'Amours, [1990] 1 S.C.R. 115, 107 N.R. 237.

When deciding whether or not to exercise the broad discretion under this section, the overriding consideration is the interests of justice. This discretion should be exercised to permit the adducing of evidence of the fact that, following the trial, the accused was acquitted of a charge which had formed the basis of similar act evidence at the earlier trial. The acquittal was the equivalent of a finding of innocence and there would be a clear miscarriage of justice if allegations of conduct, of which the accused was innocent, played a part in his conviction for other offences: R. v. G. (K.R.) (1991), 68 C.C.C. (3d) 268, 5 O.R. (3d) 406 (C.A.).

The traditional criteria for the admission of fresh evidence do not apply, where an accused who has been convicted seeks to place before an appellate court additional material relevant to a factual or legal determination made at trial, where the material sought to be admitted challenges the very validity of the trial process. Where an appellant contends that trial counsel's conduct resulted in a miscarriage of justice, the interests of justice will generally require that the court receive otherwise admissible evidence relevant to that claim, assuming that the material sought to be adduced provides a basis upon which the court could conclude that a miscarriage of justice occurred, and that the opposing party has had adequate notice of the material, an opportunity to challenge it by cross-examination, and an opportunity to offer additional material relevant to the issue: R. v. W.(W.) (1995), 100 C.C.C. (3d) 225, 43 C.R. (4th) 26, 25 O.R. (3d) 161 (C.A.). See also R. v. Strauss (1995), 100 C.C.C. (3d) 303, 100 W.A.C. 241 (B.C.C.A.).

dence the motion should be heard and, if not dismissed, then judgment reserved and the appeal heard. The court can then consider the question of the fresh evidence in light of the background of the case and of the other evidence and then dismiss the application; admit the evidence as conclusive of the issues and dispose of the matter immediately; or admit evidence that may have sufficient probative force, if accepted by the trier of fact, to affect the verdict and direct a new trial: R. v. Stolar (1988), 40 C.C.C. (3d) 1, [1988] 1 S.C.R. 480, 62 C.R. (3d) 313 (5:0).

The phrase “connected with the proceedings” in subsec. (1)(a) is not wide enough to give the court power to compel production of papers in the possession of the Crown relating to a crime with which the accused was not charged: R. v. Evans (1988), 45 C.C.C. (3d) 523 (B.C.C.A.).

Statistical and other statements of social and economic facts proffered by the Crown to justify, under s. 1 of the Charter, a violation of the Charter would not seem to be admissible under subsec. (1)(d). However, provided the other party is given notice of the materials and an opportunity to reply, an appeal court should take notice of relevant matters of social and economic facts, whether or not they have been available to the trial judge: R. v. Bonin (1989), 47 C.C.C. (3d) 230, 11 M.V.R. (2d) 31 (B.C.C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused 50 C.C.C. (3d) vi, 102 N.R. 400n.

Amendment of indictment [subsec. (1)(g)] – There being reversible error in relation to the accused’s conviction for attempted murder, it was open to the Court of Appeal, with the consent of the Crown, to amend the indictment so that it included the offence contrary to s. 245, and then dismiss the accused’s appeal and substitute a conviction for the s. 245 offence pursuant to s. 686(1)(b)(i) and (3). The accused was in no way prejudiced, since he had originally been charged with the s. 245 offence but that charge had in effect been stayed by reason of the rules against multiple convictions: R. v. Symes (1989), 49 C.C.C. (3d) 81, 32 O.A.C. 102 (C.A.).

It is an extraordinary step for an appellate court to amend the charge materially and then to enter a conviction on the basis of the charge as amended. In this case, the court of appeal should not have done so, the accused having conducted their case, including the calling of expert evidence, based on the information as it was initially framed: R. v. Tremblay, [1993] 2 S.C.R. 932, 84 C.C.C. (3d) 97, 23 C.R. (4th) 98 (3:2).

Powers of court of appeal generally [subsec. (3)] – The court has power to make an order restricting the publication of exhibits, which were entered at the accused’s trial, pending disposition of his appeal: Re Regina and Lortie (1985), 21 C.C.C. (3d) 436, 46 C.R. (3d) 322 (Que. C.A.).

Curtailment of public accessibility to the courts, including trial exhibits, is justified where there is a need to protect the innocent. There is a distinction between records produced by the court or pleadings and similar documents, and exhibits which are frequently the property of non-parties. While such exhibits remain in its custody, the court has a duty to entertain any request for access. This duty includes the right to inquire into the use that is to be made of the exhibits, and the court is fully entitled to regulate that use by securing appropriate undertakings and assurances if those be advisable to protect competing interests. An accused who has been acquitted on appeal must be considered to be innocent. In this case, the media sought access to the audio and video tapes of a confession which were admitted at trial but later held to be inadmissible on appeal because the accused’s constitutional rights had been violated. A person, charged and convicted of a serious crime on the basis of self-incriminating evidence obtained in violation of the Charter, should not be made to bear the stigma resulting from unrestricted repetition of the very same illegally obtained evidence. His privacy interests, in this case, outweighed the interest in unrestricted access: Vickery v. Nova Scotia Supreme Court (Prothonotary) (1991), 64 C.C.C. (3d) 65, 124 N.R. 95 (S.C.C.) (6:3).

The combined operation of subsec. (3) and the relevant civil rules gives the court power to make an order providing for the disposition of documents seized during execution of a search warrant quashed by the Court of Appeal, even after the formal order allowing the appeal has been entered: Re Dobney Foundry Ltd. et al. and The Queen (No. 3) (1986), 29 C.C.C. (3d) 285, [1987] 1 W.W.R. 281, 11 C.P.R. (3d) 285 (B.C.C.A.).

The Court of Appeal has ancillary jurisdiction, not necessarily dependent on this subsection, to make an order necessary to prevent frustration of an appeal pending before it. Thus in this case the court ordered that documents, seized during execution of a search warrant and alleged to be privileged, remain sealed until the appeal against the refusal to quash the warrant had been disposed of. However, since there is no specific statutory basis for exercise of this jurisdiction by a single judge the "court", meaning three members of the Court of Appeal, must make the order: R. v. Church of Scientology; R. v. Zaharia (1986), 25 C.C.C. (3d) 149, 6 C.P.C. (2d) 113 (Ont. C.A.).

In considering an interim measure such as an impoundment order preventing the authorities from having access to the seized material until the validity of the underlying law is determined in the face of a challenge under the Charter, a court must consider three factors. The first, is whether a serious question of law is raised. The second, is whether irreparable harm will be occasioned to the applicant if the interim order is refused. The third, requires the court to consider and weigh in the balance the inconveniences caused to the parties by the interim order: 143471 Canada Inc. v. Quebec (Attorney General); Tabah v. Québec (Procureur Général), [1994] 2 S.C.R. 339, 90 C.C.C. (3d) 1, 31 C.R. (4th) 120.

The court of appeal has no power to suspend the operation of the terms of a probation order pending appeal: R. v. Banks (1990), 61 C.C.C. (3d) 189 (B.C.C.A.). Contra: R. v. Keating (1991), 66 C.C.C. (3d) 530 (N.S.C.A.).

Stay of order to pay fine or of forfeiture [subsec. (5)] – The interests of justice do not refer exclusively to the merits of the appeal and include, inter alia, the interests of the state, the public's confidence in and respect for the court in its administration of the criminal law: R. v. Chek TV Ltd. (1986), 27 C.C.C. (3d) 380 (B.C.C.A.).

LEGAL ASSISTANCE FOR APPELLANT / Counsel fees and disbursements / Taxation of fees and disbursements.

684. (1) A court of appeal or a judge of that court may, at any time, assign counsel to act on behalf of an accused who is a party to an appeal or to proceedings preliminary or incidental to an appeal where, in the opinion of the court or judge, it appears desirable in the interests of justice that the accused should have legal assistance and where it appears that the accused has not sufficient means to obtain that assistance.

(2) Where counsel is assigned pursuant to subsection (1) and legal aid is not granted to the accused pursuant to a provincial legal aid program, the fees and disbursements of counsel shall be paid by the Attorney General who is the appellant or respondent, as the case may be, in the appeal.

(3) Where subsection (2) applies and counsel and the Attorney General cannot agree on fees or disbursements of counsel, the Attorney General or the counsel may apply to the registrar of the court of appeal and the registrar may tax the disputed fees and disbursements. R.S., c. C-34, s. 611; R.S.C. 1985, c. 34 (3rd Supp.), s. 9.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Where the accused is a party to an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada or related proceedings to such an appeal, s. 694.1 applies with similar effect. No such provision exists at the trial level.

Section 672.24 prescribes the assignment of counsel for an accused who is unrepresented and where an issue of fitness is being directed.

An accused will be afforded the protection of s. 10(b) of the Charter and the right to retain and instruct counsel without delay and to be informed of such right, upon arrest or detention.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides that the court of appeal, or a judge thereof, can appoint counsel for an appellant or respondent who is without means to retain such assistance independently (subsec. (1)). Such an application will generally be made only after Legal Aid has refused to assist in this connection.

In the absence of Legal Aid funding, costs are paid by the Attorney General who is a party to the appeal (subsec. (2)). In the event of a dispute with respect to fees and disbursements the registrar of the Court of Appeal may tax the account submitted by counsel.

ANNOTATIONS

The Charter of Rights does not guarantee an indigent accused an absolute right to be provided with legal counsel to argue his appeal. Thus, this section which gives the court a discretion whether or not to assign counsel where it appears desirable in the interests of justice is valid. The court may consider the merit of the proposed appeal in considering whether or not an order should be made under this section: R. v. Robinson (1989), 51 C.C.C. (3d) 452, 63 D.L.R. (4th) 289, 73 C.R. (3d) 81, 70 Alta. L.R. (2d) 31, 100 A.R. 26 (C.A.).

SUMMARY DETERMINATION OF FRIVOLOUS APPEALS.

685. Where it appears to the registrar that a notice of appeal, which purports to be on a ground of appeal that involves a question of law alone, does not show a substantial ground of appeal, the registrar may refer the appeal to the court of appeal for summary determination, and, where an appeal is referred under this section, the court of appeal may, if it considers that the appeal is frivolous or vexatious and can be determined without being adjourned for a full hearing, dismiss the appeal summarily, without calling on any person to attend the hearing or to appear for the respondent on the hearing. R.S., c. C-34, s. 612.

CROSS-REFERENCES

This section is probably included in the general incorporation of appellate authority under s. 695(1), without express reference to appeals to the Supreme Court of Canada. The provisions are applicable to summary conviction appeals brought under s. 813, pursuant to s. 822(1).

SYNOPSIS

This section provides for summary dismissal of appeals where the court of appeal, on the application of the registrar, determines that the appeal is frivolous or vexatious, based on the legal grounds advanced in the notice of appeal. This section only applies where the notice of appeal refers to questions of law alone.

Powers of the Court of Appeal

POWERS / Order to be made / Substituting verdict / Appeal from acquittal / New trial under Part XIX / Where appeal allowed against verdict of unfit to stand trial / Appeal court may set aside verdict of unfit to stand trial / Additional powers.

686. (1) On the hearing of an appeal against a conviction or against a verdict that the appellant is unfit to stand trial or not criminally responsible on account of mental disorder, the court of appeal

(a) may allow the appeal where it is of the opinion that

(i) the verdict should be set aside on the ground that it is unreasonable or cannot be supported by the evidence,

- (ii) the judgment of the trial court should be set aside on the ground of a wrong decision on a question of law, or
  - (iii) on any ground there was a miscarriage of justice;
  - (b) may dismiss the appeal where
    - (i) the court is of the opinion that the appellant, although he was not properly convicted on a count or part of the indictment, was properly convicted on another count or part of the indictment,
    - (ii) the appeal is not decided in favour of the appellant on any ground mentioned in paragraph (a),
    - (iii) notwithstanding that the court is of the opinion that on any ground mentioned in subparagraph (a)(ii) the appeal might be decided in favour of the appellant, it is of the opinion that no substantial wrong or miscarriage of justice has occurred, or
    - (iv) notwithstanding any procedural irregularity at trial, the trial court had jurisdiction over the class of offence of which the appellant was convicted and the court of appeal is of the opinion that the appellant suffered no prejudice thereby;
  - (c) may refuse to allow the appeal where it is of the opinion that the trial court arrived at a wrong conclusion respecting the effect of a special verdict, may order the conclusion to be recorded that appears to the court to be required by the verdict and may pass a sentence that is warranted in law in substitution for the sentence passed by the trial court, or
  - (d) may set aside a conviction and find the appellant unfit to stand trial or not criminally responsible on account of mental disorder and may exercise any of the powers of the trial court conferred by or referred to in section 672.45 in any manner deemed appropriate to the court of appeal in the circumstances.
- (2) Where a court of appeal allows an appeal under paragraph (1)(a), it shall quash the conviction and
- (a) direct a judgment or verdict of acquittal to be entered; or
  - (b) order a new trial.
- (3) Where a court of appeal dismisses an appeal under subparagraph (1)(b)(i), it may substitute the verdict that in its opinion should have been found and
- (a) affirm the sentence passed by the trial court; or
  - (b) impose a sentence that is warranted in law, or remit the matter to the trial court and direct the trial court to impose a sentence that is warranted in law.
- (4) Where an appeal is from an acquittal the court of appeal may
- (a) dismiss the appeal; or
  - (b) allow the appeal, set aside the verdict and
    - (i) order a new trial, or
    - (ii) except where the verdict is that of a court composed of a judge and jury, enter a verdict of guilty with respect to the offence of which, in its opinion, the accused should have been found guilty but for the error in law, and pass a sentence that is warranted in law, or remit the matter to the trial court and direct the trial court to impose a sentence that is warranted in law.
- (5) Where an appeal is taken in respect of proceedings under Part XIX and the court of appeal orders a new trial under this Part, the following provisions apply:
- (a) if the accused, in his notice of appeal or notice of application for leave to appeal, requested that the new trial, if ordered, should be held before a court composed of a judge and jury, the new trial shall be held accordingly;
  - (b) if the accused, in his notice of appeal or notice of application for leave to appeal, did not request that the new trial, if ordered, should be held before a court composed of a judge and jury, the new trial shall, without further election by the accused, be held before a judge or provincial court judge, as the case may be, acting under Part XIX, other than a judge or provincial court judge who tried the accused in the first instance, unless the court of appeal directs that the new trial be held before the judge or provincial court judge who tried the accused in the first instance;

- (c) if the court of appeal orders that the new trial shall be held before a court composed of a judge and jury, the new trial shall be commenced by an indictment in writing setting forth the offence in respect of which the new trial was ordered; and
- (d) notwithstanding paragraph (a), if the conviction against which the accused appealed was for an offence mentioned in section 553 and was made by a provincial court judge, the new trial shall be held before a provincial court judge acting under Part XIX, other than the provincial court judge who tried the accused in the first instance, unless the court of appeal directs that the new trial be held before the provincial court judge who tried the accused in the first instance.

(6) Where a court of appeal allows an appeal against a verdict that the accused is unfit to stand trial, it shall, subject to subsection (7), order a new trial.

(7) Where the verdict that the accused is unfit to stand trial was returned after the close of the case for the prosecution, the court of appeal may, notwithstanding that the verdict is proper, if it is of the opinion that the accused should have been acquitted at the close of the case for the prosecution, allow the appeal, set aside the verdict and direct a judgment or verdict of acquittal to be entered.

(8) Where a court of appeal exercises any of the powers conferred by subsection (2), (4), (6) or (7), it may make any order, in addition, that justice requires. R.S., c. C-34, s. 613; 1974-75-76, c. 93, s. 75; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 145; 1991, c. 43, s. 9.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 687 authorizes the determination of sentence appeals. Orders for compensation or restitution made at trial may be varied or annulled under the courts plenary authority under s. 689(2). The Supreme Court of Canada may, under s. 695(1), make any order that the court of appeal might have made on an appeal under Part XXII. A summary conviction appeal court has similar authority under s. 822(1) relating to s. 813 appeals.

Part XXI provisions are applicable to appeals from the determination of application for extraordinary remedies under Part XXVI, s. 784(2). The provisions of Part XX also apply, under s. 839(2), to appeals to the court of appeal from decisions in summary conviction proceedings under ss. 822 and 834. The court of appeal has been given broad authority under s. 683 for the purposes of Part XXI appeals.

See s. 672.1 for definition of “verdict of not criminally responsible on account of mental disorder” and s. 2 for definitions of “mental disorder” and “unfit to stand trial”.

SYNOPSIS

This section sets out the orders which may be made by the court of appeal in disposing of an appeal.

Subsection (1) relates to appeals by an accused from conviction, a finding of unfitness, or a verdict of not guilty on account of insanity. Such appeals may succeed where it is shown that (a) the verdict is not reasonably supported by the evidence, (b) an error of law was made by the trial judge, or (c) there has been a miscarriage of justice (subsec. (1)(a)). An appeal may be dismissed where (a) the accused was properly convicted on part of the indictment (e.g., an included offence), (b) the grounds raised have not been made out, (c) any error of law did not occasion a substantial wrong or miscarriage of justice (i.e., the verdict would necessarily have been the same), or (d) the error at trial was a procedural irregularity which did not prejudice the accused (subsec. (1)(b)).

The court can dismiss an appeal and sentence the accused where it concludes that the trial court erred by arriving at a wrong conclusion respecting the effect of a special verdict (subsec. (1)(c)).

If the court finds that the appellant was insane at the time of the commission of the offence it may set aside the conviction and remand the appellant into the custody of the lieutenant governor (subsec. (1)(d)). Similarly, the accused may be remanded if the court finds that he was unfit to stand trial (subsec. (1)(e)).

Where a conviction appeal is allowed the court can, depending on the circumstances, enter an acquittal or order a new trial (subsec. (2)). However, where an acquittal is not appropriate the court is under no obligation to order a retrial and can set aside the conviction without making any other order.

Where the court is of the opinion that the appellant was properly convicted on part of the indictment it can either affirm the sentence imposed at trial, impose a new sentence, or remit the matter to the trial judge for a hearing on the matter (subsec. (3)).

On an appeal by the Crown from acquittal the court, if it does not dismiss the appeal can (a) order a new trial, or (b) except where the case was tried by a jury, enter a conviction and either impose sentence or refer that issue to the trial judge. If the trial was with a jury the court is limited to ordering a new trial (subsec. (4)).

Subsection (5) permits an accused appealing a conviction in proceedings before a judge sitting alone (other than for an offence within the absolute jurisdiction of the provincial court: see s. 553) to request that a new trial be with a jury. Normally a retrial in a case heard by a judge alone will be before other than the original judge unless the court of appeal specifically directs otherwise.

Where a verdict of unfit to stand trial or not criminally responsible on account of mental disorder is rendered, the court of appeal will order a new trial. However, if no defence evidence was called and the court is of the opinion that the accused should have been acquitted at the close of the prosecution case, a judgment to that effect will be entered (subsecs. (6), (7)).

Pursuant to subsec. (8) the court of appeal may, in disposing of an appeal, make any ancillary order which it feels justice requires.

ANNOTATIONS

Stare decisis – A provincial appellate Court is not obliged as a matter of either law or practice to follow a decision of another provincial appellate court unless it is persuaded that it should do so on its merits or for other independent reasons. The only required uniformity among provincial appellate courts is that which is the result of the decisions of the Supreme Court of Canada: Wolf v. The Queen (1974), 17 C.C.C. (2d) 425, 27 C.R.N.S.150 (S.C.C.) (9:0).

Where the Supreme Court of Canada rules on a point, although it was not absolutely necessary to do so in order to dispose of the appeal, the lower Courts are bound to follow that ruling: Sellars v. The Queen (1980), 52 C.C.C. (2d) 345, [1980] 1 S.C.R. 527, 110 D.L.R. (3d) 629 (7:0).

The Court of Appeal is not bound by one of its previous decisions where the liberty of the subject is in issue and the Court is convinced that the prior decision is wrong: R. v. Santeramo (1976), 32 C.C.C. (2d) 35, 36 C.R.N.S. 1 (Ont. C.A.).

Unreasonable or unsafe verdict [subsec. (1)(a)(i)] – The test to be applied under this paragraph is whether the verdict is one that a properly instructed jury acting judicially could reasonably have rendered. The Court of Appeal's function goes beyond merely finding that there is evidence to support a conviction. While the Court of Appeal must not merely substitute its view for that of the jury, in order to apply the test the court must re-examine and to some extent reweigh and consider the effect of the evidence:

The test to be applied by a court of appeal in considering an allegation that the verdict was unreasonable is whether the trier of fact could reasonably have reached the conclusion that the accused was guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. In making this determination, the court of appeal must re-examine, and to some extent at least, reweigh and consider the effect of the evidence. This rule applies to verdicts based on findings of credibility except that, in applying the test, the court of appeal should show great deference to findings of credibility made at trial. An appellate court does, however, have the power to overturn verdicts based on findings of credibility where, after considering all of the evidence and having due regard to the advantages afforded to the trial judge, it concluded that the verdict is unreasonable: R. v. W. (R.) (1992), 74 C.C.C. (3d) 134, 13 C.R. (4th) 257, [1992] 2 S.C.R. 122. Consequently, this provision is applicable where the assessment of credibility made at trial is not supported by the evidence: R. v. Burke (unreported, March 21, 1996, S.C.C.) [096/085/066-35 pp.].

There are special difficulties where the basis for the allegation that the verdict is unreasonable is that the testimony is so incredible that a verdict founded upon that testimony must be unreasonable. This basis for review is particularly problematic where the challenge to credibility is based on the witness' alleged lack of truthfulness and sincerity rather than other aspects of credibility such as the witness' ability to perceive the events. In determining credibility in such cases, the jury must not only consider the significance of any alleged inconsistencies or motives for concoction, which may be susceptible of reasoned review by a court of appeal, but also the demeanour of the witness and the common sense of the jury, which cannot be assessed by the court of appeal. The appellate court cannot infer from the mere presence of contradictory details or motives to concoct that the jury's verdict is unreasonable: R. v. Francois, [1994] 2 S.C.R. 827, 91 C.C.C. (3d) 289, 31 C.R. (4th) 201.

In considering the reasonableness of the verdict the Court of Appeal may, where applicable, take into account the accused's failure to testify and thus the absence of a denial or explanation: R. v. B. (J.N.) (1989), 48 C.C.C. (3d) 71, 68 C.R. (3d) 145 (Man. C.A.).

Failure of the trial judge to indicate expressly that all relevant considerations have been taken into account in arriving at a verdict is not a basis for allowing an appeal under subsec. (1)(a). A trial judge does not err merely because he does not give reasons for deciding one way or the other on problematic points and the judge is not required to demonstrate knowledge of the law or that he has considered all aspects of the evidence. If the trial judge states his reasons in brief compass, and his conclusions are supported by the evidence, then the verdict should not be overturned merely because the judge failed to discuss collateral aspects of the case: R. v. Burns, [1994] 1 S.C.R. 656, 89 C.C.C. (3d) 193, 29 C.R. (4th) 113 sub nom. R. v. (R.H.).

While a trial judge's misapprehension of evidence and failure to appreciate relevant evidence may not be errors of law, they are errors of fact or mixed fact and law and, if they deprive the accused of a fair trial, may result in a miscarriage of justice within the meaning of this subsection. An accused whose conviction rests on findings tainted by error has been denied a fair trial: R. v. G. (G.) (1995), 97 C.C.C. (3d) 362, 80 O.A.C. 12 (C.A.); R. v. Morrissey (1995), 97 C.C.C. (3d) 193, 38 C.R. (4th) 4, 22 O.R. (3d) 514.

Inconsistent verdicts [subsec. (1)(a)(i)] – Where the offences were related and pertained to one incident but their essential elements were not identical, the onus is upon the accused to satisfy the appellate Court that a guilty verdict on one offence cannot stand with his acquittal on the other two counts. Inconsistent verdicts will not per se quash a conviction unless the verdicts are violently at odds and the same basic ingredients are common to both charges: R. v. McLaughlin (1974), 15 C.C.C. (2d) 562, 25 C.R.N.S.362 (Ont.C.A.).

Miscarriage of justice [subsec. (1)(a)(iii)] – While counsel's failure to object to the Judge's charge to the jury does not preclude the allegation of error on appeal it is a circumstance which the appellate Court will consider particularly where the complaint is the trial Judge's failure to place before the jury matters which the party alleges were essential matters to be included in the charge: R. v. Imrich (1977), 34 C.C.C. (2d) 143, 75 D.L.R. (3d) 243 (S.C.C.) (8:1).

If the court considered that there was a real possibility that a miscarriage of justice occurred due to the flagrant incompetence of counsel then the Court of Appeal would intervene under this paragraph. It would appear that the test to be applied is whether there was a reasonable probability that but for counsel's unprofessional errors the result of the trial would have been different: R. v. Garofoli (1988), 41 C.C.C. (3d) 97, 64 C.R. (3d) 193 (Ont. C.A.).

In R. v. Silvini (1991), 68 C.C.C. (3d) 251, 5 O.R. (3d) 545 (C.A.) the court applied this test and ordered a new trial where trial counsel failed to apply for a severance so that he could call the co-accused as a witness to support the defence of the appellant. Counsel was representing both accused at the trial and was in a conflict of interest by reason of this joint representation. He was aware of the crucial need for the co-accused's testimony and, had the application for severance been made, the trial judge probably would have felt obliged to grant the application to avoid a miscarriage of justice.

Where improper contact with the jury during its deliberations, which is discovered after the verdict, is such as to taint the administration of justice, then a miscarriage of justice has occurred and there is no need for the accused to prove any actual prejudice. Confidence in the administration of justice is equally as shaken by the appearance as by the fact of an unfair trial: R. v. Cameron (1991), 64 C.C.C. (3d) 96, 2 O.R. (3d) 633, 44 O.A.C. 278 (C.A.).

Dismissal of appeal where conviction proper in part [subsecs. (1)(b)(i) and (3)] – Where the Court is of the view that the conviction for the full offence cannot stand but that it should substitute a conviction for an included offence, the proper procedure is to dismiss the appeal and substitute such a verdict: R. v. Nantais, [1966] 4 C.C.C. 108, 48 C.R. 186 (Ont. C.A.).

An appellate court dismissing an appeal pursuant to subsec. (1)(b)(i) has the power to amend the conviction to conform with the evidence: R. v. Lake, [1969] 2 C.C.C. 224, 1 D.L.R. (3d) 322 (S.C.C.).

Thus the court was entitled to amend an indictment charging possession of cannabis marihuana for the purpose of trafficking to conform to the evidence showing the narcotic to be cannabis resin, by deleting the word "marihuana", inserting the word "resin" and dismissing the appeal: R. v. Morozuk (1985), 24 C.C.C. (3d) 257, [1986] 2 W.W.R. 385, 50 C.R. (3d) 179 (S.C.C.) (7:0).

It was held in R. v. Kent, Sinclair and Gode (1986), 27 C.C.C. (3d) 405, 21 C.R.R. 372 (Man. C.A.), that by reason of the combined operation of subsec. (3) and subsec. (1)(b)(i) it is open to the court to substitute a conviction for an included offence, even in the case of misdirection below in respect of the conviction under appeal, where it is of the opinion that no properly instructed jury acting reasonably could have reached a conclusion more favourable to the accused than that he was guilty of the lesser included offence. To the contrary are R. v. Popoff (1960), 129 C.C.C. 250, 34 C.R. 230, 33 W.W.R. 400 (B.C.C.A.) and R. v. Morris (1975), 29 C.C.C. (2d) 540, 12 N.B.R. (2d) 568 (C.A.), where it was held that subsec. (3) is not available where the appeal is based on grounds of misdirection and it cannot be said that a conviction for the full offence ought not to have been found on the evidence.

And in R. v. Wigman (1987), 33 C.C.C. (3d) 97, 56 C.R. (3d) 289, [1987] 1 S.C.R. 246 (6:0), the court substituted a conviction for an included offence where there had been misdirection in relation to the offence of which the accused was convicted. The Crown however was not seeking a new trial if the conviction for the full offence could not be maintained.

If the Court, after substituting the conviction, merely affirms the original sentence then that sentence runs from the date of its imposition by the trial Judge. If, however, the Court imposes a new sentence it may provide that the sentence runs from the date of its imposition by the Court of Appeal or, semble, from the date of imposition of the original sentence: R. v. Boyd (1979), 47 C.C.C. (2d) 369 (Ont. C.A.).

Where the Court of Appeal exercises its jurisdiction under subsec. (3) and substitutes a conviction for second degree murder it may also set the period of parole non-eligibility, which period may exceed the minimum 10 years: R. v. Kjeldsen (1980), 53 C.C.C. (2d) 55, [1980] 3 W.W.R. 411 (Alta. C.A.).

Application of rule precluding multiple convictions – Although the trial judge has purported to enter an acquittal on a lesser charge by reason of the doctrine precluding multiple convictions, the Court of Appeal may deal with that charge on the accused's appeal from conviction, even in the absence of a Crown appeal from that acquittal. Where the Court of Appeal allows the accused's appeal from conviction and enters an acquittal, the court may then make an order in respect of the charge upon which the accused was acquitted. However, rather than entering a conviction on that charge, the appropriate order is to remit the matter back to the trial judge to enter a conviction and sentence the accused. This then preserves the accused's right to launch an appeal from that conviction if he so desires: R. v. P.(D.W.) (1989), 49 C.C.C. (3d) 417, 70 C.R. (3d) 315, [1989] 5 W.W.R. 97 (S.C.C.) (5:0).

Dismissal of appeal as no substantial wrong or miscarriage of justice [subsec. (1)(b)(iii)] – The test under this subsection has been expressed as whether the verdict would necessarily have been the same if the error had not occurred or whether there is any possibility that, if the error had not been committed, a judge or properly instructed jury would have acquitted the accused. Under either approach, the task of the appellate court is to determine whether “there is any reasonable possibility that the verdict would have been different had the error at issue not been made”: R. v. Bevan, [1993] 2 S.C.R. 599, 82 C.C.C. (3d) 310, 21 C.R. (4th) 277.

There is no appearance of unfairness amounting to a miscarriage of justice so as to preclude resort to subsec. (1)(b)(iii) where, although inadmissible evidence was improperly admitted, the trial judge in his reasons for conviction expressly arrives at his conclusion without reliance on such evidence: R. v. Leaney (1989), 50 C.C.C. (3d) 289, [1989] 2 S.C.R. 393, 71 C.R. (3d) 325 (4:1).

When the error of law is the exclusion of exculpatory evidence then the determination of whether the verdict would necessarily have been the same if the error had not been made must be made having regard to the entirety of the evidence, the exculpatory evidence having been included, and in the light of the effect the excluded evidence could, within reason, possibly have had on the evidence that did go to the jury. Any reasonable effect that the excluded evidence could have had on the jury should, in applying this paragraph, enure to the benefit of the accused. Wildman v. The Queen (1984), 14 C.C.C. (3d) 321, 12 D.L.R. (4th) 641, [1984] 2 S.C.R. 311 (7:0).

The court of appeal, having found an error of law by the trial judge in the admission of evidence, was obliged to allow the appeal unless, on a consideration of the admissible evidence, the court was able to conclude that a conviction was inevitable. The court of appeal is not to substitute itself for the trial judge and determine the guilt or innocence of the accused. The appropriate inquiry was not whether this particular trial judge would have convicted but whether there was any possibility that a trial judge would have a reasonable doubt on the admissible evidence: R. v. S. (P.L.) (1991), 64 C.C.C. (3d) 193, 5 C.R. (4th) 351, 122 N.R. 321 (S.C.C.) (4:3).

This paragraph could not be invoked where the Crown had improperly split its case and was wrongly permitted to lead reply evidence to contradict its own witness. The effect of the evidence on a juror's mind would likely be serious and the appellate court cannot, with anything approaching reality, retry the case to assess the worth of the residual evidence after the improperly adduced evidence has been extracted from the record. The appellate court does not have the advantage of seeing the witnesses and was not entitled to replace the jury: John v. The Queen (1985), 23 C.C.C. (3d) 326, 49 C.R. (3d) 57 (S.C.C.) (7:0).

Notwithstanding the jury was properly charged as to the mental state required for murder, a new trial following conviction for murder was required where there was clearly evidence to support the accused's liability as a party to manslaughter and the basis for manslaughter had not been properly explained to the jury. A person charged with murder has the right to have the issue of manslaughter left to the jury if there is any evidence upon which such a verdict can be found and it cannot be said that no miscarriage of justice results from the failure to do so: R. v. Jackson, [1993] 4 S.C.R. 573, 86 C.C.C. (3d) 385, 26 C.R. (4th) 178, affg 68 C.C.C. (3d) 385 (Ont. C.A.).

In considering the application of this subsection, the findings of the jury may be a factor. However, where an included offence has erroneously not been left with the jury, a conviction for the more serious offence cannot generally be relied on since the verdict may have been a reaction against a complete acquittal: R. v. Haughton, [1994] 3 S.C.R. 516, 93 C.C.C. (3d) 99, 34 C.R. (4th) 22.

This paragraph can only relieve against issues of law and where the court finds that by reason of an error of mixed fact and law the accused has been unfairly prejudiced then the appeal must be allowed under para. (1)(a)(iii): Fanjoy v. The Queen (1985), 21 C.C.C. (3d) 312, 48 C.R. (3d) 113 (S.C.C.) (7:0).

It was held in R. v. Nygaard and Schimmens (1989), 51 C.C.C. (3d) 417, [1989] 2 S.C.R. 1074, 72 C.R. (3d) 257 (8:1), that the court, having allowed the appeal of the accused alleged to be the principal on a charge of first degree murder as a result of improper admission of evidence, should also allow the appeal of the co-accused who was alleged to be a party to the offence. This was necessary to avoid the potentially incongruous and unacceptable result that the prime mover in the crime might on the new trial be only convicted of second degree murder whereas the party to the offence would have remained convicted of first degree murder.

Dismissal of appeal where procedural irregularities [subsec. (1)(b)(iv)] – Subsection (1)(b)(iv) may be invoked and the appeal dismissed although the accused's right to be present under s. 650 was breached. In this case the trial judge, due to an error, delivered judgment in the absence of the accused. When the accused did attend in court the trial judge, using the transcript of the earlier proceedings, read to the accused the entire proceedings that had taken place in his absence. The right of an accused to be present is a matter of procedure and the accused suffered no prejudice: R. v. Joinson (1986), 32 C.C.C. (3d) 542 (B.C.C.A.).

A similar result was reached in R. v. Cloutier (1988), 43 C.C.C. (3d) 35, 27 O.A.C. 246 (C.A.). The court there held that subsec. (1)(b)(iv) now required that three different types of errors be distinguished. Errors of substance, where the court has no jurisdiction over the class of offences charged and which are not procedural in nature would not be cured either by this subparagraph or subpara. (1)(b)(iii). Irregularities in procedure of a relatively minor nature which do not result in a loss of jurisdiction may be cured by subpara. (1)(b)(iii). Finally, irregularities in procedure which are so serious in nature that they are deemed to be matters of substance which result in a loss of jurisdiction can be cured by application of this subparagraph. The accused has suffered no prejudice and thus this subparagraph may be applied although the accused was excluded from the court-room if his exclusion did not affect the outcome of the trial adversely to him. This is not to say that the court would exercise its discretion and dismiss the appeal in every case where it is of the opinion that the accused had suffered no prejudice. Such a case might be where the exclusion in violation of s. 650 was intentional after it was brought to the judge's attention that the accused had inadvertently been excluded.

Subsection (1)(b)(iv) could not apply to an error in the jury selection process where the trial judge instead of following the procedure prescribed in the Criminal Code for summoning of talesmen, purported to continuously expand the jury panel by adding additional members with the result that those potential jurors who were directed by the Crown to stand by were never called again to be sworn unless challenged: R. v. Rowbotham (1988), 41 C.C.C. (3d) 1, 63 C.R. (3d) 112 (Ont. C.A.).

Subsection (1)(b)(iv) could apply and the appeal of an inmate from the refusal to issue a writ of habeas corpus dismissed where the Court of Appeal, having held that the superior court judge erred in refusing to issue the writ, went on to consider the merits of the inmate's application, with the participation of the inmate, and held that the application should have been dismissed: R. v. Olson (1989), 47 C.C.C. (3d) 491, [1989] 1 S.C.R. 296, 68 O.R. (2d) 256n (5:0).

It was held in R. v. Tran, [1994] 2 S.C.R. 951, 92 C.C.C. (3d) 218, 32 C.R. (4th) 34 that, where there has been a violation of s. 14 of the Charter, it was for the court to fashion an appropriate and just remedy tailored to the particular circumstances of the case under s. 24(1) of the Charter. Neither s. 686(1)(b)(iii) nor s. 686(1)(b)(iv) have any application in such circumstances. A breach of the Charter cannot be characterised as minor or harmless or a mere procedural irregularity. As a matter of law, a violation of s. 14 of the Charter precludes application of these curative provisions. As a general rule, however, the appropriate remedy under s. 24(1) of the Charter for breach of s. 14 will be the same as it would be under the common law and under statutory guarantees, namely a rehearing of the issue or proceeding in which the violation occurred. [Also see note of this case under s. 24 of the Charter infra.]

Power to set aside conviction and substitute not criminally responsible verdict [subsec. (1)(d)] – In Mailloux v. The Queen (1988), 45 C.C.C. (3d) 193, 67 C.R. (3d) 75 (S.C.C.) (6:0), the court explained the effect of the combined operation of the predecessor to subsec. (1)(d) and subsec. (1)(a) as follows:

1. When the issue is raised for the first time on appeal, the court will examine the evidence and, if it is satisfied that the appellant was insane at the time of the wrongful act, it will exercise its power under para. (d) to quash the conviction and to substitute the special verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity.
2. If insanity [now mental disorder] has been raised at trial and there has been an error of law in the form of a misdirection on the issue, and
  - (a) if the court is satisfied that a proper direction would have resulted in a verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity, it will substitute that verdict;
  - (b) if the court is not satisfied that, absent the misdirection, the inevitable verdict would have been not guilty by reason of insanity, it will decline to act under para. (d) but will order a new trial.
3. If there has been no misdirection, but the verdict is either unreasonable or cannot be supported by the evidence, the court will set aside the conviction and substitute the special verdict provided for under para. (d).
4. If there has been no error of law and the verdict cannot be said to be unreasonable or unsupported by the evidence, the court will decline to interfere with the verdict. Thus para. (d) does not give the Court of Appeal an unfettered jurisdiction to substitute an insanity verdict without regard to the reasonableness of the jury's verdict.

It was held, considering the predecessor to this section that while the Code conferred no express power to order a new trial where an accused appealed against an insanity verdict, by providing a right of appeal against such verdict [as is also the case in respect of the verdict of not criminally responsible on account of mental disorder] the legislative intent was clear and the court of appeal could set aside the special verdict and order a new trial: R. v. Simpson (1977), 35 C.C.C. (2d) 337, 77 D.L.R. (3d) 507, 16 O.R. (2d) 129 (C.A.).

Power to set aside conviction and substitute finding of unfitness [subsec. (1)(e)] – In the absence of misdirection or other fault in the trial of the issue as to fitness to stand trial, the issue is properly one to be decided by the jury and, unless the Court of Appeal is satisfied the jury erred in its finding, the Court cannot substitute its opinion for that of the jury: R. v. Hubach, [1966] 4 C.C.C.114, 48 C.R.252 (3:2) (Alta.S.C.App.Div.).

Order to be made when appeal from conviction allowed [subsec. (2)] – Where it cannot be said that there was no evidence to go to the jury the proper disposition is to order a new trial: R. v. Woodward (1975), 23 C.C.C. (2d) 508 (Ont. C.A.).

Service of a portion of an intermittent gaol term prior to a successful appeal is a factor making it appropriate to order that an acquittal be entered: R. v. Dillabough (1975), 28 C.C.C. (2d) 482 (Ont. C.A.). Contra: R. v. O'Brien (1987), 41 C.C.C. (3d) 86 (Que. C.A.).

The accused's conviction following a third trial for trafficking in narcotics having been quashed as a result of, inter alia, misdirection of the jury and improper admission of evidence, the appropriate order was to enter a verdict of acquittal rather than order a new trial: R. v. Jamieson (1989), 48 C.C.C. (3d) 287, 90 N.S.R. (2d) 164 (C.A.).

In the absence of a Crown appeal against the accused's acquittal of the full offence charged, Court of Appeal if it allows the accused's appeal against conviction for the included offence is limited to ordering a new trial on the included offence and cannot order that the new trial be on the full offence: Guillemette v. The Queen (1986), 26 C.C.C. (3d) 1, 51 C.R. (3d) 273, 27 D.L.R. (4th) 682 (S.C.C.) (7:0).

Similarly, except in cases where the rule precluding multiple convictions applies [see notes supra], in the absence of a Crown appeal from an acquittal, the court of appeal has no jurisdiction to substitute a conviction for the offence of which the accused was acquitted when it allows an appeal from conviction for a related offence. Thus, in this case, the accused were charged with criminal negligence causing bodily harm [the victim being the mother] and criminal negligence causing death [the victim being the unborn child]. They were acquitted on the merits on the former offence and convicted on the latter offence. Since there was no appeal by the Crown from the acquittal, the court of appeal had no jurisdiction to substitute a conviction for that offence when it determined that the appeal on the latter offence must be allowed because the unborn child was not a "person": R. v. Sullivan (1991), 63 C.C.C. (3d) 97, 122 N.R. 166 (S.C.C.) (8:1).

Appeal by Crown from acquittal [subsec. (4)] / Burden on Crown – It is the duty of the Crown in order to obtain a new trial to satisfy the appellate Court that the verdict would not necessarily have been the same if the trial Judge had properly directed the jury: Vezeau v. The Queen (1976), 28 C.C.C. (2d) 81, 8 N.R. 235 (S.C.C.) (9:0).

Before the Court of Appeal may exercise its jurisdiction under subsec. (4)(b)(ii) and enter a conviction rather than order a new trial, it must be shown that all the findings necessary to support a verdict of guilty must have been made either explicitly or implicitly or not be in issue: R. v. Cassidy (1989), 50 C.C.C. (3d) 193, 61 D.L.R. (4th) 480, [1989] 2 S.C.R. 345 (7:0).

Once an appellate Court has concluded that the trial Judge erred in law, the Crown appellant, before a new trial will be ordered, must discharge the onus of satisfying the appellate Court that had the trial Judge properly instructed himself, his judgment of acquittal would not necessarily have been the same: R. v. Anthes Business Forms Ltd. (1975), 26 C.C.C. (2d) 349, 10 O.R. (2d) 153 (C.A.).

However, the test to be applied is an objective one and not whether the particular trial judge who erroneously granted a directed verdict would have acquitted the accused: R. v. Melo (1986), 29 C.C.C. (3d) 173 (Ont. C.A.).

Procedure – Prior to the imposition of sentence under this subsection the appeal court must give the accused an opportunity to make his submissions: Lowry and Lepper v. The Queen (1972), 6 C.C.C. (2d) 531, 26 D.L.R. (3d) 224 (S.C.C.).

The provision in subsec. (1)(b)(iv) had no application to a Crown appeal against acquittal where the jury was never properly constituted because of the improper ruling by the trial judge limiting the Crown's right to stand jurors aside under s. 634. The failure to follow the jury selection process was fatal to the trial court's jurisdiction: R. v. Bain (1989), 47 C.C.C. (3d) 250, 68 C.R. (3d) 50, 31 O.A.C. 357 (C.A.).

In an unusual case, the court of appeal, on a Crown appeal, concluded that the trial judge erred in entering a stay of proceedings by reason of the delay in instituting the proceedings. Thus, while the proper order was to set aside the stay of proceedings, nevertheless the court entered an acquittal, since, based on the findings of fact by the trial judge, the accused was not guilty of the offences charged. This order was proper, notwithstanding no provision is made for entering an acquittal under subsec. (4): R. v. Fraillon (1990), 62 C.C.C. (3d) 474 (Que. C.A.).

Effect of failure of Crown to object, advance theory or offer further evidence – It is not open to the Crown to seek a new trial following the accused's acquittal in order to submit to the jury a basis of liability not raised at the original trial: Wexler v. The King (1939), 72 C.C.C. 1, [1939] S.C.R. 350 (7:0); R. v. Merson (1983), 4 C.C.C. (3d) 251 (B.C.C.A.). Similarly, where the appellate Court finds that there is no evidence to support the conviction on the basis of liability relied upon by the Crown at trial, the Court will enter an acquittal rather than order a new trial which would enable the Crown to place before the jury a new theory of liability not relied upon at trial: Savard and Lizotte v. The King (1945), 85 C.C.C. 254, 1 C.R. 105, [1946] S.C.R. 20 (5:0).

On the other hand the failure of Crown counsel to object to misdirection at trial will not necessarily preclude an appeal from an acquittal based on such misdirection as where the trial Judge was led into error by defence counsel's address to the jury and the accused did not testify and called no witnesses: Cullen v. The King (1949), 94 C.C.C. 337, 8 C.R. 141, [1949] S.C.R. 658 (4:1).

Where for the very first time, the Crown at a non-capital murder trial, after the charge, raised the issue that the accused could be found guilty as an aider or abettor under s. 21, the trial judge was correct in refusing to so recharge the jury. Furthermore, after acquittal as an alleged principal he would be in double jeopardy if he were to be tried again upon the same indictment as a principal, even though it would be alleged that he was only an aider and abettor and, accordingly, the Crown appeal against acquittal was dismissed: R. v. Armstrong (1971), 3 C.C.C. (2d) 424, 14 C.R.N.S. 396 (B.C.C.A.).

Beyond the court's general power to control its process in case of abuse, subsec. (4) confers no discretion on the court of appeal to refuse to order a new trial where a reversible error of law is found in the trial judge's decision. The court's residual discretion to remedy an abuse of the court's process can be exercised only in the clearest of cases where the conduct shocks the conscience of the community and is so detrimental to the proper administration of justice that it warrants judicial intervention. There must be overwhelming evidence that the proceedings under scrutiny are unfair to the point that they are contrary to the interests of justice. It may be, however, that a court of appeal might find an abuse of process in a case where the Crown refuses to continue a trial, despite sufficient evidence to found a verdict, for the sole purpose of obtaining an interlocutory appeal on an adverse ruling: R. v. Power, [1994] 1 S.C.R. 601, 89 C.C.C. (3d) 1, 29 C.R. (4th) 1.

Power of court of appeal – The power of the Court of Appeal to order a new trial means an order for a full new trial and not merely resumption of the original trial before the trial Judge: Gunn v. The Queen (1982), 66 C.C.C. (2d) 294 (S.C.C.) (7:0).

Procedure on new trial – It was held, prior to the recent amendment to s. 491 [now s. 561], that where the Court of Appeal orders a new trial under this subsection an accused who has, pursuant to his previous election or re-election, been tried by a magistrate, he has no right to re-elect trial by a Court composed of a Judge and jury on the new trial: Re R. and Sagliocco (1979), 45 C.C.C. (2d) 493, 10 C.R. (3d) 62 (B.C.S.C.), affd 51 C.C.C. (2d) 188 (B.C.C.A.).

It has also been held that the fact that the accused in such circumstances could not re-elect trial by jury did not offend. s. 11(f) of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms: Re Regina and Switzer (1985), 22 C.C.C. (3d) 60 (B.C.S.C.); R. v. Leaney, [1991] 6 W.W.R. 314, 82 Alta. L.R. (2d) 63 (C.A.).

The power of the Court of Appeal under para. (b) of this subsection is to enter a verdict of guilty and although the order of the court is expressed as a "verdict of conviction", the trial court, to whom the matter of sentence had been remitted, is not precluded from granting a discharge under s. 736: R. v. Stewart (No. 2) (1983), 11 C.C.C. (3d) 92, 45 O.R. (2d) 185, 8 D.L.R. (4th) 275 (H.C.J.).

Request for new trial by jury [subsec. (5)(a)] – In R. v. Budic (No. 2) (1977), 35 C.C.C. (2d) 333 (Alta. S.C. App. Div.) the accused was allowed to amend his notice of appeal to request that the new trial be before a Judge and jury, the original trial having been before a Judge alone.

Where an accused was tried by a judge and jury and the Court of Appeal orders a new trial, he has no right to re-elect trial by a judge alone: R. v. Frattura (1987), 40 C.C.C. (3d) 379 (B.C.C.A.).

Additional order under subsec. (8) – Where the Crown appealed an acquittal by a provincial court judge of a charge of assault with intent to resist lawful arrest, and it transpired that the accused had never been put to his election and accordingly the trial judge had no jurisdiction over him, it was held (2:1) that that was still a matter for appeal within s. 676, but the proper order would be to dismiss the appeal and pursuant to subsection (8) quash the proceedings below. Schroeder, J.A., was of the view that as the trial proceedings were a nullity no appeal lay and the Crown's appeal should be quashed for want of jurisdiction, and no order should be made with respect to the acquittal, leaving the Crown free to proceed again against the accused, who could not successfully plead autrefois acquit: R. v. Brown (1970), 2 C.C.C. (2d) 528, [1971] 2 O.R.32 (Ont. C.A.).

An example of an additional just order was in Reference re Regina v. Gorecki (No. 2) (1976), 32 C.C.C. (2d) 135, 14 O.R. (2d) 218 (C.A.), where at the conclusion of a reference under s. 690(b) a new trial was ordered limiting the accused to raising the defence of insanity.

Where on an appeal by the accused the Court of Appeal quashes the conviction and orders a new trial, it may also order a new trial on an alternative charge which was dismissed at trial solely because of the application of the doctrine precluding multiple convictions notwithstanding the Crown has not appealed the latter acquittal: R. v. Letendre (1979), 46 C.C.C. (2d) 398, 7 C.R. (3d) 320 (B.C.C.A.). Similarly: R. v. McLeod, Pinnock and Farquharson (1983), 6 C.C.C. (3d) 29 (Ont. C.A.). Also see R. v. Terlecki (1983), 4 C.C.C. (3d) 522, 42 A.R. 87 (C.A.), affd 22 C.C.C. (3d) 224n, 65 A.R. 401 (S.C.C.) (7:0) noted, supra, under s. 613.

Where the Court of Appeal allows a new trial because of misdirection by the trial Judge it may order that the new trial be on an included offence or an attempt where it is of the view that in any event the full offence had not been made out: R. v. Cook (1979), 47 C.C.C. (2d) 186, 9 C.R. (3d) 85 (Ont. C.A.); R. v. Ruptash (1982), 68 C.C.C. (2d) 182, 36 A.R. 346 (C.A.).

POWERS OF COURT ON APPEAL AGAINST SENTENCE / Effect of judgment.

687. (1) Where an appeal is taken against sentence, the court of appeal shall, unless the sentence is one fixed by law, consider the fitness of the sentence appealed against, and may on such evidence, if any, as it thinks fit to require or to receive,

(a) vary the sentence within the limits prescribed by law for the offence of which the accused was convicted; or

(b) dismiss the appeal.

(2) A judgment of a court of appeal that varies the sentence of an accused who was convicted has the same force and effect as if it were a sentence passed by the trial court. R.S., c. C-34, s. 614.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See s. 673 for the definition of “sentence”. Sections 675(1)(b) and 676(1)(d) confer rights of appeal respecting sentences. Under s. 689(2), the court has jurisdiction to consider appropriate terms of orders of restitution. Section 687(1) permits the court to receive new or “fresh” evidence on an appeal against sentence. This avoids the more onerous standards applicable under s. 683(1)(d).

ANNOTATIONS

Powers of Court of Appeal – The clause “vary the sentence within the limits prescribed by law” plainly fixes the scope of the power of an appellate Court by reference to the maximum prescribed penalty irrespective of the penalty imposed at trial, and accordingly where the Crown has given reasonable notice in its factum an appellate Court may increase the sentence on the accused’s sentence appeal. Furthermore on any appeal against sentence an appellate Court has jurisdiction to vary either way as it deems proper: Hill v. The Queen (No. 2) (1975), 25 C.C.C. (2d) 6, 62 D.L.R. (3d) 193, [1977] 1 S.C.R. 827 (5:4).

Thus the Court may on its own motion upon notice to the accused impose a sentence of life imprisonment where the accused has appealed against a definite sentence: R. v. Kempton (1980), 53 C.C.C. (2d) 176, 12 Alta. L.R. (2d) 258 (C.A.).

As part of its jurisdiction over sentence appeals an appellate Court has the power to adjudicate upon a trial Judge’s order either granting or refusing a discharge: R. v. Christman (1973), 11 C.C.C. (2d) 245, 22 C.R.N.S. 338 (Alta. S.C. App. Div). Folld: R. v. Fallofield (1973), 13 C.C.C. (2d) 450, 22 C.R.N.S. 342 (B.C.C.A.), and R. v. McInnis (1973), 13 C.C.C. 471, 23 C.R.N.S. 152 (Ont. C.A.) (5:0).

Effect of variation of sentence [subsec. (2)] – Violation of a probation order imposed by an appeal Court in substitution for the trial Court’s penalty is to be dealt with by the trial Court as the substituted sentence is really the sentence of that Court: Re Keller (1971), 14 C.R.N.S. 234 (Sask. Q.B.).

Also see R. v. H. (1983), 6 C.C.C. (3d) 382, [1983] 5 W.W.R. 94 sub nom. A.- G. Alta. v. H. (Alta. C.A.), noted, infra, under s. 738(3).

General principles [As to procedure in sentencing, also see notes under s. 717 and for discharges, see s. 736] – On an appeal from sentence, the Court of Appeal has no power to remit the matter to the trial court, notwithstanding that serious errors in procedure and admission of evidence at the sentence hearing would make this the preferable course to follow. The court’s only power is to consider the fitness of the sentence, taking into account evidence which was properly admissible: R. v. Pellerier (1989), 52 C.C.C. (3d) 340 (Que. C.A.).

A variation in the sentence should only be made if the court of appeal is convinced it is not fit in the sense that the sentence is clearly unreasonable. The court of appeal must determine if the sentencing judge applied wrong principles or if the sentence was clearly excessive or inadequate. Unreasonableness in the sentence process involves the sentencing order falling outside the acceptable range of orders: R. v. Shropshire (1995), 43 C.R. (4th) 269, 102 C.C.C. (3d) 193, 106 W.A.C. 37 (S.C.C.). Absent an error in principle, failure to consider a relevant factor, or an overemphasis of the appropriate factors, a court of appeal should only intervene to vary a sentence if it is demonstrably unfit. Furthermore, an appellate court should only intervene to minimize the disparity of sentences where the sentence imposed by the trial judge is insubstantial and marked from the sentences customarily imposed for similar offenders committing similar crimes: R. v. M. (C.A.) (unreported, March 21, 1996, S.C.C.) [096/085/064-82 pp.].

Retribution, which is conceptually distinct from denunciation, is an accepted and appropriate principle of sentencing. Retribution reflects the moral blameworthiness of an offender whereas denunciation reflects society's condemnation of the offender's conduct. Retribution represents an objective, reasoned and measured determination of an appropriate punishment which properly reflects the moral culpability of the offender, having regard to the intentional risk-taking of the offender, the consequential harm caused by the offender and the normative character of the offender's conduct: R. v. M.(C.A.), supra.

A useful review of the modern authorities on the principles of sentencing is found in R. v. Mellstrom (1975), 22 C.C.C. (2d) 472, 29 C.R.N.S. 327 (Alta. S.C. App. Div.) where it was also held that the sentence should be within the range of those contemporaneously imposed for similar offences and that the enormity of the tragic consequences of an offence should not be allowed to unduly distort the consideration of the Court as to the appropriate penalty.

Where guilt depends upon the probable, not the actual result of an act, and it is clear that at the time of the act the probability of the actual results of the act would not have been on the accused's mind, it is an error for the trial Judge on sentence to give undue weight to the actual rather than to the probable results of the act: R. v. Griffin (1975), 23 C.C.C. (2d) 11, 7 Nfld. & P.E.I.R. 139 (P.E.I.S.C.).

In R. v. McGinn (1989), 49 C.C.C. (3d) 137, 75 Sask. R. 161 (C.A.), Cameron J.A. dealt at length with the principles applicable to sentencing. In particular, he noted two important principles of sentence, deterrence and the need to maintain the integrity of the administration of justice. The latter includes the notions of upholding the public's confidence in the effective enforcement of the criminal law, of imposing proportionate sentences, and of achieving equity in the sense of avoiding disparity.

In our changing society the Courts should continue to review and reappraise the elements of and their emphasis upon sentence, the current view being that the factors are (1) punishment; (2) deterrence; (3) protection of the public; and (4) the reformation and rehabilitation of the offender. Furthermore, with changing conditions less emphasis should be placed upon the trial Judge's advantage in seeing and hearing the accused and an appellate Court should not hesitate to disagree with his reasons and conclusions if it feels that the sentence was not fit: R. v. Morrisette and two others (1970), 1 C.C.C. (2d) 307, 12 C.R.N.S. 392 (Sask. C.A.).

It is unrealistic to believe that persons coming from extremely disadvantaged backgrounds can be rehabilitated, once the cycle of crime starts, by successive and increased periods of imprisonment, especially when, upon release, they are returned to the same environment and lifestyle which contributed to their misfortune in the first place. What is required, in such a case, is intensive guidance, encouragement, training and supervision while on probation, preferably on a daily basis by a person in whom the accused has confidence. In the case of a native Canadian, it may be essential that any program include support of his indigenous community: R. v. M.(R.B.) (1990), 54 C.C.C. (3d) 132 (B.C.C.A.).

While denunciation is a legitimate principle of sentencing, the application of that principle can only be assessed on the basis of the circumstances of the particular case and of the offender. Thus, the court must consider whether any adverse effects which a denunciatory sentence would have on the rehabilitation of the offender can be justified in the overall interests of the protection and advancement of society. Thus, it would rarely be appropriate that the denunciatory aspect of punishment should be the predominant consideration in a manslaughter case in which there is a lack of deliberation or motivation and where the accused is a disadvantaged person and a first offender: R. v. Pettigrew (1990), 56 C.C.C. (3d) 390 (B.C.C.A.).

It is an error in principle to impose a gaol term instead of a fine for an offence because the defendant is a man of means, for to do so is to discriminate against an economic class rather than dispensing equal treatment before the law: R. v. Johnson (1971), 5 C.C.C. (2d) 541, 17 C.R.N.S. 329 (N.S.S.C. App. Div.).

It would not be proper to increase the sentence which would otherwise be appropriate because of the voluntary disclosure by the accused of information to a psychiatrist which gave the acts committed a more serious character. The disclosure of this information was necessary if treatment of the accused was to be effective and it should not be used to impose a sentence which would not otherwise be warranted: R. v. Henderson (1990), 56 C.C.C. (3d) 413 (B.C.C.A.).

Conduct of the defence at trial, including suspected perjury by the accused in testifying or defence tactics in cross-examination of the complainant, cannot be taken into account as aggravating circumstances in sentencing the accused. The accused's conduct in his defence can only be used to negate any other evidence of remorse which might have mitigated the fit sentence: R. v. Kozy (1990), 58 C.C.C. (3d) 500, 74 O.R. (2d) 545, 80 C.R. (3d) 59 (C.A.).

“Starting point” approach – As part of its duty to give guidance to the trial courts the Alberta Court of Appeal is committed to the “starting point approach” to sentencing whereby the court states with precision the appropriate sentence for a typical case while acknowledging that each actual case presents differences which might mitigate or aggravate. The advantage of such an approach is that it attempts to prevent unjustified disparity while taking into account the immense variety of circumstances which can be found in different cases involving a conviction for the same offence. The sentencing courts are required to acknowledge the starting point and then to summarize the relevant factors before passing sentence. In the result dangerous rigidity is avoided because there are no arbitrary end points nor is there real disparity because all sentences of the same genre start at the same point and differences are rationally explained: R. v. Sandercock (1985), 22 C.C.C. (3d) 79, 48 C.R. (3d) 154, [1986] 1 W.W.R. 291 (Alta. C.A.). In this case, the court was considering the appropriate range of sentence for a “major sexual assault”. The court discussed at length the impact of the various mitigating and aggravating circumstances in such a case.

For sentencing purposes, a major sexual assault of a child by a parent or by a person who because of his relationship with the child is in a position of control and trust with respect to the child, should constitute a separate category. The starting point in those cases where there is a single major sexual assault upon a child should be four years. Sentencing in these cases is based mainly on the principles of general deterrence and denunciation. The fact that there is a very real risk of very real psychological harm to the child is one which can be relied upon, even when there is no expert or non-expert evidence called in the particular case to establish that the child has suffered some specific traumatic effect. Factors such as repetition of the assaults, protracted confinement or kidnapping, gratuitous violence and injuries, threats to kill or hurt the child, extreme youth of the child, parental use of the child for the carnal pleasure of other adults, exposure of the child to pornography, transmission of venereal or other sexually-transmitted disease or pregnancy of the child resulting from the sexual assault will constitute aggravating factors. There may be mitigating factors such as a guilty plea: R. v. S. (W.B.); R. v. P. (M.) (1992), 73 C.C.C. (3d) 530, 15 C.R. (4th) 324, 127 A.R. 65 (C.A.).

In R. v. Glassford (1988), 42 C.C.C. (3d) 259, 63 C.R. (3d) 209 (Ont. C.A.), the court reiterated its refusal to apply the starting point approach to sentencing. The court nevertheless recognized that recent cases reflected a trend towards longer sentences for serious sexual offences. Crimes of this sort had become all too frequent and the court must be sensitive to public concerns and the importance of public safety. However, the just administration of the criminal law requires that sentences must be imposed on the basis of the principles of law laid down in the cases. This requires consideration of reformation, and specific and general deterrence.

Despite its adherence to the “starting point” approach, the Alberta Court of Appeal refused to lay down a starting point in respect of the offence of criminal negligence causing death arising out of operation of a motor vehicle. The court pointed out that this approach is helpful only when the Court of Appeal can describe, with some particularity, a typical case and this was almost impossible to do for this crime because no one set of facts is typical. The court did, however, describe at length the relevant aggravating and mitigating factors which the sentencing judge would take into account: R. v. Konkolus (1988), 6 M.V.R. (2d) 220, 86 A.R. 144 (C.A.).

As well, the starting point approach was inappropriate for the offence of manslaughter as a result of death caused during commission of an offence where the degree of culpability may vary so widely from case to case or where the factors affecting the sentence are so specific to the case that it has limited value as a vehicle for the guideline judgment that the starting approach will not be adopted: R. v. Tallman (1989), 48 C.C.C. (3d) 81, 68 C.R. (3d) 367, 65 Alta. R. (2d) 75 (C.A.).

Sentencing circle – While it is open to the trial judge to use a sentencing circle to assist in developing the appropriate sentence, the power and duty to impose a fit sentence remains vested exclusively in the trial judge. Where a sentencing circle recommends a sentence which is not fit, the judge is duty-bound to ignore the recommendation to the extent that it varies from what is a fit sentence. The duty of the court of appeal in reviewing the fitness of a sentence is the same. The very purpose of sentencing circles is to fashion sentences that will differ in some mix or measure from those which the courts have up to now imposed in order to take into account aboriginal culture and traditions, and to permit and take into account direct community participation both in imposition and administration of the sentence. The possibility of rehabilitation is a factor which must be taken into account in any sentence and departure from the normal range of sentences for a given offence may be permitted where there are circumstances out of the ordinary to justify the departure. This leaves substantial room for the use of sentencing circles. However, it would not be appropriate to use a sentencing circle in those cases where it was clear that the circumstances required a penitentiary term. If a sentence exceeds two years imprisonment, the court is without power to impose any condition on the accused after the sentence has been served and there is no means of enforcing any obligations undertaken by an accused as a result of the recommendations of the community through a sentencing circle: R. v. Morin (1995), 101 C.C.C. (3d) 124, 42 C.R. (4th) 339, [1995] 9 W.W.R. 696 (Sask. C.A.).

Offences motivated by racial or religious hatred – An accused who commits offences of mischief to property which are motivated by racial or religious hatred cannot be sentenced for his beliefs. Those beliefs are, however, relevant in so far as they explain his actions and an offence which is directed against a particular racial or religious group is more heinous, as it attacks the very fabric of society and invites imitation and incites retaliation. Moreover, where the offence involves desecration of a place of worship, it is even more serious, especially where it is done to cause emotional upset and injury to the members of the congregation. Such offences require a more severe penalty than mischief which is done merely to damage property: R. v. Lelas (1990), 58 C.C.C. (3d) 568, 74 O.R. (2d) 552 (C.A.).

An assault which is racially motivated renders the offence more heinous and the sentence to be imposed in such a case must be one which expresses the public abhorrence for such conduct and their refusal to countenance it: R. v. Ingram and Grimsdale (1977), 35 C.C.C. (2d) 376 (Ont. C.A.). In this case reformatory sentences for an unprovoked racially motivated assault which caused serious injury to the victim were raised to penitentiary terms.

Similarly, R. v. Simms (1990), 60 C.C.C. (3d) 499 (Alta. C.A.) where sentences for assault were substantially increased to take into account that the assaults were racially inspired by the accused who were adherents to or sympathizers with neo-Nazi organizations.

Terrorism – In cases of acts of politically motivated terrorism, the paramount consideration is general deterrence: R. v. Arwal (1990), 57 C.C.C. (3d) 143 (B.C.C.A.); R. v. Balian (1988), 29 O.A.C. 387 (C.A.).

Frequency of offence – An unusually high frequency of a particular offence in the area is only one factor to be considered in imposing sentence. The paramount question is always: “What should this offender receive for this offence, committed in the circumstances under which it was committed?”: R. v. Sears (1978), 39 C.C.C. (2d) 199, 2 C.R. (3d) S-27 (Ont. C.A.).

Totality and disparity – Where a sentence is a marked departure from sentences imposed for that offence and cannot be reconciled with sentences imposed for other crimes of a similar violent nature and the record does not disclose justification for such disparity, it will be increased: R. v. Mikkelsen (1973), 14 C.C.C. (2d) 255 (Sask. C.A.).

The imposition of an excessively lenient sentence on one co-accused by one trial Court will not bind the other trial Court to make the same error in principle against the second co-accused: R. v. Hunter (1970), 16 C.R.N.S. 12 (Ont. C.A.).

The totality principle requires a sentencing judge who has correctly applied the rules relating to concurrent and consecutive sentences and who has arrived at the appropriate sentence for each separate offence to then look back to ensure that the totality of the consecutive sentences is not excessive. Where the total intended sentence is excessive the individual sentences must then be adjusted below the figure which would be appropriate for each offence taken in isolation, so that the total sentence is proper. The principle of disparity requires that the sentence imposed on one accused should not be unduly disparate with that received by his co-accused, except that where the sentence to which it is being compared is considered to be wholly inadequate a sentence will not be reduced by the appellate court: R. v. Fait (1982), 68 C.C.C. (2d) 367, 37 A.R. 273 (C.A.).

Generally speaking, the court should try to make a sentence conform with that imposed upon a co-accused for the same offence by some other court not merely to achieve equality of treatment but to avoid bitterness and resentment. Nevertheless, less severe treatment may be warranted for an accused in view of a difference in material circumstances, as where he suffers from a severe personality disorder which was a form of mental illness but which did not afflict the co-accused: R. v. Chisholm (1985), 18 C.C.C. (3d) 518 (N.S.S.C. App. Div.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused loc. cit.

Imposition of sentence for purposes of treatment – Even though it was imposed with the best of intentions an extended sentence to provide an opportunity for treatment for drug abuse will not be maintained where there is no connection between the accused’s addiction and the commission of the crime: R. v. Luther (1971), 5 C.C.C. (2d) 354, 16 C.R.N.S. 14 (2:1) (Ont. C.A.).

Effect of accused having left jurisdiction – The accused’s demonstrated successful rehabilitation as a result of his having “jumped bail” many years before is entitled to little consideration as a mitigating factor. The courts cannot impose a light sentence in such circumstances and thus appear to reward accused for breaching their bail conditions. On the other hand, the courts may properly take into account the accused’s voluntary surrender and guilty plea as a mitigating circumstance: R. v. Thompson (1989), 50 C.C.C. (3d) 126, 98 A.R. 348 (C.A.).

Use of statistics – Evidence of statistics compiled by a police department based on police investigations during a certain period without regard to population growth and presented to the court by a police employee untrained in statistics is insufficient and inherently unreliable for use at a sentence hearing: R. v. Petrovic (1984), 13 C.C.C. (3d) 416, 41 C.R. (3d) 275 (Ont. C.A.). Compare R. v. Richards noted, infra, under “Effect of addiction”.

Evidence of other offences – At his sentence hearing on a charge of robbery the accused was entitled to lead psychiatric evidence to show he was not a danger to the community but it was also open to the Crown to lead evidence in reply as to the circumstances surrounding the accused’s arrest which showed the accused was planning a further robbery, the money from the first robbery having run out: Lees v. The Queen (1979), 46 C.C.C. (2d) 385, [1979] 2 S.C.R. 749, 10 C.R. (3d) 517 (7:0).

The difficult question of when the Crown is entitled to lead evidence of other criminal acts which have not resulted in convictions has been considered in at least five recent cases. In R. v. Roud and Roud (1981), 58 C.C.C. (2d) 226, 21 C.R. (3d) 97, leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused C.C.C. loc. cit., 37 N.R. 449n (Ont. C.A.), the court held that evidence of other acts of violence directed at the victim and his brother, the accused's children, was properly admitted as showing the accused's character and background, which are proper matters for inquiry on sentencing. However, in R. v. L. (J.C.) (1987), 36 C.C.C. (3d) 32, 64 Nfld. & P.E.I.R. 81 (Nfld. C.A.), the court adopted the principle that the trial judge must exclude evidence of untried charges, at least where objection is taken and the accused has not introduced evidence of his good character. See also: R. v. Demers (1981), 63 C.C.C. (2d) 351 (Que. C.A.).

Taking other offences into account – In passing sentence the trial judge may take into consideration other outstanding charges to which the accused would either plead guilty or be proven guilty, and upon which the Crown makes a commitment not to proceed: R. v. Garcia and Silva, [1970] 3 C.C.C. 124, [1970] 1 O.R. 821 (C.A.).

However, the procedure for taking offences into account is not appropriate where the offences are of a different class, for example, rape and robbery, where the public interest may require separate prosecutions: R. v. Robinson (1979), 49 C.C.C. (2d) 464 (Ont. C.A.).

Pre-trial custody – It is improper to adopt as a rule of thumb that pre-trial custody should equal double sentence time; it is only a circumstance to be taken into account in imposing sentence: R. v. Regan, Huntley, Hasay And Blenkinsop (1975), 24 C.C.C. (2d) 225, [1975] 4 W.W.R. 335 (Alta. S.C. App. Div.).

Position of trust – Theft by a person such as a bank manager who is in a position of trust requires imposition of a custodial sentence except in exceptional circumstances: R. v. McEachern (1978), 42 C.C.C. (2d) 189, 7 C.R. (3d) S-8 (Ont. C.A.).

In R. v. Spiller, [1969] 4 C.C.C. 211, 6 C.R.N.S. 360 (B.C.C.A.), the principles to be considered in a white collar, $492,000 theft from a financial institution were reviewed with the result that the accused woman's three year, first offence theft term was doubled. The Court rejected the following defence contentions: as to her good character, because it enabled her to commit the crime; as to the plea of guilty, she was inescapably caught; as to her co-operation for recovery, it cannot buy a year or two off her sentence; as to her insignificant position, by handling money she was in a position of trust; as to the ineptness of the bank to curtail the thefts, the crime was elaborately executed; and as public opinion being no concern of the Court, deterrence of others is a factor in passing sentence.

In a special situation where the accused upon conviction would lose his business position and benefits of 25 years an absolute discharge will be granted in lieu of a suspended sentence: R. v. Tanguay (1975), 24 C.C.C. (2d) 77 (Que. C.A.).

Domestic assault – Where there is a serious offence involving violence to the person, then general and individual deterrence must be the paramount consideration in sentencing. This principle is also applicable to domestic violence and while not every incident requires imposition of a custodial term, such a term should be normal where significant bodily harm has been inflicted. Where the offence is even graver, involving persistent or repetitious and escalating violence towards the spouse, a longer term may be justified: R. v. Inwood (1989), 48 C.C.C. (3d) 173, 69 C.R. (3d) 181, 32 O.A.C. 287 (C.A.).

In domestic assaults, jail terms will usually be imposed unless the assault is very minor in nature or there are strong extenuating circumstances. Nevertheless, even on a charge of assault causing bodily harm, a discharge may be an appropriate disposition as where the accused was subjected to provocation by the victim, the incident was an isolated one and there was no significant bodily harm: R. v. Mullin (1990), 56 C.C.C. (3d) 476, 93 Nfld & P.E.I.R. 206 (P.E.I.C.A.).

Domestic violence is a profound problem and when cases of beatings of a wife by a husband result in prosecution and conviction, then the courts have an opportunity, by their sentencing policy, to denounce such offences in clear terms and attempt to deter its recurrence on the part of the accused and on the part of other men. The starting point in sentencing in such cases would be to determine what would be a fit sentence if the man had assaulted a woman on the street or in a bar. The court must then examine circumstances which are peculiar because of the relationship. When a man assaults his wife or other female partner, his violence toward her constitutes a breach of a position of trust and is an aggravating factor. The paramount considerations in imposing sentence must be general deterrence and denunciation. The desire of the victim that the accused be returned to her and that she not be further victimized by being deprived of his income should not readily be permitted to prevail over the general sentencing policy that requires imprisonment of a man as not only an instrument of deterrence of other persons, but as a means of breaking the cycle of violence in the accused's home: R. v. Brown; R. v. Highway; R. v. Umpherville (1992), 73 C.C.C. (3d) 242, 125 A.R. 150 (C.A.); R. v. Bonneteau (1994), 93 C.C.C. (3d) 385, 77 W.A.C. 138, 24 Alta. L.R. (3d) 153 (C.A.).

Effect of guilty plea – A factor in mitigation of sentence is the plea of guilty which saves the community the expense of a trial: R. v. Johnston and Tremayne, [1970] 4 C.C.C. 64, [1970] 2 O.R. 780 (C.A.).

Position taken by counsel at trial [Also see notes under s. 676] – The Crown upon appeal against a sentence as inadequate cannot repudiate its position taken before sentencing at trial: R. v. Agozzino, [1970] 1 C.C.C. 380, 6 C.R.N.S. 147 (Ont. C.A.). Contra, R. v. Wood (1975), 26 C.C.C. (2d) 100, [1976] 2 W.W.R. 135 (Alta. S.C. App. Div.).

However, an undertaking by Crown counsel at trial that he would not recommend an appeal, but that he could not bind the Attorney General, does not in fact prevent the Attorney General from exercising his right to appeal against the sentence imposed by the trial judge, which sentence was below that which Crown counsel sought at trial: R. v. Dubien (1982), 67 C.C.C. (2d) 341, 27 C.R. (3d) 378 (Ont. C.A.).

To permit the Crown to repudiate its position at trial is destructive of the orderly administration of justice and the Crown will therefore only be permitted to do so where it can be shown that the public interest in the orderly administration of justice is outweighed by the gravity of the offence and the gross insufficiency of the sentence: R. v. MacArthur (1978), 39 C.C.C. (2d) 158, 15 C.R. (3d) S-4 (P.E.I.S.C. App. Div.); R. v. Smith (1981), 25 C.R. (3d) 190 (Alta. C.A.).

While generally speaking, the Crown will not be entitled to repudiate a position taken at trial by Crown counsel as to the appropriate sentence, a greater latitude is given the accused in that he is not generally bound to the same extent by the submission of his counsel as to sentence. Where the sentence imposed by the trial judge as a result of a joint submission by Crown and defence counsel, having regard to all the circumstances, is not a fit sentence, the Court of Appeal will reduce it accordingly: R. v. Wood (1988), 43 C.C.C. (3d) 570 (Ont. C.A.).

The court will pay a great deal of attention to a joint recommendation and the parties should not lightly be heard to repudiate on appeal the positions that were taken before the sentencing judge. Where, however, the joint recommendation was based, in part, on a psychological report which the "psychologist" was not qualified to make, then the court will not attach much weight either to the report or to the joint submission. In this case, a lengthy sentence for manslaughter was substantially reduced on appeal by the accused where the court was provided with more accurate information in the report of a qualified psychiatrist as to the accused's background and her state of mind at the time of the offence: R. v. Valiquette (1990), 60 C.C.C. (3d) 325, 78 C.R. 368 (Que. C.A.).

Maximum sentence – The maximum sentence is reserved for the worst case which generally means the worst offence and offender but bearing in mind that the heinous circumstances of a particular crime may outweigh all other considerations and require that the accused be characterized as one of the worst offenders, or that the criminal record and incorrigibility of the accused are such as to justify the maximum sentence to deter him and protect society although the particular crime is not one of the worst of its kind: R. v. Ko (1979), 50 C.C.C. (3d) 430, 11 C.R. (3d) 298 (B.C.C.A.).

The "worst case" means the worst offender and offence and would thus not apply to an accused who has a great potential for rehabilitation: R. v. Pruner (1979), 9 C.R. (3d) S-8 (Ont. C.A.).

In determining the fitness of a sentence the maximum sentence provided by Parliament is an important consideration and where the Crown proceeds summarily on a Crown option offence it is the maximum provided for a summary conviction which must be considered: R. v. Sanatkar (1981), 64 C.C.C. (2d) 325 (Ont. C.A.).

Corporations – In R. v. McNamara et al. (No. 2) (1981), 56 C.C.C. (2d) 516 (Ont. C.A.) the Court upheld fines imposed on corporations for conspiracy to defraud government agencies in the rigging of bids on dredging contracts, which ranged from $50,000 to two million dollars. The Court dealt with the various factors which governed the size of the fines which to be an effective general deterrent would have to be substantial and exemplary. In particular, the Court was of the view that it could properly consider the anticipated profits (rather than the actual profits or profits shown on the accused's books) in determining the size of the fine.

In another case involving sentencing of a corporation, the Court considered that while it was a relevant factor that the corporation was now owned by persons who had had no knowledge of the commission of the offence by former employees, this did not warrant the imposition of merely a nominal penalty. A fine of some magnitude was required as a matter of general deterrence and to make clear to corporations the duty to properly supervise employees: R. v. Adam Clark Co. Ltd. (1982), 3 C.C.C. (3d) 323 (Ont. C.A.).

Youthful offenders – Particularly, in the case of a youthful first offender the first sentence of imprisonment should focus on the particular offender, including requirements of individual deterrence. Its length ought not to be governed by the factor of general deterrence: R. v. Vandale and Maciejewski (1974), 21 C.C.C. (2d) 250 (Ont. C.A.).

In R. v. Demeter and Whitmore (1976), 32 C.C.C. (2d) 379, 3 C.R. (3d) S-55 (Ont. C.A.), custodial sentences for robbery were reduced (2:1) to time served and probation; the majority being of the view that for youthful first offenders the paramount consideration must be rehabilitation, while Houlden, J.A., felt that for such a serious crime, unless there were extraordinary circumstances, a substantial reformatory term is required.

The view of the majority was followed by a majority of the Manitoba Court of Appeal in R. v. McCormick (1979), 47 C.C.C. (2d) 224, 9 C.R. (3d) 248, in upholding a three-month sentence against a Crown appeal in the case of a 20-year-old first offender of previous good character and member of the United States armed forces who committed an armed robbery while under the influence of drugs and alcohol.

Where, however, violence or a serious crime is involved this principle does not apply and particularly where careful planning is involved a lengthy reformatory sentence may be imposed: R. v. Gonidis, McCullough and Stevenson (1980), 57 C.C.C. (2d) 90 (Ont. C.A.); R. v. Campbell (1981), 64 C.C.C. (2d) 336, [1982] 1 W.W.R. 739 (B.C.C.A.).

In fact, a penitentiary sentence may be required in the case of young offenders who commit a number of serious offences such as the armed robbery of small convenience stores: R. v. Johnas et al.; R. v. Cardinal (1982), 2 C.C.C. (3d) 490, 32 C.R. (3d) 1 (Alta. C.A.).

Where a juvenile is tried in an ordinary Court the general principles of sentencing in the adult Court take precedence over the special sentencing provisions of the Juvenile Delinquents Act: R. v. Chamberlain (1974), 22 C.C.C. (2d) 361 (Ont. C.A.).

A judge is entitled to take a chance with a convicted person, particularly a youthful one, by exercising leniency in circumstances where leniency might not otherwise appear to be called for, provided there is some factor present in the case that is sufficient to warrant a reasonable belief on the part of the trial judge, going beyond a mere hope, that the leniency proposed to be extended holds some prospect of succeeding where other dispositions available to the trial judge might fail. Such a factor might be the indication of remorse, a glimpsed change in attitude on the part of the accused, or some other sign that the accused may have learned something beneficial from his past and present encounters with the criminal justice system: R. v. Quesnel and Smith (1984), 14 C.C.C. (3d) 254 (Ont. C.A.).

Juvenile antecedents – Juvenile antecedents should be considered in the preparation of a young offender's pre-sentence report, and in the case of a young offender a custodial sentence should generally be avoided, but if it is necessary it is undesirable that it should be very long: R. v. Beacon and Modney (1976), 31 C.C.C. (2d) 56, [1976] W.W.D. 91 (Alta. S.C. App. Div.).

However, the Court is not entitled to consider the juvenile delinquencies as in the case of an adult's criminal record: Denault v. The Queen (1981), 20 C.R. (2d) 154 (Ont. C.A.).

First offender – In the case of a first offender, whether or not he is a young offender all other methods available to the Court of punishing the accused must be carefully considered before a term of imprisonment is imposed. Moreover, before a prison term is imposed there should be a pre-sentence report or some very clear statement with respect to the accused's background and circumstances: R. v. Bates (1977), 32 C.C.C. (2d) 493 (Ont. C.A.).

Dangerous offender – In R. v. Pontello (1977), 38 C.C.C. (2d) (Ont. C.A.) the Court considered the propriety of a life sentence in a case of rape. The accused was convicted of two counts of rape and psychiatric evidence indicated he was a very dangerous person. The Court held that in a case of rape unaccompanied by acts of unusual violence, brutality or cruelty the evidence of a psychiatrist with respect to the accused's continuing or potential danger to the physical safety of others would not justify a Court in categorizing the offence as one calling for a sentence outside the usual range of sentences for such offences. In this case the nature of the offences indicated a serious personality disorder and required that the expert evidence be taken into consideration and the life sentence was upheld. The Court stated however that a life sentence may not be sought by the Crown so as to avoid the protective provisions of the dangerous offenders legislation, Part XXIV of the Code.

A sentence of life imprisonment for attempted murder was upheld having regard to the uncertainty as to when the accused might be cured or cease to be dangerous, the cruelty and callousness of his act and the severity of his personality disorder which made him a continuing danger to others. Cases in which a sentence of life imprisonment is appropriate are not necessarily confined to cases in which the facts could be described as "stark horror" or to cases which form part of a pattern of violent behaviour: R. v. Simpson (No. 3) (1981), 58 C.C.C. (2d) 308, 20 C.R. (3d) 263 (Ont. C.A.).

While the court can, in effect, impose a sentence of preventive detention by sentencing the accused to life imprisonment although the Crown has not proceeded under Part XXIV, it should do so only where it is shown that the accused is dangerous and not merely incorrigible: R. v. Hastings (1985), 19 C.C.C. (3d) 86, 44 C.R. (3d) 143 (Alta. C.A.).

Effect of parole – In imposing sentence it is the duty of the Court to punish in accordance with the established principles and to disregard any policies of the Parole Board whose only function is to determine when the punishment may be safely alleviated: R. v. Holden, [1963] 2 C.C.C. 394, 39 C.R. 228 (B.C.C.A.).

The Court's function of imposing sentence and the Parole Board's subsequent review of the punishment for parole purposes are intended by Parliament to be complementary one to the other in the field of corrections. The deliberate imposition of a long sentence to support the policies of the Parole Board would amount to an improper abandonment and delegation of the Court's duties to the Board. However, a Court may in determining an appropriate prison term quite properly take into consideration the powers and duties of the Parole Board: R. v. Wilmott, [1967] 1 C.C.C. 171, 49 C.R. 22 (Ont. C.A.).

In R. v. Jackson (1975), 23 C.C.C. (2d) 147, 11 N.S.R. (2d) 154 (S.C. App. Div.) only MacDonald, J.A., followed R. v. Evans (1975), 24 C.C.C. (2d) 300, 11 N.S.R. (2d) 91 (S.C. App. Div.) and held that where a forfeiture of parole has occurred as a result of the offence then the sentence should to some degree reflect that additional punishment.

In R. v. Keeble (1977), 37 C.C.C. (2d) 387, 1 C.R. (3d) 521 (P.E.I. S.C. in banco) the Court preferred the minority view in R. v. Evans, supra, and held that the Court should not reduce an otherwise proper sentence to mitigate against the forfeiture of parole. Similarly: R. v. Labuik (1984), 42 C.R. (3d) 185, [1984] 6 W.W.R. 102, 29 Man. R. (2d) 256 (C.A.).

Conduct of and co-operation with authorities – In R. v. Burke, [1968] 2 C.C.C. 124, [1967] 2 O.R. 562, the Court of Appeal in considering a possible inference of unfairness where the police obviously must have originally known of both similar offences and had just prior to the accused's release from prison from serving his sentence on the second offence arrested him for the first offence, accordingly reduced the second sentence to time served until the appeal.

Co-operation with the authorities leading to the conviction of the accused's confederates is a proper consideration to be taken into account in mitigation of sentence: R. v. Laroche (1983), 6 C.C.C. (3d) 268 (Que. C.A.).

Driving offences – Having regard to the serious problem of drinking and driving, sentences imposed for alcohol-related driving offences must reflect that general deterrence is the predominant concern. Such deterrence is not realized by over-emphasizing that individual deterrence is seldom needed once tragedy has resulted from the driving: R. v. McVeigh (1985), 22 C.C.C. (3d) 145 (Ont. C.A.). Similarly: R. v. Crow (1985), 33 M.V.R. 157 (Alta. C.A.); R. v. Fletcher (1989), 57 Man. R. (2d) 218, 13 M.V.R. (2d) 334 (Man. C.A.).

The new offence of dangerous driving causing death is more akin to the former offence of criminal negligence in the operation of a motor vehicle causing death. Further, the sentence to be imposed should reflect the added gravity of the offence where death or serious injury is caused by a drinking driver: R. v. Doiron (1987), 39 C.C.C. (3d) 452, 7 M.V.R. (2d) 78, 67 Nfld. & P.E.I.R. 137 (P.E.I.S.C. App. Div.).

The offences of impaired operation causing injury or death fall outside the traditional criminal offences where the punishment may be significantly tailored to the intent of the accused. An accused, convicted of such an offence, is liable to an increased penalty even if his intent may have been no different than some other impaired driver who, through good fortune, is not involved in an accident. The amount of the punishment will reflect the extent of the consequences. Further, the reasons why the accused drank or that, because of drink, he was unable to comprehend the extent of his impairment or the possible consequences are not mitigating circumstances: R. v. Horon (1990), 58 C.C.C. (3d) 418, 107 A.R. 328 (C.A.).

Drug offences / Principles generally in drug cases – Except in highly unusual cases a custodial sentence is required for narcotic trafficking even in cases involving cannabis. The Courts should not, however, attempt to define what can constitute exceptional or highly unusual circumstances: R. v. Burchnall; R. v. Dumont (1980), 65 C.C.C. (2d) 490, [1980] 6 W.W.R. 462 (Alta. C.A.).

Although the Crown has proceeded on the trafficking offence rather than the importing offence under the Narcotic Control Act, R.S.C. 1970, c. N-1, the Court may properly take into account the fact that the narcotic was imported by the accused as one of the aggravating circumstances: R. v. McPartland (1981), 63 C.C.C. (2d) 88 (Ont. C.A.); R. v. Ramirez (1986), 26 C.C.C. (3d) 258 (B.C.C.A.).

In R. v. Bengert et al. (No. 4) (1979), 52 C.C.C. (2d) 100, 15 C.R. (3d) 97 (B.C.S.C.) Berger J., prior to imposing sentence for conspiracy to traffic in cocaine, heard evidence concerning the drug and the danger its use presented to society. In holding that the doctrine of precedent does not apply to evidence he rejected the exaggerated views as to the dangers of cocaine reflected in earlier cases which views were founded on expert testimony which no longer squared with present medical opinion. His Lordship thereupon concluded that cocaine was more properly compared to the amphetamines than heroin.

The appeals by the accused and the Crown against the sentences imposed by Berger J. were either dismissed or abandoned: R. v. Jefferies (1981), 61 C.C.C. (2d) 58 (B.C.C.A.); R. v. Ponak (1981), 61 C.C.C. (2d) 60 (B.C.C.A.).

A conclusion similar to that reached by Berger J. was reached by the trial Judge in R. v. Libby (1980), 63 C.C.C. (2d) 69, 23 C.R. (3d) 10 (Que. Ct. Sess. of Peace).

While cocaine is an amphetamine-like drug its use can result in a high degree of psychological dependence and psychological damage. Trafficking in cocaine must be dealt with sternly and even first offenders engaged in single transactions will be imprisoned for periods depending on the amount of the narcotic and money involved. Except where there is no profit motivation even a large fine would not be sufficient: R. v. Merlin (1984), 13 C.C.C. (3d) 549, 63 N.S.R. (2d) 78 (S.C. App. Div.).

Effect of addiction – In R. v. Richards (1979), 49 C.C.C. (2d) 517, 11 C.R. (3d) 193 (Ont. C.A.) the Court considered at length the principles applicable to sentencing a heroin addict on a charge of possession of heroin. In upholding the disposition of the trial Judge against a Crown appeal (suspended sentence and probation with community service order), the Court considered the statistics compiled by the Federal Bureau of Dangerous Drugs showing the dispositions with respect to various drug offences. While such statistics should not be given undue weight it was of significance that in a high percentage of cases of simple possession of heroin a non-custodial sentence was imposed. Since the offence, the accused in this case had been cured of his addiction and thus a jail sentence was not required as a matter of rehabilitation and while the offence was serious it was not of such gravity that a jail term was required as a matter of general deterrence. The Court also approved the use of a community service order, in this case a benefit concert, the accused being a musician, it being appropriate to tailor the order to the work he is fitted to perform, although an additional term requiring that the accused engage in a programme to point out the dangers of drug use would have been desirable.

In sentencing a heroin addict for possession of narcotics, the principle of deterrence should yield to any reasonable chance of rehabilitation which may show itself to the court imposing sentence. The protection which society derives from incarcerating the addict is transitory at best, whereas, if the addict can be rehabilitated, through attendance at a drug rehabilitation facility as part of a probation order, then society will be permanently protected: R. v. Preston (1990), 79 C.C.C. (3d) 61, 79 C.R. (3d) 61, 47 B.C.L.R. (2d) 273 (C.A.).

While trafficking in hard drugs such as morphine is normally dealt with severely, where the accused addict has, since the commission of the offence, controlled his habit and the circumstances are such as to found a reasonable belief that he is no longer a danger to society, a lengthy period of incarceration is no longer required, and in some cases a suspended sentence and probation will be appropriate: R. v. Lebovitch (1979), 48 C.C.C. (2d) 539, 8 C.R. (3d) S-41 (Que. C.A.).

On the other hand where the accused addict has not demonstrated an ability to succeed in a drug rehabilitation programme, her willingness to again enter such a programme is not sufficient to prevent the operation of normal sentencing principles in trafficking cases: R. v. Sabloff (1979), 13 C.R. (3d) 326 (Que. S.C.).

The fact that the accused is a reformed addict who was not a large scale dealer is not such an exceptional circumstance that would warrant the Court to impose a non-custodial sentence for heroin trafficking. There must at least be other factors such as evidence that the trafficking was casual and done solely for the purpose of and limited in quantity sufficient only to support the accused's own dependency: R. v. Holt (1983), 4 C.C.C. (3d) 32 (Ont. C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused C.C.C. loc. cit., 47 N.R. 240.

Importing – In R. v. Saulnier (1987), 21 B.C.L.R. (2d) 232, [1988] 2 W.W.R. 546 (B.C.C.A.), the court considered the principles applicable to imposition of sentence for persons found guilty of importing narcotics, since the striking down of the 7 year minimum by the Supreme Court in Smith v. The Queen (1987), 34 C.C.C. (3d) 97, 58 C.R. (3d) 193, [1987] 1 S.C.R. 1045. The court noted that previous precedents must be carefully considered since it was reasonable to believe that most cases of sentences for 7 to 10 or 12 years were influenced by the minimum. Sentencing was based on the seven-year "floor". Even sentences of 15 or 20 years may have been affected, having been imposed in the climate created by the minimum in which all importing sentences were imposed. Doing away with the minimum permits courts to treat the less serious cases less severely. Distinctions can be made depending on the type of narcotic imported, in view of its nature. As well, a distinction should be drawn between a narcotic such as heroin that can only be obtained outside Canada, and a drug such as marihuana.

To a similar effect is the decision in R. v. Cirone (1988), 43 C.C.C. (3d) 228, 87 A.R. 222 (C.A.), where the court pointed out that the striking down of the minimum penalty in no way detracts from the seriousness of the importing offence. In considering an appeal from a sentence imposed prior to the decision in Smith v. The Queen, supra, the court should consider the type and quantity of the drug involved, the position of the offender in the drug distribution hierarchy, the appellant's post-sentence conduct and the effect that the seven-year minimum may have had on the sentence originally imposed.

Sentencing after retrial – The judge sentencing a person after a retrial should be alive to the accused's justified sense of grievance if, without apparent reason, the second judge imposes a much longer sentence than the first. Accordingly, where an accused has been convicted of an offence a second time after retrial, the sentencing judge should first consider the fitness of the original sentence. If the judge does not accept the fitness of the original sentence, either because it was inordinately low or because new facts have emerged, the judge may impose a longer sentence. But, where no new facts have emerged, the judge should avoid imposing a sentence which is so much longer than the first as to cause a reasonable person to think that the accused was penalized for his successful appeal: R. v. W. (R.S.) (1992), 74 C.C.C. (3d) 1 (Man. C.A.).

RIGHT OF APPELLANT TO ATTEND / Appellant represented by counsel / Argument may be oral or in writing / Sentence in absence of appellant.

688. (1) Subject to subsection (2), an appellant who is in custody is entitled, if he desires, to be present at the hearing of the appeal.

(2) An appellant who is in custody and who is represented by counsel is not entitled to be present

- (a) at the hearing of the appeal, where the appeal is on a ground involving a question of law alone,
- (b) on an application for leave to appeal, or
- (c) on any proceedings that are preliminary or incidental to an appeal, unless rules of court provide that he is entitled to be present or the court of appeal or a judge thereof gives him leave to be present.

(3) An appellant may present his case on appeal and his argument in writing instead of orally, and the court of appeal shall consider any case of argument so presented.

(4) A court of appeal may exercise its power to impose sentence notwithstanding that the appellant is not present. R.S., c. C-34, s. 615.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See s. 694.2 for a similar provision respecting appeals to the Supreme Court of Canada. These provisions are incorporated by s. 822(1) into summary conviction appeals under s. 812.

SYNOPSIS

This section deals with when an appellant, who is in custody, is entitled to be present for the hearing of his or her appeal.

An “in person” appellant has a right to appear at the hearing. However, an appellant who has retained counsel has no right to attend (a) the hearing of an appeal on a question of law alone; (b) an application for leave to appeal, or (c) a proceeding preliminary or incidental to an appeal. This is subject to any rules of court or an order of a judge (subsec. (1), (2)).

Arguments may be presented in written form instead of orally (subsec. (3)).

The appellant need not be present for the court to impose sentence (subsec. (4)).

ANNOTATIONS

In Smith v. The Queen, [1966] 1 C.C.C. 162, 47 C.R. 1, [1965] S.C.R. 658, it was held that an appeal cannot proceed in the absence of an appellant who has signified his desire to be present at the hearing.

In R. v. Trecroce (1980), 55 C.C.C. (2d) 202 (Ont. C.A.) the accused who was present during his appeal pursuant to this section sought to discharge his counsel. The Court being possessed of certain psychiatric evidence raised the question of the accused’s competency to discharge his counsel and appoint other counsel. The Court thereupon directed that the accused be examined by psychiatrists who then gave evidence as to the accused’s fitness to instruct counsel. The Court held that the accused was competent to instruct counsel based on the evidence that he understood the nature of the proceedings and the function of the persons involved and knew the issues and the possible outcomes notwithstanding he might misinterpret some of the evidence and might not only disagree with his counsel but might not act with good judgment.

Subsec. (4) – The term “appellant” is to be construed as equivalent to the accused even though he is the respondent on the appeal: R. v. Krawetz (1974), 20 C.C.C. (2d) 173, [1975] 2 W.W.R.676 (Man. C.A.).

RESTITUTION OR FORFEITURE OF PROPERTY / Annulling or varying order.

689. (1) Where the trial court makes an order for compensation or for the restitution of property under section 725, 726 or 727 or an order of forfeiture of property under subsection 462.37(1), the operation of the order is suspended

(a) until the expiration of the period prescribed by rules of court for the giving of notice of appeal or of notice of application for leave to appeal, unless the accused waives an appeal; and

(b) until the appeal or application for leave to appeal has been determined, where an appeal is taken or application for leave to appeal is made.

NOTE: Subsection (1) amended 1995, c. 22, s. 10 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council) by replacing the reference to ss. 725, 726 or 727 with ss. 738 or 739.

(2) The court of appeal may by order annul or vary an order made by the trial court with respect to compensation or the restitution of property within the limits prescribed by the provision under which the order was made by the trial court, whether or not the conviction is quashed. R.S., c. C-34, s. 616; R.S.C. 1985, c. 42 (4th Supp.), s. 5.

CROSS-REFERENCES

A comprehensive code governing the limitations on the authorization of restitution orders may be found in ss. 725 to 727.9. The definition of "sentence" in s. 673 includes such orders. Those orders are reviewable on an appeal against sentence under ss. 675(1)(b) and 676(1)(d). The incorporation of these provisions by s. 822(1) renders them applicable to summary conviction appeals under s. 812.

If the authority of s. 689 is not limited to proceedings where fitness of sentence is in issue, the Supreme Court of Canada would seem to have equivalent jurisdiction.

SYNOPSIS

Subsection (1) provides for the automatic stay of compensation, restitution or forfeiture orders until either the expiration of the appeal period or the resolution of any appeal or application for leave which is taken (subsec. (1)).

The court can annul or vary any compensation or restitution orders even if it does not quash the underlying conviction (subsec. (2)).

ANNOTATIONS

Notwithstanding this section, in a proper case, the superior court may grant an interim injunction to a victim to prevent an accused from disposing of assets which were the fruits of crime so that those assets would be available to satisfy a compensation order made under s. 725, should the accused's appeal from conviction be dismissed: Oerlikon Aerospace Inc. v. Ouellete (1989), 54 C.C.C. (3d) 403, 74 C.R. (3d) 105, 68 D.L.R. (4th) 489 (Que. C.A.).

Powers of Minister of Justice

POWERS OF MINISTER OF JUSTICE.

690. The Minister of Justice may, upon an application for the mercy of the Crown by or on behalf of a person who has been convicted in proceedings by indictment or who has been sentenced to preventive detention under Part XXIV,

- (a) direct, by order in writing, a new trial or, in the case of a person under sentence of preventive detention, a new hearing, before any court that he thinks proper, if after inquiry he is satisfied that in the circumstances a new trial or hearing, as the case may be, should be directed;
- (b) refer the matter at any time to the court of appeal for hearing and determination by that court as if it were an appeal by the convicted person or the person under sentence of preventive detention, as the case may be; or
- (c) refer to the court of appeal at any time, for its opinion, any question on which he desires the assistance of that court, and the court shall furnish its opinion accordingly. R.S., c. C-34, s. 617.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The extension of the royal prerogative of mercy is authorized under ss. 749 to 751. These provisions also authorize the Governor in Council to grant a free or conditional pardon or order relief from any penalty, fine or forfeiture. Pursuant to s. 53(2) of the Supreme Court Act, R.S. 1985, c. S-26, the Governor in Council may direct references to the Supreme Court of Canada.

SYNOPSIS

This section sets out the powers of the Minister of Justice with respect to applications, for the mercy of the Crown, by persons who have been convicted of an indictable offence or sentenced to preventive detention as dangerous offenders under Part XXIV.

The Minister may: (a) order a new trial or hearing; (b) refer the matter to a court of appeal as if it were an appeal taken in the normal course of the proceedings; or (c) refer the matter to the court of appeal with a request that it give its opinion with respect to specific questions.

ANNOTATIONS

The rules as to the admissibility of fresh evidence on appeal should be borne in mind on a reference under para. (b). The appellate Court will determine each such situation on its merits and where the circumstances are unusual the appellate Court should not refuse to hear fresh evidence where the interests of justice require that it be heard: Reference re Regina v. Gorecki (No. 2) (1976), 32 C.C.C. (2d) 135, 14 O.R. (2d) 218 (C.A.).

In Reference re: Milgaard (Can.) (1992), 71 C.C.C. (3d) 260, 90 D.L.R. (4th) 1, [1992] 3 W.W.R. 385 (S.C.C.) the Governor in Council had referred the accused's case to the Supreme Court of Canada to determine whether the continued conviction of the accused for murder constituted a miscarriage of justice. The court considered a number of instances where the continued conviction would constitute a miscarriage of justice and thus require that the Governor in Council be advised to exercise powers under s. 749. As well, if the court was satisfied on a preponderance of evidence that the accused was innocent of the murder, then it would be open to the accused to apply to reopen his application for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada with a view to determining whether the conviction should be quashed and a verdict of acquittal entered, in which case, the Minister would be advised to take no steps pending final determination of those proceedings. The continued conviction of the accused would also constitute a miscarriage of justice if there were reasonably believable new evidence which was relevant to the issue of the accused's guilt and which, taken together with the evidence adduced at trial, could reasonably be expected to have affected the verdict. In that case, the Minister of Justice would be advised to quash the conviction and direct a new trial under para. (a) of this section. It would then be for the provincial Attorney General to determine whether or not to enter a stay in all the circumstances.

It would seem that in light of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms the refusal of the Minister to exercise his power under this section is reviewable by the courts: Wilson v. Minister of Justice (1985), 20 C.C.C. (3d) 206, 46 C.R. (3d) 91 (Fed. C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused 62 N.R. 394n.

Neither a superior court judge nor a commission of inquiry, appointed by the province with the powers of a superior court judge, has the power to compel another judge to testify on how and why he arrived at a particular judicial decision and why a certain judge sat on a particular panel of the court of appeal to hear a reference under para. (b) of this section. It is an essential element of judicial independence that judges be immune from testifying with respect to their grounds for decision and the reasons for composition of a given panel: MacKeigan v. Hickman (1989), 50 C.C.C. (3d) 449, 61 D.L.R. (4th) 688, [1989] 2 S.C.R. 796 (5:2).

Appeals to the Supreme Court of Canada

APPEAL FROM CONVICTION / Appeal where acquittal set aside.

691. (1) A person who is convicted of an indictable offence and whose conviction is affirmed by the court of appeal may appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada

(a) on any question of law on which a judge of the court of appeal dissents; or

(b) on any question of law, if leave to appeal is granted by the Supreme Court of Canada.

(2) A person

(a) who is acquitted of an indictable offence other than by reason of a verdict of not criminally responsible on account of mental disorder and whose acquittal is set aside by the court of appeal, or

(b) who is tried jointly with a person referred to in paragraph (a) and is convicted and whose conviction is sustained by the court of appeal, may appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada on a question of law. R.S., c. C-34, s. 618; 1974-75-76, c. 105, s. 18; R.S.C. 1985, c. 34 (3rd Supp.), s. 10; 1991, c. 43, s. 9.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Similar rights of appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada from a verdict of not criminally responsible on account of mental disorder or a finding of unfit to stand trial are authorized in s. 692. See ss. 693 and 696 for the rights of appeal of the Attorney General. The Supreme Court of Canada has the authority to determine appeals under Part XXI, equivalent to that of provincial courts of appeal whose authority is incorporated by reference under s. 695(1).

See s. 672.1 for definition of "verdict of not criminally responsible on account of mental disorder".

SYNOPSIS

This section governs appeals to the Supreme Court of Canada by a person convicted of an indictable offence. Such appeals are restricted to "questions of law".

Where an appeal by the accused has been dismissed by the court of appeal an appeal may be taken "as of right" on any question of law upon which a judge of the court of appeal has dissented. Absent such a dissent, leave to appeal must be obtained from the Supreme Court (subsecs. (1)(a), (b)). (Note: Where an appeal is taken on the basis of a dissent, leave is required to raise other issues.)

An appeal "as of right" lies from a judgment of the court of appeal allowing a Crown appeal from acquittal (subsec. (2)(a)).

Where the court of appeal allows a Crown appeal from acquittal, a co-accused who was convicted at the same trial and whose appeal was dismissed may appeal "as of right" (subsec. (2)(b)).

(Note: Appeals with respect to summary conviction matters and prerogative writs are governed by s. 40 of the Supreme Court Act.)

ANNOTATIONS

Dissent in law [subsec. 1(a)] – To proceed under this paragraph there must be a strict question of law, not one of mixed fact and law, which is involved in the ratio decidendi and upon which there was a disagreement in the provincial appellate Court: Demenoff v. The Queen, [1964] 2 C.C.C. 305, 41 C.R. 407 (S.C.C.) (5:0).

In Mahoney v. The Queen (1982), 67 C.C.C. (2d) 197, 27 C.R. (3d) 97, [1982] 1 S.C.R. 834, the majority of the Court appears to have adopted the view that the application of s. 686(1)(b)(iii) is a question of law which is reviewable by the Supreme Court of Canada.

As well, the court has now held that the application of former s. 613(1)(a)(i) as to whether the verdict of guilty is unreasonable raises a question of law: Yeboes v. The Queen (1987), 36 C.C.C. (3d) 417, 59 C.R. (3d) 108, [1987] 2 S.C.R. 168 (6:0).

In view of s. 27(5) of the Young Offenders Act, no appeal lies as of right under this section in matters governed by the Young Offenders Act. Thus, even if there is a dissent in law, leave to appeal must be obtained: R. v. C.(T.L.), [1994] 2 S.C.R. 1012, 92 C.C.C. (3d) 444, 32 C.R. (4th) 243.

Leave to appeal [subsec. (1)(b)] – With the literal interpretation of s. 40 of the Supreme Court Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. S-26, particularly the words “convicting” and “conviction” in subsec. (3) thereof jurisdiction to entertain an appeal against the principle, not the fitness, of a sentence from an appellate Court’s order was confirmed in Hill v. The Queen (1975), 23 C.C.C. (2d) 321, 58 D.L.R. (3d) 697 (S.C.C.) (8:0). It should be noted that while six members of the Court agreed with the reasons for judgment of Pigeon, J., Laskin, C.J.C., concurred in the conclusion, not by applying a rule of interpretation, but by proceeding on the basis that he would only exclude from the leave jurisdiction of the Court those appeals which are quite plainly excluded by statute.

Where the court grants leave to appeal without restriction, the appellant was entitled to bring into question the validity of his conviction on a question of law, other than the question of law upon which leave to appeal was sought, which arose as a result of a decision of the Supreme Court intervening between the order granting leave and the hearing of the appeal: Wigman v. The Queen (1987), 33 C.C.C. (3d) 97, 56 C.R. (3d) 289, [1987] 1 S.C.R. 246 (6:0).

The granting of leave does not preclude the Court from later deciding that the question does not raise a ground of law: Demeter v. The Queen (1977), 34 C.C.C. (2d) 137, 75 D.L.R. (3d) 251 (S.C.C.) (9:0).

By virtue of amendments to the Supreme Court Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. S-26, an application for leave to appeal may be determined on the basis of the written material and without according an oral hearing: R. v. Chaulk (1989), 48 C.C.C. (3d) 65, 69 C.R. (3d) 217, [1989] 4 W.W.R. 90 (S.C.C.) (7:0).

An appellant who seeks to raise the invalidity of a law, under which he was convicted on grounds arising out of a subsequent decision of the Supreme Court, must still be in the judicial system in that an appeal has been launched to the court, an application for leave has been made within time or an application for an extension of time is granted, based on the criteria that normally apply in such cases, including demonstration of an intention to appeal within the appeal period and an adequate explanation of the delay: R. v. Thomas (1990), 75 C.R. (3d) 352, [1990] 1 S.C.R. 713, 108 N.R. 147 (3:0).

Acquittal set aside by court of appeal [subsec. (2)(a)] – Subsec. (2)(a) gives a right of appeal to an accused who is convicted only of an included offence and whose acquittal on the full offence is set aside by the Court of Appeal and a new trial ordered on the full offence. The appeal however is limited to setting aside the acquittal and the accused may not raise additional grounds of appeal concerning the conviction for the included offence: Guillemette v. The Queen (1986), 26 C.C.C. (3d) 1, 51 C.R. (3d) 273, 27 D.L.R. (4th) 682 (S.C.C.) (7:0).

An accused may appeal under subsec. (2)(a) where the trial judge “quashed” the charges against him on the basis of a violation of s. 11(b) of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. The judge should have stayed the proceedings, which order is tantamount to an acquittal: R. v. Kalanj (1989), 48 C.C.C. (3d) 459, [1989] 1 S.C.R. 1594, 70 C.R. (3d) 260.

APPEAL AGAINST AFFIRMATION OF VERDICT OF NOT CRIMINALLY RESPONSIBLE ON ACCOUNT OF MENTAL DISORDER / Appeal against affirmation of verdict of unfit to stand trial / Grounds of appeal.

692. (1) A person who has been found not criminally responsible on account of mental disorder and

- (a) whose verdict is affirmed on that ground by the court of appeal, or
- (b) against whom a verdict of guilty is entered by the court of appeal under subparagraph 686(4)(b)(ii), may appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada.

(2) A person who is found unfit to stand trial and against whom that verdict is affirmed by the court of appeal may appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada.

(3) An appeal under subsection (1) or (2) may be

- (a) on any question of law on which a judge of the court of appeal dissents, or
- (b) on any question of law, if leave to appeal is granted by the Supreme Court of Canada. R.S., c. C-34, s. 620; R.S.C. 1985, c. 34 (3rd Supp.), s. 11; 1991, c. 43, s. 9.

See s. 2 for definition of "unfit to stand trial" and s. 672.1 for definition of "verdict of not criminally responsible".

Section 675(3) governs an accused's right of appeal from a finding of unfitness or a verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity. In these circumstances, leave to appeal is not required respecting such grounds. Such an appeal is not restricted to questions of law alone. Under ss. 676(1)(a) and 67(3), the right of appeal of the prosecutor in respect of similar findings is restricted to questions of law alone. For the authority of the court of appeal to hear such appeals, see s. 686(1) to (4), (6) and (7). See s. 695(1) for the equivalent authority of the Supreme Court of Canada.

SYNOPSIS

This section governs appeals to the Supreme Court of Canada by an accused who has been found unfit or not criminally responsible on account of mental disorder. These may be brought, on questions of law: (a) "as of right" on the basis of a dissent in the court of appeal; or (b) with leave of the Supreme Court (subsec. (3)).

An appeal lies where a verdict of not criminally responsible is either: (a) affirmed on appeal (subsec. (1)(a)); or (b) is set aside and a conviction entered by the court of appeal (subsec. (1)(b)). A finding of unfitness which is affirmed on appeal may also be appealed (subsec. (2)).

APPEAL BY ATTORNEY GENERAL / Terms.

693. (1) Where a judgment of a court of appeal sets aside a conviction pursuant to an appeal taken under section 675 or dismisses an appeal taken pursuant to paragraph 676(1)(a), (b) or (c) or subsection 676(3), the Attorney General may appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada

- (a) on any question of law on which a judge of the court of appeal dissents; or
- (b) on any question of law, if leave to appeal is granted by the Supreme Court of Canada.

(2) Where leave to appeal is granted under paragraph (1)(b), the Supreme Court of Canada may impose such terms as it sees fit. R.S., c. C-34, s. 621; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 146, c. 34 (3rd Supp.), s. 12.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See s. 2 for definition of "Attorney General". The Attorney General of Canada has equivalent rights of appeal to those of a provincial Attorney General under Part XXII, respecting proceedings instituted at the instance of and conducted by or on behalf of the Government of Canada. Section 695(1) authorizes the Supreme Court of Canada to determine appeals by the Attorney General. Section 695(1) incorporates the dispositive authority of the court of appeal. See the Supreme Court Act and Rules for procedure in appeals to the Supreme Court of Canada.

SYNOPSIS

This section governs appeals by the Crown to the Supreme Court of Canada in indictable matters. Such appeals may be brought, on questions of law: (a) "as of right" on the basis of a dissent in the court of appeal; or (b) with leave of the Supreme Court (subsec. (1)).

Where the Crown is granted leave to appeal, the court can impose such conditions as it sees fit (e.g., in a "test" case, the Crown may be ordered to pay the respondent's costs) (subsec. (2)).

(Note: Appeals with respect to summary conviction matters and prerogative writs are governed by s. 40 of the Supreme Court Act.)

ANNOTATIONS

Subsec. (1)(b) – Where the provincial appellate court had to weigh the evidence in coming to its decision, it cannot be said that the decision was a pure question of law: R. v. Fergusson (1961), 132 C.C.C. 112, 36 C.R. 271 (5:0) (S.C.C.).

A useful guide to determine a question of law on a factual aspect of an appeal is found in the comment of Laskin, C.J.C., in R. v. K. C. Irving Ltd. and three other corporations (1976), 32 C.C.C. (2d) 1, 72 D.L.R. (3d) 82 (9:0) (S.C.C.), that since there was no appeal on questions of fact, then in the absence of any argument on complete absence of evidence or on complete disregard of admissible evidence touching on any of the issues, the Court would accept the facts found by the trial Judge unless altered by the Court of Appeal.

A finding by the Court of Appeal that there was no evidence to go to the jury raises a question of law alone: R. v. Olan, Hudson and Hartnett (1978), 41 C.C.C. (2d) 145, 86 D.L.R. (3d) 212, [1978] 2 S.C.R. 1175; R. v. Cotroni; R. v. Papalia (1979), 45 C.C.C. (2d) 1, 93 D.L.R. (3d) 161, 7 C.R. (3d) 185 (S.C.C.).

Under this section, the Crown right of appeal is limited to a case where the court of appeal “dismisses an appeal”. Thus, where the court of appeal had allowed the Crown appeal on some grounds, but not others, the Crown had no right to cross-appeal with respect to that part of the decision of the court of appeal with respect to those latter grounds although the accused was appealing to the Supreme Court of Canada pursuant to s. 691(2): R. v. MacKenzie (1993), 78 C.C.C. (3d) 193, [1993] 1 S.C.R. 212, 18 C.R. (4th) 133.

NOTICE OF APPEAL.

694. No appeal lies to the Supreme Court of Canada unless notice of appeal in writing is served by the appellant on the respondent in accordance with the Supreme Court Act. R.S., c. C-34, s. 622; R.S.C. 1985, c. 34 (3rd Supp.), s. 13.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 678 contains a similar provision respecting appeals to the provincial court of appeal. See the Supreme Court Act and Rules of the Supreme Court of Canada for applicable rules relating to service and filing of the notice of appeal.

SYNOPSIS

This section states that the appellant on an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada must give notice to the respondent in accordance with the Supreme Court Act.

LEGAL ASSISTANCE FOR ACCUSED / Counsel fees and disbursements / Taxation of fees and disbursements.

694.1 (1) The Supreme Court of Canada or a judge thereof may, at any time, assign counsel to act on behalf of an accused who is a party to an appeal to the Court or to proceedings preliminary or incidental to an appeal to the Court where, in the opinion of the Court or judge, it appears desirable in the interests of justice that the accused should have legal assistance and where it appears that the accused has not sufficient means to obtain that assistance.

(2) Where counsel is assigned pursuant to subsection (1) and legal aid is not granted to the accused pursuant to a provincial legal aid program, the fees and disbursements of counsel shall be paid by the Attorney General who is the appellant or respondent, as the case may be, in the appeal.

(3) Where subsection (2) applies and where counsel and the Attorney General cannot agree on fees or disbursements of counsel, the Attorney General or the counsel may apply to the Registrar of the Supreme Court of Canada, and the Registrar may tax the disputed fees and disbursements. R.S.C. 1985, c. 34 (3rd Supp.), s. 13.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 684 contains similar provisions applicable where accused is a party to an appeal to the provincial court of appeal or proceedings related thereto. For a similar provision applicable at trial, see s. 672.24 which prescribes the assignment of counsel where the accused is unrepresented and an issue of fitness is being directed.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides that the Supreme Court of Canada, or a judge thereof, can appoint counsel for an appellant or respondent who is without means to independently retain such assistance (subsec. (1)). Such an application will generally be made only after Legal Aid has refused to assist in this regard.

In the absence of legal aid, funding costs are paid by the Attorney General who is a party to the appeal (subsec. (2)). In the event of a dispute with respect to fees and disbursements, the Registrar of the Supreme Court may tax the account submitted by counsel.

RIGHT OF APPELLANT TO ATTEND / Appellant represented by counsel.

694.2 (1) Subject to subsection (2), an appellant who is in custody and who desires to be present at the hearing of the appeal before the Supreme Court of Canada is entitled to be present at it.

(2) An appellant who is in custody and who is represented by counsel is not entitled to be present before the Supreme Court of Canada

(a) on an application for leave to appeal,

(b) on any proceedings that are preliminary or incidental to an appeal, or

(c) at the hearing of the appeal, unless rules of court provide that entitlement or the Supreme Court of Canada or a judge thereof gives the appellant leave to be present. R.S.C. 1985, c. 34 (3rd Supp.), s. 13.

CROSS-REFERENCES

For a similar and more extensive provision applicable in appeals to the Supreme Court of Canada, see s. 688.

SYNOPSIS

This section deals with when an appellant, who is in custody, is entitled to be present for a hearing before the Supreme Court of Canada.

An "in person" appellant has a right to attend. However, an appellant who has retained counsel has no right to attend: (a) an application for leave to appeal; (b) a proceeding preliminary or incidental to an appeal; or (c) the hearing of an appeal. This is subject to any rules of court or an order of a judge (subsec. (1), (2)).

ORDER OF SUPREME COURT OF CANADA / When appeal presumed abandoned.

695. (1) The Supreme Court of Canada may, on an appeal under this Part, make any order that the court of appeal might have made and may make any rule or order that is necessary to give effect to its judgment.

(2) An appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada that is not brought on for hearing by the appellant at the session of that court during which the judgment appealed from is pronounced by the court of appeal, or during the next session thereof, shall be deemed to be abandoned, unless otherwise ordered by the Supreme Court of Canada or a judge thereof. R.S., c. C-34, s. 623.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See the Supreme Court Act and Rules of Court for procedure on appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada.

See also the references cited under ss. 683, 686 and 689 for the scope of authority conferred by each of these sections.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides that the Supreme Court of Canada may make any order that the court of appeal might have made on appeal, and any other necessary order. Appeals not brought on before the end of the sitting of the court subsequent to the sitting during which the court of appeal judgment was pronounced are presumed abandoned, unless ordered otherwise by the court or a judge thereof.

ANNOTATIONS

Where the Appeal Court allowed the accused's main ground of appeal and accordingly did not consider his other grounds, the Supreme Court of Canada upon reversing the Appeal Court on that main ground is empowered to deal with and dispose of the other grounds: R. v. Borg, [1969] 4 C.C.C. 262, 7 C.R.N.S. 85 (S.C.C.) (9:0).

The respondent can raise any argument which supports the order of the court below, including grounds on which the respondent was successful in the court below, re-arguing grounds which were unsuccessful or not dealt with below, and even making new arguments. The Supreme Court of Canada has a discretion not to hear arguments which lack an appropriate evidentiary basis below, but that decision is not related to the court's jurisdiction: R. v. Keegstra, [1995] 2 S.C.R. 381, 98 C.C.C. (3d) 1, 39 C.R. (4th) 205; R. v. Perka, [1984] 2 S.C.R. 232, 14 C.C.C. (3d) 385, 42 C.R. (3d) 113.

This section gives the Supreme Court the power to make any order that the Court of Appeal might have made under its broad powers under s. 686(8): R. v. P. (D.W.) (1989), 49 C.C.C. (3d) 417, 70 C.R. (3d) 315, [1989] 5 W.W.R. 97 (S.C.C.) (5:0).

Appeals by Attorney General of Canada

RIGHT OF ATTORNEY GENERAL OF CANADA TO APPEAL.

696. The Attorney General of Canada has the same rights of appeal in proceedings instituted at the instance of the Government of Canada and conducted by or on behalf of that Government as the Attorney General of a province has under this Part. R.S., c. C-34, s. 624.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See s. 2 for definition of "Attorney General". Section 676 describes the right of the Attorney General to appeal in proceedings by indictment.

The Attorney General of Canada has equivalent rights of appeal to those of the provincial Attorney General under Part XXVII, respecting summary conviction proceedings instituted at the instance of and conducted by or on behalf of the Government of Canada.

Part XXII / PROCURING ATTENDANCE

Application

APPLICATION.

697. Except where section 527 applies, this Part applies where a person is required to attend to give evidence in a proceeding to which this Act applies. R.S., c. C-34, s. 625; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 147.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 527 concerns procedure to procure the attendance of a prisoner for a preliminary inquiry, for trial or to give evidence in any other proceeding to which the Criminal Code applies.

The content and circumstances of issue of a subpoena or warrant to compel attendance of a witness are governed by ss. 698 to 700.

The execution or service of process on a person and a corporation and the jurisdictional application of a subpoena, as well as the jurisdictional application of a warrant and a summons, are addressed in ss. 701 to 703.2.

Sections 704 to 708 govern procedure and sanctions in respect of defaulting or absconding witnesses.

Procedure in respect of commission evidence is governed by ss. 709 to 714. Section 715 provides for the reading in of testimony given at an investigation, preliminary inquiry or previous trial on the same charge where the witness is unavailable to the present trial. Section 715.1 provides for the admission, in certain circumstances, of videotape evidence.

SYNOPSIS

This section clarifies that Part XXII is to apply where a person is required to give evidence, except where s. 527 applies because the person is a prisoner.

Process

SUBPOENA / Warrant in Form 17 / Subpoena issued first.

698. (1) Where a person is likely to give material evidence in a proceeding to which this Act applies, a subpoena may be issued in accordance with this Part requiring that person to attend to give evidence.

(2) Where it is made to appear that a person who is likely to give material evidence

(a) will not attend in response to a subpoena if a subpoena is issued, or

(b) is evading service of a subpoena,

a court, justice or provincial court judge having power to issue a subpoena to require the attendance of that person to give evidence may issue a warrant in Form 17 to cause that person to be arrested and to be brought to give evidence.

(3) Except where paragraph (2)(a) applies, a warrant in Form 17 shall not be issued unless a subpoena has first been issued. R.S., c. C-34, s. 626.

CROSS-REFERENCES

"Justice" and "provincial court judge" are defined in s. 2.

See s. 699 for the form of a subpoena and the authority by whom it may be issued, and s. 700 for its content. Under s. 699(6), a subpoena may be in Form 16. It may be in the form of a subpoena ad testificandum – a requirement to attend and give evidence, or a subpoena duces tecum – a requirement that the witness attend, give evidence and bring anything in his possession or control that relates to the charge or any document or thing specified in the subpoena.

The service of a subpoena and execution of a warrant are governed by ss. 701 to 703.2.

Sections 704 to 708 prescribe procedure and sanctions in respect of defaulting or absconding witnesses.

Under s. 705, a warrant for the arrest of an elusive witness may be issued in Form 17. Under s. 706, where the witness is brought before a court as a consequence of a warrant, the court may detain him in custody or release him on recognizance in Form 32.

SYNOPSIS

Under Part XXII of the Code a person who is likely to have material evidence to give may be the subject of either a subpoena or an arrest warrant. A warrant may be issued where it appears that the person will not respond to a subpoena or is evading service of a subpoena that has already been issued (subsecs. (2), (3)).

ANNOTATIONS

In an unusual case counsel for the accused during the adjournment of a trial for an offence under s. 253(b) obtained a subpoena from another judge requiring the breathalyzer technician, who was already a witness at the trial, to attend the trial with the breathalyzer machine. The accused's application to the trial judge to require the technician to produce the machine had been refused. In quashing the subpoena the court held that the provincial court judge has some responsibility and discretion to determine whether the person sought to be subpoenaed is likely to give material evidence. The judge is not required to make such an inquiry but if he issues a subpoena to a person who could not give material evidence or if the subpoena was obtained for an indirect or improper object, then the superior court may quash it. In this case the subpoena was obtained to circumvent the ruling of the trial judge. This was improper and constituted an abuse of process: Re Regina and McConnell (1977), 35 C.C.C. (2d) 435, 38 C.R.N.S. 290 sub nom. A.- G. Sask. and Underhill v. Boychk and McConnell (Sask. C.A.).

A trial judge has jurisdiction to quash a subpoena issued by another judge of the same court where the subpoena should never have been issued or its issue amounted to an abuse of process. A subpoena may issue only where the witness has material evidence in the proceedings and not to authorize a pure fishing expedition: R. v. Gingras (1992), 71 C.C.C. (3d) 53, 120 A.R. 300 (C.A.). In this case, it was also held that the subpoena was irregular in that it required the person named in the subpoena not to produce evidence in court, but to produce it to the party seeking the subpoena.

The provincial Superior Court has jurisdiction to quash a subpoena issued out of that Court or any other Court of provincial jurisdiction in the Province where the witness would not be able to give any material evidence: Re Baldwin and Bauer and The Queen (1980), 54 C.C.C. (2d) 85 (Ont. H.C.J.).

Notwithstanding that a subpoena is regular on its face the subpoena power can still be abused if some form of abuse were shown or the witness's interests under s. 7 of the Charter infringed, the superior court would have jurisdiction to grant an appropriate remedy. In this case, shortly before a police informer was to testify, protection was withdrawn from his parents, allegedly in breach of an agreement that the witness had with the police. Even if the subpoena were not quashed, the superior court must consider whether to exercise the inherent jurisdiction of the court and grant an appropriate remedy, even though the witness's parents were outside the country: R. v. A. (1990), 55 C.C.C. (3d) 562, 108 N.R. 214 (S.C.C.) (7:2).

It is implicit in this section that before issuing the subpoena the justice or other person having power to issue a subpoena should conduct some inquiry to be satisfied that the proposed witness has material evidence to give. The type of inquiry is within the discretion of the justice who may choose not to insist upon evidence on oath but may nevertheless want to conduct an oral examination, if only a cursory one, of some person who has knowledge of the circumstances. The extent of such an examination will depend on the circumstances but, if he takes no steps whatever to satisfy himself that the person is likely to give material evidence, then the justice is abusing his power and discretion and the decision to issue the subpoena may be set aside on certiorari: Foley v. Gares (1989), 53 C.C.C. (3d) 82, 74 C.R. (3d) 386 (Sask. C.A.). Folld: R. v. Singh (1990), 57 C.C.C. (3d) 444, 108 A.R. 233 (Q.B.).

It was held in R. v. French (1977), 37 C.C.C. (2d) 201 (Ont. C.A.) that in Ontario where counsel for an accused seeks to secure the hospital records relating to a person, such as a Crown witness, he must apply to a Court under the applicable provincial legislation. This legislation requires a process issued out of a Court and the application should be on notice to the witness and the Crown. The routine securing and serving of a subpoena on the hospital does not conform to the requirements of the legislation. An appeal by the accused to the S.C.C. was dismissed 47 C.C.C. (2d) 411, [1980] 1 S.C.R. 158, 98 D.L.R. (3d) 385 without reference to this point.

In R. v. Coon (1992), 74 C.C.C. (3d) 146 (Ont. Ct. (Gen. Div.)) it was held that an order should be made for the disclosure of the hospital records pursuant to the provincial legislation where disclosure is essential in the interests of justice. In determining what is essential in the interests of justice, the court will attempt to strike a balance between the right of the accused by cross-examination to test the motive, disposition, veracity and reliability of the witness and the witness' right to privacy and confidentiality in respect of medical records. If a sufficient foundation is laid, then the privacy interest must yield to the accused's right to full answer and defence. The right to full answer and defence is not, however, synonymous with a fishing expedition. Some of the factors that may be considered as to whether a substantial foundation has been established are the nature and seriousness of the offence; the importance of the witness to establishing the guilt of the accused; the proximity of the mental disorder to the date of the offence; the existence of evidence to suggest a motive to fabricate; criminal antecedents of the witness; the mode of life or other discreditable conduct which may tend to discredit testimony; and evidence of bizarre or incompetent behaviour. Whether or not the court has the power to edit the records having made the decision to disclose them, the court should be loathe to do so for fear that the clinical picture might be altered especially in circumstances where experts both on behalf of the Crown and the accused are likely to examine the material. The court might contemplate editing where the records contain material which is so manifestly extraneous and so manifestly intrusive of privacy. Even where a disclosure order is made, to preserve the legitimate privacy interests of the complainant, disclosure should be subject to certain conditions concerning access and custody of the records.

The applicant must make it clear to the trial Judge that the proposed witness is likely to give material evidence before he will consider whether or not to issue a bench warrant: R. v. Kinzie (1956), 25 C.R.6, [1956] O.W.N.896 (C.A.).

HOW SUBPOENA ISSUED / Who may issue / Order of judge / Seal / Signature / Form.

699. (1) Where a person is required to attend to give evidence before a superior court of criminal jurisdiction, a court of appeal, an appeal court or a court of criminal jurisdiction, a subpoena directed to that person shall be issued out of the court before which the attendance of that person is required.

(2) Where a person is required to attend to give evidence before a summary conviction court under Part XXVII or in proceedings over which a justice has jurisdiction, a subpoena directed to that person shall be issued

- (a) by a justice, where the person whose attendance is required is within the province in which the proceedings were instituted; or
- (b) by a provincial court judge or out of a superior court of criminal jurisdiction of the province in which the proceedings were instituted, where the person whose attendance is required is not within the province.

(3) A subpoena shall not be issued out of a superior court of criminal jurisdiction pursuant to paragraph (2)(b), except pursuant to an order of a judge of the court made on application by a party to the proceedings.

(4) A subpoena or warrant that is issued by a court under this Part shall be under the seal of the court and shall be signed by a judge of the court or by the clerk of the court.

(5) A subpoena or warrant that is issued by a justice or provincial court judge under this Part shall be signed by the justice or provincial court judge.

(6) A subpoena issued under this Part may be in Form 16. R.S., c. C-34, s. 627; 1994, c. 44, s. 69.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The terms “superior court of criminal jurisdiction”, “court of appeal”, “court of criminal jurisdiction”, “provincial court judge” and “justice” are defined in s. 2.

The definitions of “appeal court” and “summary conviction court” in Part XXVII are restricted to that Part and do not have application to Part XXII.

See s. 701(2) for the requirement that a subpoena issued pursuant to s. 699(2)(b) be personally served on the witness. See s. 698 for corresponding notes on other related provisions.

SYNOPSIS

This section deals with the manner in which subpoenas (and warrants under s. 698) are issued.

Except in summary conviction proceedings or proceedings over which a justice of the peace has jurisdiction, a subpoena shall be issued out of the court before which the witness is required to attend (subsec. (1)).

Where the matter is summary conviction or is a proceeding over which a justice of the peace has jurisdiction, subpoenas may only be issued by a justice of the peace if the witness is within the province (subsec. (2)(a)). Out-of-province subpoenas must be sought from a judge and can only be issued by order (subsec. (2)(b), (3)).

ANNOTATIONS

It was held in Re Medicine Hat Greenhouses Ltd. and German et al. and The Queen (No. 2) (1977), 34 C.C.C. (2d) 339 (Alta. S.C. App. Div.) by two of the Judges that while no appeal is provided from an order under this section by a superior Court Judge, the superior Court has an inherent right to inquire into the regularity of its process and this right can be exercised by the Appeal Division of the Court as well as the Trial Division. However, it would be a remarkable case that warranted intervention by the appeal Court of an order made by a Justice of the Trial Division.

It is implicit in this section that before issuing the subpoena the justice or other person having power to issue a subpoena should conduct some inquiry to be satisfied that the proposed witness has material evidence to give. The type of inquiry is within the discretion of the justice who may choose not to insist upon evidence on oath but may nevertheless want to conduct an oral examination, if only a cursory one, of some person who has knowledge of the circumstances. The extent of such an examination will depend on the circumstances, but if he takes no steps whatever to satisfy himself that the person is likely to give material evidence, then the justice is abusing his power and discretion and the decision to issue the subpoena may be set aside on certiorari: Foley v. Gares (1989), 53 C.C.C. (3d) 82 (Sask. C.A.).

CONTENTS OF SUBPOENA / Witness to appear and remain.

700. (1) A subpoena shall require the person to whom it is directed to attend, at a time and place to be stated in the subpoena, to give evidence and, if required, to bring with him anything that he has in his possession or under his control relating to the subject-matter of the proceedings.

(2) A person who is served with a subpoena issued under this Part shall attend and shall remain in attendance throughout the proceedings unless he is excused by the presiding judge, justice or provincial court judge. R.S., c. C-34, s. 628; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 148.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Form 16 is used for both types of subpoenas described in this section: the subpoena ad testificandum, which compels attendance to give evidence; and the subpoena duces tecum, which compels attendance as well as requires the witness to bring documents or other material relevant to the subject-matter of the proceedings.

See s. 698 for corresponding notes on other related provisions.

SYNOPSIS

A subpoena requires that a witness attend court as directed. It may also direct the witness to bring documents or other material relating to the proceedings (subsec. (1)).

A person served with a subpoena shall remain in attendance throughout the proceedings unless excused by the presiding judge or justice (subsec. (2)).

ANNOTATIONS

Where the trial Judge concludes that the witness is not compellable he has the power under this section to excuse him. At least since the proclamation of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms, a trial Judge in a proper case is not precluded from permitting counsel to be heard on behalf of the witness: Re Chase and The Queen (1982), 1 C.C.C. (3d) 188, 142 D.L.R. (3d) 507 (B.C.S.C.).

Execution or Service of Process

SERVICE / Personal service / Proof of service.

701. (1) Subject to subsection (2), a subpoena shall be served in a province by a peace officer or any other person who is qualified in that province to serve civil process, in accordance with subsection 509(2), with such modifications as the circumstances require.

(2) A subpoena that is issued pursuant to paragraph 699(2)(b) shall be served personally on the person to whom it is directed.

(3) Service of a subpoena may be proved by the affidavit of the person who effected service. R.S., c. C-34, s. 629; 1972, c. 13, s. 56; 1994, c. 44, s. 70.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See s. 2 for the definition of "peace officer".

See s. 698 for corresponding notes on other related sections.

SYNOPSIS

This section specifies how a subpoena is to be served.

A subpoena issued by a Supreme, County or District Court judge for service out of province (see s. 699(2)(b)) must be personally served on the person to whom it is directed (subsec. (2)). In all other cases a subpoena may be served personally or, if the person to whom it is directed cannot conveniently be found, left at his or her last known or usual place of residence with someone who appears to be at least 16 years old (see s. 509(2)) (subsec. (1)).

Proof of service may be made by affidavit (subsec. (3)).

SUBPOENA EFFECTIVE THROUGHOUT CANADA / Subpoena effective throughout province.

702. (1) A subpoena that is issued by a provincial court judge or out of a superior court of criminal jurisdiction, a court of appeal, an appeal court or a court of criminal jurisdiction has effect anywhere in Canada according to its terms.

(2) A subpoena that is issued by a justice has effect anywhere in the province in which it is issued. R.S., c. C-34, s. 630; 1994, c. 44, s. 71.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The terms “superior court of criminal jurisdiction”, “court of appeal”, “court of criminal jurisdiction” and “provincial court judge” are defined in s. 2. The definitions of “appeal court” and “summary conviction court” in Part XXVII are restricted to that part and do not have application to Part XXII.

Under s. 701(2), a subpoena issued under s. 699(2)(b) must be personally served on the witness. The territorial jurisdiction of a warrant or summons is described in ss. 703 and 703.1.

See s. 698 for corresponding notes on other related provisions.

SYNOPSIS

This section states that a subpoena issued by a justice or a provincial court judge has effect in the province in which it is issued, but any other subpoena has effect throughout Canada.

WARRANT EFFECTIVE THROUGHOUT CANADA / Warrant effective in a province.

703. (1) Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, a warrant of arrest or committal that is issued out of a superior court of criminal jurisdiction, a court of appeal, an appeal court within the meaning of section 812 or a court of criminal jurisdiction other than a provincial court judge acting under Part XIX may be executed anywhere in Canada.

(2) Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act but subject to subsection 705(3), a warrant of arrest or committal that is issued by a justice or provincial court judge may be executed anywhere in the province in which it is issued. R.S., c. C-34, s. 631; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 149.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Forms 17 to 20 are used for warrants of arrest or committal in respect of witnesses.

The terms “superior court of criminal jurisdiction”, “court of criminal jurisdiction”, “provincial court judge”, “court of appeal” and “justice” are defined in s. 2. The definition of “appeal court” is in s. 812. Warrants issued to compel attendance of a defaulting or absconding witness are described in ss. 704 and 705.

See ss. 706 to 708 for the procedure to be followed on default.

See s. 514 for the execution of a warrant issued under s. 703(2).

SYNOPSIS

This section provides that a warrant for arrest or committal issued by a justice or provincial court judge has effect in the province in which it was issued, or throughout Canada if it was issued for a defaulting or absconding witness under s. 705(3). Other warrants for arrest or committal have effect throughout Canada under any circumstances.

Defaulting or Absconding Witness

WARRANT FOR ABSCONDING WITNESS / Endorsement of warrant / Copy of information.

704. (1) Where a person is bound by recognizance to give evidence in any proceedings, a justice who is satisfied on information being made before him in writing and under oath that the person is about to abscond or has absconded may issue his warrant in Form 18 directing a peace officer to arrest that person and to bring him before the court, judge, justice or provincial court judge before whom he is bound to appear.

(2) Section 528 applies, with such modifications as the circumstances require, to a warrant issued under this section.

(3) A person who is arrested under this section is entitled, upon request, to receive a copy of the information on which the warrant for his arrest was issued. R.S., c. C-34, s. 632.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See s. 2 for definitions of “justice”, “peace officer” and “provincial court judge”.

The territorial jurisdiction of a warrant for arrest is defined in s. 703.

While s. 704 applies to a witness who is bound by recognizance to give evidence and who has absconded or is about to abscond, s. 705 applies to a witness who has been served with a subpoena or bound by a recognizance and fails to attend the hearing. A witness may be either required to enter into a recognizance or, under s. 706, be released on a recognizance following arrest. A warrant issued in respect of an absconding witness is in Form 18. See s. 706 for the procedure to be followed in the case of a witness arrested by warrant and brought before court. Section 707 governs his detention thereafter.

SYNOPSIS

This section authorizes a justice of the peace to issue a warrant for the arrest of a person bound by a recognizance to give evidence where he or she is satisfied, by information on oath, that the witness has absconded or is about to abscond (subsec. (1)). Anyone arrested on such a warrant is entitled to receive a copy of the information (subsec. (3)).

A warrant may be endorsed (pursuant to s. 528) with respect to the terms of release (subsec. (2)).

WARRANT WHEN WITNESS DOES NOT ATTEND / Warrant where witness bound by recognizance / Warrant effective throughout Canada.

705. (1) Where a person who has been served with a subpoena to give evidence in a proceeding does not attend or remain in attendance, the court, judge, justice or provincial court judge before whom that person was required to attend may, if it is established

(a) that the subpoena has been served in accordance with this Part, and

(b) that the person is likely to give material evidence, issue or cause to be issued a warrant in Form 17 for the arrest of that person.

(2) Where a person who has been bound by a recognizance to attend to give evidence in any proceeding does not attend or does not remain in attendance, the court, judge, justice or provincial court judge before whom that person was bound to attend may issue or cause to be issued a warrant in Form 17 for the arrest of that person.

(3) A warrant that is issued by a justice or provincial court judge pursuant to subsection (1) or (2) may be executed anywhere in Canada. R.S., c. C-34, s. 633.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See s. 2 for definitions of “justice” and “provincial court judge”.

See s. 704 for the issuance of a warrant for the arrest of an absconding witness.

See ss. 701(1) and 509(2) for service of a subpoena. A subpoena issued under s. 699(2)(b) must be served personally on the person to whom it is directed. A warrant issued pursuant to this section is in Form 17.

See s. 703(2) for the general rule that a warrant of arrest issued by a justice or provincial court judge may be executed only in the province in which it is issued; s. 705(3) is the only exception to this rule.

See s. 706 for the procedure to be followed in the case of a witness arrested by warrant and brought before court. Section 707 governs his detention thereafter. By s. 708, failure to attend or remain in attendance to give evidence when required by law to do so is punishable as contempt.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides for the issuance of an arrest warrant for a witness who does not attend after having either been served with a subpoena or released on a recognizance on the condition that he or she appear to give evidence. Such warrants are issued by the court, judge or justice of the peace before whom the witness was to have appeared and are valid throughout Canada.

ANNOTATIONS

A provincial court judge has the power to issue a warrant under this section requiring that the witness be brought before him and to reserve for himself the exclusive jurisdiction to deal with the witness: Pigeau v. Crowell (1990), 57 C.C.C. (3d) 45, 96 N.S.R. (2d) 412 (C.A.).

ORDER WHERE WITNESS ARRESTED UNDER WARRANT.

706. Where a person is brought before a court, judge, justice or provincial court judge under a warrant issued pursuant to subsection 698(2) or section 704 or 705, the court, judge, justice or provincial court judge may order that the person

(a) be detained in custody, or

(b) be released on recognizance in Form 32, with or without sureties, to appear and give evidence when required. R.S., c. C-34, s. 634.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See s. 2 for definitions of "justice" and "provincial court judge".

A warrant of arrest of a witness may be issued in the circumstances of ss. 698(2), 704 and 705.

Release on recognizance under this section is in Form 32.

The maximum period for which a witness may be detained as a witness is prescribed by s. 707. By s. 708, failure to attend or remain in attendance in accordance with a recognizance may attract liability for contempt. See s. 145(2) for the consequences of breach of recognizance. Execution of a warrant under s. 514 is conducted within the territorial jurisdictions permitted by ss. 703 and 705(3).

SYNOPSIS

This section provides that when a witness is brought before any court under a warrant pursuant to s. 698(2) (witness not likely to appear), s. 704 (witness absconding) or s. 705 (witness failing to appear), that court may order the witness detained or released on recognizance.

ANNOTATIONS

A provincial court judge has the power to issue a warrant under s. 705 requiring that the witness be brought before him and to reserve for himself the exclusive jurisdiction to deal with the witness. Where the warrant is issued in that form then a justice of the peace before whom the witness is originally brought has no jurisdiction under this section to deal with her: Pigeau v. Crowell (1990), 57 C.C.C. (3d) 45, 96 N.S.R. (2d) 412 (C.A.).

MAXIMUM PERIOD FOR DETENTION OF WITNESS / Application by witness to judge / Review of detention.

707. (1) No person shall be detained in custody under the authority of any provision of this Act, for the purpose only of appearing and giving evidence when required as a witness, for any period exceeding thirty days unless prior to the expiration of those thirty days he has been brought before a judge of a superior court of criminal jurisdiction in the province in which he is being detained.

(2) Where at any time prior to the expiration of the thirty days referred to in subsection (1), a witness being detained in custody as described in that subsection applies to be brought before a judge of a court described therein, the judge before whom the application is brought shall fix a time prior to the expiration of those thirty days for the hearing of the application and shall cause notice of the time so fixed to be given to the witness, the person having custody of the witness and such other persons as the judge may specify, and at the time so fixed for the hearing of the application the person having custody of the witness shall cause the witness to be brought before a judge of the court for that purpose.

(3) If the judge before whom a witness is brought under this section is not satisfied that the continued detention of the witness is justified, he shall order him to be discharged, or to be released on recognizance in Form 32, with or without sureties, to appear and to give evidence when required, but if the judge is satisfied that the continued detention of the witness is justified, he may order his continued detention until the witness does what is required of him pursuant to section 550 or the trial is concluded, or until the witness appears and gives evidence when required, as the case may be, except that the total period of detention of the witness from the time he was first detained in custody shall not in any case exceed ninety days. R.S., c. C-34, s. 635.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Authorization to detain a witness arrested by warrant issued pursuant to ss. 698(2), 704 or 705 is found in s. 706.

Liability for contempt under s. 708 or for having breached a recognizance under s. 145(2) could result if a witness without lawful excuse fails to attend or remain to give evidence.

Release on recognizance under this section is in Form 32. See s. 550 for an order of continued detention.

SYNOPSIS

This section sets out the procedures to be followed in dealing with a witness who has been ordered detained.

A person imprisoned as a material witness may not be held for more than 30 days unless brought before a judge of a superior court (subsec. (1)). Such a person may, in any event, apply within the 30-day period to be taken before a superior court judge for a hearing (subsec. (2)).

The judge may release the witness, with or without a recognizance, or order that he or she remain in custody until the evidence has been given or the trial concluded. A witness may not be held for more than 90 days (subsec. (3)).

CONTEMPT / Punishment / Form.

708. (1) A person who, being required by law to attend or remain in attendance for the purpose of giving evidence, fails, without lawful excuse, to attend or remain in attendance accordingly is guilty of contempt of court.

(2) A court, judge, justice or provincial court judge may deal summarily with a person who is guilty of contempt of court under this section and that person is liable to a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ninety days or to both, and may be ordered to pay the costs that are incident to the service of any process under this Part and to his detention, if any.

(3) A conviction under this section may be in Form 38 and a warrant of committal in respect of a conviction under this section may be in Form 25. R.S., c. C-34, s. 636.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The terms “justice” and “provincial court judge” are defined in s. 2.

See s. 145(2) and (3) for potential liability where a witness fails to comply with the terms of a recognizance.

A conviction under this section may be in Form 38, and a warrant of committal in respect of conviction under this section may be in Form 25.

An appeal from conviction and sentence of contempt is authorized by s. 10(1). Such an appeal is governed by Part XXI.

SYNOPSIS

A witness who, without lawful excuse, fails to attend court as required is guilty of contempt and may be dealt with summarily. The maximum penalty is a fine of $100 and/or imprisonment for 90 days, plus costs (subsecs. (1), (2)).

Evidence on Commission

ORDER APPOINTING COMMISSIONER / Idem.

709. (1) A party to proceedings by way of indictment or summary conviction may apply for an order appointing a commissioner to take the evidence of a witness who

(a) is, by reason of

(i) physical disability arising out of illness, or

(ii) some other good and sufficient cause, not likely to be able to attend at the time the trial is held; or

(b) is out of Canada.

(2) A decision under subsection (1) is deemed to have been made at the trial held in relation to the proceedings mentioned in that subsection. R.S., c. C-34, s. 637; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 150; 1994, c. 44, s. 72.

CROSS-REFERENCES

An application under s. 709 is made pursuant to the provisions of s. 710. See s. 712(1) in respect of a proposed witness who is out of Canada. Section 711 governs the reception of evidence taken under s. 709(1)(a) and s. 710. The evidence of a witness out of Canada is governed by s. 709(1)(b), s. 712(2) and 713.1.

See s. 713(1) for an order that an accused be present or represented by counsel when commission evidence is taken.

SYNOPSIS

A commissioner may be appointed to take the evidence of a witness who is out of Canada or, because of illness or some other reason, is likely to be unable to attend the trial. It would appear that subsec. (2) was added to overcome the problem identified in R. v. Pawlowski, infra, that, under the former provision, no appeal lay from a decision refusing to make an order for commission evidence. In that case, the judge had also made an order for costs against the Crown which could not be appealed.

ANNOTATIONS

As an appeal is a proceeding a Judge of the Court of Appeal may make an order for evidence on commission to be taken out of Canada: R. v. Lester (1972), 6 C.C.C. (2d) 227, [1972] 2 O.R.330 (C.A. in Chambers).

An application under this section may be made during the trial. However, in deciding whether to grant the application the trial Judge is entitled to consider such factors as whether the trial will be seriously disrupted, the possible prejudice to the opposite party resulting therefrom, as well as the consequence that the trier of fact will not have the advantage of observing the demeanour of the witness: R. v. Bullement (1979), 46 C.C.C. (2d) 429 (Ont. C.A.).

Evidence on commission as opposed to viva voce evidence at trial particularly where it goes to the root of the defence is unsatisfactory, but the seriousness of the charge and the accused's pre-trial detention require that his request for this order be granted: R. v. Banton (1976), 30 C.C.C. (2d) 253 (Ont. H.C.J.).

The court has no power to dictate to the Crown the manner in which it presents its case and thus cannot refuse an order for commission evidence until the completion of the preliminary inquiry. On the other hand, the courts have the right to ensure basic principles of a fair trial and if the defence is severely prejudiced by the decision to take commission evidence before the preliminary inquiry then an application may have to be brought to reopen the commission at the Crown's expense: R. v. Buchanan (1991), 65 C.C.C. (3d) 336 (Alta. Q.B.).

A superior court judge to whom an application is made under this section may make an order awarding costs against the Crown, not only where there has been serious misconduct by the Crown, but where there has been an infringement of the Charter: R. v. Pawlowski (1993), 79 C.C.C. (3d) 353, 20 C.R. (4th) 233, 101 D.L.R. (4th) 267 (Ont. C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused September 23, 1993.

APPLICATION WHERE WITNESS IS ILL / Evidence of medical practitioner.

- 710. (1) An application under paragraph 709(1)(a) shall be made
- (a) to a judge of a superior court of the province in which the proceedings are taken; or
  - (b) to a judge of a county or district court in the territorial division in which the proceedings are taken; or
  - (c) to a provincial court judge, where
    - (i) at the time the application is made, the accused is before a provincial court judge presiding over a preliminary inquiry under Part XXVIII, or
    - (ii) the accused or defendant is to be tried by a provincial court judge acting under Part XIX or XXVII.
- (2) An application under subparagraph 709(1)(a)(i) may be granted on the evidence of a registered medical practitioner. R.S., c. C-34, s. 638; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 151; 1994, c. 44, s. 73.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See s. 711 for the circumstances in which the evidence of a witness taken under ss. 709(1)(a) and 710 may be read in evidence in the proceedings.

See the corresponding note to s. 709 for other related provisions.

SYNOPSIS

An application for the appointment of a commissioner with respect to a witness who is in Canada shall be made to a Supreme, County or District Court judge except where the proceedings are before the Provincial Court, in which case it will be made to a judge of that court (subsec. (1)). The application may be supported by the evidence of a doctor (subsec. (2)).

READING EVIDENCE OF WITNESS WHO IS ILL.

711. Where the evidence of a witness mentioned in paragraph 709(1)(a) is taken by a commissioner appointed under section 710, it may be read in evidence in the proceedings if

- (a) it is proved by oral evidence or by affidavit that the witness is unable to attend by reason of death or physical disability arising out of illness or some other good and sufficient cause,
- (b) the transcript of the evidence is signed by the commissioner by or before whom it purports to have been taken; and
- (c) it is proved to the satisfaction of the court that reasonable notice of the time for taking the evidence was given to the other party, and that the accused or his counsel, or the prosecutor or his counsel, as the case may be, had or might have had full opportunity to cross-examine the witness. R.S., c. C-34, s. 639; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 152; 1994, c. 44, s. 74.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See ss. 709(1)(a) and 710 for application to appoint a commissioner to take the evidence of a witness too ill to attend trial.

The requirements governing the reading in of evidence under this section may be contrasted with the absence of such requirements under s. 712(2) in respect of the evidence of a witness out of Canada.

SYNOPSIS

This section deals with the use of evidence taken by a commissioner from a witness in Canada. The party seeking to "read in" testimony must establish: (a) that the witness is unable to attend (this may be done by affidavit); (b) that the transcript purports to be signed by the commissioner; and (c) that the other party had reasonable notice of the taking of the evidence and had, or could have had, an opportunity to cross-examine the witness.

  - (b) to a provincial court judge, where the accused or defendant is to be tried by a provincial court judge acting under Part XIX or XXVII.
- (2) Where the evidence of a witness is taken by a commissioner appointed under this section, it may be read in evidence in the proceedings. R.S., c. C-34, s. 640; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 153(1); 1994, c. 44, s. 75.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The term "superior court of criminal jurisdiction" is defined in s. 2.

See s. 709(1)(b) for an application to appoint a commissioner to take the evidence of a witness who is out of Canada.

See s. 711 governing the reading in of evidence of a witness who is ill; s. 712(2) does not contain similar conditions precedent.

See s. 713.1 respecting admission of evidence taken out of Canada.

SYNOPSIS

An application for the appointment of a commissioner with respect to a witness who is out of Canada shall be made to a judge of a superior court or to a judge of the court before which the trial is to take place, except where the trial is before the Provincial Court, in which case it will be made to a judge of that court (subsec. (1)). Evidence so taken may be "read in" at the trial.

ANNOTATIONS

Where the trial has commenced before the provincial court judge an application by the accused to take commission evidence should be made to that judge rather than to the superior court. It is inappropriate, however, to name the trial judge as the commissioner as the accused may later choose not to tender the evidence at the trial. The disadvantage of the trial judge not being able to see the witness can be met by use of audio-visual equipment: R. v. Nunus (1985), 19 C.C.C. (3d) 522 (Ont. H.C.J.).

PROVIDING FOR PRESENCE OF ACCUSED COUNSEL / Return of evidence.

713. (1) A judge or provincial court judge who appoints a commissioner may make provision in the order to enable an accused to be present or represented by counsel when the evidence is taken, but failure of the accused to be present or to be represented by counsel in accordance with the order does not prevent the reading of the evidence in the proceedings if the evidence has otherwise been taken in accordance with the order and with this Part.

(2) An order for the taking of evidence by commission shall indicate the officer of the court to whom the evidence that is taken under the order shall be returned. R.S., c. C-34, s. 641.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The appointment of a commissioner to take the evidence of a person unable or unlikely to attend at trial is governed by ss. 709, 710, 712 and 713.1.

Section 714 establishes that, except where the provisions of Part XXII provide otherwise, the practice and procedure relating to the appointment of commissioners under this Part shall be that which governs like matters in civil proceedings in the superior court of the province in which the proceedings are taken.

SYNOPSIS

An order for the appointment of a commissioner may make provision to enable the accused or defence counsel to be present when the evidence is taken (e.g., ordering the Crown to pay reasonable expenses). However, the fact that the accused is not present or represented when the evidence is taken will not, in and of itself, prevent the evidence being used (subsec. (1)).

The order shall specify the officer of the court to whom the transcript is to be returned (subsec. (2)).

ANNOTATIONS

An order made under this section may properly include provision that the Crown as applicant pay reasonable expenses of the accused's counsel including a counsel fee for the time spent travelling to and from the foreign jurisdiction: R. v. Nicholson and Murphy (1981), 62 C.C.C. (2d) 477 (B.C.S.C.).

This section does not authorize the judge appointing a commission to refuse, without justifiable excuse, permission to the accused to attend the commission. Rather, this section contemplates a situation in which the accused either voluntarily absents himself from the taking of the commission evidence or is unable to attend for reasons beyond the control of the court: R. v. Branco (1988), 41 C.C.C. (3d) 248, 62 C.R. (3d) 371 (Ont. C.A.).

It is not a valid objection to the making of an order for commission evidence that the accused is unwilling to attend on the commission because he might be arrested in the jurisdiction and the Crown is not bound to attempt to obtain assurances from the foreign government that the accused would not be arrested: R. v. Buchanan (1991), 65 C.C.C. (3d) 336 (Alta. Q.B.). And the admission of evidence obtained in such circumstances did not violate the accused's rights under ss. 7 and 11(d) of the Charter: R. v. Buchanan (1992), 76 C.C.C. (3d) 236, 133 A.R. 321 (Q.B.).

Even though evidence has been taken in accordance with an order made under s. 709 it is still for the trial judge to determine its admissibility. Thus, where the accused was improperly barred from attending on the taking of the commission evidence, his absence at the commission amounted to absence at trial once the evidence was tendered at the trial, and the evidence should not have been admitted: R. v. Branco (1988), 41 C.C.C. (3d) 248, 62 C.R. (3d) 371 (Ont. C.A.).

EVIDENCE NOT EXCLUDED.

713.1. Evidence taken by a commissioner appointed under section 712 shall not be excluded by reason only that it would have been taken differently in Canada, provided that the process used to take the evidence is consistent with the law of the country where it was taken and that the process used to take the evidence was not contrary to the principles of fundamental justice. 1994, c. 44, s. 77.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The application for a commission to take the evidence of a witness out of Canada is made under ss. 709(b) and 712. The evidence is admitted pursuant to s. 712(2) and this section. Presence of the accused and representation by counsel at the commission are governed by s. 713. Rules and practice at the commission are governed by the civil rules pursuant to s. 714.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides that evidence is admissible although the process was different than would be the procedure in Canada, provided that the procedure used conformed with the law of the country where it was taken and was not contrary to the principles of fundamental justice.

RULES AND PRACTICE SAME AS IN CIVIL CASES.

714. Except where otherwise provided by this Part or by rules of court, the practice and procedure in connection with the appointment of commissioners under this Part, the taking of evidence by commissioners, the certifying and return thereof and the use of the evidence in the proceedings shall, as far as possible, be the same as those that govern like matters in civil proceedings in the superior court of the province in which the proceedings are taken. R.S., c. C-34, s. 642.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The appointment of a commissioner to take the evidence of a person unable or unlikely to attend at trial is governed by ss. 709, 710 and 712.

Section 713 makes provision for an accused or his counsel to be present at the giving of commission evidence. The reading in of commission evidence is governed by ss. 711 and 712(2).

SYNOPSIS

This section states that procedures with respect to commissioners under this Part shall be the same as those in the superior civil court of the jurisdiction, unless otherwise provided for in this Part or the rules of court.

ANNOTATIONS

Subject to objections as to admissibility of its contents evidence taken ex juris on commission for a preliminary inquiry may also be read in at trial: R. v. Crux (1972), 6 C.C.C. (2d) 330 (B.C.S.C.).

To obtain the evidence of an unwilling witness in a foreign jurisdiction the party seeking the examination requires the assistance of the appropriate Court in the foreign jurisdiction to compel the witness to attend, answer questions and apply sanctions if the witness does not comply. Further, an order from the Court of the foreign jurisdiction appointing the commission with full authority to do everything necessary to accomplish the purpose of the order including prescribing the practice and procedure, gives the commissioner power to rule on objections to relevancy. However, ultimate admissibility of the evidence will be determined by the trial Judge in Canada: R. v. Robertson (1982), 66 C.C.C. (2d) 210, 31 C.R. (3d) 383 (B.C.C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused C.R. loc. cit., 43 N.R. 619n.

Evidence Previously Taken

EVIDENCE AT PRELIMINARY INQUIRY MAY BE READ AT TRIAL IN CERTAIN CASES / Idem / Absconding accused deemed present.

715. (1) Where, at the trial of an accused, a person whose evidence was given at a previous trial on the same charge, or whose evidence was taken in the investigation of the charge against the accused or on the preliminary inquiry into the charge, refuses to be sworn or to give evidence, or if facts are proved on oath from which it can be inferred reasonably that the person

- (a) is dead,
- (b) has since become and is insane,
- (c) is so ill that he is unable to travel or testify, or
- (d) is absent from Canada, and where it is proved that the evidence was taken in the presence of the accused, it may be read as evidence in the proceedings without further proof, unless the accused proves that the accused did not have full opportunity to cross-examine the witness.

(2) Evidence that has been taken on the preliminary inquiry or other investigation of a charge against an accused may be read as evidence in the prosecution of the accused for any other offence on the same proof and in the same manner in all respects, as it might, according to law, be read in the prosecution of the offence with which the accused was charged when the evidence was taken.

(3) For the purposes of this section, where evidence was taken at a previous trial or preliminary hearing or other proceeding of an accused in the absence of the accused, who was absent by reason of having absconded, the accused is deemed to have been present during the taking of the evidence and to have had full opportunity to cross-examine the witness. R.S., c. C-34, s. 643; 1974-75-76, c. 93, s. 76; 1994, c. 44, s. 77.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The term “justice” is defined in s. 2.

The order and receipt of evidence taken on commission is provided for in ss. 709 to 714.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides for the admissibility at trial of the transcript of the evidence given at a preliminary inquiry, or previous trial, where the witness refuses to be sworn; is dead; insane; unable due to illness to attend, or absent from Canada.

To use a transcript one of the above conditions must be established together with the fact that the evidence was taken in the presence of the accused. The onus is on the accused to prove that he or she was denied a full opportunity to cross-examine (subsec. (1)). (Note: Even if the statutory preconditions have been met, the Supreme Court of Canada has held that a trial judge has a discretion not to admit the evidence.)

Subsection (2) provides that transcript evidence is admissible at the trial of a charge other than the one which was the subject of the earlier proceedings.

An accused who absconded during an earlier trial is deemed to have had a full opportunity to cross-examine the witness (subsec. (3)). (Note: Section 544(1)(a) provides that an accused who absconds at a preliminary inquiry is deemed to have waived his or her right to be present.)

ANNOTATIONS

Application of provision – It was held in R. v. Canning, [1966] 4 C.C.C. 379, 49 C.R. 13 (B.C.C.A.), that there is nothing in this section which provides that the transcript of an earlier hearing may be “read as evidence in the proceedings” in all the circumstances. Thus, on an application for preventive detention before a different Court from the one that heard the substantive charge, evidence must be repeated.

Compliance with this section does not require proof that the witness’ absence or refusal to testify is unavoidable and justified. Further, the right to full opportunity to cross-examine the witness refers to the procedure at the preliminary hearing and does not include a right to cross-examination of events which have occurred since the preliminary hearing: R. v. Cole (1980), 53 C.C.C. (2d) 269 (Ont. C.A.); R. v. Rogers and Thurber, infra.

Illness in this section includes mental illness and is not confined to physical illness: R. v. Novalinga (1985), 19 C.C.C. (3d) 190 (Ont. H.C.J.).

This section is applicable although the witness is only temporarily absent from Canada: R. v. Rogers and Thurber (1987), 35 C.C.C. (3d) 50, 55 Sask. R. 198 (C.A.).

The trial judge having found that the accused and his spouse had entered into a marriage of convenience so that she could avoid having to testify against the accused at his trial, the spouse's preliminary inquiry evidence was admissible under this section. The witness, having deliberately put herself beyond the reach of the court, has refused to testify for the purposes of this section: R. v. Hawkins (1995), 96 C.C.C. (3d) 503, 37 C.R. (4th) 229, 22 O.R. (3d) 193 (C.A.).

Principles to be applied generally – In R. v. Waucash (1966), 1 C.R.N.S. 262 (Ont.H.C.J.), Grant, J., at trial, decided (affirmed without written reasons by the Ontario Court of Appeal, April 25, 1967), that where the accused had been committed to custody at the pleasure of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council ten years previously just after his preliminary inquiry at which he had been represented by experienced counsel, the evidence which was taken of three witnesses, since deceased, could not be now admitted, as at that time the accused, because of his mental condition, was at a disadvantage in advising his counsel and was unable to avail himself of his full opportunity to cross-examine those witnesses.

This section does not infringe an accused's rights to fundamental justice and a fair trial under ss. 7 and 11(d) of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms, although the accused would have a constitutional right to have the prior evidence excluded if he did not have a full opportunity to cross-examine as where he was deprived of the right to counsel or where improper restrictions were placed by the court on the cross-examination by counsel. However, properly interpreted, it gives the trial judge a discretion to depart from the purely mechanical application of this section and to exclude evidence where the testimony was obtained in a manner which was unfair to the accused or where its admission at the trial would not be fair to the accused. The discretion should be exercised only after weighing the competing interests of fair treatment of the accused and society's interest in the admission of probative evidence. The importance of the evidence is not the determinative factor in deciding whether to exercise the discretion and in fact the purpose of this provision was to ensure that evidence, even important and highly probative evidence, is not lost because of the unavailability of a witness at trial. Where the trial judge does admit the evidence then it is highly desirable that he remind the jury that they have not had the benefit of observing the witness giving the testimony. This is particularly the case where the unavailability arises from the witness's deliberate refusal to testify before the jury: Potvin v. The Queen (1989), 47 C.C.C. (3d) 289, 68 C.R. (3d) 193 (S.C.C.) (5:0).

Where the cross-examination of an important Crown witness at the preliminary inquiry by counsel for the co-accused seriously weakened admissions obtained by counsel for the accused, the trial judge should consider whether fairness required that the transcript of the cross-examination by the co-accused's counsel be deleted now that the co-accused having pleaded guilty was no longer on trial: R. v. Ingraham (1991), 66 C.C.C. (3d) 27, 46 O.A.C. 216 (C.A.).

In considering the exercise of the discretion under this section, the trial judge should have considered that the complainant's absence from the jurisdiction was unexplained with no suggestion that it was through threats or duress from the accused: R. v. Harris (1991), 66 C.C.C. (3d) 536 (Ont. C.A.).

In R. v. Oickle (1984), 11 C.C.C. (3d) 180, 61 N.S.R. (2d) 239 (S.C. App. Div.) the court held that the judge erred in permitting the Crown to adduce a witness' preliminary hearing testimony. The testimony initially given was ambiguous and of no probative value but the Crown had then been permitted to cross-examine the witness at the preliminary inquiry on a prior statement pursuant to s. 9(2) of the Canada Evidence Act. This statement, while prejudicial to the accused, was never adopted by the witness. This section does not make evidence admissible that would otherwise be inadmissible.

The evidence given by an expert at the first trial of the accused was properly read in under this section on the retrial. In exercising the discretion under this section, in the circumstances of this case, the issue was whether there was a need for further cross-examination of the expert in light of the publication by him of a second treatise after the first trial. Any question as to the expert's honesty or the weight to be given his opinion was effectively dealt with in other ways and, accordingly, the evidence was admissible. R. v. Zundel (1990), 53 C.C.C. (3d) 161 (Ont. C.A.).

Procedure – Notwithstanding a witness' preliminary hearing testimony has been read in pursuant to this section because of his refusal to testify, where the witness then changes his mind and agrees to testify, it is open to the trial Judge to permit defence counsel to cross-examine the witness: R. v. Valence (1982), 5 C.C.C. (3d) 552 (Que. C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. granted C.C.C. loc. cit., 46 N.R. 628n.

There were no grounds for interfering with the trial Judge's discretion permitting the Crown to reopen its case and prove that the accused was the person referred to in the testimony given at the preliminary hearing which was read in at the accused's trial pursuant to this section: Robillard v. The Queen (1978), 41 C.C.C. (2d) 1, 85 D.L.R. (3d) 449, [1978] 2 S.C.R. 728 (9:0).

Evidence of statements by the missing witness as to his intention to leave the jurisdiction, even if hearsay, are admissible to prove the absence of the witness from Canada, if such evidence is surrounded by circumstantial guarantees of trustworthiness: R. v. Kaddoura (1987), 60 C.R. (3d) 393 (Alta. C.A.).

Where a witness who was called at the preliminary hearing is not called at trial and his evidence is not read in under this section and his evidence is not admissible under some exception to the hearsay rule then it is improper to place before the jury the witness' preliminary hearing testimony by referring to such evidence and asking the accused on cross-examination if he remembers the witness giving that evidence: R. v. McNamara et al. (No. 1) (1981), 56 C.C.C. (2d) 193 (Ont. C.A.) at pp. 381-4.

Videotaped Evidence

EVIDENCE OF COMPLAINANT.

715.1 In any proceeding relating to an offence under section 151, 152, 153, 155 or 159, subsection 160(2) or (3), or section 170, 171, 172, 173, 271, 272 or 273, in which the complainant was under the age of eighteen years at the time the offence is alleged to have been committed, a videotape made within a reasonable time after the alleged offence, in which the complainant describes the acts complained of, is admissible in evidence if the complainant, while testifying, adopts the contents of the videotape. R.S.C. 1985, c. 19, (3rd Supp.), s. 16.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See s. 486(2.1) to (4) for the reception of evidence of complainants under 18 years of age in cases of sexual assault, interference and exploitation.

See s. 16 of the Canada Evidence Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. C-5, for the manner in which evidence of a witness under 14 years of age or of diminished mental capacity may be received.

Where an accused is charged with an offence listed in s. 715.1, his spouse is a competent and compellable prosecution witness, without the accused's consent, under s. 4(2) of the Canada Evidence Act.

Also see notes under s. 150.1.

SYNOPSIS

This section allows for the admission of videotaped testimony in proceedings relating to certain listed offences. These offences include the various types of child molestation and sexual assault. This section only applies where the complainant was under 18 years of age at the time of the alleged offence. The videotaped testimony must describe the acts complained of, must be adopted in the testimony of the complainant at trial and must have been taped within a reasonable time after the alleged offence.

ANNOTATIONS

It is open to the trial judge to exclude the evidence where its prejudicial effect outweighs its probative value. The videotape is not an exhibit which goes to the juryroom during the jury's deliberations: R. v. Kilabuk (1990), 60 C.C.C. (3d) 413 (N.W.T.S.C.).

The witness adopts the contents of the videotape, within the meaning of this section, where she testifies that she believes the contents to be true, because she recalls giving the statement and attempting then to be honest and truthful, whether or not she actually recalls the events discussed at the time of testifying. In effect, this section removes one of the prerequisites for the past recollection recorded exception to the hearsay rule that the witness had no present recollection. A videotape is made within a reasonable time after the offence if it is made when the events were sufficiently fresh and vivid to be probably accurate. The term "acts complained of" include a description of the assailant. A child who is permitted to give unsworn evidence is still "testifying" and thus capable of adopting the contents of the videotape. Where the conditions for application of this section are met then the videotape is admissible for its truth. Admissibility should not, however, be confused with weight and, in considering the weight to be attached to the tape, the trier of fact must consider whether the witness, when making the tape, had a motive to falsify, and whether the method of questioning used was suggestive and persistent. Where a witness cannot recall and affirm what is on the tape then the trial judge should probably give the jury a special warning about relying on the evidence: R. v. Meddoui (1990), 61 C.C.C. (3d) 345, [1991] 2 W.W.R. 289, 2 C.R. (4th) 316 (Alta. C.A.).

The statement admitted under this section is admissible to prove the truth of its contents. The determination of whether the complainant adopts all or any part of the statement must be made by the trier of fact. The trial judge must, however, as a condition of admissibility, satisfy herself that there is an evidentiary basis on which the trier of fact could conclude that the complainant adopted the statement. In order for the complainant to have adopted the statement she must acknowledge making the statement and be able, based on present memory of the events referred to in the statement, to verify the accuracy of the contents of this statement. It is not sufficient that the witness is able to vouch for the accuracy of the statement based solely on the circumstances surrounding the making of it. In some cases it may be that the complainant will have no memory of certain events referred to in the statement. If those parts of the statement are prejudicial to the accused, the trial judge will have to determine whether the tape can be edited. If editing is not possible, the trial judge will have to consider whether she should exercise her discretion and exclude the videotaped statement. Even where the videotaped statement is adopted by the complainant, it is admissible only to the extent that it describes the act complained of. References to other acts not encompassed by the indictment or to conversations which do not form part of the acts complained of are not admissible. The judge has the power to edit statements to avoid prejudice and irrelevancies where the editing process can be effected without distorting the nature of the evidence adduced. The judge would also have the discretion to exclude a videotape statement which complies with the requirements of this section where the trial judge determines that the prejudicial effect of the evidence outweighs its probative value. However, except in the most extreme cases, the statement should be admitted: R. v. Toten (1993), 83 C.C.C. (3d) 5, 14 O.R. (3d) 225, 16 C.R.R. (2d) 49 (C.A.).

(S.C.C.) the court held that the trial judge did not err in admitting a videotaped interview under this section, notwithstanding the delay of five months from the time disclosure was first made by the nine-year-old complainant. In her concurring opinion, L'Heureux-Dubé held that what is a reasonable time depends entirely on the circumstances of the case and that in making the determination the judge may take into consideration the fact that children often delay disclosure. As well, it may be necessary to conduct a prior investigation to ensure the seriousness of the allegations. On the other hand, such determination must also take into account empirical data which makes clear that recollection decreases in accuracy with time and that children's memories fade faster than those of adults. There is thus a clear advantage to gathering evidence from a child as early as possible.

In considering whether or not a videotape statement was made within a reasonable time after the alleged offence, the court should consider the totality of circumstances. One consideration in particular is the fact that children, for a number of reasons, are often likely to delay disclosure, as where the child has been severely traumatized by the assault: R. v. Scott (1993), 87 C.C.C. (3d) 327, 27 C.R. (4th) 55, 67 O.A.C. 213 (C.A.).

Even though there was a very lengthy delay [perhaps 17 months] between the date of the offence and the time of the taping, it was open to the judge to find that the delay was reasonable and that the videotape was admissible. The delay arose because of the natural reluctance of the complainant and perhaps the mother to make a report to the authorities: R. v. M. (S.) (1995), 98 C.C.C. (3d) 526, 89 W.A.C. 307, 165 A.R. 307 (C.A.).

The phrase "the acts complained of" in this section does not include additional assaults which may be introduced as similar fact evidence but are not charged in the indictment: R. v. A. (J.F.) (1993), 82 C.C.C. (3d) 295, 64 O.A.C. 359 (C.A.).

It does, however, include a description given by the complainant of her assailant and statements made by the attacker during the offence: R. v. Scott (1993), 87 C.C.C. (3d) 327, 27 C.R. (4th) 55, 67 O.A.C. 213 (C.A.).

Constitutional considerations – This section violates neither s. 7 nor s. 11 of the Charter. Incorporation of a judicial discretion to edit or refuse to admit videotaped evidence where its prejudicial effect outweighs its probative value ensures that the section is consistent with fundamental principles of justice and the right to a fair trial: R. v. L.(D.O.), supra.

Part XXIII / PUNISHMENTS, FINES, FORFEITURES, COSTS AND RESTITUTION OF PROPERTY

Punishment Generally

NOTE: Part XXIII replaced by 1995, c. 22, s. 6 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). See text following s. 751.

DEFINITIONS—"accused"—"court".

716. In this Part,

"accused" includes a defendant;

"court" means

- (a) a superior court of criminal jurisdiction,
- (b) a court of criminal jurisdiction,
- (c) a justice or provincial court judge acting as a summary conviction court under Part XXVII, or
- (d) a court that hears an appeal. R.S., c. C-34, s. 644; 1974-75-76, c. 93, s. 77; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 154.

SYNOPSIS

This section contains the definitions of "accused" and "court" for the purposes of this Part.

717. (1) Where an enactment prescribes different degrees or kinds of punishment in respect of an offence, the punishment to be imposed is, subject to the limitations prescribed in the enactment, in the discretion of the court that convicts a person who commits the offence.

(2) Where an enactment prescribes a punishment in respect of an offence, the punishment to be imposed is, subject to the limitations prescribed in the enactment, in the discretion of the court that convicts a person who commits the offence, but no punishment is a minimum punishment unless it is declared to be a minimum punishment.

(3) Where an accused is convicted of an offence punishable with both fine and imprisonment and a term of imprisonment in default of payment of the fine is not specified in the enactment that prescribed the punishment to be imposed, the imprisonment that may be imposed in default of payment shall not exceed the term of imprisonment that is prescribed in respect of the offence.

(4) Where an accused

- (a) is convicted while under sentence for an offence, and a term of imprisonment, whether in default of payment of a fine or otherwise, is imposed,
- (b) is convicted of an offence punishable with both fine and imprisonment, and both are imposed with a direction that, in default of payment of the fine, the accused shall be imprisoned for a term certain, or
- (c) is convicted of more offences than one before the same court at the same sittings, and
  - (i) more than one fine is imposed with a direction in respect of each of them that, in default of payment thereof, the accused shall be imprisoned for a term certain,
  - (ii) terms of imprisonment for the respective offences are imposed, or
  - (iii) a term of imprisonment is imposed in respect of one offence and a fine is imposed in respect of another offence with a direction that, in default of payment, the accused shall be imprisoned for a term certain, the court that convicts the accused may direct that the terms of imprisonment shall be served one after the other. R.S., c. C-34, s. 645.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Disposition and enforcement of fines are governed by ss. 718 to 720. For method of payment and to whom fines are payable, see ss. 723 and 724. The place and manner for serving a sentence of imprisonment are governed by ss. 730 to 734. The terms "punishment" and "sentence" have no general definition in the Criminal Code.

See s. 673 for definition of "sentence" for the purposes of Part XXI and s. 785 for the purposes of Part XXVII.

SYNOPSIS

This section deals with certain of the discretionary aspects of sentencing.

Where different degrees or kinds of punishment are provided, the judge, subject to any specific statutory limitations, has a discretion as to the penalty to be imposed (e.g., a fine and/or imprisonment) (subsec. (1)). There are no “minimum” sentences unless the legislation so provides (subsec. (2)).

Where an offence is punishable by both a fine and imprisonment, the maximum term in default of payment of a fine, unless otherwise provided, shall not exceed the maximum term that is prescribed for that offence (subsec. (3)).

“Consecutive” jail sentences may be imposed where an accused: (a) is already under sentence of imprisonment; (b) is sentenced to a period of incarceration and to pay a fine with a term in default of payment; or (c) is convicted of more than one offence before the same court and several periods of incarceration are imposed, whether in default of payment of a fine or otherwise (subsec. (4)).

ANNOTATIONS

General – There is no pre-set ceiling of 20 or 25 years on fixed-term sentences under the Criminal Code whether or not life imprisonment is available. In a number of potential situations, a trial judge will be in a position to impose a total fixed-term sentence beyond 14 years, but life imprisonment will either be unavailable or inappropriate in the circumstances. In selecting a “just and appropriate” fixed-term sentence, the trial judge must have regard to the fundamental principle that the global sentence imposed reflect the overall culpability of the offender and the circumstances of the offence: R. v. M.(C.A.) (unreported, March 21, 1996, S.C.C.) [096/085/064-82 pp.].

Delay in imposition of sentence [subsec. (1)] – A lengthy delay to consider matters not in existence at the time of the offence is improper and unfair to the accused: R. v. Urton, [1974] 5 W.W.R. 476 (Sask. C.A.).

In R. v. Nunner (1976), 30 C.C.C. (2d) 199 (Ont. C.A.) (2:1) it was held that postponement of sentence for more than one or two months must be regarded as prima facie evidence of the exercise of the judicial discretion to delay sentence for an illegal purpose. However, in this case the Court refused to interfere with a trial Judge’s discretion, delaying for five months the imposition of sentence on a charge of robbery in the case of a 16 year old, to see how the accused responded to probation imposed for other less serious offences. Having regard to the youth of the accused and the objectives sought to be achieved by the trial Judge, it could not be said that the postponement of five months was an illegal exercise of his discretion.

A seven-month delay in sentencing so that the accused, a mature offender with a lengthy criminal record, might overcome his drug problem and “prove himself” was not a proper exercise of the trial Judge’s discretion: R. v. Shea (1980), 55 C.C.C. (2d) 475, 42 N.S.R. (2d) 218 (S.C. App. Div.). Similarly: R. v. Brisson (1989), 47 C.C.C. (3d) 474, 19 Q.A.C. 231 (C.A.).

While the trial judge must take into consideration the accused’s rehabilitation, the judicial function requires that the judge, after a reasonable period for consideration, form an opinion as to the proper sentence. Certain circumstances may require that sentencing be delayed in order to permit a better evaluation of the accused’s circumstances, but such delay must remain within acceptable limits and it is not proper to postpone the decision for a lengthy period of time to follow the course of therapy: R. v. Cardin (1990), 58 C.C.C. (3d) 221 (Que. C.A.).

Procedure on sentence hearing – Where following a plea of guilty there is conflicting evidence with respect to factors going to the gravity of the offence, the onus is on the Crown to prove the aggravating facts beyond a reasonable doubt: R. v. Gardiner (1982), 68 C.C.C. (2d) 477, 30 C.R. (3d) 289, 140 D.L.R. (3d) 612, [1982] 2 S.C.R. 368.

However, the Court is not to assume all mitigating factors in favour of the accused merely because of an absence of proof beyond a reasonable doubt of the contrary: R. v. Holt (1983), 4 C.C.C. (3d) 32 (Ont. C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused C.C.C. loc. cit., 47 N.R. 240n.

In R. v. Boulet (1990), 58 C.C.C. (3d) 178, 78 C.R. (3d) 309, 85 Sask. R. 93 (C.A.), the majority of the court held that it did not need to consider the principles to be applied respecting the conduct of a sentence hearing where there are disputed facts as to the circumstances of the commission of the offence, since, even on the version of the facts most favourable to the accused, the sentence originally imposed was inadequate and thus the Crown appeal must be allowed. Bayda C.J.S., however, in his dissenting opinion, gave extensive consideration to the issue and held that the judge does not have the power to accept the prosecution's version of material disputed facts unless he first holds a formal sentence hearing at which evidence is called. Where the accused's version of the facts is so manifestly false as to be incapable of belief or is not within the bounds of reasonable possibility, the judge is entitled to reject that version, in which case, the prosecution's version is deemed not to be in dispute. Where the accused's version, however, is not manifestly false and is reasonable, the judge may accept the accused's version at an informal hearing and without the necessity of a formal hearing. The onus is primarily on the Crown to request the formal hearing, where it disputes the accused's version of events, although the trial judge may on his own motion hold a formal sentence hearing.

In R. v. Poorman (1991), 66 C.C.C. (3d) 82 (Sask. C.A.) the court returned to this issue and held that where there is a conflict between the Crown and the accused's version of facts, which are not crucial for the determination of guilt or innocence, then, in an informal sentence hearing, the trial judge is required so far as possible to accept the version of the accused. If the judge is of the view that the matter cannot be resolved in that way, then he must hear sworn evidence.

Interpreting jury's verdict – The sentencer is bound by the express and implied factual implications of the jury's verdict but, semble, where the factual implication is ambiguous, the sentencer should not attempt to follow the logical processes of the jury, but may come to an independent determination of the relevant facts. Thus, where the accused charged with dangerous driving causing death was convicted only of dangerous driving, simpliciter, the consequence of death cannot be taken into account in imposing sentence: R. v. Brown (1991), 66 C.C.C. (3d) 1, 125 N.R. 363 (S.C.C.).

Consecutive sentences / Procedure [subsec. (4)] – In Re Dean and The Queen (1977), 35 C.C.C. (2d) 217 (Ont. C.A.) the accused had been sentenced to a number of consecutive sentences. He was then given a sentence to run "consecutive with sentence now serving" and argued that this latter sentence, while consecutive to the first of the sentences earlier imposed, was concurrent to the other consecutive sentences because he was not then serving those sentences. It was held, dismissing his application for habeas corpus, that by virtue of s. 14(1) of the Parole Act, R.S.C. 1970, c. P-2 as amended by R.S.C. 1970, c. 31 (1st Supp.), where a person is sentenced to two or more terms of imprisonment such terms "shall, for all purposes of this Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be deemed to constitute one sentence". Once the accused was in the custody of the penitentiary services it was those three statutes which governed the time to be served and in the result, at the time he was given the last sentence he was then serving one sentence to which the final sentence was consecutive, and not a series of consecutive sentences. Section 14 abrogates the effect of the earlier decision in Ex p. McCaud, [1970] 1 C.C.C. 293, 7 C.R.N.S. 222 (Ont. H.C.J.).

A fixed sentence cannot be made consecutive to a sentence of life imprisonment: R. v. Sinclair (1972), 6 C.C.C. (2d) 523 (Ont. C.A.); R. v. Cooney (1981), 62 C.C.C. (2d) 95 (Que. C.A.); R. v. Camphaug (1986), 28 C.C.C. (3d) 125 (B.C.C.A.). Nor to a sentence of preventive detention in a penitentiary for an indeterminate period: R. v. Robillard (1985), 22 C.C.C. (3d) 505 (Que. C.A.).

The power to impose a consecutive sentence must be found in some federal enactment, such as this section. Paragraph (4)(c) should be interpreted as permitting a Judge to order that a sentence be served consecutively to another sentence he has previously or is at the same time imposing (although such interpretation gives little or no meaning to the words “at the same sittings”), but in view of para. (4)(a) he cannot order that a sentence be made consecutive to that imposed by another Judge in another case unless that sentence has already been imposed by the other Judge at the time of the conviction in the case in which he is sentencing: Paul v. The Queen (1982), 67 C.C.C. (2d) 97, 27 C.R. (3d) 193, 138 D.L.R. (3d) 455, [1982] 1 S.C.R. 621 (5:0).

Consecutive sentences / Principles – In R. v. Chisholm, [1965] 4 C.C.C. 289, [1965] 2 O.R. 612 (C.A.), it was held that where there was no relationship between the separate commissions of criminal offences the Court should, bearing in mind the total term, impose consecutive sentences.

A second crime committed while in flight from a first crime should be punished with a consecutive punishment: R. v. McCaw, Warnholtz, Frame and Morrison (1974), 15 C.C.C. (2d) 321 (Ont. C.A.).

In considering the appropriate sentence, where the accused has been convicted of more than one offence arising out of the same general circumstances, the proper approach is to first identify the gravamen of the conduct giving rise to all of the criminal offences. The trial judge should next determine the total sentence to be imposed. Having determined the appropriate total sentence, the judge should, with respect to each offence, impose sentences which result in that total sentence and appropriately reflect the gravamen of the overall criminal conduct, considering not only the appropriate sentence for each offence but whether, in light of totality concerns, a particular sentence should be consecutive or concurrent to the other sentences imposed: R. v. Jewell (1995), 100 C.C.C. (3d) 274, 83 O.A.C. 81 (C.A.).

A sentencing judge may take into account offences committed after an accused has been convicted but prior to sentencing in order to assess the character of the accused and the degree to which he may be on the road to rehabilitation but such offences do not carry the same weight as a prior criminal record where the accused having been convicted and punished commits new criminal offences. Further, if a consecutive sentence could not be imposed directly because of this subsection, it could not be imposed indirectly in the guise of an improper concurrent sentence: R. v. Paquin (1989), 70 C.R. (3d) 39 (Que. C.A.).

FINE IN LIEU OF OTHER PUNISHMENT / Fine in addition to other punishment / Imprisonment in default of payment / Time for payment / What to be considered / Idem / Warrant of committal / Reasons for committal / Surrender by accused / Young offenders / Extension of time / Definition of “fine”.

718. (1) An accused who is convicted of an indictable offence punishable with imprisonment for five years or less may be fined in addition to or in lieu of any other punishment that is authorized, but an accused shall not be fined in lieu of imprisonment where the offence of which he is convicted is punishable by a minimum term of imprisonment.

(2) An accused who is convicted of an indictable offence punishable with imprisonment for more than five years may be fined in addition to, but not in lieu of, any other punishment that is authorized.

(3) Where a fine is imposed under this section, a term of imprisonment may be imposed in default of payment of the fine, but no such term shall exceed

- (a) two years, where the term of imprisonment that may be imposed for the offence is less than five years, or
- (b) five years, where the term of imprisonment that may be imposed for the offence is five years or more.

(4) Subject to this section, where an accused is convicted of an offence and is fined, the court that convicts the accused may direct that the fine

- (a) be paid forthwith; or

(b) be paid at such time and on such terms as the court may fix.

(5) Where a court imposes a fine, the court shall not, at the time the sentence is imposed, direct that the fine be paid forthwith, unless

- (a) the court is satisfied that the convicted person is possessed of sufficient means to enable him to pay the fine forthwith;
- (b) on being asked by the court whether he desires time for payment, or for discharging the fine in accordance with section 718.1, where a program has been established for that purpose, the convicted person does not request such time, or
- (c) for any other special reason, the court deems it expedient that no time should be allowed.

(6) The court, in considering whether time should be allowed for payment of a fine and, if so, for what period, shall consider any representation made by the accused but any time allowed shall be not less than fourteen clear days from the date sentence is imposed.

(7) Where time has been allowed for payment of a fine, the court shall not issue a warrant of committal in default of payment of the fine until the expiration of the time allowed for payment.

(8) Where no time has been allowed for payment of a fine and a warrant committing the accused to prison for default of payment of the fine is issued, the court shall state in the warrant the reason for immediate committal.

(9) Notwithstanding subsection (7), where, before the expiration of the time allowed for payment, the accused appears before a court and signifies in writing that he prefers to be committed immediately rather than to await the expiration of the time allowed, the court may forthwith issue a warrant committing the accused to prison.

(10) Where a person who has been allowed time for payment of a fine appears to the court to be not less than sixteen nor more than twenty-one years of age, the court shall, before issuing a warrant committing the person to prison for default of payment of the fine, obtain and consider a report concerning the conduct and means to pay of the accused.

(11) Where time has been allowed for payment under subsection (4), the court that imposed the sentence may, on an application by or on behalf of the accused, allow further time for payment, subject to any rules made by the court under section 482.

(12) In this section "fine" includes a pecuniary penalty or other sum of money. R.S., c. C-34, s. 646; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 155.

CROSS-REFERENCES

An individual accused may discharge a fine completely or in part under a fine option program, under s. 718.1. Section 722 permits the reduction of a default term upon partial payment of fine. See ss. 723 and 724 for disposition and recovery of fines, respectively. Sections 719 and 720 govern the imposition and enforcement of fines levied against corporate accused. Payment of a fine may be suspended by the court of appeal, pending determination of the appeal, under s. 683(5). Pursuant to s. 822(1), summary conviction appeals under s. 813 are also subject to these provisions.

See s. 716 for definitions of "accused" and "court".

SYNOPSIS

This section governs the imposition of fines whether alone or together with other forms of punishment.

If an indictable offence is punishable by five years or less the accused may be sentenced to pay a fine in lieu of any other punishment. A fine may not be imposed in lieu of any other punishment where the offence carries a minimum term of imprisonment. (subsec. (1)). However, if the maximum sentence is greater than five years a fine can only be imposed together with some other form of punishment (subsec. (2)). In many instances the other punishment will be a nominal one day in jail.

A term of imprisonment for non-payment of a fine shall not exceed (a) two years where the maximum punishment is less than five years, and (b) five years in all other cases (subsec. (3)).

A fine may be directed to be paid forthwith or over time and upon conditions (subsec. (4)). The court shall not order a fine to be paid forthwith unless: (a) satisfied the accused can pay the fine immediately; (b) the accused does not, in response to an inquiry from the court, request either time to pay or the fine option programme (see s. 718.1); or (c) the court, for any other reason, deems it expedient that no time be allowed (subsec. (5)).

Time to pay shall not be less than 14 clear days (subsec. (6)). No warrant of committal for imprisonment in default of payment shall issue until such time has expired (subsec. (7)). However, the accused can appear before the court and ask to be committed before the time allowed has elapsed (subsec. (9)).

If no time is allowed and the accused is committed to serve a sentence in default of payment, the warrant shall state the reasons for immediate committal (subsec. (8)).

A warrant of committal shall not issue upon the expiration of time to pay with respect to an accused who is between 16 and 21 years of age inclusive, until the court has obtained and considered a report concerning the conduct and means to pay of the accused (subsec. (10)).

The court can extend the time for payment (subsec. (11)).

ANNOTATIONS

Subsec. (1) – There is no authority to impose concurrent fines upon conviction of two separate offences: R. v. Ward (1980), 56 C.C.C. (2d) 15 (Ont. C.A.).

Subsec. (2) – The phrase “any other punishment that is authorized”, includes a probation order made under s. 737(1)(b): R. v. Desmarais (1971), 3 C.C.C. (2d) 523 (Que. C.A.).

A probation order is a form of punishment under the Criminal Code and accordingly a fine with the addition of terms of probation is valid for an offence punishable by more than five years’ imprisonment: R. v. Johnson (1972), 6 C.C.C. (2d) 380, 17 C.R.N.S. 254 (B.C.C.A.); and semble R. v. Paquet and Vieno (1978), 43 C.C.C. (2d) 23 (Ont. C.A.).

It was held, considering the former s. 722(7) the equivalent of this subsection, that the absence of the endorsement on the warrant of the reason for immediate committal was more than a mere irregularity and invalidates the warrant: Ex p. Andrews (1973), 15 C.C.C. (2d) 43, [1974] 2 W.W.R. 481 (B.C.S.C.).

Subsec. (10) – It was held in R. v. Hebb (1989), 47 C.C.C. (3d) 193, 69 C.R. (3d) 1 (N.S.S.C.), that limiting the requirement for a report on ability to pay, to persons under 22 years of age, infringes s. 15 of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms and that the age-limiting phrase must therefore be removed. Thus, where there was no evidence that the judge before issuing a warrant for the arrest of the 35-year-old accused, considered her ability to pay, the warrant was quashed. Contra Williams v. Canada (Attorney-General) (1990), 61 C.C.C. (3d) 198 (B.C.S.C.).

Subsec. (11) – It was held in relation to the former s. 722(10) [which then applied to summary conviction proceedings] that even after the termination of an extension of time to pay a fine the sentencing court is not functus to grant another further extension of time. Furthermore, even though the trial judge’s warrant of committal had been executed and he had since died, his ministerial, not judicial, issuance of the warrant, which is nothing more than a written direction to carry out a sentence, may in effect be rescinded by another judge's order granting a further extension of time to pay the fine: R. v. Yamelst (1975), 22 C.C.C. (2d) 502, [1975] 3 W.W.R. 546 (B.C.S.C.).

FINE OPTION PROGRAM / Credits and other matters / Deemed payment / Federal-provincial agreement.

718.1 (1) An offender, other than a corporation, against whom a fine is imposed in respect of an offence may, whether or not the offender is serving a term of imprisonment imposed in default of payment of the fine, discharge the fine in whole or in part by earning credits for work performed during a period not greater than two years in a program established for that purpose by the Lieutenant Governor in Council

(a) of the province in which the fine was imposed; or

(b) of the province in which the offender resides, where an appropriate agreement is in effect between the government of that province and the government of the province in which the fine was imposed.

(2) A program referred to in subsection (1) shall determine the rate at which credits are earned and may provide for the manner of crediting any amounts earned against the fine and any other matters necessary for or incidental to carrying out the program.

(3) Credits earned for work performed as provided by subsection (1) shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be payment in respect of a fine.

(4) Where, by virtue of section 723, the proceeds of a fine belong to Her Majesty in right of Canada, an offender may discharge the fine in whole or in part in a fine option program of a province pursuant to subsection (1), where an appropriate agreement is in effect between the government of the province and the Government of Canada. R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 156.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See ss. 723 and 724 for destination of the proceeds of fines and recovery, respectively. The imposition and enforcement of fines levied against corporate accused are governed by ss. 719 and 720. A corporate accused may not avail itself of the fine option program.

SYNOPSIS

This section authorizes the Lieutenant Governor in Council to establish a programme whereby an individual who has been fined can earn credits to be applied in payment of the fine by performing designated work during a period of up to two years. Governments can enter into agreements to provide for the work being done in a province other than the one where the sentence was imposed or where the fine belongs to the Government of Canada (e.g., a narcotics offence).

FINES ON CORPORATIONS.

719. Notwithstanding section 718, a corporation that is convicted of an offence is liable, in lieu of any imprisonment that is prescribed as punishment for that offence, to be fined in an amount, except where otherwise provided by law,

(a) that is in the discretion of the court, where the offence is an indictable offence; or

(b) not exceeding twenty-five thousand dollars, where the offence is a summary conviction offence. R.S., c. C-34, s. 647; 1974-75-76, c. 93, s. 78; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 157.

CROSS-REFERENCES

A corporate accused is subject to a fine prescribed in the general punishment provisions of this section "except where otherwise provided by law".

See s. 35(1) of the Interpretation Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. I-21, for a definition of “corporation”. There is no Criminal Code definition of “corporation”.

ANNOTATIONS

The superior court has jurisdiction to issue a Mareva-type injunction in support of the criminal law to preserve the assets of the accused for the payment of a possible fine should it be convicted. This jurisdiction, however, is to be exercised only in exceptional circumstances and the Crown must demonstrate (i) that the accused has assets within the jurisdiction of the court; (ii) that there exists a strong prima facie case the accused will likely be convicted of the offence with which it is charged, and that the amount of the fine will likely equal or exceed the value of the assets sought to be attached; and (iii) that the accused is or has been dissipating, removing or disposing of its assets for the improper purpose of making them unavailable to pay a fine in the event of conviction. Finally, the Crown must give the usual undertaking respecting damages: R. v. Consolidated Fastfrate Transport Inc. (1995), 99 C.C.C. (3d) 143, 125 D.L.R. (4th) 1, 24 O.R. (3d) 564 (C.A.).

ENFORCEMENT OF FINES ON CORPORATIONS.

720. Where a fine that is imposed on a corporation is not paid forthwith, the prosecutor may, by filing the conviction, enter as a judgment the amount of the fine and costs, if any, in the superior court of the province in which the trial was held, and that judgment is enforceable against the corporation in the same manner as if it were a judgment rendered against the corporation in that court in civil proceedings. R.S., c. C-34, s. 648.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 724 prescribes the general recovery provisions relating to fines, pecuniary penalties and forfeitures.

See s. 723 for the destination of the proceeds of fines.

Payment of a fine may be suspended by the court of appeal under s. 683(5). Pursuant to s. 822(1), summary conviction appeals under s. 813 are also subject to these provisions.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides that where a corporation is convicted and fined, the fine may be enforced and collected in the same way as a civil judgment of the superior court of the province.

COMMENCEMENT OF SENTENCE / Convicted person lawfully at large / Determination of sentence / When time begins to run / Where fine imposed / Application for leave to appeal.

721. (1) A sentence commences when it is imposed, except where a relevant enactment otherwise provides.

(2) Any time during which a convicted person is lawfully at large on interim release granted pursuant to any provision of this Act does not count as part of any term of imprisonment imposed pursuant to his conviction.

(3) In determining the sentence to be imposed on a person convicted of an offence, a justice, provincial court judge or judge may take into account any time spent in custody by the person as a result of the offence. R.S.C. 1970, c. 2 (2nd Supp.), s. 13.

(4) Notwithstanding subsection (1), a term of imprisonment, whether imposed by a trial court or the court appealed to, commences or shall be deemed to be resumed, as the case requires, on the day on which the convicted person is arrested and taken into custody under the sentence.

(5) Notwithstanding subsection (1), where the sentence that is imposed is a fine with a term of imprisonment in default of payment; no time prior to the day of execution of the warrant of committal counts as part of the term of imprisonment.

(6) An application for leave to appeal is an appeal for the purposes of this section. R.S., c. C-34, s. 649; R.S., c. 2 (2nd Supp.), s. 13; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 203.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 687 authorizes the determination of sentence appeals by the court of appeal. Sentences imposed under s. 686(1)(b)(i) and (3) by the court of appeal, may run from the date of imposition or, alternatively, the date of the original sentence. The latter date will prevail in the event that the appeal court affirms the original sentence. Time spent by the accused in custody as a result of the offence may be considered by the appeal court in determining the imposition of a sentence, pursuant to subsec. (3). Under s. 746, certain periods of time spent in custody must be considered when sentences for treason, high treason or murder are imposed.

See ss. 731 to 733 for the location and manner of serving a sentence of imprisonment.

SYNOPSIS

Unless otherwise provided for by statute, a sentence commences when it is imposed (subsec. (1)). However, a term of imprisonment, whether imposed at trial or on appeal, commences or resumes (e.g., where the accused is on bail pending appeal) when the accused is taken into custody (subsec. (4)).

Time spent on bail does not count as part of any sentence (subsec. (2)). Except where a "minimum" sentence is required the court may take into consideration any time spent in custody awaiting trial and/or sentence (subsec. (3)).

No time prior to the day on which a warrant of committal for non-payment of a fine is executed shall count as part of the default term (subsec. (5)).

ANNOTATIONS

Commencement of sentence [subsec. (1)] – Once a conviction is set aside, the term of imprisonment imposed for that conviction is also set aside and a sentence originally made consecutive to that sentence begins to run from the date it was imposed: Re Zitek and The Queen (1986), 30 C.C.C. (3d) 60 (Ont. C.A.).

Subsec. (4) – A conviction for escaping lawful custody was imposed where the accused was present in Court when a sentence of incarceration was imposed but then left the Court after a recess when the officer in charge briefly left the room. He was in custody within the meaning of s. 145 as he was present when sentence was pronounced and submitted to arrest by asking permission of the officer to do various things, notwithstanding he was never placed in a prisoner's dock, handcuffed or otherwise physically placed under arrest. The Court, considering subsec. (4), held that there is a distinction between the arrest of a person before trial or the arrest of a person who is tried in absentia and therefore not present upon pronouncement of sentence, and this case of an accused who is present in Court, being in custody at the time of his sentence: R. v. Zajner (1977), 36 C.C.C. (2d) 417 (Ont. C.A.).

Premature release of prisoner – The mere fact that a mistake has been made in the administration of sentence cannot be taken to justify a premature release and protect the prisoner from re-arrest to serve the full sentence when the mistake is discovered: Re Law and The Queen (1981), 63 C.C.C. (2d) 412, 24 C.R. (3d) 332 (Ont. C.A.). In that case the error resulted because the appropriate authorities were never informed that the accused had abandoned his appeal from a conviction which had resulted in a penitentiary sentence when he was re-incarcerated in a reformatory for an offence committed while on bail pending appeal. The Court however appeared to recognize that special circumstances, such as perhaps existed in Re Stanton and The Queen (1979), 49 C.C.C. (2d) 177

(Ont. H.C.J.), could require the Court to order an accused's release following his re-arrest. In Re Stanton and The Queen the accused had been released due to an error in calculation by prison authorities. The accused, who believed he had been released on parole, had in no way contributed to the error and had lived openly in the community. The Court released the accused on habeas corpus holding that in the circumstances the time spent at large counted against the sentence.

Time spent by the accused on probation pending a Crown appeal against a suspended sentence does not count against the sentence of imprisonment imposed by the Court of Appeal: Re Roach and The Queen (1982), 2 C.C.C. (3d) 73 (B.C.S.C.), approved in Re Roach and The Queen (No. 2) (1983), 5 C.C.C. (3d) 90, 34 C.R. (3d) 249, [1983] 3 W.W.R. 711 (B.C.C.A.).

Nor does the time that the accused was at large following his release on habeas corpus count against the sentence when on appeal it is found that the Judge erred in releasing him and orders his re-arrest: Re Law and The Queen (No. 2) (1981), 64 C.C.C. (2d) 181, 24 C.R. (3d) 345 (Ont. H.C.J.) aff'd 65 C.C.C. (2d) 512n, 25 C.R. (3d) vii (Ont. C.A.).

Time spent at large due to non-execution of warrant – And in Re Lachance and The Queen (1985), 22 C.C.C. (3d) 119 (Que. S.C.), the court held that resort could be had to ss. 7, 12 and 24(1) of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms to relieve against the unfairness of requiring an inmate to serve the remainder of a sentence which would have expired much earlier but for the incompetence of the authorities in failing to execute an outstanding warrant of committal.

To a similar effect is R. v. Lawrence (1989), 47 C.C.C. (3d) 462, 74 Nfld. & P.E.I.R. 271 (Nfld. S.C.), where the court quashed a committal order, the accused having done everything in his power to surrender to prison upon dismissal of his appeal and it was only six months later that arrangements were finally made so that the prison authorities would accept the accused so he could serve the balance of a five-month sentence which would have been served but for the error of the penal system administrators.

Pre-trial custody [subsec. (3)] – Subsection (3) does not have the effect of permitting the court to impose less than the mandatory minimum prescribed by the Code: R. v. Brown (1976), 36 C.R.N.S. 246 (Ont. Co. Ct.); R. v. Mitchell (1990), 24 M.U.R. (2d) 174 (N.B.Q.B.); Contra, R. v. Shecter (1972), 15 Crim. L.Q. 263 (Ont. Co. Ct.).

While there is no automatic formula for taking into account pre-trial custody, the usual practice is to give credit against sentence which is somewhat more than the actual time in pre-trial custody: R. v. Tallman (1989), 48 C.C.C. (3d) 81, 68 C.R. (3d) 367, 65 Alta. L.R. (C.A.).

Imprisonment in default of payment of fine [subsec. (5)] – Although a warrant of committal in default of payment could have been executed earlier on the accused, an accused is validly held under such warrant even though had the warrant in fact been executed earlier the term of imprisonment could have been served concurrently to other sentences he was serving at the time: Goyette v. The Queen, [1982] 1 S.C.R. 688 (5:0).

REDUCTION OF IMPRISONMENT ON PART PAYMENT / Minimum that can be accepted / To whom payment made / Application of money paid / Definition of "penalty".

722. (1) Where a term of imprisonment is imposed in default of payment of a penalty, the term shall, on payment of a part of the penalty, whether the payment was made before or after the issue of a warrant of committal, be reduced by the number of days that bears the same proportion to the number of days in the term as the part paid bears to the total penalty.

(2) No amount offered in part payment of a penalty shall be accepted unless it is sufficient to secure reduction of sentence of one day, or a multiple thereof, and where a warrant of committal has been issued, no part payment shall be accepted until any fee that is payable in respect of the warrant or its execution has been paid.

(3) Payment may be made under this section to the person who has lawful custody of the prisoner or to such other person as the Attorney General directs.

(4) A payment under this section shall, unless the order imposing the penalty otherwise provides, be applied to the payment in full of costs and charges, and thereafter to payment in full of compensation or damages that are included in the penalty, and finally to payment in full of any part of the penalty that remains unpaid.

(5) In this section, "penalty" means all the sums of money, including fines, in default of payment of which a term of imprisonment is imposed and includes the costs and charges of committing the defaulter and of conveying him to prison. R.S., c. C-34, s. 650.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 723 governs the direction of the proceeds of fines, penalties and forfeitures. In the absence of other specific provisions, penalties are recoverable under the terms of s. 724.

For cost awards in defamatory libel cases, see s. 728. For costs upon an adjournment where accused has been misled or prejudiced by variance, error or omission in an indictment, see s. 601(5) and, as a condition of change of venue of trial on the prosecutor's application, s. 599(3). Each provision applies in the absence of a general authority to award costs in proceedings on indictment. Costs may be awarded in summary conviction trial proceedings under s. 809(1). For costs in summary conviction appeals, see ss. 826, 834(1) and 839(3).

SYNOPSIS

This section provides that a jail sentence in default of payment of a fine shall be reduced on a daily pro rata basis upon any payments made either before or after the warrant of committal has been executed. However, no partial payments shall be received until such payments would be sufficient to obtain at least one day's remission of sentence and until any fee associated with the issuance of the warrant and its execution has been paid (subsecs. (1), (2)).

Unless the court orders otherwise, any payments made shall be applied first to costs and charges, then in respect of compensation or damages, and lastly to retire any fine (subsec. (4)).

FINES AND PENALTIES TO GO TO PROVINCIAL TREASURER / Exception / Direction for payment to municipality.

723. (1) Where a fine, penalty or forfeiture is imposed or a recognizance is forfeited and no provision, other than this section, is made by law for the application of the proceeds thereof, the proceeds belong to Her Majesty in right of the province in which the fine, penalty or forfeiture was imposed or the recognizance was forfeited, and shall be paid by the person who receives them to the treasurer of that province.

(2) Where

(a) a fine, penalty or forfeiture is imposed

(i) in respect of a contravention of a revenue law of Canada,

(ii) in respect of a breach of duty or malfeasance in office by an officer or employee of the Government of Canada, or

(iii) in respect of any proceedings instituted at the instance of the Government of Canada in which that government bears the costs of prosecution, or

(b) a recognizance in connection with proceedings mentioned in paragraph (a) is forfeited, the proceeds of the fine, penalty, forfeiture or recognizance belong to Her Majesty in right of Canada and shall be paid by the person who receives them to the Receiver General.

(3) Where a provincial, municipal or local authority bears, in whole or in part, the expense of administering the law under which a fine, penalty or forfeiture is imposed or under which proceedings are taken in which a recognizance is forfeited,

- (a) the lieutenant governor in council may direct that the proceeds of a fine, penalty, forfeiture or recognizance that belongs to Her Majesty in right of the province shall be paid to that authority; and
- (b) the Governor in Council may direct that the proceeds of a fine, penalty, forfeiture or recognizance that belongs to Her Majesty in right of Canada shall be paid to that authority. R.S., c. C-34, s. 651.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Subsection (1) applies in the event that no other specific provision is made by law directing the proceeds of a fine, penalty or forfeiture. Section 724 governs the recovery or enforcement of penalties. The proper direction of proceeds is set out in subssecs. (1) and (2).

SYNOPSIS

This section sets out how the proceeds of fines, penalties and forfeitures are dealt with.

Normally such fines, etc. are paid to the treasurer of the province in which the sentence was imposed or the forfeiture ordered (subsec. (1)).

Where the matter arises in respect of a breach of duty by an officer or employee of the Government of Canada, in connection with a breach of a federal revenue law, or is otherwise a federal prosecution, any such proceeds go to the Receiver General of Canada (subsec. (2)).

The federal and provincial governments can direct that moneys derived in this way be directed to any provincial, municipal or local authority that has had to bear part of the costs of administering the law in question (subsec. (3)).

RECOVERY OF PENALTIES / Limitation.

724. (1) Where a fine, pecuniary penalty or forfeiture is imposed by law and no other mode is prescribed for the recovery thereof, the fine, pecuniary penalty or forfeiture is recoverable or enforceable in civil proceedings by Her Majesty, but by no other person.

(2) No proceedings under subsection (1) shall be instituted more than two years after the time when the cause of action arose or the offence was committed in respect of which the fine, pecuniary penalty or forfeiture was imposed. R.S., c. C-34, s. 652.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Sections 770 to 773 govern the enforcement of, and recovery upon, recognizances. See s. 729 for recovery of costs in defamatory libel cases and s. 194 for punitive damages recovery resulting from convictions for s. 184 or s. 193 offences.

SYNOPSIS

In the absence of any other prescribed method of recovery, fines, penalties and forfeitures are recoverable or enforceable by the Crown in the civil courts. There is a two-year limitation period.

COMPENSATION FOR LOSS OF PROPERTY / Enforcement / Moneys found on accused.

725. (1) A court that convicts or discharges under section 736 an accused of an offence may, on the application of a person aggrieved, at the time sentence is imposed, order the accused to pay to that person an amount by way of satisfaction or compensation for loss of or damage to property suffered by that person as a result of the commission of the offence.

(2) Where an amount that is ordered to be paid under subsection (1) is not paid forthwith, the applicant may, by filing the order, enter as a judgment, in the superior court of the province in which the trial was held, the amount ordered to be paid, and that judgment is enforceable against the accused in the same manner as if it were a judgment rendered against the accused in that court in civil proceedings.

(3) All or any part of an amount that is ordered to be paid under subsection (1) may, if the court making the order is satisfied that ownership of or right to possession of those moneys is not disputed by claimants other than the accused and the court so directs, be taken out of moneys found in the possession of the accused at the time of his arrest. R.S., c. C-34, s. 653; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 158.

Note: Section 725 re-enacted by R.S.C. 1985, c. 23 (4th Supp.), s. 6 (amended 1992, c. 1, s. 58(1) by re-enacting para. (b); to come into force when para. (b) comes into force as provided by s. 58(2), however, that part of s. 58(1) which re-enacts para. (b) and s. 58(2) repealed by 1995, c. 22, ss. 14 and 15 (to come into force by the order of the Governor in Council)) is to come into force on proclamation, but, R.S.C. 1985, c. 23 (4th Supp.), s. 6 itself repealed by 1995, c. 22, s. 11 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The unproclaimed text printed in lightface italics as amended by 1992, c. 1, s. 58 reads as follows:

RESTITUTION TO VICTIMS OF OFFENCES.

725. Where an offender is convicted or discharged under section 736 of an offence, the court imposing sentence on or discharging the offender shall, on application of the Attorney General or on its own motion, in addition to any other punishment imposed on the offender, if it is applicable and appropriate in the circumstances, order that the offender shall, on such terms and conditions as the court may fix, make restitution to another person as follows:

- (a) in the case of damage to, or the loss or destruction of, the property of any person as a result of the commission of the offence or the arrest or attempted arrest of the offender, by paying to the person an amount not exceeding the replacement value of the property as of the date the order is imposed, less the value of any part of the property that is returned to that person as of the date it is returned, where the amount is readily ascertainable; or
- (b) in the case of bodily injury to any person as a result of the commission of the offence or the arrest or attempted arrest of the offender, by paying to the person an amount not exceeding all pecuniary damages, including loss of income or support, incurred as a result of the bodily injury, where the amount is readily ascertainable.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 727 requires that an inquiry be conducted before a restitution order is made under s. 725 or 726. A party acting in good faith and without notice with respect to property obtained unlawfully may seek a restitution order under s. 726. For procedure, notice, payment and enforcement of restitution orders, see ss. 727.1 to 727.8.

A victim fine surcharge may be imposed under s. 727.9 upon conviction or discharge for a Criminal Code offence or under the Narcotic Control Act or Parts III or IV of the Food and Drugs Act.

The s. 673 definition of "sentence" includes a restitution order under s. 725 or 726 and a "victim fine surcharge" under s. 727.9. These orders may be appealed to the court of appeal under ss. 675(1)(b) and 676(1)(d), in proceedings upon indictment. See s. 785 for a definition of "sentence" which applies to summary conviction proceedings, and which does not include either restitution or "victim fine surcharge".

Section 683(5) permits the court, in appeal proceedings upon indictment, to suspend a restitution or "victim fine surcharge" pending determination of the appeal.

Operation of the orders is automatically suspended by s. 689 until expiration of the appeal period or the accused has waived the right of appeal or until an appeal has been determined. The court of appeal may vary or annul the suspension.

SYNOPSIS

This section authorizes the court, on application by the victim, to order the accused, at the time sentence is imposed, to compensate the victim of the crime for any loss or damage to property occasioned by the commission of the offence (subsec. (1)).

If such an order is not paid forthwith it may be enforced by the victim as a civil judgment in the superior court of the province in which it was made (subsec. (2)).

The court sentencing the accused may direct that moneys which were in the possession of the accused at the time of arrest, and which are not subject to a claim by another party, be used to satisfy the compensation order (subsec. (3)).

(Unproclaimed provision) This section authorizes the court to order the accused, at the time sentence is imposed, to make restitution with respect to: (a) any loss or damage to property resulting from the commission of the offence or the arrest or attempted arrest of the accused; and (b) all pecuniary damages suffered by any person who sustained bodily injury as a result of the commission of the offence or the arrest or attempted arrest of the accused; provided that the amount is readily ascertainable.

ANNOTATIONS

In R. v. Zelensky et al. (1978), 41 C.C.C. (2d) 97, 86 D.L.R. (3d) 179, [1978] 2 S.C.R. 940, it was held (6:3) that this section is intra vires Parliament being in pith and substance part of the sentencing process. However an order for compensation should only be made with restraint and caution and in particular should not be made where there is any serious contest on legal or factual issues or on whether the person alleging himself to be aggrieved is so in fact. An order under this section is by virtue of the definition of “sentence” in s. 673 appealable as provided under the Criminal Code. The filing of the order in the provincial superior Court as provided in subsec. (2) does not put in motion any civil proceedings other than those relating to enforcement. Only the accused has the right of appeal against a compensation order, and not the person in whose favour the compensation order was made.

The mere fact that the claim is disputed is not a sufficient basis for refusing to make the order where the amount of money involved and the nature of the claim indicate that the claim could be dealt with reasonably and expeditiously: R. v. Ghislieri (1980), 56 C.C.C. (2d) 4, [1981] 2 W.W.R. 303 (Alta. C.A.).

The accused’s inability to pay a large compensation order is not determinative against an order under this section as where the making of such an order is the most expeditious way for the victim to fulfil a pre-condition entitling them to compensation from another source, in this case the Law Society Compensation Fund. Unlike a restitution order made as a term of a probation order, an order under this section is enforceable as a civil judgment and so entirely different considerations apply. Where there is no dispute as to the amounts payable it would not assist the accused’s rehabilitation to permit him to put the victims to additional expense by launching civil actions: R. v. Scherer (1984), 16 C.C.C. (3d) 30, 42 C.R. (3d) 376 (Ont. C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused C.C.C. loc. cit.

The means of the offender will not always be the controlling factor in determining whether a compensation order should be made. Thus, in R. v. Fitzgibbon (1990), 55 C.C.C. (3d) 449, [1990] 1 S.C.R. 1005, 76 C.R. (3d) 378, it was held appropriate to make a compensation order against the accused, an undischarged bankrupt, who, while a lawyer, had defrauded his clients. The claims of the victims of the fraudulent acts should be paramount. Further, the Law Society, which through its compensation fund had paid back many of the accused’s victims, was a person aggrieved within the meaning of this section and a compensation order could properly be made in its favour, provincial legislation providing that the Law Society was to be subrogated to the rights of the victim to whom it paid money from its compensation fund. Finally, a victim who was only given partial repayment by the Law Society was entitled to an order under this section against the offender for the balance of the amount of which he was defrauded.

In R. v. Gorunuk, [1963] 1 C.C.C. 320, 40 W.W.R. 640 (B.C.C.A.), it was held that the Criminal Code is peremptory in requiring that an application for compensation must be made at the time of sentence. An order made the next day (not on adjournment) is without jurisdiction. It was held in the same Court that the magistrate still has jurisdiction if he waits a few days before deciding an application made under s. 725.

Where a convicted person, through funds raised by friends and relatives, voluntarily paid into Court prior to sentencing an amount equal to the maximum money that he could have benefited by his criminal fraud and prior to payment out of Court to the persons aggrieved he became bankrupt, the trustee in bankruptcy of his estate may not claim that money: Re Blackhawk Downs, Inc. and Arnold et al., [1973] 3 O.R. 729, 38 D.L.R. (3d) 75 (H.C.J.).

Although the accused is an undischarged bankrupt, leave of the bankruptcy court is not required before a court in criminal proceedings makes a compensation order under this section. It is only when the compensation order is filed with the superior court that it becomes enforceable against the person and property of the accused. When the victim sought to enforce the order then the trustee in bankruptcy must be notified and the consent of the bankruptcy court obtained: R. v. Fitzgibbon, supra.

In order to invoke subsec. (2), the victim at the time of filing the order in the Superior Court should present evidence as to the amount of the order still outstanding and the court clerk may require such evidence before issuing a writ of execution or other civil process for enforcement of the order: Re 103956 Canada Ltd. and Moniuk (1981), 61 C.C.C. (2d) 285, 23 C.R. (3d) 87 (N.W.T.S.C.).

A compensation order made under this section cannot bar resort to civil suit to recover the monies owed to the victim. Double recovery would be prevented by the jurisdiction of the civil court to require a proper accounting for any sums recovered under the compensation order: London Life Insurance Co. v. Zavitz (1992), 12 C.R. (4th) 267, 65 B.C.L.R. (2d) 140, 5 C.P.C. (3d) 14 (C.A.).

Crown counsel may apply for an order under this section as agent for the victim. Further, Crown counsel need not produce a written application from each person aggrieved and there is no necessity that such persons appear personally or by their own privately retained solicitor. Where, however, there is some conflict or inconsistency between the role as Crown counsel and as agent for the victim then Crown counsel can so inform the victim so that he can pursue an application independently under this section: R. v. Wilcox (1988), 43 C.C.C. (3d) 432 (N.W.T.S.C.).

As with other aspects of the sentence hearsay evidence is admissible to prove the amount of the loss: R. v. Wilcox (1980), 43 C.C.C. (3d) 432, [1988] N.W.T.R. 353 (S.C.).

A compensation order may be particularly appropriate to deter acts of vandalism and can and should be used either to replace or reduce what would otherwise be a fit sentence of imprisonment: R. v. Hoyt (1992), 77 C.C.C. (3d) 289, 17 C.R. (4th) 338 (B.C.C.A.).

This section does not authorize an order representing loss of rents or profits from the loss of property. The order must be limited to the replacement value of the thing: R. v. Brunner (1995), 97 C.C.C. (3d) 31, 38 C.R. (4th) 250, [1995] 5 W.W.R. 413 (Alta. C.A.).

COMPENSATION TO BONA FIDE PURCHASERS / Enforcement / Moneys found on accused.

726. (1) Where an accused is convicted or discharged under section 736 of an offence and any property obtained as a result of the commission of the offence has been sold to an innocent purchaser, the court may, on the application of the purchaser after restitution of the property to its owner, order the accused to pay to the purchaser an amount not exceeding the amount paid by the purchaser for the property.

(2) Where an amount that is ordered to be paid under subsection (1) is not paid forthwith, the applicant may, by filing the order, enter as a judgment, in the superior court of the province in which the trial was held, the amount ordered to be paid, and that judgment is enforceable against the accused in the same manner as if it were a judgment rendered against the accused in that court in civil proceedings.

(3) All or any part of an amount that is ordered to be paid under subsection (1) may, if the court making the order is satisfied that ownership of or right to possession of those moneys is not disputed by claimants other than the accused and the court so directs, be taken out of moneys found in the possession of the accused at the time of his arrest. R.S., c. C-34, s. 654; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 159.

Note: Section 726 re-enacted by R.S.C. 1985, c. 23 (4th Supp.), s. 6 is to come into force on proclamation, however, R.S.C. 1985, c. 23 (4th Supp.), s. 6 itself repealed by 1995, c. 22, s. 11 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The unproclaimed text printed in lightface italics reads as follows:

RESTITUTION TO PERSONS ACTING IN GOOD FAITH.

726. Where an offender is convicted or discharged under section 736 of an offence and

(a) any property obtained as a result of the commission of the offence has been conveyed or transferred for valuable consideration to a person acting in good faith and without notice, or

(b) the offender has borrowed money on the security of that property from a person acting in good faith and without notice, the court may, where that property has been returned to the lawful owner or the person who had lawful possession of that property at the time the offence was committed, order the offender to pay as restitution to the person referred to in paragraph (a) or (b), on such terms as the court may fix, an amount not exceeding the amount of consideration for that property or the total amount outstanding in respect of the loan, as the case may be.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Restitution to victims of specified offences is authorized by s. 725. Orders under both ss. 725 and 726 may be made in respect of the same proceedings. There is no provision regarding the status of an applicant under s. 726. Such orders are made at the discretion of the court, and would usually be brought by the prosecutor on behalf of the victim.

Also see references cited under s. 725.

SYNOPSIS

This section authorizes the court, on application by an innocent purchaser, to order the accused, at the time sentence is imposed, to compensate that innocent person who purchased property obtained by the commission of the offence from the accused (e.g., stolen goods), where such property has been returned to its lawful owner (subsec. (1)).

If such an order is not paid forthwith it may be enforced by the innocent purchaser as a civil judgment in the superior court of the province in which it was made (subsec. (2)).

The court sentencing the accused may direct that moneys which were in his or her possession at the time of arrest, and which are not subject to a claim by a third party, be used to satisfy the compensation order (subsec. (3)).

(Unproclaimed provision) This section authorizes the court to order the accused, at the time sentence is imposed, to make restitution to an innocent party who either: (a) purchased property obtained by the commission of the offence from the accused (e.g., stolen goods); or (b) lent money to the accused on the security of such property; where such property has been returned to its lawful owner.

Note: Sections 727 (new provision) to 727.8 enacted by R.S.C. 1985, c. 23 (4th Supp.), s. 6 (to come into force on proclamation, however, R.S.C. 1985, c. 23 (4th Supp.), s. 6 itself repealed by 1995, c. 22, s. 11 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council)). The unproclaimed text printed in lightface italics reads as follows:

INQUIRY CONCERNING AMOUNT OF LOSS AND ABILITY OF OFFENDER TO PAY / Offender to disclose finances / Report concerning offender's ability to make restitution / Copies of report provided to parties / Time within which restitution to be made / Payment to estate.

727. (1) Before making an order to pay an amount as restitution under section 725 or 726 and for the purpose of determining the amount to be paid, the time for payment and the method of payment, the court shall, unless the offender acknowledges the ability to pay, conduct or cause to be conducted an inquiry concerning the present or future ability of the offender to pay the amount and, in so doing, the court shall consider

- (a) the employment, earning ability and financial resources of the offender at the present or in the future and any other circumstances that may affect the ability of the offender to make restitution;*
- (b) any benefit, financial or otherwise, derived, directly or indirectly, by the offender as a result of the commission of the offence; and*
- (c) any harm done to, or loss suffered by, any person to whom restitution may be ordered to be made.*

(2) The court may require the offender, for the purposes of subsection (1), to disclose to the court, orally or in writing, particulars of the financial circumstances of the offender in the manner and form prescribed by the court and that information shall not be used for any other purpose, except in a prosecution for perjury or giving contradictory evidence in any proceeding.

(3) A court may require that a written report be prepared and filed with the court containing information concerning

- (a) the financial status of the offender and, in particular, the ability of the offender to make restitution; and*
- (b) the amount to be paid to any person by the offender.*

(4) Where a report is filed with the court under subsection (3), the clerk of the court shall forthwith cause a copy of the report to be provided to the offender or counsel for the offender and the prosecutor.

(5) Where a court makes an order of restitution under section 725 or 726 in relation to an offender, the court may require the offender to comply with the order forthwith or within a specified period ending not later than, or in specified instalments ending not later than, three years after the day on which the order is made.

(6) Where a person to whom an amount is ordered to be paid under section 725 or 726 dies before the order is fully complied with, the amount shall be paid to the estate of such person.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Under s. 727.2, parties potentially benefiting from a restitution order may receive notice of the order before it is made.

A restitution order may be paid out of funds found in the possession of the accused upon his arrest, pursuant to s. 727.1. Restitution orders have priority over forfeitures and fines under s. 727.3. See ss. 727.5 to 727.7 for enforcement provisions. Subject to s. 727.4, payment schedules may be extended. Section 727.8 describes the reduction of default terms by reduced payment.

SYNOPSIS

This section sets out the procedures open to a court in deciding what compensation or restitution order is appropriate.

Unless the accused acknowledges the ability to pay, the court shall conduct, or cause to be conducted, an inquiry with respect to: (a) the accused's financial situation (both present and future); (b) any financial or other benefit derived by the accused from the commission of the offence; and (c) the harm done to or loss suffered by any person in whose favour an order may be made (subsec. (1)).

The accused may be required to provide particulars of his or her financial situation. Such information shall remain confidential except in a subsequent prosecution for perjury or giving contradictory evidence (subsec. (2)).

If the court directs the preparation of a written report copies are to be provided to the accused and the prosecutor (subsecs. (3), (4)).

The court can order payment to be made forthwith or by instalments over not more than three years (subsec. (5)).

If the person in whose favour an order is made dies, any amount which remains owing shall be paid to his or her estate (subsec. (6)).

MONEYS FOUND ON OFFENDER.

727.1 All or any part of an amount that is ordered to be paid under section 725 or 726 may be taken out of moneys found in the possession of the offender at the time of the arrest of the offender if the court making the order, on being satisfied that ownership of or right to possession of those moneys is not disputed by claimants other than the offender, so directs.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Restitution or forfeiture of property obtained by crime is authorized by s. 491.1.

A dispute as to ownership or possession of monies found in possession of the accused upon his arrest may preclude their application to a restitution order.

Also see references cited under ss. 725 and 727.

SYNOPSIS

The court sentencing the accused may direct that moneys in the possession of the accused at the time of arrest, and which are not subject to a claim by a third party, be used to satisfy a restitution order.

NOTICE TO INTERESTED PERSONS / Notice of orders under section 725 and 726 / Service of notices / Order of restitution to be recorded.

727.2 (1) Before making an order of restitution under section 725 or 726, the court may direct that notice be given to any person who may be the beneficiary of such an order and to such other persons having an interest in the order as the court thinks fit.

(2) Where a court makes an order of restitution under section 725 or 726, it shall cause notice of the terms of the order or a copy of the order to be given to the person who is to be the beneficiary of the order.

(3) Any notice or copy of an order required to be given pursuant to this section or section 727.4 shall be given or served in such manner as the court directs or as may be prescribed by rules of court made under section 482.

(4) Where a court makes an order of restitution under section 725 or 726, it shall enter the terms of the order in the record of the proceedings or, where the proceedings are not recorded, the order and the terms thereof shall be in writing.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Form and substance of notices are governed by rules of court made pursuant to s. 482(3)(a) and (c).

Also see references cited under ss. 725 and 727.

SYNOPSIS

Before making any order the court may direct notice to be given to any potential beneficiary, or to any person whom it thinks may have an interest in the matter (subsec. (1)). Either notice, or a copy of any order made, shall be given to every beneficiary (subsec. (2)).

Where the proceedings are not recorded, any order made must be in writing (subsec. (4)).

PRIORITY TO RESTITUTION.

727.3 Where the court finds it applicable and appropriate in the circumstances of a case to make, in relation to an offender, an order of restitution under section 725 or 726, and

(a) an order of forfeiture under this or any other Act of Parliament may be made in respect of property that is the same as property in respect of which the order of restitution may be made, or

(b) the court is considering ordering the offender to pay a fine and it appears to the court that the offender would not have the means and ability to comply with both the order of restitution and the order to pay the fine,

the court shall first make the order of restitution and shall then consider whether and to what extent an order of forfeiture or an order to pay a fine is appropriate in the circumstances.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Restitution orders under ss. 725 and 726 are given priority by this section.

See s. 192 for forfeiture upon conviction dealing with electro-magnetic, acoustic, mechanical or other device.

Section 164(4) and (6) contain similar provisions respecting obscene publications. Also see ss. 491 and 491.1 regarding weapons and property obtained by crime, respectively. For fines in indictable matters, see ss. 718 to 720 and ss. 722 to 724.

Also see references under ss. 725 and 727.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides that the court shall give priority to the making of a restitution order and thereafter will consider ordering forfeiture or imposing a fine.

EXTENSION OF TIME FOR PAYMENT OF ORDERS OF RESTITUTION / Notice to beneficiary / Maximum extension for payment of restitution.

727.4 (1) Subject to subsection (2), where an order of restitution made under section 725 or 726 specifies a period within which or instalments in which payment is to be made, the court that made the order may, unless an information has been laid under section 727.6, on an application by or on behalf of the offender, extend the period or vary the instalments, subject to rules of court made under section 482.

(2) Before extending the period within which or varying the instalments in which payment is to be made pursuant to an order of restitution made under section 725 or 726, the court may direct that notice be given to, and may hear, the beneficiary of the order.

(3) A court shall not extend the period within which payment of restitution is to be made pursuant to subsection (1) to a date later than the expiration of the fourth year after the day on which the order of restitution was made under section 725 or 726, as the case may be.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The court of appeal may suspend a restitution order pending determination of the appeal in respect thereof.

The court may deal with restitution orders under s. 689 pursuant to its plenary authority.

Also see references cited under ss. 725 and 727.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides that the court can lengthen the time for an accused to fulfil the terms of a restitution order.

Providing that no information alleging a failure to comply, or a default with respect to the order, has been laid (see s. 727.6(1)) the accused can apply for an extension of time or a variation in instalments (subsec. (1)). The court can direct that the beneficiary be given notice of the hearing in this connection and the beneficiary may also be heard at this hearing (subsec. (2)).

Time may not be extended beyond four years from the date the original order was made (subsec. (3)).

ENFORCEMENT OF ORDERS OF RESTITUTION.

727.5 Where an order of restitution made under section 725 or 726 is not complied with forthwith, the beneficiary of the order may, by filing the order, enter it as a judgment in the superior court of the province in which the trial was held and that judgment is enforceable against the offender in the same manner as if it were a judgment rendered against the offender in that court in civil proceedings.

The court of appeal may suspend a restitution order pending determination of the appeal in respect thereof. The court may deal with restitution orders under s. 689 under its plenary authority.

Also see references cited under ss. 725 and 727.

SYNOPSIS

If a restitution order is not complied with forthwith it may be enforced by the beneficiary as a civil judgment in the superior court of the province in which it was made.

IDEM / When default in payment of restitution / Limitation / Hearing / Disposition after hearing / Effect of judgment / Where reasonable excuse / Notice / Maximum extension for payment of restitution / Service of term of imprisonment / Endorsement of order as varied.

727.6 (1) Any person who, on reasonable grounds, believes that an offender has failed or refused to comply with, or defaulted under, an order of restitution made under section 725 or 726 may lay an information in writing and under oath before a justice who shall receive the information, and the matter shall be dealt with by the court that made the order or any other court that would, having regard to the mode of trial of the offender, have had jurisdiction to make the order or, with the consent of the prosecutor and the offender, by any other court of criminal jurisdiction or superior court of criminal jurisdiction.

(2) The payment of an amount by way of restitution is in default when any part of the amount is due and unpaid on the day fixed or provided for payment under the terms of the order of restitution.

(3) No proceedings under subsection (1) shall be instituted more than six years after the date of the alleged failure or refusal to comply or alleged default.

(4) The justice who receives an information under subsection (1) shall require the offender to appear before the court that, pursuant to subsection (1), is to deal with the matter.

(5) At a hearing held pursuant to this section, the court shall hear the prosecutor and the offender and, where the court is satisfied that the offender has failed or refused, without reasonable excuse, the proof of which lies on the offender, to comply with the order of restitution made in relation to that offender, the court shall

- (a) direct that the order be filed and entered as a judgment for the unpaid amount of the order in the superior court of the province in which the trial was held; and*
- (b) if it is appropriate in the circumstances, impose on the offender a term of imprisonment not exceeding two years, where the order was made in respect of an indictable offence, or not exceeding six months, where the order was made in respect of a summary conviction offence.*

(6) A judgment entered in a court pursuant to paragraph (5)(a) is enforceable against the offender in the same manner as if it were a judgment rendered against the offender in that court in civil proceedings.

(7) At a hearing held pursuant to this section, where an offender establishes that the offender had a reasonable excuse for failing or refusing to comply with the order of restitution made in relation to that offender, the court may, subject to subsections (8) and (9), extend any term of the order, including the period within which payment of restitution is to be made, and vary any other term of the order except the amount ordered to be paid.

(8) Before exercising any of the powers provided for in subsection (7), the court may direct that notice be given to, and may hear, the beneficiary of the order of restitution.

(9) A court shall not extend the period within which payment of restitution is to be made pursuant to subsection (7) to a date later than the expiration of the fourth year after the day on which the order of restitution was made under section 725 or 726, as the case may be.

(10) Any term of imprisonment imposed under this section shall be served consecutively to any other term of imprisonment that is being or is to be served by the offender unless the court orders otherwise.

(11) Where, under subsection (7), the court makes any changes or additions to an order or the terms or conditions thereof or changes the period for which an order is to remain in force, it shall endorse the order accordingly and cause the offender to be informed of its action and to be given a copy of the order so endorsed.

CROSS-REFERENCES

In proceedings under s. 727.6, the accused may be compelled to appear by the provisions of s. 727.7. An order under subsec. (5) or (7) may not be appealed as of right.

Also see references cited under ss. 725 and 727.

SYNOPSIS

This section deals with what occurs when a restitution order has not been complied with.

Where reasonable grounds exist to believe that an accused has failed or refused to comply with, or defaulted under, an order, an information may be laid before a justice of the peace, within six years of the alleged breach. The matter shall thereafter be dealt with by the court which made the order, or any other court that would have had jurisdiction to make the order having regard to the election of the accused. By consent the allegation may be heard by a court of criminal jurisdiction or a superior court of criminal jurisdiction (see s. 2) (subsecs. (1), (3)).

If at the hearing of the matter the court is satisfied that a breach has occurred, it shall: (a) direct that the order be filed as a judgment in the superior court for the unpaid balance; and (b) if appropriate, sentence the accused to a period of imprisonment. The maximum term is two years if the order was made in respect of an indictable offence; six months if in summary conviction proceedings (subsec. (5)).

If the accused establishes a “reasonable excuse” for failing to abide by the conditions of the order the court may extend the period of time or vary any other term of the order, except the amount to be paid. The court can direct that notice be given to the beneficiary before making any variation and may hear the beneficiary. Time may not be extended beyond four years from the date the original order was made (subsec. (7), (7.1), (8)).

Unless otherwise ordered, any period of incarceration imposed in respect of a breach of a restitution order shall be served consecutive to any other sentence (subsec. (9)).

COMPELLING APPEARANCE.

727.7 The provisions of Parts XVI and XVIII with respect to compelling the appearance of an accused before a justice and with respect to release and detention apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, to proceedings under section 727.6 and in particular, but without limiting the generality of the foregoing,

- (a) a peace officer may arrest without warrant a person bound by an order made under section 725 or 726 who has contravened the order or who, on reasonable grounds, is believed to have contravened the order, where the peace officer has reasonable grounds to believe that, if the person is not so arrested, the person will fail to attend court in order to be dealt with according to law; and
- (b) as if the references in those provisions of Parts XVI and XVIII to an “offence” were references to a “contravention of an order to make restitution”.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See s. 727.6 for the conduct of a default hearing.

Also see references cited under ss. 725 and 727.

SYNOPSIS

The normal rules and procedures relating to compelling the appearance of the accused and release apply to an information under s. 727.6(1). Further, a police officer may arrest without warrant for such a contravention of an order if he or she believes, on reasonable grounds, that such action is necessary to ensure the accused will attend court.

REDUCTION OF IMPRISONMENT ON PARTIAL PAYMENT / Minimum that can be accepted / To whom payment made / Application of money paid / Priority to restitution.

727.8 (1) Where a term of imprisonment is imposed under section 727.6 for failure or refusal to pay an amount by way of restitution pursuant to an order made under section 725 or 726, the term shall, on the payment of part of the amount, whether the payment was made before or after the issue of a warrant of committal, be reduced by the number of days that bears the same proportion to the number of days in the term as the part paid bears to the total amount in respect of which the offender was imprisoned.

(2) No amount offered in partial payment shall be accepted unless it is sufficient to secure a reduction of sentence of one day, or a multiple thereof, and where a warrant of committal has been issued, no partial payment shall be received until any fee that is payable in respect of the warrant or its execution has been paid.

(3) Payment may be made under this section to the person who has lawful custody of the offender or to such other person as the Attorney General directs.

(4) Subject to subsection (5), a payment under this section shall be applied first to the payment in full of the amount by way of restitution and thereafter to the payment in full of the costs and charges of committing and conveying the offender to prison.

(5) Where a term of imprisonment is imposed for failure or refusal to pay both a fine and an amount by way of restitution, a payment under this section shall be applied first to the payment in full of any part of the amount to be paid by way of restitution that remains unpaid, and thereafter to payment in full of any part of the fine that remains unpaid.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See references cited under ss. 722, 725 and 727.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides that a jail sentence imposed for breach of a restitution order shall be reduced on a daily pro rata basis upon any payments made either before or after the warrant of committal has been executed. However, no partial payments shall be received until such payments would be sufficient to obtain at least one day's remission of sentence and until any fee associated with the issuance of the warrant and its execution has been paid (subsecs. (1), (2)).

Payments made under this section shall be applied first to the payment in full of any restitution, then to any fine that is outstanding and, lastly, to any costs and charges of committing and conveying the accused to prison (subsecs. (4), (5)).

VICTIM FINE SURCHARGE / Exception / Written reasons for not making order / Amounts applied to aid victims / Regulations / Enforcement.

727.9 (1) Subject to subsection (2), where an offender is convicted or discharged under section 736 of an offence under this Act, Part III or IV of the Food and Drugs Act or the Narcotic Control Act, the court imposing sentence on or discharging the offender shall, in addition to any other punishment imposed on the offender, order the offender to pay a victim fine surcharge in an amount not exceeding

(a) fifteen per cent of any fine that is imposed on the offender for that offence or, where no fine is imposed on the offender for that offence, ten thousand dollars, or

(b) such lesser amount as may be prescribed by, or calculated in the manner prescribed by, regulations made by the Governor in Council, subject to such terms and conditions as may be prescribed by regulations made by the Governor in Council.

NOTE: The portion preceding para. (a) replaced 1996, Bill C-8, s. 75 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The text of that portion, which is not yet in force as of May 15, 1996 and also may change before receiving Royal Assent, is therefore printed in lightface italics and reads as follows:

Victim fine surcharge.

727.9 (1) Subject to subsection (2), where an offender is convicted or discharged under section 736 of an offence under this Act or the Controlled Drugs and Substances Act, the court imposing sentence on or discharging the offender shall, in addition to any other punishment imposed on the offender, order the offender to pay a victim fine surcharge in an amount not exceeding

(2) Where the offender establishes to the satisfaction of the court that undue hardship to the offender or the dependants of the offender would result from the making of an order under subsection (1), the court is not required to make the order.

(3) Where the court does not make an order under subsection (1), the court shall

(a) provide the reasons why the order is not being made; and

(b) enter the reasons in the record of the proceedings or, where the proceedings are not recorded, provide written reasons.

(4) A victim fine surcharge imposed under subsection (1) shall be applied for the purposes of providing such assistance to victims of offences as the Lieutenant Governor in Council of the province in which the surcharge is imposed may direct from time to time.

(5) The Governor in Council may, for the purposes of subsection (1), make regulations prescribing the maximum amount or the manner of calculating the maximum amount of a victim fine surcharge to be imposed under that subsection, not exceeding the amount referred to in paragraph (1)(a), and any terms and conditions subject to which the victim fine surcharge is to be imposed.

(6) Subsections 718(3) to (11) apply and section 718.1 does not apply in respect of a victim fine surcharge imposed under subsection (1). R.S.C. 1985, c. 23 (4th Supp.), s. 6.

Transitional provision

Note: R.S.C. 1985, c. 23 (4th Supp.), s. 8 provides as follows:

8. Section 727.9 of the Criminal Code, as enacted by section 6 of this Act, does not apply to any proceedings in respect of an offence committed before the coming into force of that section.

NOTE: Section 727.9 was enacted by R.S.C. 1985, c. 23 (4th Supp.), s. 6, however, s. 6 now repealed by 1995, c. 22, s. 11 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council).

CROSS-REFERENCES

The definition of “sentence” in s. 785 of Part XXVII does not include “victim fine surcharge”. Under s. 673, a “victim fine surcharge” is a “sentence” for the purposes of indictable offence appeals. The court of appeal may order the suspension of a “victim fine surcharge” pending determination of the appeal relating thereto under s. 683(5). Such order may follow the filing of a notice of appeal or notice of application for leave to appeal. The stay provisions of s. 689 do not apply to a “victim fine surcharge”. Provisions governing the imposition of imprisonment terms in default of payment, terms of payment and committal upon default are incorporated by the provisions of s. 718(3) to (11).

SYNOPSIS

This section authorizes the imposition of victim fine surcharges in addition to any other penalty.

An accused convicted of an offence under the Criminal Code or of certain offences under the Food and Drugs and Narcotic Control Acts shall be ordered to pay an additional fine not exceeding: (a) 15% of any fine imposed or, if no fine is imposed, $10,000; or (b) such lesser amount as may be prescribed by regulation (subsec. (1)).

If the accused establishes undue hardship the court can decline to impose the surcharge (subsec. (2)) but must give and record or write reasons in this regard (subsec. (3)).

Moneys collected are to be applied to assisting victims of crime (subsec. (4)).

The normal rules relating to fines apply with the exception that the fine option programme is not available (see ss. 718(3) to (11), 718.1) (subsec. (6)).

The Governor General in Council has the power to make regulations with respect to the amount or manner of calculating the surcharge (within the limits set out in subsec. (1)(a)) and the terms and conditions concerning its imposition (subsec. (5)).

ANNOTATIONS

This provision is a valid exercise of the criminal law power under s. 91(27) of the Constitution Act, 1867: R. v. Crowell (1992), 76 C.C.C. (3d) 413, 16 C.R. (4th) 249, 115 N.S.R. (2d) 355 (C.A.).

COSTS TO SUCCESSFUL PARTY IN CASE OF LIBEL.

728. The person in whose favour judgment is given in proceedings by indictment for defamatory libel is entitled to recover from the opposite party costs in a reasonable amount to be fixed by order of the court. R.S., c. C-34, s. 656.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See ss. 297 to 317 respecting defamatory libel. In the absence of a general authority in proceedings upon indictment, costs may be awarded under s. 599(3) as a condition of a change of venue on application by the prosecutor or upon an adjournment under s. 601(5). Under s. 683(3), costs are not allowable on appeals of conviction for indictable offences. Sections 684 and 694.1 permit costs relating to legal assistance.

For award of costs provisions in summary conviction proceedings, see s. 809 for trials and ss. 826, 834(1) and 839(3) on appeal.

The definition of "sentence" in s. 673 does not include an award of costs under s. 728.

Section 729 governs recovery of costs under s. 728.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides for costs to be paid to the successful party by the other party in proceedings by indictment for defamatory libel. The court shall fix reasonable costs.

HOW RECOVERED.

729. Where costs that are fixed under section 728 are not paid forthwith, the party in whose favour judgment is given may enter judgment for the amount of the costs by filing the order in the superior court of the province in which the trial was held, and that judgment is enforceable against the opposite party in the same manner as if it were a judgment rendered against him in that court in civil proceedings. R.S., c. C-34, s. 657.

CROSS-REFERENCES

For similar recovery or enforcement mechanisms, see ss. 720 and 724 for fines; see s. 727.5 for restitution orders and s. 727.9(6) for "victim fine surcharges".

The definition of "sentence" in s. 673 does not include an award of costs under s. 728.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides that costs to a successful party in a prosecution for defamatory libel may be enforced and collected in the same manner as a civil judgment of the superior court of the province.

ImprisonmentIMPRISONMENT WHEN NO OTHER PROVISION.

730. Every one who is convicted of an indictable offence for which no punishment is specially provided is liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years. R.S., c. C-34, s. 658.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Where an offence is punishable by five years imprisonment or more, the accused is entitled to trial by jury under the guarantee of s. 11(f) of the Charter.

See ss. 126 and 127 for general punishment provisions for disobedience of a statute or lawful court order.

Those sections do not apply to orders respecting money payments. Maximum punishment prescribed in ss. 126 and 127 is two years, subject to specific contrary provisions.

IMPRISONMENT FOR LIFE OR MORE THAN TWO YEARS / Subsequent term less than two years / Imprisonment for term less than two years / Sentence to penitentiary of person serving sentence elsewhere / Transfer to penitentiary / Only definite portion of certain sentences to be counted / Idem / Newfoundland.

731. (1) Except where otherwise provided, a person who is sentenced to imprisonment for

(a) life,

(b) a term of two years or more, or

(c) two or more terms of less than two years each that are to be served one after the other and that, in the aggregate, amount to two years or more,

shall be sentenced to imprisonment in a penitentiary.

(2) Where a person who is sentenced to imprisonment in a penitentiary is, before the expiration of that sentence, sentenced to imprisonment for a term of less than two years, he shall be sentenced to and shall serve that term in a penitentiary, but if the previous sentence of imprisonment in a penitentiary is set aside, he shall serve that term in accordance with subsection (3).

(3) A person who is sentenced to imprisonment and who is not required to be sentenced as provided in subsection (1) or (2) shall, unless a special prison is prescribed by law, be sentenced to imprisonment in a prison or other place of confinement within the province in which he is convicted, other than a penitentiary, in which the sentence of imprisonment may be lawfully executed.

(4) Where a person is sentenced to imprisonment in a penitentiary while he is lawfully imprisoned in a place other than a penitentiary, he shall, except where otherwise provided, be sent immediately to the penitentiary and shall serve in the penitentiary the unexpired portion of the term of imprisonment that he was serving when he was sentenced to the penitentiary as well as the term of imprisonment for which he was sentenced to the penitentiary.

(5) Where, at any time, a person who is imprisoned in a prison or place of confinement other than a penitentiary is subject to two or more terms of imprisonment, each of which is for less than two years, that are to be served one after the other, and the aggregate of the unexpired portions of those terms at that time amounts to two years or more, he shall be transferred to a penitentiary to serve those terms, but if any one or more of such terms is set aside and the unexpired portions of the remaining term or terms on the day on which he was transferred under this section amounted to less than two years, he shall serve that term or terms in accordance with subsection (3).

(7) [Repealed. 1992, c. 20, s. 200(1).]

(8) For the purposes of subsection (3), “penitentiary” does not, until a day to be fixed by order of the Governor in Council, include the facility mentioned in subsection 15(2) of the Corrections and Conditional Release Act. 1985, c. P-5, s. 18(1). Inmates in a federal institution may be transferred to a provincial institution upon agreement between the Solicitor General and the provincial government under the Prisons and Reformatories Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. P-20, s. 5(1).

See the Penitentiary Act, s. 16 dealing with the provincial penitentiary at St. John's, Newfoundland referred to in subsection (8).

A convicted person is delivered to the keeper of a prison under s. 734, following sentencing and the issuance and execution of a warrant of committal.

Correctional statutes and regulations, made under s. 732, govern the actual institution and manner of service of a sentence.

SYNOPSIS

This section sets out the rules used to determine whether a prisoner will be incarcerated in a federal or provincial institution.

Single or aggregate sentences of two years or more, including life sentences, will normally be served in the federal penitentiary system (subsecs. (1), (2), (5)). (Note: A sentence of two years less one day is sometimes imposed for the purpose of keeping an inmate in the provincial system, i.e., "provincial time" (subsec. (3)).

Where a prisoner in a prison other than a penitentiary is sentenced to a term in a penitentiary that prisoner shall be transferred forthwith to a penitentiary, where he or she shall serve both the unexpired portion of the previous sentence and the present sentence (subsec. (4)).

Where a definite/indeterminate sentence is imposed only the definite portion thereof shall be considered in determining whether the prisoner shall be incarcerated in a federal institution (subsec. (6)).

Where a prisoner is transferred to a penitentiary other than under a federal/provincial agreement any indeterminate portion of his or her sentence shall cease to have any effect (subsec. (7)).

ANNOTATIONS

Subsec. (1) – By virtue of this subsection a person given a sentence of two years or more must be sentenced to a penitentiary and the Court has no power to direct that the sentence be served at a provincial mental health centre such as the centre at Penetanguishene in Ontario. Where the trial Judge wishes an accused to receive treatment at such a centre he should impose the sentence pursuant to this subsection and recommend in the certificate of sentence that the prisoner receive treatment at the centre: R. v. Deans (1977), 37 C.C.C. (2d) 221, 39 C.R.N.S. 338 (Ont. C.A.). Folld: Re R. and McCullough (1983), 3 C.C.C. (3d) 432, 43 A.R. 237 (C.A.).

Except where he is considering imposing the minimum penitentiary sentence, the trial Judge is not required to impose a reformatory sentence because the accused might be the object of reprisals in the penitentiary: R. v. Demers (1981), 63 C.C.C. (2d) 351 (Que. C.A.).

Subsec. (2) – An accused while serving the remanet of a sentence in a penitentiary who is sentenced to a term of imprisonment of less than two years is properly imprisoned in a penitentiary to serve the latter sentence as well: Olson v. The Queen (1980), 50 C.C.C. (2d) 275, [1980] 1 S.C.R. 808, 106 D.L.R. (3d) 561.

This subsection applies and requires the additional term of imprisonment to be served in the penitentiary even where it is imposed for violations of provincial statutes: Durand v. Forget et al. (1980), 24 C.R. (3d) 119 (Que. S.C.).

Moreover, the penitentiary authorities are required to accept the warrants of committal for provincial offences which a peace officer attempts to execute. The calculation of the sentence to be served for those offences however depends on the applicable provincial legislation and may result in a consecutive sentence for those offences: Dempsey v. A.-G. Can. et al. (1986), 25 C.C.C. (3d) 193, 51 C.R. (3d) 248, [1986] 3 F.C. 129 (C.A.).

The sentence of an accused on mandatory supervision has not expired and if he is sentenced to imprisonment while on mandatory supervision then this sentence must be served in the penitentiary even if the new sentence is less than two years and the accused's mandatory supervision remains unrevoked: Re Dinardo and The Queen (1982), 67 C.C.C. (2d) 505, 38 O.R. (2d) 308 (C.A.).

In determining whether the aggregate of the sentences is two years or more, the amount of earned remission standing to the inmate's credit must be taken into account: Re Shiminousky and The Queen (1981), 64 C.C.C. (2d) 187, 33 B.C.L.R. 1 (S.C.).

Subsec. (3) – A trial judge may recommend or refuse to recommend the accused's eligibility for release on a temporary absence programme established under provincial legislation but he cannot make an order denying the accused such release. That is a decision to be made by an official designated under applicable provincial legislation: R. v. Laycock (1989), 51 C.C.C. (3d) 65, 17 M.V.R. (2d) 1 (Ont. C.A.).

REPORT BY COURT TO CORRECTIONAL SERVICE.

731.1. A court that sentences or commits a person to penitentiary shall forward to the Correctional Service of Canada its reasons and recommendations relating to the sentence or committal, any relevant reports that were submitted to the court, and any other information relevant to administering the sentence or committal; 1992, c. 20, s. 201.

SENTENCE SERVED ACCORDING TO REGULATIONS / Hard labour improperly ordered.

732. (1) A sentence of imprisonment shall be served in accordance with the enactments and rules that govern the institution to which the prisoner is sentenced, and a reference to hard labour in a conviction or sentence shall be deemed to be reference to the employment of prisoners that is provided for in the enactments or rules.

(2) A conviction or sentence that imposes hard labour shall not be quashed or set aside on the ground only that the enactment that creates the offence does not authorize the imposition of hard labour, but shall be amended accordingly. R.S., c. C-34, s. 660.

CROSS-REFERENCES

A sentence is served in either a federal penitentiary or a provincial correctional institution depending on the determination in s. 731.

Also see references cited under s. 731.

SYNOPSIS

This section eliminates judicial impositions of hard labour in sentences, stating that terms are to be served in accordance with the regulations of the institution with respect to employment of prisoners. However, a sentence which does refer to hard labour shall not be invalid, but shall be amended.

TRANSFER OF YOUNG PERSON TO PLACE OF CUSTODY / Removal of young person from place of custody / Definitions.

733. (1) Where a young person is sentenced to imprisonment under this or any other Act of Parliament, the young person may, with the consent of the provincial director, be transferred to a place of custody for any portion of his term of imprisonment, but in no case shall the young person be kept in a place of custody under this section after he attains the age of twenty years.

(2) Where the provincial director certifies that a young person transferred to a place of custody under subsection (1) can no longer be held therein without significant danger of escape or of detrimentally affecting the rehabilitation or reformation of other young persons held therein, the young person may be imprisoned during the remainder of his term of imprisonment in any place where he might, but for subsection (1), have been imprisoned.

(3) For the purposes of this section, the expressions "adult", "provincial director" and "young person" have the meanings assigned by subsection 2(1) of the Young Offenders Act and the expression "place of custody" means "open custody" or "secure custody" within the meaning assigned by subsection 24(1) of that Act. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 75; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 46.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See the Interpretation Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. I-21, s. 30, for provision respecting determination of age. The s. 2(1) reference to a "young person" means a person who is or appears to be at least 12 years of age and less than 18 years of age, subject to evidence to the contrary. A person who is or appears to be less than 12 years of age is a "child", subject to evidence to the contrary. A person who is neither a "young person" or a "child" is considered an "adult".

SYNOPSIS

This section integrates some of the custody provisions of the Young Offenders Act (the "YOA") with the Criminal Code. Subsection (1) provides that a young person (as defined by the YOA) sentenced to imprisonment under the Code or other penal Act can be sent to a "place of custody" established under the YOA, but cannot remain there after reaching 20 years of age. Under subsec. (2), provision is made for the removal of a young person from a "place of custody" to a provincial or federal adult institution where the prisoner poses a significant risk of escape or is a bad influence on other young prisoners.

Delivery of Accused to Keeper of Prison

EXECUTION OF WARRANT OF COMMITTAL.

734. A peace officer or other person to whom a warrant of committal authorized by this or any other Act of Parliament is directed shall arrest the person named or described therein, if it is necessary to do so in order to take that person into custody, convey that person to the prison mentioned in the warrant and deliver him, together with the warrant, to the keeper of the prison who shall thereupon give to the peace officer or other person who delivers the prisoner a receipt in Form 43 setting out the state and condition of the prisoner when delivered into his custody. R.S., c. C-34, s. 661; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 161.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Depending on the circumstances, warrants for committal may be in Form 8 or Forms 19 to 27.

See ss. 25 to 31 for protection of law enforcement and administration personnel.

SYNOPSIS

This section gives a peace officer who has received a warrant of committal the power to arrest the person named in the warrant, if necessary, and the power to convey that person to the prison named in the warrant. The keeper of the prison shall receive the prisoner, along with the warrant, and provide the peace officer with a receipt which sets out the state and condition of the prisoner on delivery.

Absolute and Conditional Discharges, Suspended Sentences, Intermittent Sentences and Probation

REPORT BY PROBATION OFFICER / Victim impact statement / Procedure for victim impact statement / Other evidence concerning victim admissible / Definition of “victim” / Copies to be provided.

735. (1) Where an accused, other than a corporation, pleads guilty to or is found guilty of an offence, a probation officer shall, if required to do so by a court, prepare and file with the court a report in writing relating to the accused for the purpose of assisting the court in imposing sentence or in determining whether the accused should be discharged pursuant to section 736.

(1.1) For the purpose of determining the sentence to be imposed on an offender or whether the offender should be discharged pursuant to section 736 in respect of any offence, the court may consider a statement, prepared in accordance with subsection (1.2), of a victim of the offence describing the harm done to, or loss suffered by, the victim arising from the commission of the offence.

(1.2) A statement referred to in subsection (1.1) shall be

- (a) prepared in writing in the form and in accordance with the procedures established by a program designated for the purpose by the Lieutenant Governor in Council of the province in which the court is exercising its jurisdiction; and
- (b) filed with the court.

(1.3) A statement of a victim of an offence prepared and filed in accordance with subsection (1.2) does not prevent the court from considering any other evidence concerning any victim of the offence for the purpose of determining the sentence to be imposed on the offender or whether the offender should be discharged pursuant to section 736.

(1.4) For the purpose of this section, “victim”, in relation to an offence,

- (a) means the person to whom harm is done or who suffers physical or emotional loss as a result of the commission of the offence, and
- (b) where the person described in paragraph (a) is dead, ill or otherwise incapable of making a statement referred to in subsection (1.1), includes the spouse or any relative of that person, anyone who has in law or in fact the custody of that person or is responsible for the care or support of that person or any dependant of that person.

(2) Where a report or statement is filed with the court under subsection (1) or (1.2), the clerk of the court shall forthwith cause a copy of the report or statement to be provided to the offender or counsel for the offender and to the prosecutor. R.S. c. C-34, s. 662; 1972, c. 13, s. 57; R.S.C. 1985, c. 23 (4th Supp.), s. 7.

CROSS-REFERENCES

For a description of the grounds on which conditional or absolute discharges may be granted, see s. 736. Provisions concerning probation orders may be found in ss. 737 to 740.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides for the use of pre-sentence reports and victim impact statements in the sentencing process.

The court can request that a probation officer prepare a report with respect to an accused other than a corporation (subsec. (1)). This can be at the instance of the accused, the Crown or on the court's own motion. These will contain the personal history of the accused (i.e., family background, education, marital or other relationships, employment history, previous convictions, etc.) and any other information concerning the accused which the officer preparing the report thinks will assist the judge.

The court may also consider (a) a statement from the victim prepared in accordance with procedures established by the Lieutenant Governor in Council (subsecs. (1.1), (1.2)) or, (b) such other evidence concerning the victim as the court sees fit to receive (subsec. (1.3)).

If the victim is dead or otherwise unable to make a statement the same can be based on information provided by a spouse, relative or other person responsible for the victim or his or her dependants (subsec. (1.4)(b)).

A copy of any report or statement filed with the court shall also be provided to the accused and the prosecutor (subsec. (2)).

ANNOTATIONS

Pre-sentence reports – Where the accused challenges or denies a statement in the pre-sentence report which the trial Judge considers relevant then proof of this information should be given, with the onus being upon the Crown to prove the accuracy of the information. Otherwise the challenged information must be disregarded. A statement in the pre-sentence report that the accused is suspected of other crimes which were not the subject of charges should not be considered by the trial Court: R. v. Morelli (1977), 37 C.C.C. (2d) 392 (Ont. Prov. Ct.).

A statement by the accused, who did not testify, that the commission of the offence was accidental, was not properly included in the pre-sentence report. Further, statements in the report are not evidence and not admissible to set aside the conviction: R. v. Urbanovich and Brown (1985), 19 C.C.C. (3d) 43 (Man. C.A.).

Victim impact statement – The definition of “victim” in subsec. (1.4) refers to the direct victim. It is only when subsec. (1.4)(b) applies that the court may receive a victim impact statement from someone else. Thus, in this case, the trial judge should not have received a victim impact statement from the accused’s estranged wife who witnessed the assault upon her male friend: R. v. Curtis (1992), 69 C.C.C. (3d) 385 (N.B.C.A.).

Neither this provision nor s. 2(b) of the Charter gives a victim the right to make oral submissions regarding the length of sentence: R. v. Coelho v. British Columbia (1995), 41 C.R. (4th) 324 (B.C.S.C.).

CONDITIONAL AND ABSOLUTE DISCHARGE / Period for which appearance notice, etc., continues in force / Effect of discharge / Where person bound by probation order convicted of offence.

736. (1) Where an accused, other than a corporation, pleads guilty to or is found guilty of an offence, other than an offence for which a minimum punishment is prescribed by law or an offence punishable, in the proceedings commenced against him, by imprisonment for fourteen years or for life, the court before which he appears may, if it considers it to be in the best interests of the accused and not contrary to the public interest, instead of convicting the accused, by order direct that the accused be discharged absolutely or on the conditions prescribed in a probation order.

(2) Subject to the provisions of Part XVI, where an accused who has not been taken into custody or who has been released from custody under or by virtue of any provision of Part XVI pleads guilty of or is found guilty of an offence but is not convicted, the appearance notice, promise to appear, summons, undertaking or recognizance issued to or given or entered into by him continues in force, subject to its terms, until a disposition in respect of him is made under subsection (1) unless, at the time he pleads guilty or is found guilty, the court, judge or justice orders that he be taken into custody pending such a disposition.

(3) Where a court directs under subsection (1) that an offender be discharged of an offence, the offender shall be deemed not to have been convicted of the offence except that

- (a) the offender may appeal from the determination of guilt as if it were a conviction in respect of the offence;
  - (b) the Attorney General and, in the case of summary conviction proceedings, the informant or the informant's agent may appeal from the decision of the court not to convict the offender of the offence as if that decision were a judgment or verdict of acquittal of the offence or a dismissal of the information against the offender; and
  - (c) the offender may plead autrefois convict in respect of any subsequent charge relating to the offence.
- (4) Where an accused who is bound by the conditions of a probation order made at a time when he was directed to be discharged under this section is convicted of an offence, including an offence under section 740, the court that made the probation order may, in addition to or in lieu of exercising its authority under subsection 738(4), at any time when it may take action under that subsection, revoke the discharge, convict the accused of the offence to which the discharge relates and impose any sentence that could have been imposed if the accused had been convicted at the time he was discharged, and no appeal lies from a conviction under this subsection where an appeal was taken from the order directing that the accused be discharged. 1972, c. 13, s. 57; 1974-75-76, c. 93, s. 80, c. 105, s. 20; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 162.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The accused's right of appeal from conviction in proceedings by indictment are governed by s. 675(1)(a) and in summary conviction proceedings by ss. 813(a) and 830(1). The Crown's right of appeal from acquittal in proceedings by indictment is governed by s. 676(1)(a) and in summary conviction proceedings by ss. 813(b) and 830(1). Sections 673 and 785(1) define an order under subsec. (1) as a "sentence". Parts XXI and XXVII, deal with appeals.

Section 607(1)(b) permits the special plea of autrefois convict with its use determined by ss. 607 to 610.

See s. 737 for the contents and form of the probation order and s. 738 for the coming into force of the order. Section 739 governs the transfer of orders. Under s. 740(1), failure or refusal to comply with the order constitutes a summary conviction offence.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides the court with a sentencing option which results in the accused not having a criminal record in connection with the offence in question.

If an accused other than a corporation is convicted of an offence for which no minimum punishment is prescribed, or for which the maximum is less than 14 years, the court can, if it considers it to be in the best interests of the accused and not contrary to the public interest, discharge the accused either absolutely or on conditions (subsec. (1)).

An absolute discharge takes effect immediately and the accused is deemed not to have been convicted. A conditional discharge requires that the accused enter into a probation order for a period of time and does not become absolute until that time has passed. If the accused breaches the terms of the probation order he or she may be brought back before the court which can then formally enter a conviction and impose sentence (subsecs. (3), (4)). Such a conviction may not be appealed if an appeal has already been taken from the order directing a discharge (subsec. (4)).

Both the accused and the Crown (and the informant in summary conviction matters) have the right to appeal a discharge (subsec. (3)(a), (b)).

A discharge will support a plea of autrefois convict (subsec. (3)(c)).

Subsection (2) provides that until discharged an accused who remains at large following a finding of guilt, will continue to be bound by the terms and conditions of his or her release.

ANNOTATIONS

Principles in imposing discharge – In R. v. Sanchez-Pino (1973), 11 C.C.C. (2d) 53, 22 C.R.N.S. 350 (Ont. C.A.) the Court gave some guidelines as to when a discharge is appropriate, as follows:

The granting of some form of discharge must be “in the best interests of the accused”. I take this to mean that deterrence of the offender himself is not a relevant consideration, in the circumstances, except to the extent required by conditions in a probation order. Nor is his rehabilitation through correctional or treatment centres, except to the same extent. Normally he will be a person of good character, or at least of such character that the entry of a conviction against him may have significant repercussions. It must not be “contrary to the public interest” to grant some form of discharge. One element thereby brought in will be the necessity or otherwise of a sentence which will be a deterrent to others who may be minded to commit a like offence – a standard part of the criteria for sentencing.

In R. v. Fallofield (1973), 13 C.C.C. (2d) 450, 22 C.R.N.S. 342 (B.C.C.A.) the Court draws the following conclusions as to the application of this section:

- (1) The section may be used in respect of any offence other than an offence for which a minimum punishment is prescribed by law or the offence is punishable by imprisonment for 14 years or for life or by death.
- (2) The section contemplates the commission of an offence. There is nothing in the language that limits it to a technical or trivial violation.
- (3) Of the two conditions precedent to the exercise of the jurisdiction, the first is that the Court must consider that it is in the best interests of the accused that he should be discharged either absolutely or upon condition. If it is not in the best interests of the accused, that, of course, is the end of the matter. If it is decided that it is in the best interests of the accused, then that brings the next consideration into operation.
- (4) The second condition precedent is that the Court must consider that a grant of discharge is not contrary to the public interest.
- (5) Generally, the first condition would presuppose that the accused is a person of good character, without previous conviction, that it is not necessary to enter a conviction against him in order to deter him from future offences or to rehabilitate him, and that the entry of a conviction against him may have significant adverse repercussions.
- (6) In the context of the second condition the public interest in the deterrence of others, while it must be given due weight, does not preclude the judicious use of the discharge provisions.
- (7) The powers given by s. 662.1 [now s. 736] should not be exercised as an alternative to probation or suspended sentence.
- (8) Section 662.1 [now s. 736] should not be applied routinely to any particular offence. This may result in an apparent lack of uniformity in the application of the discharge provisions. This lack will be more apparent than real and will stem from the differences in the circumstances of cases.

In considering whether a discharge should be granted the Court may consider whether the accused has been granted a discharge on a previous occasion: R. v. Tan (1974), 22 C.C.C. (2d) 184, [1975] 2 W.W.R. 747 (B.C.C.A.).

However, a previous experience with a diversion programme which did not entail any finding or admission of guilt is not the equivalent of a previous discharge and does not of itself disqualify the accused from receiving a discharge: R. v. Drew (1978), 45 C.C.C. (2d) 212, 7 C.R. (3d) S-21 (B.C.C.A.).

A discharge should not be granted where it would otherwise clearly not be mandated merely because it is urged by the accused that the immigration authorities might not be sympathetic to his situation: R. v. Melo (1975), 26 C.C.C. (2d) 510, 30 C.R.N.S. 328 (Ont. C.A.).

In R. v. Myers (1977), 37 C.C.C. (2d) 182 (Ont. C.A.) it was held that the trial Judge adopted too narrow a test when he refused a discharge because the registering of a conviction would have no immediate effect upon the accused's employment.

In R. v. Culley (1977), 36 C.C.C. (2d) 433 (Ont. C.A.) it was held that the trial Judge erred in refusing a discharge to a mature accused because he was of the view that the discharge provisions are primarily applicable to young offenders and on appeal a discharge was granted to a 26 year old accused for possession of a small quantity of marijuana where the registering of conviction would have serious repercussions to his future employment.

Procedure – The formal oral conviction by the trial Judge upon the jury's verdict of guilty being rendered does not preclude the Court from granting a discharge to the accused. Further, the phrase "in the proceedings commenced against him" relates to the proceedings only in respect of which he was found guilty and therefore, where an accused is found guilty of possession of a narcotic only, after a trial on a charge of possession for the purpose of trafficking, the accused can be discharged upon the charge of possession notwithstanding that the offence originally charged carries a maximum penalty of life imprisonment: R. v. Sampson (1975), 23 C.C.C. (2d) 65, 7 O.R. (2d) 65 (C.A.).

It is not possible to include as a condition of a probation order that the accused pay a fine: R. v. Carroll (1995), 38 C.R. (4th) 238, 92 W.A.C. 138 (B.C.C.A.).

Constitutional considerations – The subsequent conviction and sentence of an accused initially granted a conditional discharge, as a result of his commission of an offence while on probation, does not violate the guarantee against double jeopardy in s. 11(h) of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms: R. v. Elendiuk (1986), 27 C.C.C. (3d) 94, 22 C.R.R. 24 (Alta. C.A.).

Note: Sections 736.1 to 736.18 enacted by 1991, c. 43, s. 6 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council), however, s. 736.17 re-enacted by 1992, c. 20, s. 229 (to come into force when 1991, c. 43, s. 6 comes into force), but 1991, c. 43, s. 6 repealed by 1995, c. 22, s. 12 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The unproclaimed text printed in lightface italics reads as follows:

736.1. In this section and sections 736.11 to 736.18,

"assessment report" means a written report made pursuant to an assessment order made under section 672.11 by a psychiatrist who is entitled under the laws of a province to practise psychiatry or, where a psychiatrist is not practicably available, by a medical practitioner;

"hospital order" means an order by a court under section 736.11 that an offender be detained in a treatment facility;

"medical practitioner" means a person who is entitled to practise medicine by the laws of a province;

"treatment facility" means any hospital or place for treatment of the mental disorder of an offender, or a place within a class of such places, designated by the Governor in Council, the lieutenant governor in council of the province in which the offender is sentenced or a person to whom authority has been delegated in writing for that purpose by the Governor in Council or that lieutenant governor in council.

COURT MAY MAKE A HOSPITAL ORDER / Limitation on hospital order / Form / Warrant of committal.

736.11. (1) A court may order that an offender be detained in a treatment facility as the initial part of a sentence of imprisonment where it finds, at the time of sentencing, that the offender is suffering from a mental disorder in an acute phase and the court is satisfied, on the basis of an assessment report and any other evidence, that immediate treatment of the mental disorder is urgently required to prevent further significant deterioration of the mental or physical health of the offender, or to prevent the offender from causing serious bodily harm to any person.

(2) A hospital order shall be for a single period of treatment not exceeding sixty days, subject to any terms and conditions that the court considers appropriate.

(3) A hospital order may be in Form 51.

(4) A court that makes a hospital order shall issue a warrant for committal of the offender, which may be in Form 8.

RECOMMENDED TREATMENT FACILITY / Court chooses treatment facility.

736.12. (1) In a hospital order, the court shall specify that the offender be detained in a particular treatment facility recommended by the central administration of any penitentiary, prison or other institution to which the offender has been sentenced to imprisonment, unless the court is satisfied, on the evidence of a medical practitioner, that serious harm to the mental or physical health of the offender would result from travelling to that treatment facility or from the delay occasioned in travelling there.

(2) Where the court does not follow a recommendation referred to in subsection (1), it shall order that the offender be detained in a treatment facility that is reasonably accessible to the place where the accused is detained when the hospital order is made or to the place where the court is located.

CONDITION.

736.13. No hospital order may be made unless the offender and the person in charge of the treatment facility where the offender is to be detained consent to the order and its terms and conditions, but nothing in this section shall be construed as making unnecessary the obtaining of any authorization or consent to treatment from any other person that is or may be required otherwise than under this Act.

EXCEPTION.

736.14. No hospital order may be made in respect of an offender

- (a) who is convicted of or is serving a sentence imposed in respect of a conviction for an offence for which a minimum punishment of imprisonment for life is prescribed by law;
- (b) who has been found to be a dangerous offender pursuant to section 753;
- (c) where the term of imprisonment to be served by the offender does not exceed sixty days;
- (d) where the term of imprisonment is imposed
  - (i) on the offender in default of payment of a fine or of a victim fine surcharge imposed under subsection 727.9(1), or
  - (ii) under section 727.6 for failure or refusal to pay an amount by way of restitution pursuant to an order made under section 725 or 726; or
- (e) where the sentence of imprisonment imposed on the offender is ordered under paragraph 737(1)(c) to be served intermittently.

OFFENDER TO SERVE REMAINDER OF SENTENCE / Transfer from one treatment facility to another.

736.15. (1) An offender shall be sent or returned to a prison to serve the portion of the offender's sentence that remains unexpired where

- (a) the hospital order expires before the expiration of the sentence; or

(b) the consent to the detention of the offender in the treatment facility pursuant to the hospital order is withdrawn either by the offender or by the person in charge of the treatment facility.

(2) Before the expiration of a hospital order in respect of an offender, the offender may be transferred from the treatment facility specified in the hospital order to another treatment facility where treatment of the offender's mental disorder is available, if the court authorizes the transfer in writing and the person in charge of the treatment facility consents.

DETENTION TO COUNT AS SERVICE OF TERM.

736.16. Each day that an offender is detained under a hospital order shall be treated as a day of service of the term of imprisonment of the offender, and the offender shall be deemed, for all purposes, to be lawfully confined in a prison during that detention.

APPLICATION OF SECTION 12 OF CORRECTIONS AND CONDITIONAL RELEASE ACT.

736.17. Notwithstanding section 12 of the Corrections and Conditional Release Act, an offender in respect of whom a hospital order is made and who is sentenced or committed to a penitentiary may, during the period for which that order is in force, be received in a penitentiary before the expiration of the time limited by law for an appeal and shall be detained in the treatment facility specified in the order during that period.

COPY OF WARRANT AND ORDER GIVEN TO PRISON AND HOSPITAL.

736.18. Where a court makes a hospital order in respect of an offender, the court shall cause a copy of the order and of the warrant of committal issued pursuant to subsection 736.11(4) to be sent to the central administration of the penitentiary, prison or other institution where the term of imprisonment imposed on the offender is to be served and to the treatment facility where the offender is to be detained for treatment.

MAKING OF PROBATION ORDER / Conditions in probation order / Form and period of order / Proceedings on making of order.

737. (1) Where an accused is convicted of an offence, the court may, having regard to the age and character of the accused, the nature of the offence and the circumstances surrounding its commission,

- (a) in the case of an offence other than one for which a minimum punishment is prescribed by law, suspend the passing of sentence and direct that the accused be released on the conditions prescribed in a probation order;
- (b) in addition to fining the accused or sentencing him to imprisonment, whether in default of payment of a fine or otherwise, for a term not exceeding two years, direct that the accused comply with the conditions prescribed in a probation order; or
- (c) where it imposes a sentence of imprisonment on the accused, whether in default of payment of a fine or otherwise, that does not exceed ninety days, order that the sentence be served intermittently at such times as are specified in the order and direct that the accused, at all times when he is not in confinement pursuant to the order, comply with the conditions prescribed in a probation order.

(2) The following conditions shall be deemed to be prescribed in a probation order, namely, that the accused shall keep the peace and be of good behaviour and shall appear before the court when required to do so by the court, and, in addition, the court may prescribe as conditions in a probation order that the accused shall do any one or more of the following things as specified in the order, namely,

- (a) report to and be under the supervision of a probation officer or other person designated by the court;
  - (b) provide for the support of his spouse or any other dependants whom he is liable to support;
  - (c) abstain from the consumption of alcohol either absolutely or on such terms as the court may specify;
  - (d) abstain from owning, possessing or carrying a weapon;
  - (e) make restitution or reparation to any person aggrieved or injured by the commission of the offence for the actual loss or damage sustained by that person as a result thereof;
  - (f) remain within the jurisdiction of the court and notify the court or the probation officer or other person designated under paragraph (a) of any change in his address or his employment or occupation;
  - (g) make reasonable efforts to find and maintain suitable employment; and
  - (h) comply with such other reasonable conditions as the court considers desirable for securing the good conduct of the accused and for preventing a repetition by him of the same offence or the commission of other offences.
- (3) A probation order may be in Form 46, and the court that makes the probation order shall specify therein the period for which it is to remain in force.
- (4) Where the court makes a probation order, it shall
- (a) cause the order to be read by or to the accused;
  - (b) cause a copy of the order to be given to the accused; and
  - (c) inform the accused of the provisions of subsection 738(4) and the provisions of section 740. R.S., c. C-34, s. 663; 1972, c. 13, s. 58, 1974-75-76, c. 93, s. 81.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 738 governs the coming into force of the probation order with transfer of the order to another jurisdiction being provided for by s. 739. Under s. 740(1), the failure or refusal to comply with the order is a summary conviction offence. Sections 673 and 785(1) define dispositions under subsec. (1) as "sentences" under the appeal provisions, Parts XXI and XXVII.

Sections 100(1) and 100(2) are mandatory and discretionary provisions, respectively, regarding orders prohibiting an accused from having firearms, ammunition or explosive substances in his possession. Section 737(2)(d) allows the court to impose a probationary condition requiring the accused to abstain from owning, carrying or possessing a weapon. Under s. 737(2)(e), the court may specify in the order that the accused make restitution or reparation to any person aggrieved or injured by the commission of the offence. Provisions for orders of restitution are made under ss. 725 to 727.9.

SYNOPSIS

This section deals with the making of probation orders either in lieu of or in addition to other forms of punishment.

Having regard to the circumstances of the offence and the offender the court may order that an accused be bound by the terms of a probation order where: (a) no minimum sentence is prescribed by law, and the court suspends the sentence; (b) the accused is fined; or (c) a sentence not exceeding two years is imposed.

In addition, an accused sentenced to a term of not greater than 90 days on an intermittent basis (e.g., weekends) shall be subject to such an order while he or she is not in custody (subsec. (1)).

Subsection (2) sets out the standard conditions which are part of every order and delineates the other types of conditions that may be included by the court.

Where a probation order is made the court shall cause the order to be read by or to the accused and direct that a copy be given to the accused. The accused is to be informed of the consequences of breaching the order (see ss. 738(4), 740) (subsec. (4)).

ANNOTATIONS

Suspended sentence [subsec. 1(a)] – The court has no power to suspend sentence under subsec. (1)(a) and impose a fine in addition to probation: R. v. St. James (1981), 20 C.R. (3d) 389 (Que. C.A.); R. v. Polywjanyj (1982), 1 C.C.C. (3d) 161 (Ont. C.A.); R. v. Kelly (1995), 104 C.C.C. (3d) 95 (Nfld. C.A.).

As it is not the sentence itself, but its passing that is suspended a Court in exercising this power should not mention any fixed term of proposed incarceration, for in addition, to do so would place the Court in the position of binding itself should the accused be subsequently brought before it for sentence: R. v. Sangster (1973), 21 C.R.N.S.339 (Que. C.A.).

Power to make probation order [subsec. (1)(b)] – Probation may be imposed in addition to either a fine or imprisonment, but not in addition to both: R. v. Smith (1972), 7 C.C.C. (2d) 468 (N.W.T.T.C.); R. v. Blaquiere (1975), 24 C.C.C. (2d) 168 (Ont. C.A.); R. v. St. James (1981), 20 C.R. (3d) 389 (Que. C.A.).

Where, however, the court imposes an intermittent sentence under subsec. (1)(c), it may impose a fine, in addition to the mandatory probation order prescribed by that paragraph, for the times when the accused is not in confinement: R. v. Cartier (1990), 57 C.C.C. (3d) 569 (Que. C.A.).

Having regard to the intention manifested by para. (1)(b), a probation order should not be made where the combined period of imprisonment to which the accused will be subject would exceed two years, even if a particular single sentence does not exceed two years and could thus technically be joined with a probation order: R. v. Currie (1982), 65 C.C.C. (2d) 415, 27 C.R. (3d) 118 (Ont. C.A.). Similarly: R. v. Hackett (1986), 30 C.C.C. (3d) 159 (B.C.C.A.). And where a subsequent consecutive term of imprisonment is imposed which brings the total length of imprisonment to over two years, then the probation term attached to the original sentence becomes illegal: R. v. Miller (1987), 36 C.C.C. (3d) 100, 58 C.R. (3d) 396 (Ont. C.A.).

Where a judge imposes consecutive terms of imprisonment, the total term must not exceed two years if the judge also intends to impose a term of probation: R. v. Amaralik (1984), 16 C.C.C. (3d) 22 (N.W.T.C.A.).

One probation order may not be made consecutive to another: R. v. Hunt (1982), 2 C.C.C. (3d) 126, 55 N.S.R. (2d) 68 (S.C. App. Div.).

Terms of probation [subsec. (2)] / Principles generally – The $1,000 Court costs ordered to be paid as a term of probation was tantamount to the levying of a fine and as such was illegal as the trial Court had decreed the suspension of the passing of sentence: R. v. Pawlowski (1971), 5 C.C.C. (2d) 87, 16 C.R.N.S.313 (Man. C.A.).

In R. v. Caja and Billings (1977), 36 C.C.C. (2d) 401 (Ont. C.A.) it was held that a term of probation that the accused, who were convicted of theft, not apply for unemployment insurance was not authorized by the Criminal Code and the term was struck out. As well a term that the accused not take drugs or associate with drug users was also struck out, there being no indication that drugs were involved in the commission of the offence or that the accused used drugs.

Restitution and compensation [subsec. (2)] – Before making an order for reparations the Court should be satisfied that the accused has the ability to make the payments and the amount of reparations should only be for actual loss or damage sustained by the victim: R. v. Dashner (1973), 15 C.C.C. (2d) 139, 25 C.R.N.S. 340 (B.C.C.A.); R. v. Debaat (1992), 15 C.R. (4th) 226 (B.C.C.A.).

Subsection (2)(e) is intra vires Parliament for while the power to make a restitution order under this section affects property and civil rights, in pith and substance it is legislation in relation to sentencing and therefore within Parliament's criminal law power. The making of a restitution order under this subsection would not affect the victim's rights to also have civil damages assessed against the accused. However, the Court has no power under this section to award compensation to the victim for "pain and suffering".

The Court's power to order the accused to make restitution or reparations is limited to those damages which are relatively concrete and easily ascertainable in the nature of what would be special damages in a civil action: R. v. Groves (1977), 37 C.C.C. (2d) 429, 79 D.L.R. (3d) 561 (Ont. H.C.J.).

A trial Judge may not delegate his sentencing function by empowering a probation officer to determine the method of making restitution of a fixed amount: R. v. Shorten and Shorten (1975), 29 C.C.C. (2d) 528, [1976] 3 W.W.R. 187 (B.C.C.A.).

Community service – Paragraph (h) authorizes the imposition of voluntary community service as a term of probation: R. v. Shaw and Brehn (1977), 36 C.R.N.S. 358 (Ont. C.A.).

Prohibition on driving – A condition of a probation order, such as a prohibition on driving, may not be imposed as an additional punishment: R. v. Ziatas (1973), 13 C.C.C. (2d) 287 (Ont. C.A.) although in a proper case the Judge may make a suspension of a driver's licence under para. (h): R. v. Lavender (1981), 59 C.C.C. (2d) 551 (B.C.C.A.).

Treatment – A probation order requiring the accused to reside at a community training residence and participate in the programme at the residence does not constitute the unlawful imposition of a term of imprisonment, notwithstanding the residence is designated as a correctional facility and the rules of the residence do not permit the person to be absent without permission: R. v. Degan (1985), 20 C.C.C. (3d) 293 (Sask. C.A.).

While a term that the young accused attend for treatment, for a severe personality disorder and a serious drug problem, at a particular treatment centre was a reasonable condition within the meaning of para. (h), where the centre is outside of Canada such a condition should only be imposed in exceptional cases. Moreover, as there might be some doubt as to the legality of such a condition since it could be viewed as imposing a term of exile on the accused, the condition can only be imposed where the accused consents: R. v. Chisholm (1985), 18 C.C.C. (3d) 518 (N.S.S.C. App. Div.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused loc. cit.

A term of a probation order, compelling an accused to take psychiatric treatment or medication, is an unreasonable restraint upon the liberty or security of the person and contrary to the principles of fundamental justice as guaranteed by s. 7 of the Charter. Such a restraint will only constitute a reasonable limit in exceptional circumstances. It may be that, in the result, in some circumstances a probation order will not offer the public sufficient protection and only a period of incarceration will suffice. On the other hand, a probation order could contain terms requiring the accused to take reasonable steps to maintain himself in such a condition that his mental illness will not likely cause him to be a danger to himself or to others or to commit other offences; such an order could require the accused to attend for recommended medical counselling and treatment, though he need not submit to any treatment or medication to which he does not consent: R. v. Rogers (1990), 61 C.C.C. (3d) 481, 2 C.R. (4th) 192 (B.C.C.A.).

In R. v. Kieling (1991), 64 C.C.C. (3d) 124 (Sask. C.A.) the court held that a judge has no power to impose a term requiring the accused to take medication. The power to make such a term is not given expressly and is not a reasonable condition within the meaning of subsec. (2)(h) which must be interpreted as referring to conditions which do not have negative consequences and do not present a risk to the accused.

However, compare R. v. Hynes (1991), 64 C.C.C. (3d) 421, 89 Nfld. & P.E.I.R. 316 (Nfld. C.A.) where the court reduced a sentence of imprisonment because the original sentence was disproportionate and could not be justified merely because of the accused's mental problems. In such circumstances, a probation order incorporating rehabilitative measures including a term that the accused abide by all directions given with respect to psychiatric treatment and for the taking of medically prescribed drugs, was justified.

Banishment and similar terms – In R. v. Malboeuf (1982), 68 C.C.C. (2d) 544, [1982] 4 W.W.R. 573 (Sask. C.A.) the Court considered a term of probation which had the effect of banishing the accused from his home community. In the result, the Court quashed the term but stated obiter that while such terms should not be encouraged they might not be inappropriate in every case. There should, however, at least be an indication that communities have entered into arrangements sanctioning or providing for an exchange of undesirable individuals.

It was not inappropriate to impose a term of probation on a young accused, with a record for drug offences, that he refrain from entering an area of the city which was notorious for drug trafficking: R. v. Pedersen (1986), 31 C.C.C. (3d) 574 (B.C. Co. Ct.).

Other terms – It is inappropriate to impose what is in effect a custodial term as a condition of probation, for example that the accused attend at the local jail for a number of consecutive hours on a certain number of days in a month: R. v. L (1986), 50 C.R. (3d) 398 (Alta. C.A.).

In a proper case, it was open to the court to make it a term of probation that the accused be strictly confined to his home except for absences for employment or otherwise as may be approved by a probation officer. Such a term may be an appropriate alternative to imprisonment: R. v. M. (D.E.S.) (1993), 80 C.C.C. (3d) 371, 21 C.R. (4th) 55, 40 W.A.C. 305 (B.C.C.A.).

In R. v. McLeod (1993), 81 C.C.C. (3d) 83, 109 Sask. R. 8 (C.A.) the court discussed the principles which should apply in imposing terms of intensive probation and electronic monitoring where the need for general deterrence did not require a sentence of imprisonment.

Intermittent sentence [subsec. (1)(c)] – The Judge must clearly and definitely set out those periods when the accused is to be incarcerated and may not merely order that the sentence be served on days of the accused's own choosing: R. v. Downe, Smith and Dow (1978), 44 C.C.C. (2d) 468, 17 Nfld. & P.E.I.R. 87 (P.E.I.S.C. in banco).

The limit of 90 days is the length of the sentence, not the time period within which it must be served: R. v. Lyall (1974), 18 C.C.C. (2d) 381, [1974] 6 W.W.R.479 (B.C.C.A.).

There is no power to impose consecutive 90-day sentences to be served intermittently: R. v. Fletcher (1982), 2 C.C.C. (3d) 221 (Ont. C.A.); R. v. Aubin (1992), 72 C.C.C. (3d) 189 (Que. C.A.); R. v. Drost (1996), 29 W.C.B. (2d) 530 (N.B.C.A.).

Where the Court exercises its discretion under subsec. (1)(c) the period of probation may not exceed the period of time during which the accused is serving the intermittent sentence: Demedeiros v. The Queen (1979), 12 C.R. (3d) 113 (B.C.C.A.); R. v. Thomas (No. 2) (1980), 53 C.C.C. (2d) 285 (B.C.C.A.). Contra: R. v. Weber (1980), 52 C.C.C. (2d) 468 (Ont. C.A.) where the Court held that the Judge may impose an additional term of probation under subsec. (1)(b) even where he imposes an intermittent sentence together with the mandatory period of probation required by this subsection.

Notwithstanding para. (1)(b), where the court imposes an intermittent sentence under subsec. (1)(c), it may also impose a fine, in addition to the mandatory probation order prescribed by that latter paragraph, for the times when the accused is not in confinement: R. v. Cartier, supra.

Formalities in probation order [subsecs. (3) and (4)] – An accused is not bound by a probation order which does not specify within it the period for which it is to remain in force: R. v. Foulston (1983), 6 C.C.C. (3d) 236, 26 Sask. R. 271 (Q.B.).

The provisions of subsec. (4) are administrative and are delegable once the probation order is made by the presiding Judge. The accused need not be informed of the consequences of a breach of probation by the Judge personally: R. v. Sterner (1982), 64 C.C.C. (2d) 160n, [1982] 1 S.C.R. 173, 14 Sask. R. 79 (S.C.C.) (7:0), affg 60 C.C.C. (2d) 68, 9 Sask. R. 264 (C.A.).

COMING INTO FORCE OF ORDER / Duration of order and limit on term of order / Modification of order / Modification of order where person bound convicted of offence / Compelling appearance of person bound.

738. (1) A probation order comes into force

(a) on the date on which the order is made; or

(b) where the accused is sentenced to imprisonment under paragraph 737(1)(b) otherwise than in default of payment of a fine, on the expiration of that sentence.

(2) Subject to subsection (4),

(a) where an accused who is bound by a probation order is convicted of an offence, including an offence under section 740, or is imprisoned under paragraph 737(1)(b) in default of payment of a fine, the order continues in force except in so far as the sentence renders it impossible for the accused for the time being to comply with the order; and

(b) no probation order shall continue in force for more than three years from the date on which the order came into force.

(3) Where a court has made a probation order, the court may at any time, on application by the accused or the prosecutor, require the accused to appear before it and, after hearing the accused and the prosecutor,

(a) make any changes in or additions to the conditions prescribed in the order that in the opinion of the court are rendered desirable by a change in the circumstances since the conditions were prescribed,

(b) relieve the accused, either absolutely or on such terms or for such period as the court deems desirable, of compliance with any condition described in any of paragraphs 737(2)(a) to (h) that is prescribed in the order, or

(c) decrease the period for which the probation order is to remain in force, and the court shall thereupon endorse the probation order accordingly and, if it changes or adds to the conditions prescribed in the order, inform the accused of its action and give him a copy of the order so endorsed.

(4) Where an accused who is bound by a probation order is convicted of an offence, including an offence under section 740, and

(a) the time within which an appeal may be taken against that conviction has expired and he has not taken an appeal,

(b) he has taken an appeal against that conviction and the appeal has been dismissed, or

(c) he has given written notice to the court that convicted him that he elects not to appeal his conviction or has abandoned his appeal, as the case may be, in addition to any punishment that may be imposed for that offence, the court that made the probation order may, on application by the prosecutor, require the accused to appear before it and, after hearing the prosecutor and the accused,

(d) where the probation order was made under paragraph 737(1)(a), revoke the order and impose any sentence that could have been imposed if the passing of sentence had not been suspended, or

(e) make such changes in or additions to the conditions prescribed in the order as the court deems desirable or extend the period for which the order is to remain in force for such period, not exceeding one year, as the court deems desirable, and the court shall thereupon endorse the probation order accordingly and, if it changes or adds to the conditions prescribed in the order or extends the period for which the order is to remain in force, inform the accused of its action and to give him a copy of the order so endorsed.

(5) The provisions of Parts XVI and XVIII with respect to compelling the appearance of an accused before a justice apply with such modifications as the circumstances require to proceedings under subsections (3) and (4). R.S., c. C-34, s. 664.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The definitions of “sentence” under ss. 673 and 785 include dispositions under subsecs. (3) and (4) for the appeal provisions, Parts XXI and XXVII.

Section 11(i) of the Charter allows the accused the benefit of the lesser punishment in cases where the offence’s punishment is varied between commission of offence and the time of sentencing. This principle can be applied by s. 738(4)(d) which deals with the revocation of a probation order and imposition of sentence in its place.

SYNOPSIS

This section deals with matters such as the duration of probation orders and modifications thereto.

A probation order takes effect when it is made except where the accused is also sentenced to a period of imprisonment. In the latter situation it comes into force when the accused is released from custody (subsec. (1)). No order shall remain in force for more than three years (subsec. (2)(b)).

Except to the extent that the accused is not in a position to comply with the terms of a probation order, it continues in force notwithstanding the fact that the accused is subsequently convicted of an offence or imprisoned for non-payment of a fine (subsec. (2)(a)).

The court may, upon the application of either the Crown or the accused, change the conditions of the order or decrease its term (subsec. (3)).

Where an accused bound by an order is convicted of an offence he or she may be brought back before the court which made the order (on the application of the prosecutor) at which time the court may: (a) revoke the order and pass any sentence which might have previously been imposed; or (b) modify the conditions of the order or extend its term for up to one year (subsec. (4)).

The normal rules with respect to compelling the accused to attend before the court apply with respect to proceedings to modify the order or “re-sentence” the accused (subsec. (5)).

ANNOTATIONS

Variations of terms of probation [subsec. (3)] – In R. v. Muise (1980), 56 C.C.C. (2d) 191, 44 N.S.R. (2d) 324 (S.C. App. Div.) an order varying the terms was set aside on appeal by the Crown where the variation was made by the trial Judge on an ex parte application by the accused without the Crown being given an opportunity to make representations.

Where the probation order is made by the Court of Appeal on a sentence appeal pursuant to s. 687 then both the Court of Appeal and by virtue of s. 687(2) the original sentencing Judge has jurisdiction to vary the order. Where the application to vary is made to the Court of Appeal any panel of Judges of that Court may make the variation not necessarily the same panel which heard the original appeal: R. v. H. (1983), 6 C.C.C. (3d) 382, [1983] 5 W.W.R. 94 sub nom. A. - G. Alta. v. H. (Alta. C.A.).

On an application by the accused to vary the terms of probation it is not open to the judge to revoke the suspended sentence and impose a term of imprisonment. Prior to revocation of the suspended sentence there must be an application by the prosecutor so as to give the accused notice and enable him to make proper answer and defence: R. v. Lake (1986), 27 C.C.C. (3d) 305 (N.S.C.A.).

Revocation of probation [subsec. (4)] – A probationee’s conviction of a provincial offence must be proven either by his admission or in the normal manner and he must be given an opportunity to present his case and give his explanation before the Court may adjudicate upon a breach of probation complaint: R. v. Borland, [1970] 2 C.C.C. 172, 5 C.R.N.S. 251 (N.W.T.T.C.).

Unless there is proper transfer procedure only the original convicting Court should revoke a suspended sentence and impose sentence: R. v. Graham (1975), 27 C.C.C. (2d) 475 (Ont. C.A.).

Where an application is made by a prosecutor under subsec. (4) the basic principles of natural justice apply. Accordingly, although the Criminal Code does not require an information on oath, the minimum requirement is that the accused, before being brought before the Judge, should be given reasonable notice in writing of the Crown's intention to take such proceedings, which notice should clearly articulate the nature of the proceedings, the grounds upon which the Crown intends to rely in support of its application, the nature of the order sought, and the hearing date. As well, the accused must be given a fair opportunity to make full answer and defence. Further, in imposing sentence under this subsection the Judge must consider that although it may be that the accused by his conduct has forfeited his right to leniency the function of the trial Judge is then to impose a sentence proportionate to the offence which the accused had committed. It is wrong therefore for the Judge at the time he suspends the passing of sentence to indicate that if the probation is breached he will be given any particular term, such as a penitentiary term of imprisonment: R. v. Tuckey (1977), 34 C.C.C. (2d) 572 (Ont. C.A.).

Where the Court revokes the probation order because of commission of an offence while on probation it has no power to make the sentence consecutive to the sentence imposed for the offence which brought about the termination of the probation: R. v. Oakes (1977), 37 C.C.C. (2d) 84 (Ont. C.A.) and Ex p. Risby (1975), 24 C.C.C. (2d) 211, [1975] W.W.D. 880 (B.C.S.C.); R. v. Clermont (1986), 30 C.C.C. (3d) 571 (Que. C.A.), affd 45 C.C.C. (3d) 480, [1988] 2 S.C.R. 171 (5:0).

Once the probation order has expired the Court has no jurisdiction to revoke it and impose sentence, even where the act giving rise to the Crown's application occurred during the currency of the probation order: Re R. and Paquette (1980), 53 C.C.C. (2d) 281 (Alta. Q.B.). On the other hand, if the probation is revoked prior to its expiration, the Judge may adjourn the imposition of sentencing and impose sentence at a time beyond the period when the probation order would have expired had it not been revoked: Re Montanaro and The Queen (1980), 55 C.C.C. (2d) 143, 15 C.R. (3d) 346 (Que. C.A.).

At least where the original probation order only contained the statutory terms and terms requiring the accused to abstain from consumption of alcohol, to report to a probation officer and to notify the officer and the Court of change of address or employment, then revocation of the order and imposition of a sentence of imprisonment under para. (d) would not violate the protection against double punishment in s. 11(h) of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms: R. v. Linklater (1983), 9 C.C.C. (3d) 217 (Y.T.C.A.).

TRANSFER OF ORDER / Where court unable to act.

739. (1) Where an accused who is bound by a probation order becomes a resident of, or is convicted or discharged under section 736 of an offence including an offence under section 740 in a territorial division, other than the territorial division where the order was made, the court that made the order may, on the application of the prosecutor, and, if both such territorial divisions are not in the same province, with the consent of

(a) the Attorney General of Canada, in the case of proceedings in relation to an offence that were instituted at the instance of the Government of Canada and conducted by or on behalf of that Government, or

(b) in any other case, the Attorney General of the province in which the order was made, transfer the order to a court in that other territorial division that would, having regard to the mode of trial of the accused, have had jurisdiction to make the order in that other territorial division if the accused had been tried and convicted there of the offence in respect of which the order was made, and the order may thereafter be dealt with and enforced by the court to which it is so transferred in all respects as if that court had made the order.

(2) Where a court that has made a probation order or to which a probation order has been transferred pursuant to subsection (1) is for any reason unable to act, the powers of that court in relation to the probation order may be exercised by any other court that has equivalent jurisdiction in the same province. R.S., c. C-34, s. 665; 1974-75-76, c. 93, s. 82; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 163.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides a mechanism for transferring probation orders from one jurisdiction to another. Where it is sought to transfer the order from one province to another consent must be obtained from (a) the Attorney General of Canada with respect to federal prosecutions, or (b) the Attorney General of the province in which the order was made in all other cases (subsec. (1)).

If the judge who made the order or the one to whom it has been transferred is unable to act, the court's powers may be exercised by any other court that has equivalent jurisdiction in the same province (subsec. (2)).

FAILURE TO COMPLY WITH ORDER / Where accused may be tried and punished.

740. (1) An accused who is bound by a probation order and who wilfully fails or refuses to comply with that order is guilty of an offence punishable on summary conviction.

(2) An accused who is charged with an offence under subsection (1) may be tried and punished by any court having jurisdiction to try that offence in the place where the offence is alleged to have been committed or in the place where the accused is found, is arrested or is in custody, but where the place where the accused is found, is arrested or is in custody is outside the province in which the offence is alleged to have been committed, no proceedings in respect of that offence shall be instituted in that place without the consent of the Attorney General of that province. R.S., c. C-34, s. 666.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 737(4) provides that the court must inform the accused of the contents of this section and s. 738(4) when making a probation order. The Crown is permitted to apply to have the probation order of the original conviction revoked (or varied) and a sentence imposed as required under s. 738(4).

This section creates a specific exception to s. 478(1) which provides that a court in one province cannot try an offence committed entirely in another province.

ANNOTATIONS

Mens rea – Where the accused simply did not have the financial capacity to pay the restitution ordered as part of a probation order then it could not be said that he “wilfully” breached the order and a charge under this section must be dismissed: R. v. Sugg (1986), 28 C.C.C. (3d) 569 (N.S.C.A.).

Where the Crown, in order to prove an offence under this section, relies on the commission of a criminal offence, proof of commission of that offence constitutes the actus reus of the offence under this section but is not itself even prima facie proof of an intent to breach the probation order. An honest but mistaken belief by the accused that he was not committing the criminal offence alleged to constitute the breach means that he cannot be said to have wilfully failed or refused to comply with the probation order. In this respect s. 19, which provides that ignorance of the law is no defence, is of no application since knowledge by the accused that his act is contrary to law is an element of the mens rea of the offence under this section: R. v. Docherty (1989), 51 C.C.C. (3d) 1, [1989] 2 S.C.R. 941, 72 C.R. (3d) 1, 17 M.V.R. (2d) 161 (7:0).

Proof of breach of probation order – Where an accused fails to comply with the term of a probation order requiring him to make compensation by a certain date then the offence under this section is complete on that date and the six-month limitation period prescribed by s. 786(2) runs from that date rather than the date that the probation order expires: R. v. Brown (1984), 13 C.C.C. (3d) 469, 48 Nfld. & P.E.I.R. 172 (Nfld. S.C.T.D.).

Once the Crown proves failure to comply with a term of probation order requiring the accused to make periodic payments of restitution, the accused, in the absence of an explanation, runs the risk of conviction. There is no onus on the Crown to lead evidence to negative a possible defence such as inability to pay: R. v. Collard (1987), 39 C.C.C. (3d) 471, 49 Man. R. (2d) 175, [1987] 6 W.W.R. 564 (C.A.).

Breach of the statutory term that the accused “keep the peace and be of good behaviour” so as to amount to an offence under this section may include conduct not amounting to a criminal offence. This would include conduct which might violate a provincial or municipal enactment: R. v. Stone (1985), 22 C.C.C. (3d) 249 (Nfld. S.C.T.D.).

Proof of validity of probation order [Also see notes under s. 737] – The Crown must prove compliance with s. 737(4): R. v. Piche (1976), 31 C.C.C. (2d) 150, [1976] 5 W.W.R. 459 (Sask. Q.B.).

A signed acknowledgement by the accused on the probation order that he has been advised of the provisions referred to in s. 737(4) is direct evidence that that subsection has been complied with unless contradicted by other evidence and there is no need to call the Court official at the accused's trial for an offence under this section to prove compliance: R. v. McNamara (1982), 66 C.C.C. (2d) 24, 36 O.R. (2d) 308 (C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused C.C.C. loc. cit., O.R. loc. cit.

An accused may not be convicted of the offence under this section where there has not been full compliance with the provisions of subsec. 737(4)(c). Thus even though the accused was informed of the provisions of this section as she was not informed of the provisions of subsec. 738(4) she was not bound by the probation order and could not therefore be convicted of a breach of that order: R. v. Bara (1981), 58 C.C.C. (2d) 243 (B.C.C.A.) (2:1).

The mere filing of a notice of appeal does not operate to stay or suspend the operation of the sentence imposed at trial and thus an accused may be convicted of this offence notwithstanding that at the time of the alleged failure to comply the underlying conviction was under appeal: R. v. Trabulsey (1993), 84 C.C.C. (3d) 240, 15 O.R. (3d) 52 (Gen. Div.).

Double jeopardy – The rule against multiple convictions enunciated in Kienapple v. The Queen (1974), 15 C.C.C. (2d) 524, 44 D.L.R. (3d) 351, [1975] 1 S.C.R. 729 has no application although the accused was previously convicted of an offence which was alleged to be the foundation for the charge under this section: R. v. Pinkerton (1979), 46 C.C.C. (2d) 284, 7 C.R. (3d) 39, [1979] 3 W.W.R. 241 (B.C.C.A.).

The double jeopardy guarantee in s. 11(h) of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms is not offended by the accused's conviction for the offence under this section although it is based on his conviction for another offence, break and enter, under the Criminal Code: Daniels v. The Queen (1985), 44 C.R. (3d) 184 (Sask. Q.B.).

Sentencing – Where an accused has been convicted of an offence while on probation and the fact that he was on probation was taken into account at that time the trial Judge in imposing sentence for breach of probation arising out of the same circumstances is bound to consider the punishment imposed previously for the same conduct and accordingly does not err by imposing a nominal sentence for the breach of probation charge. Any sentence other than a nominal one would come close to violating the fundamental principle that no one is to undergo double punishment: R. v. Chinn (1977), 38 C.C.C. (2d) 45, [1978] 1 W.W.R. 418 (Alta. Dist. Ct.).

Jurisdiction – By virtue of subsec. (2), notwithstanding the probation order had never been transferred to Saskatchewan, the courts of that province had jurisdiction to try an offence under this section where the breach took place in Saskatchewan although the probation order was made in Manitoba: R. v. Michelle (1986), 28 C.C.C. (3d) 572 (Sask. Q.B.).

741. [Repealed. R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 163.]

Dispositions Against Young Persons

TRANSFER OF JURISDICTION / Whether sentence to be served concurrently or consecutively / Remaining portion deemed to constitute one sentence.

741.1 (1) Where a person is or has been sentenced for an offence while subject to a disposition made under paragraph 20(1)(j), (k) or (k.1) of the Young Offenders Act, on the application of the Attorney General or the Attorney General's agent, a court of criminal jurisdiction may, unless to so order would bring the administration of justice into disrepute, order that the remaining portion of the disposition made under that Act be dealt with, for all purposes under this Act or any other Act of Parliament, as if it had been a sentence imposed under this Act.

(2) Where an order is made under subsection (1), in respect of a disposition made under paragraph 20(1)(k) or (k.1) of the Young Offenders Act, the remaining portion of the disposition to be served pursuant to the order shall be served concurrently with the sentence referred to in subsection (1), where it is a term of imprisonment, unless the court making the order orders that it be served consecutively.

(3) For greater certainty, the remaining portion of the disposition referred to in subsection (2) shall, for the purposes of section 139 of the Corrections and Conditional Release Act and section 731 of this Act, be deemed to constitute one sentence of imprisonment. R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 47; 1992, c. 11, s. 14; 1992, c. 20, s. 202; 1995, c. 19, s. 37.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 20(1)(i) of the Young Offenders Act allows a young person to be placed on probation for a specified period not exceeding two years in accordance with s. 23. Section 20(1)(k) of that Act provides for custody orders of up to two years in most cases and three years if the offence is punishable by imprisonment for life under the Criminal Code or other federal Act. The definition of "Attorney General" can be located in s. 2.

The phrase "would bring the administration of justice into disrepute" is also contained in s. 24 of the Charter. This section deals with the exclusion of evidence.

SYNOPSIS

This section deals with situations where a person bound by a probation order or subject to a custodial sentence imposed under the Young Offenders Act is before a court as an adult to be sentenced for another offence.

The court, upon application by the Crown, can order that any remaining portion of the disposition made by the youth court be dealt with under the provisions of the Criminal Code (subsec. (1)), but only if such an order would not bring the administration of justice into disrepute.

Unless otherwise ordered the remaining portion of the youth court custodial sentence will be served concurrently (subsec. (2)). Both sentences are treated as one order for the purposes of determining: (a) where the prisoner is to be incarcerated (see s. 731); and (b) parole (subsec. (3)).

Eligibility for Parole

POWER OF COURT TO DELAY PAROLE / Principles that are to guide the court.

741.2. (1) Notwithstanding subsection 120(1) of the Corrections and Conditional Release Act, where an offender receives, on or after November 1, 1992, a sentence of imprisonment of two years or more, including a sentence of imprisonment for life imposed otherwise than as a minimum punishment, on conviction for an offence set out in Schedule I or II to that Act that was prosecuted by way of indictment, the court may, if satisfied, having regard to the circumstances of the commission of the offence and the character and circumstances of the offender, that the expression of society's denunciation of the offence or the objective of specific or general deterrence so requires, order that the portion of the sentence that must be served before the offender may be released on full parole is one half of the sentence or ten years, whichever is less.

(2) For greater certainty, the paramount principles which are to guide the court under this section are denunciation and specific or general deterrence, with rehabilitation of the offender, in all cases, being subordinate to these paramount principles. 1992, c. 20, s. 203; 1995, c. 42, s. 75.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 120 of the Corrections and Conditional Release Act sets out the normal periods of parole eligibility which, in most circumstances, will be one-third of the sentence or seven years, whichever is the lesser. Section 120(4) and (5) of the Act set out the manner for calculating parole ineligibility where an offender while serving sentence for one offence, for which no order has been made under this section, is sentenced for a further offence in which an order is made under this section.

Schedules I and II to the Corrections and Conditional Release Act are as follows:

SCHEDULE I

1. An offence under any of the following provisions of the Criminal Code:

- (a) paragraph 81(2)(a) (causing injury with intent);
- (b) section 85 (use of firearm during commission of offence);
- (c) subsection 86(1) (pointing a firearm);
- (d) section 144 (prison breach);
- (e) section 151 (sexual interference);
- (f) section 152 (invitation to sexual touching);
- (g) section 153 (sexual exploitation);
- (h) section 155 (incest);
- (i) section 159 (anal intercourse);
- (j) section 160 (bestiality, compelling, in presence of or by child);
- (k) section 170 (parent or guardian procuring sexual activity by child);
- (l) section 171 (householder permitting sexual activity by or in presence of child);
- (m) section 172 (corrupting children);
- (n) subsection 212(2) (living off the avails of prostitution by a child);
- (o) subsection 212(4) obtaining sexual services of a child);
- (p) section 236 (manslaughter);
- (q) section 239 (attempt to commit murder);

- (r) section 244 (causing bodily harm with intent);
- (s) section 246 (overcoming resistance to commission of offence);
- (t) section 266 (assault);
- (u) section 267 (assault with a weapon or causing bodily harm);
- (v) section 268 (aggravated assault);
- (w) section 269 (unlawfully causing bodily harm);
- (x) section 270 (assaulting a peace officer);
- (y) section 271 (sexual assault);
- (z) section 272 (sexual assault with a weapon, threats to a third party or causing bodily harm);
- (z.1) section 273 (aggravated sexual assault);
- (z.2) section 279 (kidnapping);
- (z.3) section 344 (robbery)
- (z.4) section 433 (arson - disregard for human life);
- (z.5) section 434.1 (arson - own property);
- (z.6) section 436 (arson by negligence); and
- (z.7) paragraph 465(1)(a) (conspiracy to commit murder).

2. An offence under any of the following provisions of the Criminal Code, as they read immediately before July 1, 1990:

- (a) section 433 (arson);
- (b) section 434 (setting fire to other substance); and
- (c) section 436 (setting fire by negligence).

3. An offence under any of the following provisions of the Criminal Code, chapter C-34 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1970, as they read immediately before January 4, 1983:

- (a) section 144 (rape)
- (b) section 145 (attempt to commit rape);
- (c) section 149 (indecent assault on female);
- (d) section 156 (indecent assault on male);
- (e) section 245 (common assault); and
- (f) section 246 (assault with intent).

SCHEDULE II

1. An offence under any of the following provisions of the Narcotic Control Act:

- (a) section 4 (trafficking);
- (b) section 5 (importing and exporting);
- (c) section 6 (cultivation);
- (d) section 19.1 (possession of property obtained by certain offences); and
- (e) section 19.2 (laundering proceeds of certain offences).

2. An offence under any of the following provisions of the Food and Drugs Act:

- (a) section 39 (trafficking in controlled drug);
- (b) section 44.2 (possession of property obtained by trafficking in controlled drug);
- (c) section 44.3 (laundering proceeds of trafficking in controlled drug);
- (d) section 48 (trafficking in restricted drug);
- (e) section 50.2 (possession of property obtained by trafficking in restricted drug); and
- (f) section 50.3 (laundering proceeds of trafficking in restricted drug).

SYNOPSIS

This section gives the court the power to set the period of parole ineligibility for certain specified offences. Those offences, generally speaking, are the various sexual offences, crimes of violence and various drug offences. The period of parole ineligibility can only be increased to one-half of the sentence imposed, or 10 years whichever is less.

ANNOTATIONS

In view of s. 11(i) of the Charter, this section does not apply to offences committed prior to the effective date of this section [November 1, 1992]: R. v. Boone (1993), 88 Man. R. (2d) 110 (C.A.); R. v. C. (T.J.) (1993), 86 C.C.C. (3d) 181, 51 W.A.C. 183, 88 Man. R. (2d) 183, 18 C.R.R. (2d) 340 (C.A.); R. v. Lambert (1994), 93 C.C.C. (3d) 88, 123 Nfld. & P.E.I.R. 347, 26 C.R.R. (2d) 367 (Nfld. C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused 94

C.C.C. (3d) vii; R. v. Ferris (1994), 93 C.C.C. (3d) 497, 35 C.R. (4th) 52, 153 N.B.R. (2d) 241 (C.A.); R. v. Richard (1994), 94 C.C.C. (3d) 285, 135 N.S.R. (2d) 318 (C.A.).

An order may be made under this section where the accused was convicted of an offence listed in Schedules I and II of the Corrections and Conditional Release Act and sentenced to life imprisonment (where life imprisonment is not a minimum punishment): R. v. Shorting (1995), 102 C.C.C. (3d) 385, [1996] 1 W.W.R. 252 (Man. C.A.).

This section does not apply to the offence of breaking and entering and committing an indictable offence pursuant to s. 348(1)(b) even if the indictable offence committed, which in this case was aggravated assault, is a listed offence as s. 348(1)(b) is not a listed offence: R. v. Nichol (1995), 102 C.C.C. (3d) 441, 86 O.A.C. 47 (C.A.).

The word "trafficking" following the phrase "section 4" in s. 1(a) of Schedule II to the Corrections and Conditional Release Act is inserted for ease of reference only and Parliament clearly intended that both the trafficking offence and possession for the purpose of trafficking contrary to s. 4 of the Narcotic Control Act be subject to the same penalty, including the possibility of an order under this section: R. v. Dankyi (1993), 86 C.C.C. (3d) 368, 25 C.R. (4th) 395, [1993] R.J.Q. 2767 (C.A.).

The scope of permissible sentences for an offence such as possession of narcotics for the purpose of trafficking is itself wide enough to accommodate the best and the worst cases and thus an order under this section can only be justified as an exceptional measure reserved for particular circumstances requiring an additional form of denunciation, deterrence or incapacitation. The trial judge must clearly enunciate the specific reasons for increasing the ordinary period of ineligibility for parole: R. v. Dankyi, supra.

The phrase "the expression of society's denunciation of the offence" is not so vague as to offend principles of fundamental justice: R. v. Warren (1994), 95 C.C.C. (3d) 86, 85 W.A.C. 81, 128 Sask. R. 81 (C.A.).

This section should only be invoked as an exceptional measure where the Crown has satisfied the court on clear evidence that an increase in the period of parole ineligibility is required. There should be an articulable reason for invoking this section and the trial judge should give clear and specific reasons for the order. General concerns, such as the frequency of commission of the particular offence in the community, will not justify an order under this section: R. v. Goulet (1995), 97 C.C.C. (3d) 61, 22 O.R. (3d) 118, 37 C.R. (4th) 373 (C.A.).

The application of this provision is not limited to cases where there are special circumstances, unusual circumstances or particularly aggravating factors. The trial judge should first determine the fit sentence and then go on to consider whether an increase in parole ineligibility is warranted. A judge may make an order pursuant to this provision only if convinced that the objectives of society's denunciation or specific or general deterrence will not be met unless the possibility of early release on full parole is barred having regard to the circumstances of the offence, the character and circumstances of the offender, the likelihood of rehabilitation within the regular period of parole ineligibility and the need to protect society: R. v. Matwiy (unreported, February 15, 1996, Alta. C.A.) [096/058/046-35 pp.].

Imprisonment for Life

SENTENCE OF LIFE IMPRISONMENT.

742. Subject to s. 742.1, the sentence to be pronounced against a person who is to be sentenced to imprisonment for life shall be

- (a) in respect of a person who has been convicted of high treason or first degree murder, that he be sentenced to imprisonment for life without eligibility for parole until he has served twenty-five years of his sentence;

- (a.1) in respect of a person who has been convicted of second degree murder where that person has previously been convicted of culpable homicide that is murder, however described under this Act, that he be sentenced to imprisonment for life without eligibility for parole until he has served twenty-five years of his sentence;
- (b) in respect of a person who has been convicted of second degree murder, that he be sentenced to imprisonment for life without eligibility for parole until he has served at least ten years of his sentence or such greater number of years, not being more than twenty-five years, as has been substituted therefor pursuant to section 744; and
- (c) in respect of a person who has been convicted of any other offence, that he be sentenced to imprisonment for life with normal eligibility for parole. R.S., c. C-34, s. 669; 1974-75-76, c. 105, s. 21; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 165; 1992, c. 11, s. 15.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See s. 46(1) for the definition of “high treason” and s. 47(1) for its punishment. Sections 229 and 230 define murder with s. 231 providing the classification of murder for the purpose of sentencing.

Under s. 743, where a jury finds the accused guilty of second degree murder, the judge presiding at the trial must put to them the statutory questions concerning their recommendations as to parole ineligibility. Section 744 then is applied by the judge to set the period of ineligibility for parole.

An accused may apply for judicial review under s. 745 if the period of ineligibility is greater than 15 years and the person has served at least 15 years of the sentence.

In calculating the period of imprisonment for the purposes of ss. 742, 744 and 745, any time spent in custody before sentencing and after the date of arrest is to be included by s. 746.

See s. 747 which limits parole for those with parole ineligibilities.

In the case of a young person transferred to ordinary courts, a different sentencing regime applies, see ss. 742.1, 743.1 and 744.1.

SYNOPSIS

The parole ineligibility periods with respect to life sentences are: (a) 25 years for persons convicted of high treason or first degree murder (para. (a)); (b) 25 years for persons convicted of second degree murder who have previously been convicted of murder (para. (a.1)); (c) 10 years for persons convicted of second degree murder, unless the court has substituted a greater period not to exceed 25 years (para. (b)); and (d) the normal periods in all other cases (para. (c)) (i.e., pursuant to provincial or federal legislation, as the case may be, especially the Parole Act and Regulations).

ANNOTATIONS

The mandatory minimum sentence prescribed by para. (a) for a planned and deliberate murder does not infringe s. 12 of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms: R. v. Cairns (1989), 51 C.C.C. (3d) 90 (B.C.C.A.).

The combined effect of s. 231(5) and para. (a), requiring that a person convicted of first degree murder where the murder is committed while committing one of the offences, such as kidnapping, specified in s. 231(5) must be sentenced to life imprisonment without eligibility for parole for 25 years, does not infringe ss. 7, 9 and 12 of the Charter: R. v. Luxton (1990), 58 C.C.C. (3d) 449, [1990] 6 W.W.R. 137, 76 Alta. L.R. (2d) 43 (S.C.C.) (7:0).

To a similar effect, see R. v. Bowen (1990), 59 C.C.C. (3d) 515, 2 C.R. (4th) 225, [1991] 1 W.W.R. 466 (C.A.) and R. v. Lefebvre (1992), 45 Q.A.C. 47 (C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused June 18, 1992, upholding the validity of these provisions in relation to the first degree murder of a police officer as prescribed by s. 231(4).

Paragraph (a.1) applies only where the accused was convicted of the earlier murder prior to commission of the murder for which he is now being sentenced: R. v. Harris

The mandatory sentence prescribed by para. (b) does not offend s. 12 of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms: R. v. Mitchell (1987), 39 C.C.C. (3d) 141, 81 N.S.R. (2d) 57 (S.C. App. Div.); R. v. Latimer (1995), 99 C.C.C. (3d) 481, 126 D.L.R. (4th) 203, [1995] 8 W.W.R. 609 (Sask. C.A.).

PERSONS UNDER EIGHTEEN.

742.1. The sentence to be pronounced against a person who was under the age of eighteen at the time of the commission of the offence for which the person was convicted of first degree murder or second degree murder and who is to be sentenced to imprisonment for life shall be that the person be sentenced to imprisonment for life without eligibility for parole until the person has served

- (a) such period between five and seven years of the sentence as is specified by the judge presiding at the trial, or if no period is specified by the judge presiding at the trial, five years, in the case of a person who was under the age of sixteen at the time of the commission of the offence;
- (b) ten years, in the case of a person convicted of first degree murder who was sixteen or seventeen years of age at the time of the commission of the offence; and
- (c) seven years, in the case of a person convicted of second degree murder who was sixteen or seventeen years of age at the time of the commission of the offence. 1992, c. 11, s. 16; 1995, c. 19, s. 38.

SYNOPSIS

This section sets out the sentence for a young person who has been transferred to the ordinary courts on a charge of first degree or second degree murder. The provisions of this section apply to such young persons, rather than the provisions of s. 742. In the case of a trial by jury, the judge is required to put a question to the jury in the terms set out in s. 743.1. The judge then takes the jury's recommendation into account in fixing the period of parole ineligibility between five and ten years pursuant to s. 744.1. Note that if the accused is not transferred to the ordinary courts, then the provisions of s. 20(1)(k.1) of the Young Offenders Act apply and the offender is liable to a disposition of up to five years less one day.

RECOMMENDATION BY JURY.

743. Subject to section 743.1, where a jury finds an accused guilty of second degree murder, the judge presiding at the trial shall, before discharging the jury, put to them the following question:

You have found the accused guilty of second degree murder and the law requires that I now pronounce a sentence of imprisonment for life against the accused. Do you wish to make any recommendation with respect to the number of years that the accused must serve before the accused is eligible for release on parole? You are not required to make any recommendation but if you do, your recommendation will be considered by me when I am determining whether I should substitute for the ten year period, which the law would otherwise require the accused to serve before the accused is eligible to be considered for release on parole, a number of years that is more than ten but not more than twenty-five. R.S., c. C-34, s. 670; 1974-75-76, c. 105, s. 21; 1992, c. 11, s. 16.

CROSS-REFERENCES

In setting out the parole ineligibility period under s. 744, the judge is to take into consideration the recommendation of the jury. Judicial review under s. 745 is available when the ineligibility period is set at more than 15 years.

See s. 474 for limits on parole during the ineligibility period.

In the case of a young person transferred to ordinary courts, a different sentencing regime applies, see ss. 742.1, 743.1 and 744.1.

ANNOTATIONS

The jury is only to be asked for a recommendation where it finds the accused guilty after hearing all the evidence and counsels' addresses, not where it returns a verdict following the accused's guilty plea in the course of the trial: R. v. Larter and Burt (1982), 2 C.C.C. (3d) 240, 39 Nfld. & P.E.I.R. 178 (P.E.I.S.C. App. Div.); R. v. Kivell (1985), 21 C.C.C. (3d) 299 (B.C.C.A.). Contra: R. v. Oughton (February 11, 1985) unreported (Ont. C.A.).

The jury's recommendation under this section is to be based solely on the evidence leading to the conviction and the jury should hear no further evidence or argument for the purposes of a recommendation under this section. This section in effect constitutes a complete code: R. v. Nepoose (1988), 46 C.C.C. (3d) 421, 69 C.R. (3d) 59 (Alta. C.A.).

The fact that the jury makes no recommendation under this section is a factor to be taken into account but the Judge is still faced with the responsibility of imposing a fit sentence having regard to the factors set out in s. 744: R. v. Jordan (1983), 7 C.C.C. (3d) 143 (B.C.C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused Dec. 5, 1983.

The jury's recommendation under this section need not be unanimous and the trial judge ought not to express to the jury a preference for a unanimous recommendation: R. v. Brenn (1989), 8 W.C.B. (2d) 822 (Ont. C.A.).

To the contrary is R. v. Ameeriar (1990), 60 C.C.C. (3d) 431 (Que. C.A.), where the court held that the trial judge properly directed the jury that any recommendation must be unanimous and that, if they failed to make a recommendation, the jury should indicate whether this was because they were not unanimous or because they all agreed not to make any recommendation. Where the jury failed to make a recommendation because they were not unanimous, then the trial judge was not required to treat that finding as if it were a recommendation that the period of parole ineligibility ought not to be increased.

The fact that counsel is not permitted to make submissions to the jury does not infringe s. 7 of the Charter. Further, since the jury is merely making a recommendation, they need not be unanimous: R. v. Okkuatsiak (1993), 80 C.C.C. (3d) 251, 20 C.R. (4th) 400, 105 Nfld. & P.E.I.R. 85 (C.A.).

PERSONS UNDER SIXTEEN.

743.1. Where a jury finds an accused guilty of first degree murder or second degree murder and the accused was under the age of sixteen at the time of the commission of the offence, the judge presiding at the trial shall, before discharging the jury, put to them the following question:

You have found the accused guilty of first degree murder (or second degree murder) and the law requires that I now pronounce a sentence of imprisonment for life against the accused. Do you wish to make any recommendation with respect to the period of imprisonment that the accused must serve before the accused is eligible for release on parole? You are not required to make any recommendation but if you do, your recommendation will be considered by me when I am determining the period of imprisonment that is between five years and seven years that the law would require the accused to serve before the accused is eligible to be considered for release on parole. 1992, c. 11, s. 16; 1995, c. 19, s. 39.

SYNOPSIS

This section sets out the question to be asked of the jury which has found a young person guilty of first degree or second degree murder. The provisions of this section apply to such young persons, rather than the provisions of s. 743. The judge then takes the jury's recommendation into account in fixing the period of parole ineligibility between five and ten years pursuant to s. 744.1. The sentence itself is life imprisonment as prescribed by s. 742.1. Note that if the accused is not transferred to the ordinary courts, then the provisions of s. 20(1)(k.1) of the Young Offenders Act apply and the offender is liable to a disposition of up to five years less one day.

INELIGIBILITY FOR PAROLE.

744. Subject to section 744.1, at the time of the sentencing under paragraph 742(b) of an offender who is convicted of second degree murder, the judge who presided at the trial of the offender or, if that judge is unable to do so, any judge of the same court may, having regard to the character of the offender, the nature of the offence and the circumstances surrounding its commission, and to the recommendation, if any, made pursuant to section 743, by order, substitute for ten years a number of years of imprisonment (being more than ten but not more than twenty-five), without eligibility for parole, as the judge deems fit in the circumstances. R.S., c. C-34, s. 671; 1974-75-76, c. 105, s. 21; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 166; 1992, c. 11, s. 16.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See s. 743 for the statutory question which the judge addresses to the jury in order to obtain the jury's recommendation. Also see references cited under ss. 742 and 743.

In the case of a young person transferred to ordinary courts, a different sentencing regime applies, see ss. 742.1, 743.1 and 744.1.

SYNOPSIS

In sentencing an accused convicted of second degree murder, the trial judge or, if necessary, another judge of the same court, may increase the mandatory 10-year parole ineligibility period up to 25 years. (See s. 743 with respect to asking the jury for a recommendation in this regard.)

ANNOTATIONS

Jurisdiction and procedure – In R. v. Leahy (1978), 44 C.C.C. (2d) 479 (Ont. C.A.) the Court in setting aside the order of parole non-eligibility stated that the case was of a type in which the specific reasons of the trial Judge should have been clearly enunciated.

Notwithstanding there is no jury recommendation under s. 743 where the Court of Appeal substitutes a conviction of second degree murder on an appeal by the accused from his conviction for first degree murder the Court of Appeal has power to set a period of parole non-eligibility which exceeds 10 years: R. v. Kjeldsen (1980), 53 C.C.C. (2d) 55, [1980] 3 W.W.R. 411 (Alta. C.A.).

A Judge also has jurisdiction to increase the number of years of parole ineligibility where the accused pleads guilty to a charge of second degree murder: R. v. O'Brien (1982), 66 C.C.C. (2d) 374 (B.C.C.A.), and semble, Bennett v. The Queen (1982), 70 C.C.C. (2d) 575, 142 D.L.R. (3d) 575, [1982] 2 S.C.R. 582.

The approach of the appellate court in considering an appeal against an order made under this section is the same as an appeal against sentence under s. 687 which requires the court to consider the fitness of the order. Thus, while the trial judge's decision is not to be taken lightly, it is for the appellate court to determine what is fit having regard to the facts before the trial judge and any relevant new facts placed before the court: R. v. Walford (1984), 12 C.C.C. (3d) 257 (B.C.C.A.).

Principles in setting period of parole ineligibility – As a general rule, the period of parole ineligibility shall be for 10 years but this can be ousted by a determination of the trial judge that, according to the criteria set out in s. 744, the accused should wait a longer period before having his suitability to be released into the general public assessed. Denunciation, future dangerousness and general as well as specific deterrence are relevant criteria in making the determination. An extension of the period of parole ineligibility would not be unusual, although it may well be that, in the median number of cases, a period of 10 years might still be imposed. The power to extend the period of parole ineligibility need not be used sparingly: R. v. Shropshire (1995), 102 C.C.C. (3d) 193, 106 W.A.C. 37, 129 D.L.R. (4th) 657 (S.C.C.).

IDEM.

744.1. At the time of the sentencing under section 742.1 of an offender who is convicted of first degree murder or second degree murder and who was under the age of sixteen at the time of the commission of the offence, the judge who presided at the trial of the offender or, if that judge is unable to do so, any judge of the same court may, having regard to the age and character of the offender, the nature of the offence and the circumstances surrounding its commission, and to the recommendation, if any, made pursuant to section 743.1, by order, decide the period of imprisonment the offender is to serve that is between five years and seven years without eligibility for parole, as the judge deems fit in the circumstances. 1992, c. 11, s. 16; 1995, c. 19, s. 40.

SYNOPSIS

This section sets out the factors to be considered by the judge in sentencing a young person who has been transferred to the ordinary courts and has been convicted of first degree or second degree murder. The provisions of this section apply to such young persons, rather than the provisions of s. 744. In the case of a trial by jury, the judge is required to put a question to the jury in the terms set out in s. 743.1. The judge then takes the jury's recommendation into account in fixing the period of parole ineligibility between five and ten years. Note that if the accused is not transferred to the ordinary courts then the provisions of s. 20(1)(k.1) of the Young Offenders Act apply and the offender is liable to a disposition of up to five years less one day.

ANNOTATIONS

Although s. 746 does not in its terms apply to accused sentenced under this section, it would appear that the federal authorities have accepted that s. 746(a) should apply to such accused in determining the period of imprisonment served: R. v. A. (C.) (unreported June 2, 1993, Ont. Ct. (Gen. Div.)) [court file No. 643/93].

APPLICATION FOR JUDICIAL REVIEW / Judicial hearing / Renewal of application / Reduction / Rules / Definition of "Appropriate Chief Justice" / Territories.

745. (1) Where a person has served at least fifteen years of his sentence

- (a) in the case of a person who has been convicted of high treason or first degree murder, or
- (b) in the case of a person convicted of second degree murder who has been sentenced to imprisonment for life without eligibility for parole until he has served more than fifteen years of his sentence, he may apply to the appropriate Chief Justice in the province in which the conviction took place for a reduction in his number of years of imprisonment without eligibility for parole.

(2) Upon receipt of an application under subsection (1), the appropriate Chief Justice shall designate a judge of the superior court of criminal jurisdiction to empanel a jury to hear the application and determine whether the applicant's number of years of imprisonment without eligibility for parole ought to be reduced having regard to the character of the applicant, his conduct while serving his sentence, the nature of the offence for which he was convicted and such other matters as the judge deems relevant in the circumstances and the determination shall be made by no less than two-thirds of the jury.

(3) Where the jury hearing an application under subsection (1) determines that the applicant's number of years of imprisonment without eligibility for parole ought not to be reduced, the jury shall set another time at or after which an application may again be made by the applicant to the appropriate Chief Justice for a reduction in his number of years of imprisonment without eligibility for parole.

(4) Where the jury hearing an application under subsection (1) determines that the applicant's number of years of imprisonment without eligibility for parole ought to be reduced, the jury may, by order,

- (a) substitute a lesser number of years of imprisonment without eligibility for parole than that then applicable; or
- (b) terminate the ineligibility for parole.

(5) The appropriate Chief Justice in each province or territory may make such rules in respect of applications and hearings under this section as are required for the purposes of this section.

(6) For the purposes of this section, the "appropriate Chief Justice" is

- (a) in relation to the Province of Ontario, the Chief Justice of the Ontario Court;
- (b) in relation to the Province of Quebec, the Chief Justice of the Superior Court;
- (c) in relation to the Provinces of Nova Scotia and British Columbia, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court;
- (d) in relation to the Provinces of New Brunswick, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, respectively, the Chief Justice of the Court of Queen's Bench;
- (e) in relation to the Provinces of Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, Trial Division; and
- (f) in relation to the Yukon Territory and the Northwest Territories, respectively, the Chief Justice of the Court of Appeal thereof.

NOTE: Subsec. (6)(f) re-enacted 1993, c. 28, s. 78 (to come into force April 1, 1999). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

- (f) in relation to the Yukon Territory, the Northwest Territories and Nunavut, respectively, the Chief Justice of the Court of Appeal.

(7) For the purposes of this section, when the appropriate Chief Justice is designating a judge of the superior court of criminal jurisdiction to empanel a jury to hear an application in respect of a conviction that took place in the Yukon Territory or the Northwest Territories, the appropriate Chief Justice may designate the judge from the Court of Appeal or the Supreme Court of the Yukon Territory or Northwest Territories, as the case may be. R.S., c. C-34, s. 672; 1974-75-76, c. 105, s. 21; 1978-79, c. 11, s. 10; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (2nd Supp.), s. 10; 1990, c. 17, s. 14; 1992, c. 51, s. 39.

NOTE: Subsec. (7) re-enacted 1993, c. 28, s. 78 (to come into force April 1, 1999). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

Territories.

(7) For the purposes of this section, when the appropriate Chief Justice is designating a judge of the superior court of criminal jurisdiction to empanel a jury to hear an application in respect of a conviction that took place in the Yukon Territory, the Northwest Territories or Nunavut,

the appropriate Chief Justice may designate the judge from the Court of Appeal or the Supreme Court of the Yukon Territory, the Northwest Territories or Nunavut, as the case may be.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Ineligibility orders can be appealed under ss. 675(2) and 676(4). There is no right of appeal from determinations made under this section.

Also see references cited under ss. 742 and 743.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides for a review of the parole ineligibility period with respect to certain life sentences, namely: (a) those imposed following conviction for treason or first degree murder, where the inmate will not be eligible for parole until having served 25 years; and (b) those imposed following conviction for second degree murder where the period of ineligibility is 15 years or more; after at least 15 years have been served (subsec. (1)).

The Chief Justice, upon the application of a prisoner, will assign a judge to hear the matter with a jury. The jury will consider the character and conduct of the applicant, the nature of the offence and such other matters as the judge deems relevant. The issue shall be decided by a two-thirds majority (subsec. (2)).

If the application is dismissed the jury will fix a time at or after which another application to the Chief Justice may be made (subsec. (3)).

If the application is allowed the jury can either reduce or terminate the period of ineligibility (subsec. (4)).

ANNOTATIONS

The purpose of the review procedure under this section is to re-examine a decision in light of new information or factors which could not have been known initially. It follows that the primary purpose of the hearing is to call attention to changes which have occurred in the applicant's situation and which might justify imposing a less harsh penalty upon the applicant. The jury's decision is not essentially different from the ordinary decision regarding length of a sentence. The section gives the jury a broad discretionary power. Accordingly, there is no need to analyze the judge's charge to the jury in the detail that would be appropriate in the case of a trial. The Supreme Court's function is essentially to determine whether the applicant was given a fair hearing at trial. Since the jury's duty is to make a discretionary decision, the concepts of burden of proof, proof on the balance of probabilities, or proof beyond a reasonable doubt are of very limited value in such a hearing. The jury must instead make what, in its discretion, it deems to be the best decision on the evidence. For the applicant to obtain a reduction in the period of parole ineligibility, the applicant need not succeed with respect to all three factors set out in subsec. (2). It was improper for Crown counsel in questioning witnesses and in his closing address to attempt to discredit the review process by calling attention to the fact that the victim had no opportunity as the applicant did to have her suffering reduced and because the 25 years ineligibility period was a bargain compared with the death penalty. The possible reduction of the ineligibility period after 15 years is a choice made by Parliament which the jury must accept. It is not open to the prosecution to call this choice into question by suggesting to the jury that it is an abnormal procedure, excessively indulgent and contrary to what it argues was Parliament's intent. It was also improper to invite the jury to consider isolated cases in which prisoners committed murder after being paroled. The jury must consider only the applicant's case and must not try the cases of other inmates or determine whether the existing system of parole is effective. While it is possible to invite the jury to take the deterrent aspect of the penalty into account, this should be done in the context of a general submission on the various functions performed by the penalty. It was also an error in this case for the judge to limit his discussion of the applicant's character to matters prior to or contemporaneous with the murder: R. v. Swietlinski, [1994] 3 S.C.R. 481, 92 C.C.C. (3d) 449, 33 C.R. (4th) 295.

On this hearing, the offender is no longer a person charged with an offence within the meaning of s. 11 of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms and therefore the legal rights set out therein have no application. As well, since the procedure does not involve a deprivation of liberty, the offender already being deprived of his liberty, s. 7 of the Charter does not apply. In any event, it was held that rules established by the Chief Justice of Ontario pursuant to subsec. (5) provided for a fair hearing of the issue R. v. Vaillancourt (1988), 43 C.C.C. (3d) 238, 66 C.R. (3d) 66 (Ont. H.C.J.).

An application for a review under this section may not be brought until 15 years of the inmate's sentence has elapsed. The inmate is not entitled to bring an application after 12 years in an attempt to take advantage of the provisions of s. 747(2) respecting day parole and temporary absence: R. v. Frederick (1989), 52 C.C.C. (3d) 433 (Ont. H.C.J.).

No appeal lies to the Court of Appeal from the determination made by the jury under this section: R. v. Vaillancourt (1989), 49 C.C.C. (3d) 544, 71 C.R. (3d) 43, 33 O.A.C. 234 (C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused 53 C.C.C. (3d) vii.

However, the inmate may apply directly to the Supreme Court of Canada for leave to appeal pursuant to s. 40 of the Supreme Court Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. S-26: R. v. Vaillancourt (1990), 76 C.C.C. (3d) 384n, 57 O.A.C. 320n (S.C.C.).

The prohibition on comment as to the accused's failure to testify in s. 4 of the Canada Evidence Act does not apply to proceedings under this section and the prosecutor may invite the jury to draw an adverse inference from the prisoner's silence at the hearing: Poulin v. Quebec (Attorney General) (1991), 68 C.C.C. (3d) 472 (Que. S.C.).

The procedural provisions pertaining to jury selection should be applied in selecting a jury under this section, including the procedure for challenge for cause: R. v. Nichols (1992), 71 C.C.C. (3d) 385 (Alta. Q.B.).

A judge should be cautious in admitting victim impact statements, for to focus the jury on the victim, some 15 years after the crime was committed, is to invite the jury to assess the appropriateness of the applicant's sentence in terms of its retribution, denunciation and punishment goals. To the extent that the impact on the victim is relevant to the factor of the nature of the offence, this relevance will usually, but not always, have been exhausted at the applicant's initial sentencing hearing. However, it would be permissible for a judge presiding at a hearing to receive victim impact statements in exercising the discretion to permit the jury to hear evidence of such other matters as the judge deems relevant in the circumstances: R. v. Swietlinski, supra.

TIME SPENT IN CUSTODY.

746. In calculating the period of imprisonment served for the purposes of section 742, 742.1, 744, 744.1 or 745, there shall be included any time spent in custody between,

- (a) in the case of a sentence of imprisonment for life after July 25, 1976, the day on which that person was arrested and taken into custody in respect of the offence for which he was sentenced to imprisonment for life and the day the sentence was imposed; or
- (b) in the case of a sentence of death that has been or is deemed to have been commuted to a sentence of imprisonment for life, the day on which that person was arrested and taken into custody in respect of the offence for which he was sentenced to death and the day the sentence was commuted or deemed to have been commuted to a sentence of imprisonment for life. R.S., c. C-34, s. 673; 1974-75-76, c. 105, s. 21; 1995, c. 19, s. 41.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See s. 721(3) which allows the judge, in determining sentence, to consider the time spent in custody prior to sentencing.

Also see references cited under ss. 742 and 743.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides that for the purposes of parole proceedings with respect to persons sentenced to life imprisonment, the calculation of time served shall include time spent in custody prior to sentence or, in the case of those sentenced to death, prior to commutation or deemed commutation of sentence. The former provision only applies to those sentenced to life imprisonment after July 25, 1976.

ANNOTATIONS

Where there has been a delay in execution of the arrest warrant, although the police were aware of the accused's whereabouts and the warrant was capable of being executed, then the judge, in setting the period of parole ineligibility, should take that into account. Where this delay was not taken into account and the circumstances demonstrate an abuse of process and infringement of s. 7 of the Charter, it is open to a court to subsequently grant a remedy under s. 24(1) of the Charter by, for example, treating the accused as if he had been arrested on the date on which the warrant was issued and calculating the date of eligibility for judicial review under s. 745 accordingly: Parker v. Canada (Solicitor General) (1990), 57 C.C.C. (3d) 68, 73 O.R. (2d) 193, 78 C.R. (3d) 209 (H.C.J.).

Although this section does not in its terms apply to accused sentenced under s. 744.1, it would appear that the federal authorities have accepted that para. (a) should apply to such accused: R. v. A. (C.) (unreported, June 2, 1993, Ont. Ct. (Gen. Div.)) [court file No. 643/93].

PAROLE PROHIBITED / Absence with or without escort and day parole / Idem.

747. (1) Unless Parliament otherwise provides by an enactment making express reference to this section, a person who has been sentenced to imprisonment for life without eligibility for parole for a specified number of years pursuant to this Act shall not be considered for parole or released pursuant to a grant of parole under the Corrections and Conditional Release Act or any other Act of Parliament until the expiration or termination of the specified number of years of imprisonment.

(2) Subject to subsection (3), in respect of a person sentenced to imprisonment for life without eligibility for parole for a specified number of years pursuant to this Act, until the expiration of all but three of those years

- (a) no day parole may be granted under the Corrections and Conditional Release Act;
- (b) no absence without escort may be authorized under that Act or the Prisons and Reformatories Act; and
- (c) except with the approval of the National Parole Board, no absence with escort otherwise than for medical reasons or in order to attend judicial proceedings or a coroner's inquest may be authorized under either of those Acts.

(3) Notwithstanding the Corrections and Conditional Release Act, in the case of any person convicted of first degree murder or second degree murder who was under the age of eighteen at the time of the commission of the offence and who is sentenced to imprisonment for life without eligibility for parole for a specified number of years pursuant to this Act, until the expiration of all but one fifth of the period of imprisonment the person is to serve without eligibility for parole,

- (a) no day parole may be granted under the Corrections and Conditional Release Act;
- (b) no absence without escort may be authorized under that Act or the Prisons and Reformatories Act; and
- (c) except with the approval of the National Parole Board, no absence with escort otherwise than for medical reasons or in order to attend judicial proceedings or a coroner's inquest may be authorized under either of those Acts. R.S., c. C-34, s. 674; 1974-75-76, c. 105, s. 21; 1992, c. 11, s. 17; 1992, c. 20, s. 228; 1995, c. 42, s. 76.

NOTE: 1992, c. 20, s. 204, which re-enacted s. 747, repealed by 1995, c. 42, s. 61.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 746 states that parole ineligibility for the purposes of ss. 742, 744 and 745 includes the time spent in custody before sentencing. As this section is not included, there is some question as to how the ineligibility period is to be calculated.

Section 745 may be used to vary the original period of parole ineligibility.

SYNOPSIS

This section states that no prisoner shall be paroled under any other Act prior to the expiry of his or her term of ineligibility for parole under the Code, unless an enactment of Parliament referring to this section provides for such parole (subsec. (1)). There shall be no day parole or absence without escort prior to three years before the expiry of the ineligibility period. However, there may be absence with escort for humanitarian reasons prior to that time with the approval of the National Parole Board (subsec. (2)).

Disabilities

PUBLIC OFFICE VACATED ON CONVICTION / When disability ceases / Disability to contract / Application for restoration of privileges / Order of restoration / Removal of disability.

748. (1) Where a person is convicted of an indictable offence for which he is sentenced to imprisonment for a term exceeding five years and holds, at the time he is convicted, an office under the Crown or other public employment, the office or employment forthwith becomes vacant.

(2) A person to whom subsection (1) applies is, until he undergoes the punishment imposed on him or the punishment substituted therefor by competent authority or receives a free pardon from Her Majesty, incapable of holding any office under the Crown or other public employment, or of being elected or sitting or voting as a member of Parliament or of a legislature or of exercising any right of suffrage.

(3) No person who is convicted of an offence under section 121, 124 or 418 has, after that conviction, capacity to contract with Her Majesty or to receive any benefit under a contract between Her Majesty and any other person or to hold office under Her Majesty.

(4) A person to whom subsection (3) applies may, at any time before a pardon is granted to the person under section 4.1 of the Criminal Records Act, apply to the Governor in Council for the restoration of one or more of the capacities lost by the person by virtue of that subsection.

(5) Where an application is made under subsection (4), the Governor in Council may order that the capacities lost by the applicant by virtue of subsection (3) be restored to him in whole or in part and subject to such conditions as he considers desirable in the public interest.

(6) Where a conviction is set aside by competent authority, any disability imposed by this section is removed. R.S., c. C-34, s. 682; 1974-75-76, c. 93, s. 83, c. 105, s. 22; 1992, c. 22, s. 12.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See s. 749 for the granting of pardons by the Governor in Council. Under s. 750, the Governor in Council may order the remission of all or part of a pecuniary penalty, fine or forfeiture. The royal mercy may be granted by Her Majesty and is not limited by anything in the Criminal Code under s. 751.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides that no person shall assume or hold public office or employment, or vote, if they have been sentenced to a term of imprisonment exceeding five years until they have served that term or been given a free pardon. Also, a person convicted of certain corrupt crimes against the Crown is disqualified from ever contracting with (directly or indirectly) or being employed by the Crown again, unless, on application, a restoration of capacity is granted by the Governor in Council.

Pardon

TO WHOM PARDON MAY BE GRANTED / Free or conditional pardon / Effect of free pardon / Punishment for subsequent offence not affected.

749. (1) Her Majesty may extend the royal mercy to a person who is sentenced to imprisonment under the authority of an Act of Parliament, even if the person is imprisoned for failure to pay money to another person.

(2) The Governor in Council may grant a free pardon or a conditional pardon to any person who has been convicted of an offence.

(3) Where the Governor in Council grants a free pardon to a person, that person shall be deemed thereafter never to have committed the offence in respect of which the pardon is granted.

(4) No free pardon or conditional pardon prevents or mitigates the punishment to which the person might otherwise be lawfully sentenced on a subsequent conviction for an offence other than that for which the pardon was granted. R.S., c. C-34, s. 683.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Application may also be made to the Solicitor General of Canada for a pardon pursuant to the Criminal Records Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. C-47. The effect of the pardon is contained by s. 5 of the Act with revocation of the pardon governed by s. 7.

Remission of pecuniary penalties, fines or forfeiture by the Governor in Council is dealt with by s. 750.

By s. 751, there is no limit in this Act on Her Majesty's royal prerogative of mercy.

In the case of disabilities under s. 748, before the granting of a pardon, the Governor in Council may allow, by s. 748(4), the restoration of any capacities lost by virtue of that section.

See s. 690 which allows the Minister of Justice, on an application for mercy by a person convicted in proceedings by indictment or sentenced to preventative detention under Part XXIV, to order a new trial or hearing or to refer the matter to the court of appeal or to direct a reference.

SYNOPSIS

This section states that Her Majesty may extend the royal mercy and the Governor in Council may grant free or conditional pardons to those imprisoned or convicted under this Act. Where there is a free pardon, the person is deemed never to have committed the offence, but a free or conditional pardon does not mitigate any sentence the person might receive on conviction for another offence.

ANNOTATIONS

Where an accused has been previously pardoned and is then convicted of a further offence, for the purposes of sentencing he is to be treated as a first offender: R. v. Spring (1977), 35 C.C.C. (2d) 308 (Ont. C.A.).

An inmate who seeks to review the validity of revocation of his conditional pardon by way of habeas corpus may be admitted to bail pending the hearing of the application. The onus is on the Crown to show cause why the inmate should not be admitted to bail. The onus would also ultimately be on the Crown to show breach of the conditions and that the pardon was terminated thereby, or the Governor in Council was justified on the facts in confirming that the pardon was at an end, as a result of the breach: Re Reddekopp and The Queen (1983), 6 C.C.C. (3d) 241, 33 C.R. (3d) 389 (Ont. H.C.J.).

In Reference re: Milgaard (Can.) (1992), 71 C.C.C. (3d) 260, 90 D.L.R. (4th) 1, [1992] 3 W.W.R. 385 (S.C.C.) the Governor in Council had referred the accused's case to the Supreme Court of Canada to determine whether the continued conviction of the accused for murder constituted a miscarriage of justice. The court held that the continued conviction of the accused would constitute a miscarriage of justice if, on the basis of the judicial record, the Reference Case and such further evidence as the court in its discretion received, the court was satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the accused was innocent. If the court was of that view, then it would consider advising the Governor in Council to exercise his power under subsec. (2) to grant a free pardon to the accused. Even if the record did not establish that there had been a miscarriage of justice, the court might still consider advising the Minister of Justice that granting of a conditional pardon under subsec. (2) may be warranted, having regard to all the circumstances. [Also see note of this case under s. 690, supra.]

REMISSION BY GOVERNOR IN COUNCIL / Terms of remission.

750. (1) The Governor in Council may order the remission, in whole or in part, of a pecuniary penalty, fine or forfeiture imposed under an Act of Parliament, whoever the person may be to whom it is payable or however it may be recoverable.

(2) An order for remission under subsection (1) may include the remission of costs incurred in the proceedings, but no costs to which a private prosecutor is entitled shall be remitted. R.S., c. C-34, s. 685.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 749(2) to (4) govern the granting of pardons by the Governor in Council. Application may also be made to the Solicitor General of Canada for a pardon pursuant to the Criminal Records Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. C-47.

By virtue of s. 749(1), mercy under the royal prerogative, may be extended to persons sentenced to imprisonment under any federal Act.

ROYAL PREROGATIVE.

751. Nothing in this Act in any manner limits or affects Her Majesty's royal prerogative of mercy. R.S., c. C-34, s. 686.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See s. 749(1) which allows mercy under the royal prerogative to be extended to persons sentenced to imprisonment.

Pardons may also be granted by the Governor in Council under s. 749(2) to (4) and by the Solicitor General pursuant to the Criminal Records Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. C-47, for the granting of pardons.

See s. 750 which allows the Governor in Council to order the remission of pecuniary penalties, fines or forfeitures.

NOTE: Part XXIII (ss. 716 to 751) replaced by 1995, c. 22, s. 6 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

PART XXIII / SENTENCING

Interpretation

DEFINITIONS / "Accused" / "Alternative measures" / "Court" / "Fine".

716. In this Part,

"accused" includes a defendant;

"alternative measures" means measures other than judicial proceedings under this Act used to deal with a person who is eighteen years of age or over and alleged to have committed an offence;

"court" means

- (a) a superior court of criminal jurisdiction,
- (b) a court of criminal jurisdiction,
- (c) a justice or provincial court judge acting as a summary conviction court under Part XXIII, or
- (d) a court that hears an appeal;

"fine" includes a pecuniary penalty or other sum of money, but does not include restitution.

Alternative Measures

WHEN ALTERNATIVE MEASURES MAY BE USED / Restriction on use / Admissions not admissible in evidence / No bar to proceedings / Laying of information, etc.

717. (1) Alternative measures may be used to deal with a person alleged to have committed an offence only if it is not inconsistent with the protection of society and the following conditions are met:

- (a) the measures are part of a program of alternative measures authorized by the Attorney General or the Attorney General's delegate or authorized by a person, or a person within a class of persons, designated by the lieutenant governor in council of a province;
- (b) the person who is considering whether to use the measures is satisfied that they would be appropriate, having regard to the needs of the person alleged to have committed the offence and the interests of society and of the victim;
- (c) the person, having been informed of the alternative measures, fully and freely consents to participate therein;
- (d) the person has, before consenting to participate in the alternative measures, been advised of the right to be represented by counsel;
- (e) the person accepts responsibility for the act or omission that forms the basis of the offence that the person is alleged to have committed;
- (f) there is, in the opinion of the Attorney General or the Attorney General's agent, sufficient evidence to proceed with the prosecution of the offence; and
- (g) the prosecution of the offence is not in any way barred at law.

(2) Alternative measures shall not be used to deal with a person alleged to have committed an offence if the person

- (a) denies participation or involvement in the commission of the offence; or
- (b) expresses the wish to have any charge against the person dealt with by the court.

(3) No admission, confession or statement accepting responsibility for a given act or omission made by a person alleged to have committed an offence as a condition of the person being dealt with by alternative measures is admissible in evidence against that person in any civil or criminal proceedings.

(4) The use of alternative measures in respect of a person alleged to have committed an offence is not a bar to proceedings against the person under this Act, but, if a charge is laid against that person in respect of that offence,

- (a) where the court is satisfied on a balance of probabilities that the person has totally complied with the terms and conditions of the alternative measures, the court shall dismiss the charge; and*
- (b) where the court is satisfied on a balance of probabilities that the person has partially complied with the terms and conditions of the alternative measures, the court may dismiss the charge if, in the opinion of the court, the prosecution of the charge would be unfair, having regard to the circumstances and that person's performance with respect to the alternative measures.*

(5) Subject to subsection (4), nothing in this section shall be construed as preventing any person from laying an information, obtaining the issue or confirmation of any process, or proceeding with the prosecution of any offence, in accordance with law.

RECORDS OF PERSONS DEALT WITH.

717.1. Sections 717.2 to 717.4 apply only in respect of persons who have been dealt with by alternative measures, regardless of the degree of their compliance with the terms and conditions of the alternative measures.

POLICE RECORDS / Disclosure by peace officer / Idem.

717.2. (1) A record relating to any offence alleged to have been committed by a person, including the original or a copy of any fingerprints or photographs of the person, may be kept by any police force responsible for, or participating in, the investigation of the offence.

(2) A peace officer may disclose to any person any information in a record kept pursuant to this section that it is necessary to disclose in the conduct of the investigation of an offence.

(3) A peace officer may disclose to an insurance company any information in a record kept pursuant to this section for the purpose of investigating any claim arising out of an offence committed or alleged to have been committed by the person to whom the record relates.

GOVERNMENT RECORDS / Private records.

717.3. (1) A department or agency of any government in Canada may keep records containing information obtained by the department or agency

- (a) for the purposes of an investigation of an offence alleged to have been committed by a person;*
- (b) for use in proceedings against a person under this Act; or*
- (c) as a result of the use of alternative measures to deal with a person.*

(2) Any person or organization may keep records containing information obtained by the person or organization as a result of the use of alternative measures to deal with a person alleged to have committed an offence.

DISCLOSURE OF RECORDS / Subsequent disclosure / Information, copies / Evidence / Idem.

717.4. (1) Any record that is kept pursuant to section 717.2 or 717.3 may be made available to

- (a) any judge or court for any purpose relating to proceedings relating to offences committed or alleged to have been committed by the person to whom the record relates;
  - (b) any peace officer
    - (i) for the purpose of investigating any offence that the person is suspected on reasonable grounds of having committed, or in respect of which the person has been arrested or charged, or
    - (ii) for any purpose related to the administration of the case to which the record relates;
  - (c) any member of a department or agency of a government in Canada, or any agent thereof, that is
    - (i) engaged in the administration of alternative measures in respect of the person, or
    - (ii) preparing a report in respect of the person pursuant to this Act; or
  - (d) any other person who is deemed, or any person within a class of persons that is deemed, by a judge of a court to have a valid interest in the record, to the extent directed by the judge, if the judge is satisfied that the disclosure is
    - (i) desirable in the public interest for research or statistical purposes, or
    - (ii) desirable in the interest of the proper administration of justice.
- (2) Where a record is made available for inspection to any person under subparagraph (1)(d)(i), that person may subsequently disclose information contained in the record, but may not disclose the information in any form that would reasonably be expected to identify the person to whom it relates.
- (3) Any person to whom a record is authorized to be made available under this section may be given any information contained in the record and may be given a copy of any part of the record.
- (4) Nothing in this section authorizes the introduction into evidence of any part of a record that would not otherwise be admissible in evidence.
- (5) A record kept pursuant to section 717.2 or 717.3 may not be introduced into evidence, except for the purposes set out in paragraph 721(3)(c), more than two years after the end of the period for which the person agreed to participate in the alternative measures.

Purpose and Principles of Sentencing

PURPOSE.

718. The fundamental purpose of sentencing is to contribute, along with crime prevention initiatives, to respect for the law and the maintenance of a just, peaceful and safe society by imposing just sanctions that have one or more of the following objectives:

- (a) to denounce unlawful conduct;
- (b) to deter the offender and other persons from committing offences;
- (c) to separate offenders from society, where necessary;
- (d) to assist in rehabilitating offenders;
- (e) to provide reparations for harm done to victims or to the community; and
- (f) to promote a sense of responsibility in offenders, and acknowledgment of the harm done to victims and to the community.

FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLE.

718.1. A sentence must be proportionate to the gravity of the offence and the degree of responsibility of the offender.

OTHER SENTENCING PRINCIPLES.

718.2. A court that imposes a sentence shall also take into consideration the following principles:

- (a) a sentence should be increased or reduced to account for any relevant aggravating or mitigating circumstances relating to the offence or the offender, and, without limiting the generality of the foregoing,*
  - (i) evidence that the offence was motivated by bias, prejudice or hate based on race, national or ethnic origin, language, colour, religion, sex, age, mental or physical disability, sexual orientation or any other similar factor,*
  - (ii) evidence that the offender, in committing the offence, abused the offender's spouse or child, or*
  - (iii) evidence that the offender, in committing the offence, abused a position of trust or authority in relation to the victim* shall be deemed to be aggravating circumstances;

- (b) a sentence should be similar to sentences imposed on similar offenders for similar offences committed in similar circumstances;*
- (c) where consecutive sentences are imposed, the combined sentence should not be unduly long or harsh;*
- (d) an offender should not be deprived of liberty, if less restrictive sanctions may be appropriate in the circumstances; and*
- (e) all available sanctions other than imprisonment that are reasonable in the circumstances should be considered for all offenders, with particular attention to the circumstances of aboriginal offenders.*

Punishment Generally

DEGREES OF PUNISHMENT / Discretion respecting punishment / Imprisonment in default where term not specified / Cumulative punishments / Idem.

718.3. (1) Where an enactment prescribes different degrees or kinds of punishment in respect of an offence, the punishment to be imposed is, subject to the limitations prescribed in the enactment, in the discretion of the court that convicts a person who commits the offence.

(2) Where an enactment prescribes a punishment in respect of an offence, the punishment to be imposed is, subject to the limitations prescribed in the enactment, in the discretion of the court that convicts a person who commits the offence, but no punishment is a minimum punishment unless it is declared to be a minimum punishment.

(3) Where an accused is convicted of an offence punishable with both fine and imprisonment and a term of imprisonment in default of payment of the fine is not specified in the enactment that prescribes the punishment to be imposed, the imprisonment that may be imposed in default of payment shall not exceed the term of imprisonment that is prescribed in respect of the offence.

(4) Where an accused

- (a) is convicted while under sentence for an offence, and a term of imprisonment whether in default of payment of a fine or otherwise, is imposed,*
- (b) is convicted of an offence punishable with both fine and imprisonment and both are imposed, or*
- (c) is convicted of more offences than one before the same court at the same sittings, and*
  - (i) more than one fine is imposed,*
  - (ii) terms of imprisonment for the respective offences are imposed, or*

(iii) a term of imprisonment is imposed in respect of one offence and a fine is imposed in respect of another offence, the court that convicts the accused may direct that the terms of imprisonment that are imposed by the court or result from the operation of subsection 734(4) shall be served consecutively.

(5) Where an offender who is under a conditional sentence imposed under section 742.1 is convicted of a second offence that was committed while the offender was under the conditional sentence,

(a) a sentence of imprisonment imposed for the second offence shall be served consecutively to the conditional sentence; and

(b) the offender shall be imprisoned until the expiration of the sentence imposed for the second offence, or for any longer period resulting from the operation of subparagraph 742.6(9)(c)(i) or paragraph 742.6(9)(d).

COMMENCEMENT OF SENTENCE / Time at large excluded from term of imprisonment / Determination of sentence / When time begins to run / When fine imposed / Application for leave to appeal.

719. (1) A sentence commences when it is imposed, except where a relevant enactment otherwise provides.

(2) Any time during which a convicted person is unlawfully at large or is lawfully at large on interim release granted pursuant to any provision of this Act does not count as part of any term of imprisonment imposed on the person.

(3) In determining the sentence to be imposed on a person convicted of an offence, a court may take into account any time spent in custody by the person as a result of the offence.

(4) Notwithstanding subsection (1), a term of imprisonment, whether imposed by a trial court or the court appealed to, commences or shall be deemed to be resumed, as the case may be, on the day on which the convicted person is arrested and taken into custody under the sentence.

(5) Notwithstanding subsection (1), where the sentence that is imposed is a fine with a term of imprisonment in default of payment, no time prior to the day of execution of the warrant of committal counts as part of the term of imprisonment.

(6) An application for leave to appeal is an appeal for the purposes of this section.

Procedure of Evidence

SENTENCING PROCEEDINGS.

720. A court shall, as soon as practicable after an offender has been found guilty, conduct proceedings to determine the appropriate sentence to be imposed.

REPORT BY PROBATION OFFICER / Provincial regulations / Content of report / Idem.

721. (1) Subject to regulations made under subsection (2), where an accused, other than a corporation, pleads guilty to or is found guilty of an offence, a probation officer shall, if required to do so by a court, prepare and file with the court a report in writing relating to the accused for the purpose of assisting the court in imposing a sentence or in determining whether the accused should be discharged pursuant to section 730.

(2) The lieutenant governor in council of a province may make regulations respecting the types of offences for which a court may require a report, and respecting the content and form of the report.

(3) Unless otherwise specified by the court, the report must, wherever possible, contain information on the following matters:

- (a) the offender's age, maturity, character, behaviour, attitude and willingness to make amends;
- (b) the history of previous dispositions under the Young Offenders Act and of previous findings of guilt under this Act and any other Act of Parliament;
- (c) the history of any alternative measures used to deal with the offender, and the offender's response to those measures; and
- (d) any matter required, by any regulation made under subsection (2), to be included in the report.

(4) The report must also contain information on any other matter required by the court, after hearing argument from the prosecutor and the offender, to be included in the report, subject to any contrary regulation made under subsection (2).

VICTIM IMPACT STATEMENT / Procedure for victim impact statement / Other evidence concerning victim admissible / Definition of "victim".

722. (1) For the purpose of determining the sentence to be imposed on an offender or whether the offender should be discharged pursuant to section 730 in respect of any offence, the court shall consider any statement that may have been prepared in accordance with subsection (2) of a victim of the offence describing the harm done to, or loss suffered by, the victim arising from the commission of the offence.

(2) A statement referred to in subsection (1) must be

- (a) prepared in writing in the form and in accordance with the procedures established by a program designated for that purpose by the lieutenant governor in council of the province in which the court is exercising its jurisdiction; and
- (b) filed with the court.

(3) A statement of a victim of an offence prepared and filed in accordance with subsection (2) does not prevent the court from considering any other evidence concerning any victim of the offence for the purpose of determining the sentence to be imposed on the offender or whether the offender should be discharged pursuant to section 730.

(4) For the purposes of this section, "victim", in relation to an offence.

- (a) means the person to whom harm was done or who suffered physical or emotional loss as a result of the commission of the offence; and
- (b) where the person described in paragraph (a) is dead, ill or otherwise incapable of making a statement referred to in subsection (1), includes the spouse or any relative of that person, anyone who has in law or fact the custody of that person or is responsible for the care or support of that person or any dependant of that person.

COPIES OF DOCUMENTS.

722.1. The clerk of the court shall provide a copy of a document referred to in section 721 or subsection 722(1), as soon as practicable after filing, to the offender or counsel for the offender, as directed by the court, and to the prosecutor.

---

SUBMISSIONS ON FACTS / Submission of evidence / Production of evidence / Compel appearance / Hearsay evidence.

723. (1) Before determining the sentence, a court shall give the prosecutor and the offender an opportunity to make submissions with respect to any facts relevant to the sentence to be imposed.

(2) The court shall hear any relevant evidence presented by the prosecutor or the offender.

(3) The court may, on its own motion, after hearing argument from the prosecutor and the offender, require the production of evidence that would assist it in determining the appropriate sentence.

(4) Where it is necessary in the interests of justice, the court may, after consulting the parties, compel the appearance of any person who is a compellable witness to assist the court in determining the appropriate sentence.

(5) Hearsay evidence is admissible at sentencing proceedings, but the court may, if the court considers it to be in the interests of justice, compel a person to testify where the person

- (a) has personal knowledge of the matter;*
- (b) is reasonably available; and*
- (c) is a compellable witness.*

INFORMATION ACCEPTED / Jury / Disputed facts.

724. (1) In determining a sentence, a court may accept as proved any information disclosed at the trial or at the sentence proceedings and any facts agreed on by the prosecutor and the offender.

(2) Where the court is composed of a judge and jury, the court

- (a) shall accept as proven all facts, express or implied, that are essential to the jury's verdict of guilty; and*
- (b) may find any other relevant fact that was disclosed by evidence at the trial to be proven, or hear evidence presented by either party with respect to that fact.*

(3) Where there is a dispute with respect to any fact that is relevant to the determination of a sentence,

- (a) the court shall request that evidence be adduced as to the existence of the fact unless the court is satisfied that sufficient evidence was adduced at the trial;*
- (b) the party wishing to rely on a relevant fact, including a fact contained in a presentence report, has the burden of proving it;*
- (c) either party may cross-examine any witness called by the other party;*
- (d) subject to paragraph (e), the court must be satisfied on a balance of probabilities of the existence of the disputed fact before relying on it in determining the sentence; and*
- (e) the prosecutor must establish, by proof beyond a reasonable doubt, the existence of any aggravating fact or any previous conviction by the offender.*

OTHER OFFENCES / No further proceedings.

725. (1) In determining the sentence, a court

- (a) shall consider, if it is possible and appropriate to do so, any other offences of which the offender was found guilty by the same court, and shall determine the sentence to be imposed for each of those offences;*
- (b) shall consider, with the consent of the offender and the Attorney General, any outstanding charges against the offender to which the offender consents to plead guilty and pleads guilty, if the court has jurisdiction to try those charges, and shall determine the sentence to be imposed for each charge, unless the court is of the opinion that a separate prosecution for the other offence is necessary in the public interest; and*
- (c) may consider any facts forming part of the circumstances of the offence that could constitute the basis for a separate charge.*

(2) The court shall note any facts considered in determining the sentence under paragraph (1)(c) on the information or indictment and no further proceedings may be taken with respect to the other offence unless the conviction for the offence of which the offender has been found guilty is set aside or quashed on appeal.

OFFENDERS MAY SPEAK TO SENTENCE.

726. Before determining the sentence to be imposed, the court shall ask whether the offender, if present, has anything to say.

RELEVANT INFORMATION.

726.1. In determining the sentence, a court shall consider any relevant information placed before it, including any representations or submissions made by or on behalf of the prosecutor or the offender.

---

REASONS FOR SENTENCE.

726.2. When imposing a sentence, a court shall state the terms of the sentence imposed, and the reasons for it, and enter those terms and reasons into the record of the proceedings.

PREVIOUS CONVICTION / Procedure / Where hearing ex parte / Corporations / Section does not apply.

727. (1) Subject to subsections (3) and (4), where an offender is convicted of an offence for which a greater punishment may be imposed by reason of previous convictions, no greater punishment shall be imposed on the offender by reason thereof unless the prosecutor satisfies the court that the offender, before making a plea, was notified that a greater punishment would be sought by reason thereof.

(2) Where an offender is convicted of an offence for which a greater punishment may be imposed by reason of previous convictions, the court shall, on application by the prosecutor and on being satisfied that the offender was notified in accordance with subsection (1), ask whether the offender was previously convicted and, if the offender does not admit to any previous convictions, evidence of previous convictions may be adduced.

(3) Where a summary conviction court holds a trial pursuant to subsection 803(2) and convicts the offender, the court may, whether or not the offender was notified that a greater punishment would be sought by reason of a previous conviction, make inquiries and hear evidence with respect to previous convictions of the offender and, if any such conviction is proved, may impose a greater punishment by reason thereof.

(4) Where, pursuant to section 623, the court proceeds with the trial of a corporation that has not appeared and pleaded and convicts the corporation, the court may, whether or not the corporation was notified that a greater punishment would be sought [by] reason of a previous conviction, make inquiries and hear evidence with respect to previous convictions of the corporation and, if any such conviction is proved, may impose a greater punishment by reason thereof.

SENTENCE JUSTIFIED BY ANY COUNT.

728. Where one sentence is passed on a verdict of guilty on two or more counts of an indictment, the sentence is good if any of the counts would have justified the sentence.

---

PROOF OF CERTIFICATE OF ANALYST / Definition of "analyst" / Notice of intention to produce certificate / Proof of service / Attendance for examination / Requiring attendance of analyst.

729. (1) In

- (a) a prosecution for failure to comply with a condition in a probation order that the accused not have in possession or use drugs, or*
- (b) a hearing to determine whether the offender breached a condition of a conditional sentence that the offender not have in possession or use drugs,* a certificate purporting to be signed by an analyst stating that the analyst has analyzed or examined a substance and stating the result of the analysis or examination is admissible in evidence and, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, is proof of the statements contained in the certificate without proof of the signature or official character of the person appearing to have signed the certificate.

(2) In this section, “analyst” means a person designated as an analyst under the Food and Drugs Act or under the Narcotic Control Act.

(3) No certificate shall be admitted in evidence unless the party intending to produce it has, before the trial or hearing, as the case may be, given reasonable notice and a copy of the certificate to the party against whom it is to be produced.

(4) Service of any certificate referred to in subsection (1) may be proved by oral evidence given under oath by, or by the affidavit or solemn declaration of, the person claiming to have served it.

(5) Notwithstanding subsection (4), the court may require the person who appears to have signed an affidavit or solemn declaration referred to in that subsection to appear before it for examination or cross-examination in respect of the issue of proof of service.

(6) The party against whom a certificate of an analyst is produced may, with leave of the court, require the attendance of the analyst for cross-examination.

Absolute and Conditional Discharges

ABSOLUTE AND CONDITIONAL DISCHARGE / Period for which appearance notice, etc., continues in force / Effect of discharge / Where person bound by probation order convicted of offence.

730. (1) Where an accused, other than a corporation, pleads guilty to or is found guilty of an offence, other than an offence for which a minimum punishment is prescribed by law or an offence punishable, in the proceedings commenced against the accused, by imprisonment for fourteen years or for life, the court before which the accused appears may, if it considers it to be in the best interests of the accused and not contrary to the public interest, instead of convicting the accused, by order direct that the accused be discharged absolutely or on the conditions prescribed in a probation order made under subsection 731(2).

(2) Subject to Part XVI, where an accused who has not been taken into custody or who has been released from custody under or by virtue of any provision of Part XVI pleads guilty of or is found guilty of an offence but is not convicted, the appearance notice, promise to appear, summons, undertaking or recognizance issued to or given or entered into by the accused continues in force, subject to its terms, until a disposition in respect of the accused is made under subsection (1) unless, at the time the accused pleads guilty or is found guilty, the court, judge or justice orders that the accused be taken into custody pending such a disposition.

(3) Where a court directs under subsection (1) that an offender be discharged of an offence, the offender shall be deemed not to have been convicted of the offence except that

(a) the offender may appeal from the determination of guilt as if it were a conviction in respect of the offence;

(b) the Attorney General and, in the case of summary conviction proceedings, the informant or the informant's agent may appeal from the decision of the court not to convict the offender of the offence as if that decision were a judgment or verdict of acquittal of the offence or a dismissal of the information against the offender; and

(c) the offender may plead autrefois convict in respect of any subsequent charge relating to the offence.

(4) Where an offender who is bound by the conditions of a probation order made at a time when the offender was directed to be discharged under this section is convicted of an offence, including an offence under section 733.1, the court that made the probation order may, in addition to or in lieu of exercising its authority under subsection 732.2(5), at any time when it may take action under that subsection, revoke the discharge, convict the offender of the offence to which the discharge relates and impose any sentence that could have been imposed if the offender had been convicted at the time of discharge, and no appeal lies from a conviction under this subsection where an appeal was taken from the order directing that the offender be discharged.

Probation

MAKING OF PROBATION ORDER / Idem.

731. (1) Where a person is convicted of an offence, a court may, having regard to the age and character of the offender, the nature of the offence and the circumstances surrounding its commission,

- (a) if no minimum punishment is prescribed by law, suspend the passing of sentence and direct that the offender be released on the conditions prescribed in a probation order; or
- (b) in addition to fining or sentencing the offender to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, direct that the offender comply with the conditions prescribed in a probation order.

(2) A court may also make a probation order where it discharges an accused under subsection 730(1).

FIREARM, ETC., PROHIBITIONS / Idem.

731.1. (1) Before making a probation order, the court shall consider whether section 100 is applicable.

(2) For greater certainty, a condition of a probation order referred to in paragraph 732.1(3)(d) does not affect the operation of section 100.

INTERMITTENT SENTENCE / Application to vary intermittent sentence / Court may vary intermittent sentence if subsequent offence.

732. (1) Where the court imposes a sentence of imprisonment of ninety days or less on an offender convicted of an offence, whether in default of payment of a fine or otherwise, the court may, having regard to the age and character of the offender, the nature of the offence and the circumstances surrounding its commission, and the availability of appropriate accommodation to ensure compliance with the sentence, order

- (a) that the sentence be served intermittently at such times as are specified in the order; and
- (b) that the offender comply with the conditions prescribed in a probation order when not in confinement during the period that the sentence is being served and, if the court so orders, on release from prison after completing the intermittent sentence.

(2) An offender who is ordered to serve a sentence of imprisonment intermittently may, on giving notice to the prosecutor, apply to the court that imposed the sentence to allow it to be served on consecutive days.

(3) Where a court imposes a sentence of imprisonment on a person who is subject to an intermittent sentence in respect of another offence, the unexpired portion of the intermittent sentence shall be served on consecutive days unless the court otherwise orders.

DEFINITIONS / “Change” / “Optional conditions” / Compulsory conditions of probation order / Optional conditions of probation order / Form and period of order / Proceedings on making order.

732.1. (1) In this section and section 732.2,

“change”, in relation to optional conditions, includes deletions and additions;

“optional conditions” means the conditions referred to in subsection (3).

(2) The court shall prescribe, as conditions of a probation order, that the offender do all of the following:

- (a) keep the peace and be of good behaviour;
- (b) appear before the court when required to do so by the court; and
- (c) notify the court or the probation officer in advance of any change of name or address, and promptly notify the court or the probation officer of any change of employment or occupation.

(3) The court may prescribe, as additional conditions of a probation order, that the offender do one or more of the following:

- (a) report to a probation officer;
  - (i) within two working days, or such longer period as the court directs, after the making of the probation order, and
  - (ii) thereafter, when required by the probation officer and in the manner directed by the probation officer;
- (b) remain within the jurisdiction of the court unless written permission to go outside that jurisdiction is obtained from the court or the probation officer;
- (c) abstain from
  - (i) the consumption of alcohol or other intoxicating substances, or
  - (ii) the consumption of drugs except in accordance with a medical prescription;
- (d) abstain from owning, possessing or carrying a weapon;
- (e) provide for the support or care of dependants;
- (f) perform up to 240 hours of community service over a period not exceeding eighteen months;
- (g) if the offender agrees, and subject to the program director's acceptance of the offender, participate actively in a treatment program approved by the province; and
- (h) comply with such other reasonable conditions as the court considers desirable, subject to any regulations made under subsection 738(2), for protecting society and for facilitating the offender's successful reintegration into the community.

(4) A probation order may be in Form 46, and the court that makes the probation order shall specify therein the period for which it is to remain in force.

(5) A court that makes a probation order shall

- (a) cause to be given to the offender
  - (i) a copy of the order,
  - (ii) an explanation of the substance of subsections 732.2(3) and (5) and section 733.1, and
  - (iii) an explanation of the procedure for applying under subsection 732.2(3) for a change to the optional conditions; and
- (b) take reasonable measures to ensure that the offender understands the order and the explanations given to the offender under paragraph (a).

COMING INTO FORCE OF ORDER / Duration of order and limit on term of order / Changes to probation order / Judge may act in chambers / Where person convicted of offence / Compelling appearance of person bound.

732.2. (1) A probation order comes into force

- (a) on the date on which the order is made;
  - (b) where the offender is sentenced to imprisonment under paragraph 73(1)(b) or was previously sentenced to imprisonment for another offence, as soon as the offender is released from prison or, if released from prison on conditional release, at the expiration of the sentence of imprisonment; or
  - (c) where the offender is under a conditional sentence, at the expiration of the conditional sentence.
- (2) Subject to subsection (5),
- (a) where an offender who is bound by a probation order is convicted of an offence, including an offence under section 733.1, or is imprisoned under paragraph 731(1)(b) in default of payment of a fine, the order continues in force except in so far as the sentence renders it impossible for the offender for the time being to comply with the order; and
  - (b) no probation order shall continue in force for more than three years after the date on which the order came into force.

(3) A court that makes a probation order may at any time, on application by the offender, the probation officer or the prosecutor, require the offender to appear before it and, after hearing the offender and one or both of the probation officer and the prosecutor,

- (a) make any changes to the optional conditions that in the opinion of the court are rendered desirable by a change in the circumstances since those conditions were prescribed,
- (b) relieve the offender, either absolutely or on such terms or for such period as the court deems desirable, of compliance with any optional condition, or
- (c) decrease the period for which the probation order is to remain in force, and the court shall thereupon endorse the probation order accordingly and, if it changes the optional conditions, inform the offender of its action and give the offender a copy of the order so endorsed.

(4) All the functions of the court under subsection (3) may be exercised in chambers.

(5) Where an offender who is bound by a probation order is convicted of an offence, including an offence under section 733.1, and

- (a) the time within which an appeal may be taken against that conviction has expired and the offender has not taken an appeal,
- (b) the offender has taken an appeal against that conviction and the appeal has been dismissed, or
- (c) the offender has given written notice to the court that convicted the offender that the offender elects not to appeal the conviction or has abandoned the appeal, as the case may be, in addition to any punishment that may be imposed for that offence, the court that made the probation order may, on application by the prosecutor, require the offender to appear before it and, after hearing the prosecutor and the offender,

- (d) where the probation order was made under paragraph 731(1)(a), revoke the order and impose any sentence that could have been imposed if the passing of sentence had not been suspended, or
- (e) make such changes to the optional conditions as the court deems desirable, or extend the period for which the order is to remain in force for such period, not exceeding one year, as the court deems desirable,

and the court shall thereupon endorse the probation order accordingly and, if it changes the optional conditions or extends the period for which the order is to remain in force, inform the offender of its action and give the offender a copy of the order so endorsed.

(6) The provisions of Parts XVI and XVIII with respect to compelling the appearance of an accused before a justice apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, to proceedings under subsections (3) and (5).

TRANSFER OF ORDER / Where court unable to act.

733. (1) Where an offender who is bound by a probation order becomes a resident of, or is convicted or discharged under section 730 of an offence including an offence under section 733.1 in, a territorial division other than the territorial division where the order was made, the court that made the order may,

- (a) on the application of a probation officer, and
- (b) if both such territorial divisions are not in the same province, with the consent of the Attorney General of the province in which the order was made,

transfer the order to a court in that other territorial division that would, having regard to the mode of trial of the offender, have had jurisdiction to make the order in that other territorial division if the offender had been tried and convicted there of the offence in respect of which the order was made, and the order may thereafter be dealt with and enforced by the court to which it is so transferred in all respects as if that court had made the order.

(2) Where a court that has made a probation order or to which a probation order has been transferred pursuant to subsection (1) is for any reason unable to act, the powers of that court in relation to the probation order may be exercised by any other court that has equivalent jurisdiction in the same province.

FAILURE TO COMPLY WITH PROBATION ORDER / Where accused may be tried and punished.

733.1. (1) An offender who is bound by a probation order and who, without reasonable excuse, fails or refuses to comply with that order is guilty of

- (a) an indictable offence and is liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years; or
- (b) an offence punishable on summary conviction and is liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding eighteen months, or to a fine not exceeding two thousand dollars, or both.

(2) An accused who is charged with an offence under subsection (1) may be tried and punished by any court having jurisdiction to try that offence in the place where the offence is alleged to have been committed or in the place where the accused is found, is arrested or is in custody, but where the place where the accused is found, is arrested or is in custody is outside the province in which the offence is alleged to have been committed, no proceedings in respect of that offence shall be instituted in that place without the consent of the Attorney General of that province.

Fines and Forfeiture

POWER OF COURT TO IMPOSE FINE / Offender's ability to pay / Meaning of default of payment / Imprisonment in default of payment / Determination of term / Moneys found on offender / Provincial regulations.

734. (1) A court that convicts a person, other than a corporation, of an offence, except an offence that is punishable by a maximum term of imprisonment, may, in addition to or in lieu of any other sanction that the court is authorized to impose, fine the offender, subject to subsection (2), by making an order under section 734.1.

(2) A court may fine an offender under this section only if the court is satisfied that the offender is able to pay the fine, or discharge it under section 736.

(3) For the purposes of this section and sections 734.1 to 737, a person is in default of payment of a fine if the fine has not been paid in full by the time set out in the order made under section 734.1.

(4) Where an offender is fined under this section, a term of imprisonment, determined in accordance with subsection (5), shall be deemed to be imposed in default of payment of the fine.

- (5) The length, in days, of the term of imprisonment referred to in subsection (4) is the lesser of*
- (a) a fraction of which*
    - (i) the numerator is the aggregate of*
      - (A) the unpaid amount of the fine, and*
      - (B) the costs and charges of committing and conveying the defaulter to prison, calculated in accordance with regulations made under subsection (7), and*
      - (ii) the denominator is equal to eight times the provincial minimum hourly wage, at the time of default, in the province in which the fine was imposed, rounded down to the nearest whole number of days, and*
    - (b) the maximum term of imprisonment, expressed in days, that the court could itself impose on conviction.*

(6) All or any part of a fine imposed under this section may be taken out of moneys found in the possession of the offender at the time of the arrest of the offender if the court making the order, on being satisfied that ownership of or right to possession of those moneys is not disputed by claimants other than the offender, so directs.

(7) The lieutenant governor in council of a province may make regulations respecting the calculation of the costs and charges referred to in clause (5)(a)(i)(B) and in paragraph 734.8(1)(b).

TERMS OF ORDER IMPOSING FINE.

734.1. A court that fines an offender under section 734 shall do so by making an order that clearly sets out

- (a) the amount of the fine;*
- (b) the manner in which the fine is to be paid;*
- (c) the time or times by which the fine, or any portion thereof, must be paid; and*
- (d) such other terms respecting the payment of the fine as the court deems appropriate.*

PROCEEDINGS ON MAKING ORDER.

734.2. A court that makes an order under section 734.1 shall

- (a) cause to be given to the offender*
  - (i) a copy of the order,*
  - (ii) an explanation of the substance of sections 734 to 734.8 and 736,*
  - (iii) an explanation of available programs referred to in section 736 and of the procedure for applying for admission to such programs, and*
  - (iv) an explanation of the procedure for applying under section 734.3 for a change in the terms of the order; and*
- (b) take reasonable measures to ensure that the offender understands the order and the explanations given to the offender under paragraph (a).*

CHANGE IN TERMS OF ORDER.

734.3. A court that makes an order under section 734.1, or a person designated, either by name or by title of office, by that court, may, on application by or on behalf of the offender, subject to any rules made by the court under section 482, change any term of the order except the amount of the fine, and any reference in this section and sections 734, 734.1, 734.2 and 734.6 to an order shall be read as including a reference to the order as changed pursuant to this section.

PROCEEDS TO GO TO PROVINCIAL TREASURER / Proceeds to go to Receiver General for Canada / Direction for payment to municipality.

734.4. (1) Where a fine or forfeiture is imposed or a recognizance is forfeited and no provision, other than this section, is made by law for the application of the proceeds thereof, the proceeds belong to Her Majesty in right of the province in which the fine or forfeiture was imposed or the recognizance was forfeited, and shall be paid by the person who receives them to the treasurer of that province.

(2) Where

(a) a fine or forfeiture is imposed

(i) in respect of a contravention of a revenue law of Canada,

(ii) in respect of a breach of duty or malfeasance in office by an officer or employee of the Government of Canada, or

(iii) in respect of any proceedings instituted at the instance of the Government of Canada in which that government bears the costs of prosecution, or

(b) a recognizance in connection with proceedings mentioned in paragraph (a) is forfeited,

the proceeds of the fine, forfeiture or recognizance belong to Her Majesty in right of Canada and shall be paid by the person who receives them to the Receiver General.

(3) Where a provincial, municipal or local authority bears, in whole or in part, the expense of administering the law under which a fine or forfeiture is imposed or under which proceedings are taken in which a recognizance is forfeited,

(a) the lieutenant governor in council of a province may direct that the proceeds of a fine, forfeiture or recognizance that belongs to Her Majesty in right of the province shall be paid to that authority; and

(b) the Governor in Council may direct that the proceeds of a fine, forfeiture or recognizance that belongs to Her Majesty in right of Canada shall be paid to that authority.

LICENCES, PERMITS, ETC.

734.5. Where an offender is in default of payment of a fine,

(a) the person responsible, by or under an Act of the legislature of the province to whom the proceeds of the fine belong by virtue of subsection 734.4(1), for issuing or renewing a licence, permit or other similar instrument in relation to the offender may refuse to issue or renew the licence, permit or other instrument until the fine is paid in full, proof of which lies on the offender; or

(b) where the proceeds of the fine belong to Her Majesty in right of Canada by virtue of subsection 734.4(2), the person responsible, by or under an Act of Parliament, for issuing or renewing a licence, permit or other similar instrument in relation to the offender may refuse to issue or renew the licence, permit or other instrument until the fine is paid in full, proof of which lies on the offender.

CIVIL ENFORCEMENT OF FINES FORFEITURE / Effect of filing order.

734.6. (1) Where

(a) an offender is in default of payment of a fine, or

(b) a forfeiture imposed by law is not paid as required by the order imposing it, then, in addition to any other method provided by law for recovering the fine or forfeiture,

(c) the Attorney General of the province to whom the proceeds of the fine or forfeiture belong, or may, by filing the order, enter as a judgment the amount of the fine or forfeiture, and costs, if any, in any civil court in Canada that has jurisdiction to enter a judgment for that amount.

(d) the Attorney General of Canada, where the proceeds of the fine or forfeiture belong to Her Majesty in right of Canada.

(2) An order that is entered as a judgment under this section is enforceable in the same manner as if it were a judgment obtained by the Attorney General of the province or the Attorney General of Canada, as the case may be, in civil proceedings.

WARRANT OF COMMITTAL / Reasons for committal / Compelling appearance of person bound / Effect of imprisonment.

734.7. (1) Where time has been allowed for payment of a fine, the court shall not issue a warrant of committal in default of payment of the fine

(a) until the expiration of the time allowed for payment of the fine in full; and

(b) unless the court is satisfied

(i) that the mechanisms provided by section 734.5 and 734.6 are not appropriate in the circumstances, or

(ii) that the offender has, without reasonable excuse, refused to pay the fine or discharge it under section 736.

(2) Where no time has been allowed for payment of a fine and a warrant committing the offender to prison for default of payment of the fine is issued, the court shall state in the warrant the reason for immediate committal.

(3) The provisions of Parts XVI and XVIII with respect to compelling the appearance of an accused before a justice apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, to proceedings under paragraph (1)(b).

(4) The imprisonment of an offender for default of payment of a fine terminates the operation of sections 734.5 and 734.6 in relation to that fine.

DEFINITION OF "PENALTY" / Reduction of imprisonment on part payment / Minimum that can be accepted / To whom payment made / Application of money paid.

734.8. (1) In this section, "penalty" means the aggregate of

(a) the fine, and

(b) the costs and charges of committing and conveying the defaulter to prison, calculated in accordance with regulations made under subsection 734(7).

(2) Where a person is imprisoned in default of payment of a fine, the term of imprisonment shall, on payment of a part of the penalty, whether the payment was made before or after the issue of a warrant of committal, be reduced by the number of days that bears the same proportion to the number of days in the term as the part paid bears to the total penalty.

(3) No amount offered in part payment of a penalty shall be accepted unless it is sufficient to secure a reduction of sentence of one day, or a multiple thereof, and where a warrant of committal has been issued, no part payment shall be accepted until any fee that is payable in respect of the warrant or its execution has been paid.

(4) Payment may be made under this section to the person who has lawful custody of the prisoner or to such other person as the Attorney General directs.

(5) A payment under this section shall be applied firstly to the payment in full of costs and charges, secondly to the payment in full of any victim fine surcharge imposed under subsection 737(1), and thereafter to payment of any part of the fine that remains unpaid.

FINES ON CORPORATIONS / Civil enforcement of fines.

735. (1) A corporation that is convicted of an offence is liable, in lieu of any imprisonment that is prescribed as punishment for that offence, to be fined in an amount, except where otherwise provided by law,

- (a) that is in the discretion of the court, where the offence is an indictable offence; or
- (b) not exceeding twenty-five thousand dollars, where the offence is a summary conviction offence.

(2) Section 734.6 applies, with such modifications as the circumstances require, where a fine imposed under subsection (1) or under any other Act of Parliament is not paid forthwith.

FINE OPTION PROGRAM / Credits and other matters / Deemed payment / Federal-provincial agreement.

736. (1) An offender who is fined under section 734 may, whether or not the offender is serving a term of imprisonment imposed in default of payment of the fine, discharge the fine in whole or in part by earning credits for work performed during a period not greater than two years in a program established for that purpose by the lieutenant governor in council

- (a) of the province in which the fine was imposed, or
- (b) of the province in which the offender resides, where an appropriate agreement is in effect between the government of that province and the government of the province in which the fine was imposed.

if the offender is admissible to such a program.

(2) A program referred to in subsection (1) shall determine the rate at which credits are earned and may provide for the manner of crediting any amounts earned against the fine and any other matters necessary for or incidental to carrying out the program.

(3) Credits earned for work performed as provided by subsection (1) shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be payment in respect of a fine.

(4) Where, by virtue of subsection 734.4(2), the proceeds of a fine belong to Her Majesty in right of Canada, an offender may discharge the fine in whole or in part in a fine option program of a province pursuant to subsection (1), where an appropriate agreement is in effect between the government of the province and the Government of Canada.

VICTIM FINE SURCHARGE / Exception / Written reasons for not making order / Amounts applied to aid victims / Regulations / Enforcement.

737. (1) Subject to subsection (2), where an offender is convicted or discharged under section 730 of an offence under this Act or Part III or IV of the Food and Drugs Act or the Narcotic Control Act, the court imposing sentence on or discharging the offender shall, in addition to any other punishment imposed on the offender, order the offender to pay a victim fine surcharge in an amount not exceeding

- (a) fifteen per cent of any fine that is imposed on the offender for that offence or, where no fine is imposed on the offender for that offence, ten thousand dollars, or
- (b) such lesser amount as may be prescribed by, or calculated in the manner prescribed by, regulations made by the Governor in Council under subsection (5), subject to such terms and conditions as may be prescribed by those regulations.

(2) Where the offender establishes to the satisfaction of the court that undue hardship to the offender or the dependants of the offender would result from the making of an order under subsection (1), the court is not required to make the order.

(3) Where the court does not make an order under subsection (1), the court shall

- (a) provide the reasons why the order is not being made; and
- (b) enter the reasons in the record of the proceedings or, where the proceedings are not recorded, provide written reasons.

(4) A victim fine surcharge imposed under subsection (1) shall be applied for the purposes of providing such assistance to victims of offences as the lieutenant governor in council of the province in which the surcharge is imposed may direct from time to time.

(5) The Governor in Council may, for the purposes of subsection (1), make regulations prescribing the maximum amount or the manner of calculating the maximum amount of a victim fine surcharge to be imposed under that subsection, not exceeding the amount referred to in paragraph (1)(a), and any terms and conditions subject to which the victim fine surcharge is to be imposed.

(6) Subsections 734(2) to (4) and sections 734.1, 734.3 and 734.7 apply, and section 736 does not apply, in respect of a victim fine surcharge imposed under subsection (1).

Restitution

RESTITUTION TO VICTIMS OF OFFENCES / Regulations.

738. (1) Where an offender is convicted or discharged under section 730 of an offence, the court imposing sentence on or discharging the offender may, on application of the Attorney General or on its own motion, in addition to any other measure imposed on the offender, order that the offender make restitution to another person as follows:

- (a) in the case of damage to, or the loss or destruction of, the property of any person as a result of the commission of the offence or the arrest or attempted arrest of the offender, by paying to the person an amount not exceeding the replacement value of the property as of the date the order is imposed, less the value of any part of the property that is returned to that person as of the date it is returned, where the amount is readily ascertainable;
- (b) in the case of bodily harm to any person as a result of the commission of the offence or the arrest or attempted arrest of the offender, by paying to the person an amount not exceeding all pecuniary damages, including loss of income or support, incurred as a result of the bodily harm, where the amount is readily ascertainable; and
- (c) in the case of bodily harm or threat of bodily harm to the offender's spouse or child, or any other person, as a result of the commission of the offence or the arrest or attempted arrest of the offender, where the spouse, child or other person was a member of the offender's household at the relevant time, by paying to the person in question, independently of any amount ordered to be paid under paragraphs (a) and (b), an amount not exceeding actual and reasonable expenses incurred by that person, as a result of moving out of the offender's household, for temporary housing, food, child care and transportation, where the amount is readily ascertainable.

(2) The lieutenant governor in council of a province may make regulations precluding the inclusion of provisions on enforcement of restitution orders as an optional condition of a probation order or of a conditional sentence order.

RESTITUTION TO PERSONS ACTING IN GOOD FAITH.

739. Where an offender is convicted or discharged under section 730 of an offence and

- (a) any property obtained as a result of the commission of the offence has been conveyed or transferred for valuable consideration to a person acting in good faith and without notice, or
- (b) the offender has borrowed money on the security of that property from a person acting in good faith and without notice.

the court may, where that property has been returned to the lawful owner or the person who had lawful possession of that property at the time the offence was committed, order the offender to pay as restitution to the person referred to in paragraph (a) or (b) an amount not exceeding the amount of consideration for that property or the total amount outstanding in respect of the loan, as the case may be.

PRIORITY TO RESTITUTION.

740. Where the court finds it applicable and appropriate in the circumstances of a case to make, in relation to an offender, an order of restitution under section 738 or 739, and

- (a) an order of forfeiture under this or any other Act of Parliament may be made in respect of property that is the same as property in respect of which the order of restitution may be made, or
- (b) the court is considering ordering the offender to pay a fine and it appears to the court that the offender would not have the means or ability to comply with both the order of restitution and the order to pay the fine,

the court shall first make the order of restitution and shall then consider whether and to what extent an order of forfeiture or an order to pay a fine is appropriate in the circumstances.

ENFORCING RESTITUTION ORDER / Moneys found on offender.

741. (1) Where an amount that is ordered to be paid under section 738 or 739 is not paid forthwith, the person to whom the amount was ordered to be paid may, by filing the order, enter as a judgment the amount ordered to be paid in any civil court in Canada that has jurisdiction to enter a judgment for that amount, and that judgment is enforceable against the offender in the same manner as if it were a judgment rendered against the offender in that court in civil proceedings.

(2) All or any part of an amount that is ordered to be paid under section 738 or 739 may be taken out of moneys found in the possession of the offender at the time of the arrest of the offender if the court making the order, on being satisfied that ownership of or right to possession of those moneys is not disputed by claimants other than the offender, so directs.

NOTICE OF ORDERS OF RESTITUTION.

741.1. Where a court makes an order of restitution under section 738 or 739, it shall cause notice of the content of the order, or a copy of the order, to be given to the person to whom the restitution is ordered to be paid.

CIVIL REMEDY NOT AFFECTED.

741.2. A civil remedy for an act or omission is not affected by reason only that an order for restitution under section 738 or 739 has been made in respect of that act or omission.

Conditional Sentence of Imprisonment

DEFINITIONS / "Change" / "Optional conditions" / "Supervisor".

742. In sections 742.1 to 742.7,

"change", in relation to optional conditions, includes deletions and additions;

"optional conditions" means the conditions referred to in subsection 742.3(2);

"supervisor" means a person designated by the Attorney General, either by name or by title of office, as a supervisor for the purposes of sections 742.1 to 742.7.

IMPOSING OF CONDITIONAL SENTENCE.

742.1. Where a person is convicted of an offence, except an offence that is punishable by a minimum term of imprisonment, and the court

- (a) imposes a sentence of imprisonment of less than two years, and
- (b) is satisfied that serving the sentence in the community would not endanger the safety of the community, the court may, for the purpose of supervising the offender's behaviour in the community, order that the offender serve the sentence in the community, subject to the offender's complying with the conditions of a conditional sentence order made under section 742.3.

FIREARM, ETC., PROHIBITIONS / Idem.

742.2. (1) Before imposing a conditional sentence under section 742.1, the court shall consider whether section 100 is applicable.

(2) For greater certainty, a condition of a conditional sentence referred to in paragraph 742.3(2)(b) does not affect the operation of section 100.

COMPULSORY CONDITIONS OF CONDITIONAL SENTENCE ORDER / Optional conditions of conditional sentence order / Proceedings on making order.

742.3. (1) The court shall prescribe, as conditions of a conditional sentence order, that the offender do all of the following:

- (a) keep the peace and be of good behaviour;
- (b) appear before the court when required to do so by the court;
- (c) report to a supervisor
  - (i) within two working days, or such longer period as the court directs, after the making of the conditional sentence order, and
  - (ii) thereafter, when required by the supervisor and in the manner directed by the supervisor;
- (d) remain within the jurisdiction of the court unless written permission to go outside that jurisdiction is obtained from the court or the supervisor; and
- (e) notify the court or the supervisor in advance of any change of name or address, and promptly notify the court or the supervisor of any change of employment or occupation.

(2) The court may prescribe, as additional conditions of a conditional sentence order, that the offender do one or more of the following:

- (a) abstain from
  - (i) the consumption of alcohol or other intoxicating substances, or
  - (ii) the consumption of drugs except in accordance with a medical prescription;
- (b) abstain from owning, possessing or carrying a weapon;
- (c) provide for the support or care of dependants;
- (d) perform up to 240 hours of community service over a period not exceeding eighteen months;
- (e) attend a treatment program approved by the province; and
- (f) comply with such other reasonable conditions as the court considers desirable, subject to any regulations made under subsection 738(2), for securing the good conduct of the offender and for preventing a repetition by the offender of the same offence or the commission of other offences.

(3) A court that makes an order under this section shall

- (a) cause to be given to the offender
  - (i) a copy of the order,
  - (ii) an explanation of the substance of sections 742.4 and 742.6, and

- (iii) an explanation of the procedure for applying under section 742.4 for a change to the optional conditions; and
- (b) take reasonable measures to ensure that the offender understands the order and the explanations given to the offender under paragraph (a).

SUPERVISOR MAY PROPOSE CHANGES TO OPTIONAL CONDITIONS / Hearing / Decision at hearing / Where no hearing requested or ordered / Changes proposed by offender or prosecutor / Judge may act in chambers.

742.4. (1) Where an offender's supervisor is of the opinion that a change in circumstances makes a change to the optional conditions desirable, the supervisor may give written notification of the proposed change, and the reasons therefor, to the offender, the prosecutor and the court.

- (2) Within seven days after receiving a notification referred to in subsection (1),
  - (a) the offender or the prosecutor may request the court to hold a hearing to consider the proposed change, or
  - (b) the court may, of its own initiative, order that a hearing be held to consider the proposed change, and a hearing so requested or ordered shall be held within thirty days after the receipt by the court of the notification referred to in subsection (1).

- (3) At a hearing held pursuant to subsection (2), the court
  - (a) shall approve or refuse to approve the proposed change; and
  - (b) may make any other change to the optional conditions that the court deems appropriate.
- (4) Where no request or order for a hearing is made within the time period stipulated in subsection (2), the proposed change takes effect fourteen days after the receipt by the court of the notification referred to in subsection (1), and the supervisor shall so notify the offender and file proof of that notification with the court.
- (5) Subsections (1) and (3) apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, in respect of a change proposed by the offender or the prosecutor to the optional conditions, and in all such cases a hearing must be held, and must be held within thirty days after the receipt by the court of the notification referred to in subsection (1).
- (6) All the functions of the court under this section may be exercised in chambers.

TRANSFER OF ORDER / Where court unable to act.

742.5. (1) Where an offender who is bound by a conditional sentence order becomes a resident of a territorial division other than the territorial division where the order was made, the court that made the order may,

- (a) on the application of a supervisor, and

transfer the order to a court in that other territorial division that would, having regard to the mode of trial of the offender, have had jurisdiction to make the order in that other territorial division if the offender had been tried and convicted there of the offence in respect of which the order was made, and the order may thereafter be dealt with and enforced by the court to which it is so transferred in all respects as if that court had made the order.

- (2) Where a court that has made a conditional sentence order or to which a conditional sentence order has been transferred pursuant to subsection (1) is for any reason unable to act, the powers of that court in relation to the conditional sentence order may be exercised by any other court that has equivalent jurisdiction in the same province.

PROCEDURE ON BREACH OF CONDITION / Interim release / Hearing / Report of supervisor / Notice of intention to produce report / Proof of service / Attendance for examination / Requiring attendance of supervisor or witness / Powers of court.

742.6. (1) The provisions of Parts XVI and XVIII with respect to compelling the appearance of an accused before a justice apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, to proceedings under subsections (3) to (9), and any reference in those Parts to committing an offence shall be read as a reference to breaching a condition of a conditional sentence order.

(2) For the purpose of the application of section 515, the release from custody of an offender who is detained on the basis of an alleged breach of a condition of a conditional sentence order shall be governed by subsection 515(6).

(3) An allegation of a breach of condition may be heard by any court having jurisdiction to hear that allegation in the place where the breach is alleged to have been committed or in the place where the accused is found, is arrested or is in custody, but where the place where the accused is found, is arrested or is in custody is outside the province in which the breach is alleged to have been committed, no proceedings in respect of that breach shall be instituted in that place without the consent of the Attorney General of that province, and any allegation of a breach shall be heard

(a) within thirty days after the offender's arrest, where a warrant was issued; or

(b) where a summons was issued, within thirty days after the issue of the summons.

(4) An allegation of a breach of condition must be supported by a written report of the supervisor, which report must include, where appropriate, signed statements of witnesses.

(5) No report shall be admitted in evidence unless the party intending to produce it has, before the hearing, given the offender reasonable notice and a copy of the report.

(6) Service of any report referred to in subsection (4) may be proved by oral evidence given under oath by, or by the affidavit or solemn declaration of, the person claiming to have served it.

(7) Notwithstanding subsection (6), the court may require the person who appears to have signed an affidavit or solemn declaration referred to in that subsection to appear before it for examination or cross-examination in respect of the issue of proof of service.

(8) The offender may, with leave of the court, require the attendance, for cross-examination, of the supervisor or of any witness whose signed statement is included in the report.

(9) Where the court is satisfied, on a balance of probabilities, that the offender has without reasonable excuse, the proof of which lies on the offender, breached a condition of the conditional sentence order, the court may

(a) take no action;

(b) change the optional conditions;

(c) suspend the conditional sentence order and direct

(i) that the offender serve in custody a portion of the unexpired sentence, and

(ii) that the conditional sentence order resume on the offender's release from custody, either with or without changes to the optional conditions; or

(d) terminate the conditional sentence order and direct that the offender be committed to custody until the expiration of the sentence.

WHERE PERSON IMPRISONED FOR NEW OFFENCE.

742.7. Where an offender who is at large under a conditional sentence is imprisoned for another offence, whenever committed, the running of the conditional sentence is suspended during the period of imprisonment for that other offence, unless otherwise ordered by the court under subsection 742.4(3) or 742.6(9), but no such order may be incompatible with subsection 718.3(5).

Imprisonment

IMPRISONMENT WHEN NO OTHER PROVISION.

743. Every one who is convicted of an indictable offence for which no punishment is specially provided is liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years.

IMPRISONMENT FOR LIFE OR MORE THAN TWO YEARS / Subsequent term less than two years / Imprisonment for term less than two years / Sentence to penitentiary of person serving sentence elsewhere / Transfer to penitentiary / Newfoundland.

743.1. (1) Except where otherwise provided, a person who is sentenced to imprisonment for

(a) life,

(b) a term of two years or more, or

(c) two or more terms of less than two years each that are to be served one after the other and that, in the aggregate, amount to two years or more,

shall be sentenced to imprisonment in a penitentiary.

(2) Where a person who is sentenced to imprisonment in a penitentiary is, before the expiration of that sentence, sentenced to imprisonment for a term of less than two years, the person shall serve that term in a penitentiary, but if the previous sentence of imprisonment in a penitentiary is set aside, that person shall serve that term in accordance with subsection (3).

(3) A person who is sentenced to imprisonment and who is not required to be sentenced as provided in subsection (1) or (2) shall, unless a special prison is prescribed by law, be sentenced to imprisonment in a prison or other place of confinement, other than a penitentiary, within the province in which the person is convicted, in which the sentence of imprisonment may be lawfully executed.

(4) Where a person is sentenced to imprisonment in a penitentiary while the person is lawfully imprisoned in a place other than a penitentiary, that person shall, except where otherwise provided, be sent immediately to the penitentiary, and shall serve in the penitentiary the unexpired portion of the term of imprisonment that that person was serving when sentenced to the penitentiary as well as the term of imprisonment for which that person was sentenced to the penitentiary.

(5) Where, at any time, a person who is imprisoned in a prison or place of confinement other than a penitentiary is subject to two or more terms of imprisonment, each of which is for less than two years, that are to be served one after the other, and the aggregate of the unexpired portions of those terms at that time amounts to two years or more, the person shall be transferred to a penitentiary to serve those terms, but if any one or more of such terms is set aside or reduced and the unexpired portions of the remaining term or terms on the day on which that person was transferred under this section amounted to less than two years, that person shall serve that term or terms in accordance with subsection (3).

(6) For the purposes of subsection (3), “penitentiary” does not, until a day to be fixed by order of the Governor in Council, include the facility mentioned in subsection 15(2) of the Corrections and Conditional Release Act.

REPORT BY COURT TO CORRECTIONAL SERVICE.

743.2. A court that sentences or commits a person to penitentiary shall forward to the Correc- tional Service of Canada its reasons and recommendation relating to the sentence or committal, any relevant reports that were submitted to the court, and any other information relevant to administering the sentence or committal.

SENTENCE SERVED ACCORDING TO REGULATIONS.

743.3. A sentence of imprisonment shall be served in accordance with the enactments and rules that govern the institution to which the prisoner is sentenced.

TRANSFER OF YOUNG PERSON TO PLACE OF CUSTODY / Removal of young person from place of custody / Words and expressions.

743.4. (1) Where a young person is sentenced to imprisonment under this or any other Act of Parliament, the young person may, with the consent of the provincial director, be transferred to a place of custody for any portion of the young person's term of imprisonment, but in no case shall that young person be kept in a place of custody under this section after that young person attains the age of twenty years.

(2) Where the provincial director certifies that a young person transferred to a place of custody under subsection (1) can no longer be held therein without significant danger of escape or of detrimentally affecting the rehabilitation or reformation of other young persons held therein, the young person may be imprisoned during the remainder of his term of imprisonment in any place where that young person might, but for subsection (1), have been imprisoned.

(3) For the purposes of this section, the expressions "provincial director" and "young person" have the meanings assigned by subsection 2(1) of the Young Offenders Act, and the expression "place of custody" means "open custody" or "secure custody" within the meaning assigned by subsection 24.1(1) of that Act.

TRANSFER OF JURISDICTION / Whether sentence to be served concurrently or consecutively / Remaining portion deemed to constitute one sentence.

743.5. (1) Where a person is sentenced for an offence while subject to a disposition made under paragraph 20(1)(j), (k) or (k.1) of the Young Offenders Act, on the application of the Attorney General or the Attorney General's agent, the court that sentences the person may, unless to so order would bring the administration of justice into disrepute, order that the remaining portion of the disposition made under that Act be dealt with, for all purposes under this Act or any other Act of Parliament, as if it had been a sentence imposed under this Act.

NOTE: Section 743.5(1) replaced by 1995, c. 22, s. 19(b) (to come into force when s. 743.5(1) as enacted by 1995, c. 22, s. 6 is brought into force but only if 1995, c. 19, c. 37(1) is brought into force before that date). The text of subsec. (1), which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

743.5. (1) Where a person is or has been sentenced for an offence while subject to a disposition made under paragraph 20(1)(j), (k) or (k.1) of the Young Offenders Act, on the application of the Attorney General or the Attorney General's agent, a court of criminal jurisdiction may, unless to so order would bring the administration of justice into disrepute, order that the remaining portion of the disposition made under that Act be dealt with, for all purposes under this Act or any other Act of Parliament, as if it had been a sentence imposed under this Act.

(2) Where an order is made under subsection (1), in respect of a disposition made under paragraph 20(1)(k) or (k.1) of the Young Offenders Act, the remaining portion of the disposition to be served pursuant to the order shall be served concurrently with the sentence referred to in subsection (1), where it is a term of imprisonment, unless the court making the order orders that it be served consecutively.

(3) For greater certainty, the remaining portion of the disposition referred to in subsection (2)

shall, for the purposes of section 139 of the Corrections and Conditional Release Act and section 743.1 of this Act, be deemed to constitute one sentence of imprisonment on the day the order is made.

NOTE: Section 743.5(3) replaced by 1995, c. 22, s. 20(b) (to come into force when s. 743.5(3) as enacted by 1995, c. 22, s. 6 is brought into force but only if 1995, c. 19, s. 37(2) is brought into force before that date). The text of subsec. (3), which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

(3) For greater certainty, the remaining portion of the disposition referred to in subsection (2) shall, for the purposes of section 139 of the Corrections and Conditional Release Act and section 743.1 of this Act, be deemed to constitute one sentence of imprisonment.

Eligibility for Parole

POWER OF COURT TO DELAY PAROLE / Principles that are to guide the court.

743.6. (1) Notwithstanding subsection 120(1) of the Corrections and Conditional Release Act, where an offender is sentenced, after the coming into force of this section, to a term of imprisonment of two years or more on conviction for one or more offences set out in Schedules I and II to that Act that were prosecuted by way of indictment, the court may, if satisfied, having regard to the circumstances of the commission of the offences and the character and circumstances of the offender, that the expression of society's denunciation of the offences or the objective of specific or general deterrence so requires, order that the portion of the sentence that must be served before the offender may be released on full parole is one half of the sentence or ten years, whichever is less.

(2) For greater certainty, the paramount principles that are to guide the court under this section are denunciation and specific or general deterrence, with rehabilitation of the offender, in all cases, being subordinate to those paramount principles.

NOTE: That part of 1995, c. 22, s. 6 which enacts s. 743.6 is replaced by 1995, c. 42, s. 86(b). The text of s. 743.6 as enacted by s. 86(b), which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

POWER OF COURT TO DELAY PAROLE / Principles that are to guide the court.

743.6. (1) Notwithstanding subsection 120(1) of the Corrections and Conditional Release Act, where an offender receives, on or after November 1, 1992, a sentence of imprisonment of two years or more, including a sentence of imprisonment for life imposed otherwise than as a minimum punishment, on conviction for an offence set out in Schedule I or II to that Act that was prosecuted by way of indictment, the court may, if satisfied, having regard to the circumstances of the commission of the offence and the character and circumstances of the offender, that the expression of society's denunciation of the offence or the objective of specific or general deterrence so requires, order that the portion of the sentence that must be served before the offender may be released on full parole is one half of the sentence or ten years, whichever is less.

(2) For greater certainty, the paramount principles which are to guide the court under this section are denunciation and specific or general deterrence, with rehabilitation of the offender, in all cases, being subordinate to these paramount principles.

Delivery of Offender to Keeper of Prison

EXECUTION OF WARRANT OF COMMITTAL.

744. A peace officer or other person to whom a warrant of committal authorized by this or any other Act of Parliament is directed shall arrest the person named or described therein, if it is necessary to do so in order to take that person into custody, convey that person to the prison mentioned in the warrant and deliver that person, together with the warrant, to the keeper of the prison who shall thereupon give to the peace officer or other person who delivers the prisoner a receipt in Form 43 setting out the state and condition of the prisoner when delivered into custody.

Imprisonment for Life

SENTENCE OF LIFE IMPRISONMENT.

745. Subject to section 745.1, the sentence to be pronounced against a person who is to be sentenced to imprisonment for life shall be

- (a) in respect of a person who has been convicted of high treason or first degree murder, that the person be sentenced to imprisonment for life without eligibility for parole until the person has served twenty-five years of the sentence;
- (b) in respect of a person who has been convicted of second degree murder where that person has previously been convicted of culpable homicide that is murder, however described in this Act, that that person be sentenced to imprisonment for life without eligibility for parole until the person has served twenty-five years of the sentence;
- (c) in respect of a person who has been convicted of second degree murder, that the person be sentenced to imprisonment for life without eligibility for parole until the person has served at least ten years of the sentence or such greater number of years, not being more than twenty-five years, as has been substituted therefor pursuant to section 745.4; and
- (d) in respect of a person who has been convicted of any other offence, that the person be sentenced to imprisonment for life with normal eligibility for parole.

PERSONS UNDER EIGHTEEN.

745.1. The sentence to be pronounced against a person who was under the age of eighteen at the time of the commission of the offence for which the person was convicted of first degree murder or second degree murder and who is to be sentenced to imprisonment for life shall be that the person be sentenced to imprisonment for life without eligibility for parole until the person has served such period between five and ten years of the sentence as is specified by the judge presiding at the trial.

NOTE: Section 745.1 replaced by 1995, c. 22, s. 21(b) (to come into force when s. 745.1 as enacted by 1995, c. 22, s. 6 is brought into force but only if 1995, c. 19, s. 38 is brought into force before that date). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

745.1. The sentence to be pronounced against a person who was under the age of eighteen at the time of the commission of the offence for which the person was convicted of first degree murder or second degree murder and who is to be sentenced to imprisonment for life shall be that the person be sentenced to imprisonment for life without eligibility for parole until the person has served

- (a) such period between five and seven years of the sentence as is specified by the judge presiding at the trial, or if no period is specified by the judge presiding at the trial, five years, in the case of a person who was under the age of sixteen at the time of the commission of the offence;

- (b) ten years, in the case of a person convicted of first degree murder who was sixteen or seventeen years of age at the time of the commission of the offence; and
- (c) seven years, in the case of a person convicted of second degree murder who was sixteen or seventeen years of age at the time of the commission of the offence.

RECOMMENDATION BY JURY.

745.2. Subject to section 745.3, where a jury finds an accused guilty of second degree murder, the judge presiding at the trial shall, before discharging the jury, put to them the following question:

You have found the accused guilty of second degree murder and the law requires that I now pronounce a sentence of imprisonment for life against the accused. Do you wish to make any recommendation with respect to the number of years that the accused must serve before the accused is eligible for release on parole? You are not required to make any recommendation but if you do, your recommendation will be considered by me when I am determining whether I should substitute for the ten year period, which the law would otherwise require the accused to serve before the accused is eligible to be considered for release on parole, a number of years that is more than ten but not more than twenty-five.

PERSONS UNDER EIGHTEEN.

745.3. Where a jury finds an accused guilty of first degree murder or second degree murder and the accused was under the age of eighteen at the time of the commission of the offence, the judge presiding at the trial shall, before discharging the jury, put to them the following question:

You have found the accused guilty of first degree murder (or second degree murder) and the law requires that I now pronounce a sentence of imprisonment for life against the accused. Do you wish to make any recommendation with respect to the period of imprisonment that the accused must serve before the accused is eligible for release on parole? You are not required to make any recommendation but if you do, your recommendation will be considered by me when I am determining the period of imprisonment that is between five years and ten years that the law would require the accused to serve before the accused is eligible to be considered for release on parole.

NOTE: Section 745.3 replaced by 1995, c. 22, s. 22(b) (to come into force when s. 745.3 as enacted by 1995, c. 22, s. 6 is brought into force but only if 1995, c. 19, s. 39 is brought into force before that date). The text, which is not yet in force and therefore printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

PERSONS UNDER SIXTEEN.

745.3. Where a jury finds an accused guilty of first degree murder or second degree murder and the accused was under the age of sixteen at the time of the commission of the offence, the judge presiding at the trial shall, before discharging the jury, put to them the following question:

You have found the accused guilty of first degree murder (or second degree murder) and the law requires that I now pronounce a sentence of imprisonment for life against the accused. Do you wish to make any recommendation with respect to the period of imprisonment that the accused must serve before the accused is eligible for release on parole? You are not required to make any recommendation but if you do, your recommendation will be considered by me when I am determining the period of imprisonment that is between five years and seven years that the law would require the accused to serve before the accused is eligible to be considered for release on parole.

INELIGIBILITY FOR PAROLE.

745.4. Subject to section 745.5, at the time of the sentencing under section 745 of an offender who is convicted of second degree murder, the judge who presided at the trial of the offender or, if that judge is unable to do so, any judge of the same court may, having regard to the character of the offender, the nature of the offence and the circumstances surrounding its commission, and to the recommendation, if any, made pursuant to section 745.2, by order, substitute for ten years a number of years of imprisonment (being more than ten but not more than twenty-five) without eligibility for parole, as the judge deems fit in the circumstances.

IDEM.

745.5. At the time of the sentencing under section 745.1 of an offender who is convicted of first degree murder or second degree murder and who was under the age of eighteen at the time of the commission of the offence, the judge who presided at the trial of the offender or, if that judge is unable to do so, any judge of the same court, may, having regard to the age and character of the offender, the nature of the offence and the circumstances surrounding its commission, and to the recommendation, if any, made pursuant to section 745.3, by order, decide the period of imprisonment the offender is to serve that is between five years and ten years without eligibility for parole, as the judge deems fit in the circumstances.

NOTE: Section 745.5 replaced by 1995, c. 22, s. 23(b) (to come into force when s. 745.5 as enacted by 1995, c. 22, s. 6 is brought into force but only if 1995, c. 19, s. 40 is brought into force before that date). The text, which is not yet in force and therefore printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

745.5. At the time of the sentencing under section 745.1 of an offender who is convicted of first degree murder or second degree murder and who was under the age of sixteen at the time of the commission of the offence, the judge who presided at the trial of the offender or, if that judge is unable to do so, any judge of the same court, may, having regard to the age and character of the offender, the nature of the offence and the circumstances surrounding its commission, and to the recommendation, if any, made pursuant to section 745.3, by order, decide the period of imprisonment the offender is to serve that is between five years and seven years without eligibility for parole, as the judge deems fit in the circumstances.

APPLICATION FOR JUDICIAL REVIEW / Judicial hearing / Definition of "victim" / Renewal of application / Reduction / Rules / Definition of "appropriate Chief Justice" / Territories.

745.6. (1) Where a person has served at least fifteen years of a sentence

- (a) in the case of a person who has been convicted of high treason or first degree murder, or
- (b) in the case of a person convicted of second degree murder who has been sentenced to imprisonment for life without eligibility for parole until more than fifteen years of that person's sentence have been served, that person may apply to the appropriate Chief Justice in the province in which the conviction took place for a reduction in the number of years of imprisonment without eligibility for parole.

(2) On receipt of an application under subsection (1), the appropriate Chief Justice shall designate a judge of the superior court of criminal jurisdiction to empanel a jury to hear the application and determine whether the applicant's number of years of imprisonment without eligibility for parole ought to be reduced having regard to

- (a) the character of the applicant,
- (b) the applicant's conduct while serving the sentence,
- (c) the nature of the offence for which that applicant was convicted,
- (d) any information provided by a victim, either at the time of the imposition of the sentence or at the time of the hearing under this subsection, and

(e) such other matters as the judge deems relevant in the circumstances, and the determination shall be made by not less than two thirds of the jury.

(3) In subsection (2), “victim” has the same meaning as in subsection 722(4).

(4) Where the jury hearing an application under subsection (1) determines that the applicant’s number of years of imprisonment without eligibility for parole ought not to be reduced, the jury shall set another time at or after which an application may again be made by the applicant to the appropriate Chief Justice for a reduction in the applicant’s number of years of imprisonment without eligibility for parole.

(5) Where the jury hearing an application under subsection (1) determines that the applicant’s number of years of imprisonment without eligibility for parole ought to be reduced, the jury may, by order,

(a) substitute a lesser number of years of imprisonment without eligibility for parole than that then applicable; or

(b) terminate the ineligibility for parole.

(6) The appropriate Chief Justice in each province or territory may make such rules in respect of applications and hearings under this section as are required for the purposes of this section.

(7) For the purposes of this section, the “appropriate Chief Justice” is

(a) in relation to the Province of Ontario, the Chief Justice of the Ontario Court;

(b) in relation to the Province of Quebec, the Chief Justice of the Superior Court;

(c) in relation to the Provinces of Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, Trial Division;

(d) in relation to the Provinces of New Brunswick, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Chief Justice of the Court of Queen’s Bench;

(e) in relation to the Province of British Columbia, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court; and

(f) in relation to the Yukon Territory and the Northwest Territories, the Chief Justice of the Court of Appeal thereof.

(8) For the purposes of this section, when the appropriate Chief Justice is designating a judge of the superior court of criminal jurisdiction to empanel a jury to hear an application in respect of a conviction that took place in the Yukon Territory or the Northwest Territories, the appropriate Chief Justice may designate the judge from the Court of Appeal or the Supreme Court of the Yukon Territory or Northwest Territories, as the case may be.

TIME SPENT IN CUSTODY.

746. In calculating the period of imprisonment served for the purposes of section 745, 745.4 or 745.6, there shall be included any time spent in custody between

(a) in the case of a sentence of imprisonment for life after July 25, 1976, the day on which the person was arrested and taken into custody in respect of the offence for which that person was sentenced to imprisonment for life and the day the sentence was imposed; or

(b) in the case of a sentence of death that has been or is deemed to have been commuted to a sentence of imprisonment for life, the day on which the person was arrested and taken into custody in respect of the offence for which that person was sentenced to death and the day the sentence was commuted or deemed to have been commuted to a sentence of imprisonment for life.

NOTE: The portion of s. 746 preceding para. (a) replaced by 1995, c. 22, s. 24(b) (to come into force when that portion as enacted by 1995, c. 22, s. 6 is brought into force but only if 1995, c. 19, s. 41 is brought into force before that date). The text of that portion, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

746. In calculating the period of imprisonment served for the purposes of section 745, 745.1, 745.4, 745.5 or 745.6, there shall be included any time spent in custody between

PAROLE PROHIBITED / Temporary absences and day parole / Idem.

746.1. (1) Unless Parliament otherwise provides by an enactment making express reference to this section, a person who has been sentenced to imprisonment for life without eligibility for parole for a specified number of years pursuant to this Act shall not be considered for parole or released pursuant to a grant of parole under the Corrections and Conditional Release Act or any other Act of Parliament until the expiration or termination of the specified number of years of imprisonment.

(2) Subject to subsection (3), in respect of a person sentenced to imprisonment for life without eligibility for parole for a specified number of years pursuant to this Act, until the expiration of all but three years of the specified number of years of imprisonment.

- (a) no day parole may be granted under the Corrections and Conditional Release Act;
- (b) no absence without escort may be authorized under that Act or the Prisons and Reformatories Act; and
- (c) except with the approval of the National Parole Board, no absence with escort otherwise than for medical reasons may be authorized under either of those Acts.

(3) Notwithstanding the Corrections and Conditional Release Act, in the case of any person convicted of first degree murder or second degree murder who was under the age of eighteen at the time of the commission of the offence and who is sentenced to imprisonment for life without eligibility for parole for a specified number of years pursuant to this Act, until the expiration of all but one fifth of the period of imprisonment the person is to serve without eligibility for parole.

- (a) no day parole may be granted under the Corrections and Conditional Release Act;
- (b) no absence without escort may be authorized under that Act or the Prisons and Reformatories Act; and
- (c) except with the approval of the National Parole Board, no absence with escort otherwise than for medical reasons may be authorized under either of those Acts.

NOTE: That part of 1995, c. 22, s. 6 which enacts s. 746.1 is replaced by 1995, c. 42, s. 87(b). The text of s. 746.1 as enacted by s. 87(b), which is not yet in force and therefore printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

PAROLE PROHIBITED / Absence with or without escort and day parole / Idem.

746.1. (1) Unless Parliament otherwise provides by an enactment making express reference to this section, a person who has been sentenced to imprisonment for life without eligibility for parole for a specified number of years pursuant to this Act shall not be considered for parole or released pursuant to a grant of parole under the Corrections and Conditional Release Act or any other Act of Parliament until the expiration or termination of the specified number of years of imprisonment.

(2) Subject to subsection (3), in respect of a person sentenced to imprisonment for life without eligibility for parole for a specified number of years pursuant to this Act, until the expiration of all but three years of the specified number of years of imprisonment,

- (a) no day parole may be granted under the Corrections and Conditional Release Act;
- (b) no absence without escort may be authorized under that Act or the Prisons and Reformatories Act; and
- (c) except with the approval of the National Parole Board, no absence with escort otherwise than for medical reasons or in order to attend judicial proceedings or a coroner's inquest may be authorized under either of those Acts.

(3) Notwithstanding the Corrections and Conditional Release Act, in the case of any person convicted of first degree murder or second degree murder who was under the age of eighteen at the time of the commission of the offence and who is sentenced to imprisonment for life without eligibility for parole for a specified number of years pursuant to this Act, until the expiration of all but one fifth of the period of imprisonment the person is to serve without eligibility for parole,

- (a) no day parole may be granted under the Corrections and Conditional Release Act;
- (b) no absence without escort may be authorized under that Act or the Prisons and Reformatories Act; and
- (c) except with the approval of the National Parole Board, no absence with escort otherwise than for medical reasons or in order to attend judicial proceedings or a coroner's inquest may be authorized under either of those Acts.

Hospital Orders

DEFINITIONS / "assessment report" / "hospital order" / "medical practitioner" / "treatment facility".

747. In this section and sections 747.1 to 747.8,

"assessment report" means a written report made pursuant to an assessment order made under section 672.11 by a psychiatrist who is entitled under the laws of a province to practise psychiatry or, where a psychiatrist is not practicably available, by a medical practitioner;

"hospital order" means an order by a court under section 747.1 that an offender be detained in a treatment facility;

"medical practitioner" means a person who is entitled to practise medicine by the laws of a province;

"treatment facility" means any hospital or place for treatment of the mental disorder of an offender, or a place within a class of such places, designated by the Governor in Council, the lieutenant governor in council of the province in which the offender is sentenced or a person to whom authority has been delegated in writing for that purpose by the Governor in Council or that lieutenant governor in council.

COURT MAY MAKE A HOSPITAL ORDER / Limitation on hospital order / Form / Warrant of committal.

747.1. (1) A court may order that an offender be detained in a treatment facility as the initial part of a sentence of imprisonment where it finds, at the time of sentencing, that the offender is suffering from a mental disorder in an acute phase and the court is satisfied, on the basis of an assessment report and any other evidence, that immediate treatment of the mental disorder is urgently required to prevent further significant deterioration of the mental or physical health of the offender, or to prevent the offender from causing serious bodily harm to any person.

(2) A hospital order shall be for a single period of treatment not exceeding sixty days, subject to any terms and conditions that the court considers appropriate.

(3) A hospital order may be in Form 51.

(4) A court that makes a hospital order shall issue a warrant for committal of the offender, which may be in Form 8.

RECOMMENDED TREATMENT FACILITY / Court chooses treatment facility.

747.2. (1) In a hospital order, the court shall specify that the offender be detained in a particular treatment facility recommended by the central administration of any penitentiary, prison or other institution to which the offender has been sentenced to imprisonment, unless the court is satisfied, on the evidence of a medical practitioner, that serious harm to the mental or physical health of the offender would result from travelling to that treatment facility or from the delay occasioned in travelling there.

(2) Where the court does not follow a recommendation referred to in subsection (1), it shall order that the offender be detained in a treatment facility that is reasonably accessible to the place where the accused is detained when the hospital order is made or to the place where the court is located.

CONDITION.

747.3. No hospital order may be made unless the offender and the person in charge of the treatment facility where the offender is to be detained consent to the order and its terms and conditions, but nothing in this section shall be construed as making unnecessary the obtaining of any authorization or consent to treatment from any other person that is or may be required otherwise than under this Act.

EXCEPTION.

747.4. No hospital order may be made in respect of an offender

- (a) who is convicted of or is serving a sentence imposed in respect of a conviction for an offence for which a minimum punishment of imprisonment for life is prescribed by law;*
- (b) who has been found to be a dangerous offender pursuant to section 753;*
- (c) where the term of imprisonment to be served by the offender does not exceed sixty days;*
- (d) where the term of imprisonment is imposed on the offender in default of payment of a fine or of a victim fine surcharge imposed under subsection 737(1); or*
- (e) where the sentence of imprisonment imposed on the offender is ordered under paragraph 732(1)(a) to be served intermittently.*

OFFENDER TO SERVE REMAINDER OF SENTENCE / Transfer from one treatment facility to another.

747.5. (1) An offender shall be sent or returned to a prison to serve the portion of the offender's sentence that remains unexpired where

- (a) the hospital order expires before the expiration of the sentence; or*
- (b) the consent to the detention of the offender in the treatment facility pursuant to the hospital order is withdrawn either by the offender or by the person in charge of the treatment facility.*

(2) Before the expiration of a hospital order in respect of an offender, the offender may be transferred from the treatment facility specified in the hospital order to another treatment facility where treatment of the offender's mental disorder is available, if the court authorizes the transfer in writing and the person in charge of the treatment facility consents.

DETENTION TO COUNT AS SERVICE OF TERM.

747.6. Each day that an offender is detained under a hospital order shall be treated as a day of service of the term of imprisonment of the offender, and the offender shall be deemed, for all purposes, to be lawfully confined in a prison during that detention.

APPLICATION OF SECTION 12 OF CORRECTIONS AND CONDITIONAL RELEASE ACT.

747.7. Notwithstanding section 12 of the Corrections and Conditional Release Act, an offender in respect of whom a hospital order is made and who is sentenced or committed to a penitentiary may, during the period for which that order is in force, be received in a penitentiary before the expiration of the time limited by law for an appeal and shall be detained in the treatment facility specified in the order during that period.

COPY OF WARRANT AND ORDER GIVEN TO PRISON AND HOSPITAL.

747.8. Where a court makes a hospital order in respect of an offender, the court shall cause a copy of the order and of the warrant of committal issued pursuant to subsection 747.1 to be sent to the central administration of the penitentiary, prison or other institution where the term of imprisonment imposed on the offender is to be served and to the treatment facility where the offender is to be detained for treatment.

Pardons and Remissions

---

TO WHOM PARDON MAY BE GRANTED / Free or conditional pardon / Effect of free pardon / Punishment for subsequent offence not affected.

748. (1) Her Majesty may extend the royal mercy to a person who is sentenced to imprisonment under the authority of an Act of Parliament, even if the person is imprisoned for failure to pay money to another person.

(2) The Governor in Council may grant a free pardon or a conditional pardon to any person who has been convicted of an offence.

(3) Where the Governor in Council grants a free pardon to a person, that person shall be deemed thereafter never to have committed the offence in respect of which the pardon is granted.

(4) No free pardon or conditional pardon prevents or mitigates the punishment to which the person might otherwise be lawfully sentenced on a subsequent conviction for an offence other than that for which the pardon was granted.

REMISSION BY GOVERNOR IN COUNCIL / Terms of remission.

748.1. (1) The Governor in Council may order the remission, in whole or in part, of a fine or forfeiture imposed under an Act of Parliament, whoever the person may be to whom it is payable or however it may be recoverable.

(2) An order for remission under subsection (1) may include the remission of costs incurred in the proceedings, but no costs to which a private prosecutor is entitled shall be remitted.

ROYAL PREROGATIVE.

749. Nothing in this Act in any manner limits or affects Her Majesty's royal prerogative of mercy.

Disabilities

PUBLIC OFFICE VACATED FOR CONVICTION / When disability ceases / Disability to contract / Application for restoration of privileges / Order of restoration / Removal of disability.

750. (1) Where a person is convicted of an indictable offence for which the person is sentenced to imprisonment for two years or more and holds, at the time that person is convicted, an office under the Crown or other public employment, the office or employment forthwith becomes vacant.

(2) A person to whom subsection (1) applies is, until undergoing the punishment imposed on the person or the punishment substituted therefor for competent authority or receives a free pardon from Her Majesty, incapable of holding any office under the Crown or other public employment, or of being elected or sitting or voting as a member of Parliament or of a legislature or of exercising any right of suffrage.

(3) No person who is convicted of an offence under section 121, 124 or 418 has, after that conviction, capacity to contract with Her Majesty or to receive any benefit under a contract between Her Majesty and any other person or to hold office under Her Majesty.

(4) A person to whom subsection (3) applies may, at any time before a pardon is granted to the person under section 4.1 of the Criminal Records Act, apply to the Governor in Council for the restoration of one or more of the capacities lost by the person by virtue of that subsection.

(5) Where an application is made under subsection (4), the Governor in Council may order that the capacities lost by the applicant by virtue of subsection (3) be restored to that applicant in whole or in part and subject to such conditions as the Governor in Council considers desirable in the public interest.

(6) Where a conviction is set aside by competent authority, any disability imposed by this section is removed.

Miscellaneous Provisions

COSTS TO SUCCESSFUL PARTY IN CASE OF LIBEL.

751. The person in whose favour judgment is given in proceedings by indictment for defamatory libel is entitled to recover from the opposite party costs in a reasonable amount to be fixed by order of the court.

HOW RECOVERED.

751.1. Where costs that are fixed under section 751 are not paid forthwith, the party in whose favour judgment is given may enter judgment for the amount of the costs by filing the order in any civil court of the province in which the trial was held that has jurisdiction to enter a judgment for that amount, and that judgment is enforceable against the opposite party in the same manner as if it were a judgment rendered against that opposite party in that court in civil proceedings.

Part XXIV / DANGEROUS OFFENDERS

Interpretation

---

DEFINITIONS / "court" / "serious personal injury offence".

752. In this Part,

"court" means the court by which an offender in relation to whom an application under this Part is made was convicted, or a superior court of criminal jurisdiction;
"serious personal injury offence" means

- (a) an indictable offence, other than high treason, treason, first degree murder or second degree murder, involving
  - (i) the use or attempted use of violence against another person, or
  - (ii) conduct endangering or likely to endanger the life or safety of another person or inflicting or likely to inflict severe psychological damage upon another person, and for which the offender may be sentenced to imprisonment for ten years or more, or

- (b) an offence or attempt to commit an offence mentioned in section 271 (sexual assault), 272 (sexual assault with a weapon, threats to a third party or causing bodily harm) or 273 (aggravated sexual assault). R.S., c. C-34, s. 687; 1976-77, c. 53, s. 14; 1980-81-82-83, c. 125, s. 26.

Note: By virtue of s. 179(1)(b) of the Criminal Code, as re-enacted by R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 22, proclaimed in force December 4, 1985, para. (b) of the above definition, as it read immediately before January 4, 1983 (the date upon which 1980-81-82, c. 125, s. 26 came into force, amending para. (b)) is now relevant to determining whether the offence of vagrancy has been committed. The text of para. (b), as it read immediately before January 4, 1983, is as follows:

“(b) an offence mentioned in section 144 (rape) or 145 (attempted rape) or an offence or attempt to commit an offence mentioned in section 146 (sexual intercourse with a female under fourteen or between fourteen and sixteen), 149 (indecent assault on a female), 156 (indecent assault on a male) or 157 (gross indecency).”

CROSS-REFERENCES

See s. 2 for definition of “superior court of criminal jurisdiction.”

The Interpretation Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. I-21, s. 34(1)(a), defines indictable offence as any offence which may be prosecuted on indictment. The reference to “indictable offence” in para. (a) of the definition may include offences triable either way, if the other required elements of the definition are present.

Section 754 governs applications for commencement of dangerous offender proceedings.

Section 758 deals with the hearing at which the offender is present. Sections 755 and 757 govern indictable matters. Pursuant to s. 756, the offender may be directed to attend or remanded in custody for observation and the evidence obtained thereby adduced on the hearing.

Section 753 describes the grounds upon which a person may be found a dangerous offender and sentenced to prison for an indeterminate period instead of being sentenced for the predicate offence. Right of appeal is conferred by s. 759, including appeal from a dismissal of an application for an order under Part XXIV.

See s. 761 for obligations of Parole Board.

ANNOTATIONS

The removal in December, 1985 of gross indecency contrary to former s. 157 as an offence which could lead to a dangerous-offender finding, did not affect the validity of the accused's continued detention on an order made under this Part prior to the 1985 amendment. Further his continued detention did not violate ss. 9 and 12 of the Charter of Rights: R. v. Milne (1987), 38 C.C.C. (3d) 502, [1987] 2 S.C.R. 512, 81 N.R. 36 (5:2).

Dangerous Offenders

APPLICATION FOR FINDING.

753. Where, on an application made under this Part following the conviction of a person for an offence but before the offender is sentenced therefor, it is established to the satisfaction of the court

- (a) that the offence for which the offender has been convicted is a serious personal injury offence described in paragraph (a) of the definition of that expression in section 752 and the offender constitutes a threat to the life, safety or physical or mental well-being of other persons on the basis of evidence establishing

- (i) a pattern of repetitive behaviour by the offender, of which the offence for which he has been convicted forms a part, showing a failure to restrain his behaviour and a likelihood of his causing death or injury to other persons, or inflicting severe psychological damage on other persons, through failure in the future to restrain his behaviour,
  - (ii) a pattern of persistent aggressive behaviour by the offender, of which the offence for which he has been convicted forms a part, showing a substantial degree of indifference on the part of the offender respecting the reasonably foreseeable consequences to other persons of his behaviour, or
  - (iii) any behaviour by the offender, associated with the offence for which he has been convicted, that is of such a brutal nature as to compel the conclusion that his behaviour in the future is unlikely to be inhibited by normal standards of behavioural restraint, or
- (b) that the offence for which the offender has been convicted is a serious personal injury offence described in paragraph (b) of the definition of that expression in section 752 and the offender, by his conduct in any sexual matter including that involved in the commission of the offence for which he has been convicted, has shown a failure to control his sexual impulses and a likelihood of his causing injury, pain or other evil to other persons through failure in the future to control his sexual impulses, the court may find the offender to be a dangerous offender and may thereupon impose a sentence of detention in a penitentiary for an indeterminate period, in lieu of any other sentence that might be imposed for the offence for which the offender has been convicted. R.S., c. C-34, s. 688; 1976-77, c. 53, s. 14.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 754 describes the procedural steps in an application to have a person declared a dangerous offender. The subject may be compelled to attend the hearing pursuant to s. 758.

See ss. 755 and 757 for rules governing evidence at the hearing. Right of appeal is conferred by s. 759 including appeal from a dismissal of an application for an order under Part XXIV. Procedure on appeal generally parallels the procedure in indictable appeals under Part XXI.

SYNOPSIS

This section sets out what findings are required to be made before an accused can be declared a "dangerous offender". If such a declaration is made, the court has the discretion to impose a penitentiary term for an indeterminate period in lieu of any other punishment for the "serious personal injury" offence (see s. 752) that the accused has been convicted of committing.

Depending on the nature of the underlying offence, the court will consider whether the evidence establishes: (a) a pattern of repetitive or aggressive behaviour such that the accused constitutes a threat to the safety of the public; or (b) that the inability of the accused to control his or her sexual impulses will likely cause injury or pain to other persons.

ANNOTATIONS

Constitutional considerations – The imposition of a sentence of indeterminate detention as authorized by this Part does not offend ss. 7, 9, and 12 of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms: R. v. Lyons (1987), 37 C.C.C. (3d) 1, [1987] 2 S.C.R. 309, 44 D.L.R. (4th) 193 (5:2).

Violent offence [para. (a)] – The pattern of repetitive behaviour referred to in subpara.

(i) may be made out where there is only one other incident but both incidents display elements of similarity in the accused's behaviour. With respect to the element of future conduct, the Crown need only establish beyond a reasonable doubt an existing likelihood of causing death, injury or severe psychological damage through the accused's failure in the future to restrain his behaviour: R. v. Langevin (1984), 11 C.C.C. (3d) 336, 39 C.R. (3d) 333, 45 O.R. (2d) 705 (C.A.).

Conduct which involved the rape of a 12-year-old girl and performances of other sexual acts and which can be described as coarse, savage and cruel properly comes within the term "brutal" in subpara. (iii): R. v. Langevin, supra.

Subparagraphs (i), (ii) and (iii) are disjunctive and the finding of dangerous offender may be supported by any of the definitions alone: R. v. Lewis (1984), 12 C.C.C. (3d) 353, 46 O.R. (2d) 289, 9 D.L.R. (4th) 715 (C.A.), appeal to S.C.C. abandoned 25 C.C.C. (3d) 288n.

Sexual offences [para. (b)] / Pedophile – It was held in R. v. Roestad (1971), 5 C.C.C. (2d) 564, 19 C.R.N.S. 190 (Ont. Co. Ct.) considering the former s. 687 which was in substantially the same language that the words "other evil" are not necessarily related to injury and pain and accordingly damage caused by an accused to the morals of children which could lead them to male prostitution or some other form of exploitive behaviour is a form of that evil.

In another case under the former provisions, which also involved a homosexual pedophile, it was held that "evil" in the context of the young male victims must be taken to mean evil consequent on the commission of any offence within the category of offences such as gross indecency, which do not necessarily involve violence as a constituent element. In this case although the accused had not permanently harmed any of the boys in the past there was evidence from which the trial Judge could find that evil would likely be caused to a young boy by subjection to such experiences: R. v. Dwyer (1977), 34 C.C.C. (2d) 293, [1977] 2 W.W.R. 704 (Alta. S.C. App. Div.).

Evidence and procedure – In R. v. Knight (1975), 27 C.C.C. (2d) (Ont. H.C.J.) the psychiatrists were shown certain police reports as to other offences allegedly committed by the offender. However, no evidence was led as to those other offences. The Court held that it could not rely on the psychiatrists' evaluation of what factual inference should be drawn from the reports, for it is not within their area of competence to make such findings, and even if it were, those facts would have to be independently proved before the Court could rely on any consequent opinion based on inferences drawn therefrom. In this case the application was dismissed as one psychiatrist was unable to give an opinion on the future likelihood without taking into account data of which the Court could not take cognizance and the other psychiatrist may have been influenced by that information in forming his opinion. In the result, the Crown had not met the burden of proof. Specifically, with respect to the burden of proof of likelihood, His Lordship held that proof beyond a reasonable doubt is not required since in the nature of things that would be impossible in almost every case but His Lordship stated "I do refer to the quality and strength of the evidence of past and present facts together with the expert opinion thereon, as an existing basis for finding present likelihood of future conduct".

At a hearing the Court may consider evidence of another sexual offence for which the accused was not convicted, and also may accept expert evidence of psychiatrists who, in lieu of personally examining the accused, formed their opinions on the basis of medical reports and observance at the accused's recent trial: R. v. Kanester, [1968] 1 C.C.C. 351 (B.C.C.A.).

While previous convictions for sexual offences is relevant evidence the accused must be permitted to adduce evidence of the circumstances of those convictions to show that they were not the result of his failure to control his sexual impulses: R. v. Dawson, [1970] 3 C.C.C. 212, 8 C.R.N.S. 395 (B.C.C.A.).

Furthermore, while prior convictions are relevant, in R. v. Currie (1995), 103 C.C.C. (3d) 281, 26 O.R. (3d) 444, 86 O.A.C. 143 (C.A.) it was held that it is inappropriate to base the assessment of the accused's present propensity to commit future violent acts almost exclusively on past criminal conduct rather than on the predicate offences of which the accused had been convicted.

The burden on the Crown is to establish beyond a reasonable doubt all the necessary elements contained in this section before the accused may be found to be a dangerous offender: R. v. Jackson (1981), 61 C.C.C. (2d) 540, 23 C.R. (3d) 4 (N.S.S.C. App. Div.).

The requirements for a finding that the accused is a dangerous offender within the meaning of this paragraph are: (1) whether the accused by his conduct in sexual matters has shown a failure to control his sexual impulses; (2) is the accused likely in the future to show a similar failure; and (3) if so, is he likely to cause injury, pain or other evil to any persons? While psychiatric evidence is relevant to all three issues the trial judge may also properly base her findings on the first and third issues by an analysis of the facts surrounding the predicate offence and other previous offences committed by the accused: R. v. Sullivan (1987), 37 C.C.C. (3d) 143 (Ont. C.A.).

Nature of judge's discretion – Even where the Judge finds that the accused is a dangerous offender he has a discretion whether or not to impose the sentence of indeterminate imprisonment: R. v. Hall (1981), 63 C.C.C. (2d) 535, 16 Alta. L.R. 289 (C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused March 5, 1982; R. v. Milne (1982), 66 C.C.C. (2d) 544 (B.C.C.A.); R. v. Crosby (1982), 1 C.C.C. (3d) 233 (Ont. C.A.).

However, where the statutory criteria are satisfied the judge has no discretion not to make the finding that the accused is a dangerous offender: R. v. Moore (1985), 16 C.C.C. (3d) 328, 44 C.R. (3d) 137, 49 O.R. (2d) 1 (C.A.); R. v. B.(J.H.) (1995), 101 C.C.C. (3d) 1, 144 N.S.R. (2d) 293 (C.A.).

Possibility of treatment and cure – The Crown must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the past conduct of the accused is such that it gives rise to a likelihood of future injury to others. Thus the prospects of treatment or a cure are irrelevant to the initial determination of whether the accused is a dangerous offender but are relevant to the exercise of the Judge's discretion whether or not to impose the sentence of indeterminate imprisonment: R. v. Carleton (1981), 69 C.C.C. (2d) 1, 23 C.R. (3d) 129, [1981] 6 W.W.R. 148 (Alta. C.A.), affd 6 C.C.C. (3d) 480, 36 C.R. (3d) 393n, [1983] 2 S.C.R. 58 (7:0).

Assuming that the probability that the accused would be cured within a determinate time is a basis for the trial judge exercising his discretion against imposing the sentence of indeterminate detention, where there is no evidence to support that finding the trial judge errs in law in failing to impose the sentence of indeterminate detention. In this case the trial judge relied on the cumulative effect of four factors which he erroneously concluded demonstrated that the accused could be cured within a determinate time. In particular he erred in taking into account the so-called "burn-out" theory that statistically the kind of violence exhibited by this accused tends to lessen as a person gets older. There was no evidence to show this accused would fit that particular pattern and, in any event, if this theory standing alone were a valid basis for avoiding an indeterminate term, such a sentence would have very little scope for operation: R. v. Poutsoungas (1989), 49 C.C.C. (3d) 388 (Ont. C.A.).

Other notes – A definite sentence of imprisonment may not be made consecutive to a sentence of indeterminate detention imposed under this Part: R. v. Martin (1982), 65 C.C.C. (2d) 376 (Que. C.A.).

HEARING OF APPLICATION / By court alone / When proof unnecessary / Proof of consent.

754. (1) Where an application under this Part has been made, the court shall hear and determine the application except that no such application shall be heard unless

- (a) the Attorney General of the province in which the offender was tried has, either before or after the making of the application, consented to the application;
  - (b) at least seven days notice has been given to the offender by the prosecutor, following the making of the application, outlining the basis on which it is intended to found the application; and
  - (c) a copy of the notice has been filed with the clerk of the court or the magistrate, as the case may be.
- (2) An application under this Part shall be heard and determined by the court without a jury.
- (3) For the purposes of an application under this Part, where an offender admits any allegations contained in the notice referred to in paragraph (1)(b), no proof of those allegations is required.
- (4) The production of a document purporting to contain any nomination or consent that may be made or given by the Attorney General under this Part and purporting to be signed by the Attorney General is, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, proof of that nomination or consent without proof of the signature or the official character of the person appearing to have signed the document. R.S., c. C-34, s. 689; 1976-77, c. 53, s. 14.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The subject of a dangerous offender application hearing must be present with certain narrow exceptions. Sections 755 and 757 describe what evidence may be adduced and admissions allowed. See also s. 754(3) regarding admissions. Section 754(3) does not restrict the reception of other evidence relevant to the issues on the application which are otherwise receivable. The subject of the application may be compelled to attend the hearing or remanded in custody for observation under s. 756.

Section 753 describes the ground upon which a person may be found to be a dangerous offender and sentenced to an indeterminate period instead of being sentenced for the original serious personal injury offence. Right of appeal is conferred by s. 759 including appeal from a dismissal of an application for an order under this part.

SYNOPSIS

An application for a declaration that an accused is a “dangerous offender” requires the consent of the Attorney General of the province in which the order is sought. Proper notice (at least seven days) must be given (subsec. (1)).

The issue is determined by a judge sitting alone (subsec. (2)).

It is open to the offender to admit any of the allegations set out in the Crown’s notice, eliminating the need to prove the allegations (subsec. (3)).

ANNOTATIONS

subsec. (1)(b) – Under the predecessor to this section it was held that personal service upon the accused patient in a provincial mental hospital was inadequate service in R. v. Tume ex p. Morris, [1965] 3 C.C.C. 118, 49 W.W.R. 756 sub nom. Re Morris’ Prohibition Application (B.C.S.C.), revd on other grounds [1965] 3 C.C.C. 349, 46 C.R. 203 sub nom. R. v. Morris, 50 W.W.R. 576 (B.C.C.A.).

There is no minimum period of time for giving notice of the intention to seek an order under this Part. It is sufficient if the application is made in Court in the presence of the accused. Thereafter the Court should adjourn the proceedings to permit the Crown to give the accused the notice in writing as required by this paragraph outlining the basis upon which it is intended to found the application: R. v. Currie (1984), 12 C.C.C. (3d) 9 (Ont. C.A.).

subsec. (2) – This subsection is not inconsistent with the guarantee in s. 11(f) of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms to a jury trial: R. v. Lyons (1987), 37 C.C.C. (3d) 1, [1987] 2 S.C.R. 309, 44 D.L.R. (4th) 193 (5:2).

EVIDENCE OF DANGEROUS OFFENDER STATUS / Nomination of psychiatrists / Nomination by court / Saving.

755. (1) On the hearing of an application under this Part, the court shall hear the evidence of at least two psychiatrists and all other evidence that, in its opinion, is relevant, including the evidence of any psychologist or criminologist called as a witness by the prosecution or the offender.

(2) One of the psychiatrists referred to in subsection (1) shall be nominated by the prosecution and one shall be nominated by the offender.

(3) If the offender fails or refuses to nominate a psychiatrist pursuant to this section, the court shall nominate a psychiatrist on behalf of the offender.

(4) Nothing in this section shall be construed to enlarge the number of expert witnesses that may be called without the leave of the court or judge under section 7 of the Canada Evidence Act. R.S., c. C-34, s. 690; 1976-77, c. 53, s. 14.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The nomination of a psychiatrist by the prosecution may be proven by the production of the appropriate document pursuant to s. 754(4). Admissions in dangerous offender proceedings are authorized by s. 754(3). The introduction of evidence of the subject's character and repute in a dangerous offender application is permitted by s. 757.

See also ss. 756, 758 and 759.

SYNOPSIS

On the hearing of a "dangerous offender" application, the court is required to hear evidence given by at least two psychiatrists: one nominated by each party. All other evidence which the court considers relevant is admissible, including that of any psychologist or criminologist (subsecs. (1) and (2)).

If the accused fails to nominate a psychiatrist, the court will appoint one (subsec. (3)).

ANNOTATIONS

Admissibility of confessions – It was held in Wilband v. The Queen, [1967] 2 C.C.C. 6, [1967] S.C.R. 14, 2 C.R.N.S. 29 (5:0) that a psychiatrist appointed under the former s. 689 is not a person in authority and therefore the rule with respect to confessions does not apply to statements given by the offender to such a psychiatrist. Further, the Court held that the confession rule would also not apply to such evidence as these proceedings do not involve the conviction of an offence but the determination of the sentence. "The confession rule . . . is a rule which has been designed for proceedings where, broadly speaking, the guilt or innocence of a person charged with an offence is the matter in issue. The rule has not been established for proceedings related to the determination of a sentence." Finally, the psychiatrist's opinion is not inadmissible because it is based partly on hearsay according to recognized psychiatric procedures. The value of the opinion may be affected to the extent that it rests on secondhand source material but that goes only to weight, not admissibility.

The ruling in Wilband v. The Queen, supra, was applied to proceedings under the current provisions and it was held that the Crown was not required to prove the voluntariness of the accused's statements to the police concerning previous sexual offences committed by him: R. v. Boyd (1983), 8 C.C.C. (3d) 143 (B.C.C.A.).

At least at the stage where the Crown is merely considering whether or not to bring an application under this Part an accused may refuse to speak to a psychiatrist retained by the Crown and refuse to converse with anyone should he be remanded to a psychiatric facility after conviction, pursuant to s. 615: Re Chapelle and The Queen (1980), 52 C.C.C. (2d) 32 (Ont. H.C.J.).

Application of other rules of evidence – Evidence to be admissible on the hearing must be adduced in accordance with the regular rules of evidence: R. v. Jackson (1981), 61 C.C.C. (2d) 540, 23 C.R. (3d) 4 (N.S.S.C. App. Div.).

“Other evidence” may include evidence of other incidents which did not result in convictions: R. v. MacInnis (1981), 64 C.C.C. (2d) 553, 49 N.S.R. (2d) 393 sub nom. R. v. MacInnis (No. 2) (N.S.S.C. App. Div.); R. v. Lewis (1984), 12 C.C.C. (3d) 353, 46 O.R. (2d) 289, 9 D.L.R. (4th) 715 (C.A.), appeal to S.C.C. abandoned 25 C.C.C. (3d) 288n.

It would seem that where the hearing is before the Court by which the accused was convicted, the Judge may take into consideration the evidence adduced at the trial of the substantive offence: R. v. McGrath (1962), 133 C.C.C. 57, 38 C.R. 115, [1962] S.C.R. 739 (5:0). However, where a Judge other than the trial Judge hears the application (which is possible by reason of the definition of “court” in s. 752), it is not sufficient to simply file a transcript of the previous proceedings; rather, the evidence must be adduced in the form of sworn testimony: R. v. Canning, [1966] 4 C.C.C. 379, 49 C.R. 13 (B.C.C.A.).

Constitutional considerations – The use of psychiatric evidence does not violate the guarantee in s. 7 of the Charter of Rights to fundamental justice: R. v. Lyons (1987), 37 C.C.C. (3d) 1, [1987] 2 S.C.R. 309, 44 D.L.R. (4th) 193 (5:2), nor infringe the guarantee against self-incrimination in s. 11(c). In particular at this stage of the proceedings the offender is no longer a “person charged with an offence” under s. 11. In any event, the offender is not compelled to testify at the hearing nor required to co-operate with the psychiatrists. The psychiatrist is under no duty to caution the accused as to the possible uses of his examination even where the examination is prior to trial: R. v. Langevin (1984), 11 C.C.C. (3d) 336, 39 C.R. (3d) 333, 45 O.R. (2d) 705 (C.A.).

Evidence legally obtained on a remand under former s. 537(1)(b) [now see ss. 672.11 and 672.21] is admissible in proceedings under this Part. The evidence is not being used to incriminate the accused at this stage and the constitutional protection against self-incrimination as guaranteed by s. 7 of the Charter is not engaged: R. v. Jones, [1994] 2 S.C.R. 229, 89 C.C.C. (3d) 353, 30 C.R. (4th) 1 (5:4).

DIRECTION OR REMAND FOR OBSERVATION / Idem.

756. (1) A court to which an application is made under this Part may, by order in writing,

- (a) direct the offender in relation to whom the application is made to attend, at a place or before a person specified in the order and within a time specified therein, for observation, or
- (b) remand the offender in such custody as the court directs, for a period not exceeding thirty days, for observation, where in its opinion, supported by the evidence of, or where the prosecutor and the offender consent, supported by the report in writing of, at least one duly qualified medical practitioner, there is reason to believe that evidence might be obtained as a result of the observation that would be relevant to the application.

(2) Notwithstanding subsection (1), a court to which an application is made under this Part may remand the offender to which that application relates in accordance with that subsection

- (a) for a period not exceeding thirty days without having heard the evidence or considered the report of a duly qualified medical practitioner where compelling circumstances exist for so doing and where a medical practitioner is not readily available to examine the offender and give evidence or submit a report; and

- (b) for a period of more than thirty but not more than sixty days where it is satisfied that observation for that period is required in all the circumstances of the case and its opinion is supported by the evidence of, or where the prosecutor and the offender consent, by the report in writing of, at least one duly qualified medical practitioner. R.S., c. C-34, s. 691; 1976-77, c. 53, s. 14.

CROSS-REFERENCES

For similar provisions, see s. 537(1)(b) and (2) to (4) regarding the preliminary inquiries stage; s. 672.11 for trial; and s. 681 on appeal, in indictable matters.

For equivalent authority in summary conviction trials, see s. 803(5) and (6) and for appeals see s. 823. This section does not expressly authorize the recognition of evidence obtained through such observations. Receipt of relevant evidence so obtained is permitted by s. 755(1).

SYNOPSIS

This section empowers a judge, hearing a “dangerous offender” application, to direct the accused to attend for observation or remand the accused in custody for a period not exceeding 30 days for that purpose, where there is reason to believe that evidence relevant to the proceedings might thereby be obtained. Such an order must be based on the evidence of one doctor. If both parties agree, a report by the doctor can be filed in lieu of calling viva voce evidence (subsec. (1)).

A remand for up to 30 days may be made without the evidence or report of a doctor, if the circumstances warrant and a doctor is not readily available to assist the court in this regard (subsec. (2)(a)).

In special circumstances, the remand (when based on the evidence or report of a doctor) may be for up to 60 days (subsec. (2)(b)).

ANNOTATIONS

This section is not so vague as to constitute a violation of s. 7 of the Charter: R. v. Rollins (1993), 80 C.C.C. (3d) 385, 15 C.R.R. (2d) 120 (B.C.S.C.).

EVIDENCE OF CHARACTER.

757. Without prejudice to the right of the offender to tender evidence as to his character and repute, evidence of character and repute may, if the court thinks fit, be admitted on the question whether the offender is or is not a dangerous offender. R.S., c. C-34, s. 692; 1976-77, c. 53, s. 14.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Relevance is the principle requirement for evidence in dangerous offender proceedings as in criminal proceedings generally. Expert evidence is receivable pursuant to s. 755(1). Admission of allegations contained in a s. 754(1) notice are permitted by s. 754(3). Evidence obtained through observations made under s. 756 is admissible.

See also ss. 757 and 759.

SYNOPSIS

With the permission of the court, the Crown may introduce evidence of character and repute, with respect to whether or not the accused is not a dangerous offender. This provision operates without prejudice to the accused's right to tender evidence respecting his character and repute.

PRESENCE OF ACCUSED AT HEARING OF APPLICATION / Exception.

758. (1) The offender shall be present at the hearing of the application under this Part and if at the time the application is to be heard

- (a) he is confined in a prison, the court may order, in writing, the person having the custody of the accused to bring him before the court; or
  - (b) he is not confined in a prison, the court shall issue a summons or a warrant to compel the accused to attend before the court and the provisions of Part XVI relating to summons and warrant are applicable with such modifications as the circumstances require.
- (2) Notwithstanding subsection (1), the court may
- (a) cause the offender to be removed and to be kept out of court, where he misconducts himself by interrupting the proceedings so that to continue the proceedings in his presence would not be feasible; or
  - (b) permit the offender to be out of court during the whole or any part of the hearing on such conditions as the court considers proper. R.S., c. C-34, s. 693; 1976-77, c. 53, s. 14.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 650 prescribes the general rule regarding the presence of an accused in criminal proceedings. Exceptions to the general rule may be found in s. 650(2) and in ss. 475 and 598 (accused absconding during trial) and s. 544 (accused absconding during preliminary inquiry).

SYNOPSIS

Unless the accused is granted leave not to be present or is removed by order of the court, he or she shall be present for the hearing of the application. The court can issue any order or process required to secure the attendance of the accused.

(3) On an appeal against a sentence of detention in a penitentiary for an indeterminate period, the court of appeal may

- (a) quash the sentence and impose any sentence that might have been imposed in respect of the offence for which the appellant was convicted, or order a new hearing; or
- (b) dismiss the appeal.

(4) On an appeal against the dismissal of an application for an order under this Part, the court of appeal may

- (a) allow the appeal, set aside any sentence imposed in respect of the offence for which the respondent was convicted and impose a sentence of detention in a penitentiary for an indeterminate period, or order a new hearing; or
- (b) dismiss the appeal.

(5) A judgment of the court of appeal imposing a sentence pursuant to this section has the same force and effect as if it were a sentence passed by the trial court.

(6) Notwithstanding subsection 721(1), a sentence imposed on an offender by the court of appeal pursuant to this section shall be deemed to have commenced when the offender was sentenced by the court by which he was convicted.

NOTE: Subsection (6) amended 1995, c. 22, s. 10 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council) by replacing the reference to s. 721(1) with s. 719(1).

(7) The provisions of Part XXI with respect to procedure on appeals apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, to appeals under this section. R.S., c. C-34, s. 694; 1976-77, c. 53, s. 14.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Right of appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada is given in ss. 691 to 696, Part XXI, in indictable matters. Section 759 provides no more express right. See s. 41 of the Supreme Court Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. S-26, for governing provisions in appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada. Although the general rule is that a sentence commences when imposed (s. 721(1)), s. 759(6) provides an exception.

See s. 2 for definition of "court of appeal". No leave of the court or of a judge is required for the rights of appeal under subsecs. (1) and (2).

SYNOPSIS

This section governs appeals in connection with "dangerous offender" proceedings.

An accused, sentenced to serve an indeterminate period in a penitentiary, may appeal against the sentence on any ground of law, fact or mixed law and fact (subsec. (1)). Crown appeals from dismissal are limited to questions of law (subsec. (2)). The normal procedures apply (subsec. (7)).

If the accused's appeal is allowed, the Court of Appeal may either: (a) quash the sentence of indeterminate duration and impose sentence in respect of the underlying offence; or (b) order a new hearing (subsec. (3)).

If a Crown appeal is allowed, the court may: (a) impose an indeterminate sentence; or (b) order a new hearing (subsec. (4)).

Sentences imposed by the Court of Appeal are deemed to have commenced when the offender was sentenced by the trial court (subsec. (6)).

ANNOTATIONS

Subsec. (1) – While the appeal under this section is as of right and does not require the obtaining of leave, it is limited to the sentence. The court has no power to quash the finding that the accused is a dangerous offender: R. v. Langevin (1984), 11 C.C.C. (3d) 336, 39 C.R. (3d) 333, 45 O.R. (2d) 705 (C.A.).

Subsec. (2) – It was held under the predecessor to this section that where the application is dismissed upon insufficiency of the form of notice the Crown may appeal: R. v. Galbraith (1971), 5 C.C.C. (2d) 37, [1972] 1 W.W.R. 586 (B.C.C.A.), affd 6 C.C.C. (2d) 188 n, [1972] 2 W.W.R. 80 (S.C.C.).

Where the contemplated application was never proceeded with nor dealt with on its merits because of the trial Judge's indicated refusal to grant the Crown a further adjournment in order to make the application there has not been a "dismissal of an application" within the meaning of this subsection against which the Crown may appeal: R. v. Currie (1984), 12 C.C.C. (3d) 28 (Ont. C.A.).

Where there was no evidence upon which the trial judge could find that the accused could be cured within a determinate time, the basis upon which the trial judge had exercised his discretion against imposing the sentence of indeterminate detention, then he erred in law and an appeal lies under this subsection: R. v. Poutsoungas (1989), 49 C.C.C. (3d) 388 (Ont. C.A.).

DISCLOSURE TO SOLICITOR GENERAL.

760. Where a court, pursuant to section 753, finds an offender to be a dangerous offender and imposes a sentence of detention in a penitentiary for an indeterminate period, the court shall order that a copy of all reports or testimony given by psychiatrists, psychologists or criminologists and any observations of the court with respect to the reasons for the sentence, together with a transcript of the trial of the dangerous offender, be forwarded to the Solicitor General of Canada for his information. R.S., c. C-34, s. 695; 1976-77, c. 53, s. 14.

CROSS-REFERENCES

No specific use to which the Solicitor General may put this information is indicated by s. 760.

See s. 761(1) for parole review eligibility.

REVIEW FOR PAROLE / Idem.

761. (1) Subject to subsection (2), where a person is in custody under a sentence of detention in a penitentiary for an indeterminate period, the National Parole Board shall, forthwith after the expiration of three years from the day on which that person was taken into custody and not later than every two years thereafter, review the condition, history and circumstances of that person for the purpose of determining whether he should be granted parole under Part II of the Corrections and Conditional Release Act and, if so, on what conditions.

(2) Where a person is in custody under a sentence of detention in a penitentiary for an indeterminate period that was imposed before October 15, 1977, the National Parole Board shall, at least once in every year, review the condition, history and circumstances of that person for the purpose of determining whether he should be granted parole under Part II of the Corrections and Conditional Release Act and, if so, on what conditions. 1976-77, c. 53, s. 14; 1992, c. 20, s. 215.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Parole eligibility is largely governed by the Parole Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. P-2, and regulations thereto.

See ss. 742 to 744, 746 and 747, for parole ineligibility periods in cases of high treason, treason and murder.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides that, where a person is in custody as a dangerous offender, his or her case shall be reviewed for parole three years after custody commenced and at least every two years thereafter. Where a person has been incarcerated for an indefinite term prior to October 15, 1977, that person's case is to be reviewed for parole at least once a year.

ANNOTATIONS

While the initial sentencing of an offender to an indeterminate term as a criminal sexual psychopath under the predecessor legislation is valid and does not contravene s. 12 of the Charter, his continued incarceration may become unlawful as a result of errors committed by the Parole Board in conducting the review mandated by this section according to the criteria set out in s. 16(1)(a) of the Parole Act. It is only by a careful consideration and application of these criteria that the indeterminate sentence can be made to fit the circumstances of the individual offender and not violate his rights under s. 12. If it is clear on the face of the record that the Parole Board has misapplied or disregarded those criteria over a period of years with the result that an offender remains incarcerated far beyond the time that he should have been properly paroled resulting in a length of incarceration which is grossly disproportionate to the circumstances of the offence then the Board's decision may violate s. 12: Steele v. Mountain Institution (1990), 60 C.C.C. (3d) 1, 80 C.R. (3d) 257, [1990] 6 W.W.R. 673 (S.C.C.) (7:0).

Where an inmate sentenced to an indeterminate term seeks to challenge the validity of his continued incarceration on the basis that his rights under s. 12 of the Charter have been infringed, it is preferable that the challenge be by way of judicial review of the decision of the Parole Board refusing to release him, rather than by way of habeas corpus: Steel v. Mountain Institution, supra.

PART XXV / EFFECT AND ENFORCEMENT OF RECOGNIZANCES

APPLICATIONS FOR FORFEITURE OF RECOGNIZANCES / Definitions / "clerk of the court" / "schedule".

762. (1) Applications for the forfeiture of recognizances shall be made to the courts, designated in column II of the schedule, of the respective provinces designated in column I of the schedule.

(2) In this Part,

"clerk of the court" means the officer designated in column III of the schedule in respect of the court designated in column II of the schedule;

"schedule" means the schedule to this Part. R.S., c. C-34, s. 696.

CROSS-REFERENCES

This section deals with applications for forfeiture of a recognizance for non-compliance with the conditions thereof. Reference should be made to s. 145(1) and (3) which establish the elements of the default.

Sections 766 to 769 outline the rights of a surety for a person bound by a recognizance to render that person into custody. The judicial interim release provisions of Parts XVI, XXI and XXVII are made applicable by s. 769. No procedure for enforcing a recognizance in default cases is outlined in ss. 770 to 773.

See s. 2 for further definition of "clerk of the court".

RECOGNIZANCE BINDING.

763. Where a person is bound by recognizance to appear before a court, justice or provincial court judge for any purpose and the session or sittings of that court or the proceedings are adjourned or an order is made changing the place of trial, that person and his sureties continue to be bound by the recognizance in like manner as if it had been entered into with relation to the resumed proceedings or the trial at the time and place at which the proceedings are ordered to be resumed or the trial is ordered to be held. R.S., c. C-34, s. 697; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 203.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See s. 523 for the period for which a recognizance continues in effect.

SYNOPSIS

A recognizance continues to bind the accused and any sureties, notwithstanding that the proceedings have been adjourned or an order changing the venue has been made.

RESPONSIBILITY OF SURETIES / Committal or new sureties / Effect of committal / Endorsement on recognizance.

764. (1) Where an accused is bound by recognizance to appear for trial, his arraignment or conviction does not discharge the recognizance, but it continues to bind him and his sureties, if any, for his appearance until he is discharged or sentenced, as the case may be.

(2) Notwithstanding subsection (1), the court, justice or provincial court judge may commit an accused to prison or may require him to furnish new or additional sureties for his appearance until he is discharged or sentenced, as the case may be.

(3) The sureties of an accused who is bound by recognizance to appear for trial are discharged if he is committed to prison pursuant to subsection (2).

(4) The provisions of section 763 and subsections (1), (2) and (3) of this section shall be endorsed on any recognizance entered into pursuant to this Act. R.S., c. C-34, s. 698.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See s. 523 for the period during which recognizances are in force. Where a defendant is arrested for another offence during a recognizance, s. 765 becomes applicable.

Authorization for a surety to render into custody a person bound by a recognizance is found in ss. 766 to 768. The judicial interim release provisions of Parts XVI, XXI and XXVII are made applicable by s. 769.

Sections 770 to 773 deal with the enforcement of a recognizance in the event of a default by the defendant.

SYNOPSIS

A recognizance continues in effect until the accused is either acquitted or sentenced (subsec. (1)). The court, however, does have the power to commit the accused to prison or require new or additional sureties (subsec. (2)). If the accused is so committed, the existing sureties are discharged (subsec. (3)).

EFFECT OF SUBSEQUENT ARREST.

765. Where an accused is bound by recognizance to appear for trial, his arrest upon another charge does not vacate the recognizance, but it continues to bind him and his sureties, if any, for his appearance until he is discharged or sentenced, as the case may be, in respect of the offence to which the recognizance relates. R.S., c. C-34, s. 699.

CROSS-REFERENCES

A defendant arrested for another offence while under recognizance will be held in custody pending trial on the later charge under ss. 515(6)(a) or (c) and 522(2) unless reasons to the contrary are established by the defendant. Section 524 deals with the circumstances and procedures in the event of misconduct on the part of a defendant or judicial interim release.

Section 524(4) or (8) provide for the cancellation of a recognizance unless the defendant establishes reasons to the contrary under s. 515(10).

See also s. 145(2) and (3), ss. 766 to 769 and ss. 770 to 773.

SYNOPSIS

This section clarifies that an arrest on another charge during the duration of a recognizance relating to a previous charge does not affect that recognizance, which continues in force until the previous charge is dealt with.

RENDER OF ACCUSED BY SURETIES / Arrest / Certificate and entry of render / Discharge of sureties.

766. (1) A surety for a person who is bound by recognizance to appear may, by an application in writing to a court, justice or provincial court judge, apply to be relieved of his obligation under the recognizance, and the court, justice or provincial court judge shall thereupon issue an order in writing for committal of that person to the prison nearest to the place where he was, under the recognizance, bound to appear.

(2) An order under subsection (1) shall be given to the surety and on receipt thereof he or any peace officer may arrest the person named in the order and deliver that per- son with the order to the keeper of the prison named therein, and the keeper shall receive and imprison that person until he is discharged according to law.

(3) Where a judge, justice or provincial court judge who issues an order under subsection (1) receives from the sheriff a certificate that the person named in the order has been committed to prison pursuant to subsection (2), the court, justice or provincial court judge shall order an entry of the committal to be endorsed on the recognizance.

(4) An endorsement under subsection (3) vacates the recognizance and discharges the sureties. R.S., c. C-34, s. 700.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The judicial interim release provisions of Parts XVI, XXI and XXVII are made applicable by s. 769 to a defendant rendered into custody by a surety. A defendant bound by a recognizance may be rendered into custody under s. 767.

Section 767.1 provides for the substitution of another surety for the one who had made a s. 766(1) application.

See ss. 770 to 773 for default proceedings.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides the means by which a surety can apply to the court to be relieved of his or her obligations under a recognizance.

Upon receipt of the written application of the surety the court shall issue an order for the committal of the accused. Such order is authority for the arrest and detention of the accused (subsecs. (1) and (2)). Once the accused has been committed the recognizance shall be duly endorsed and the surety's obligations will be at an end (subsecs. (3) and (4)).

RENDER OF ACCUSED IN COURT BY SURETIES.

767. A surety for a person who is bound by recognizance to appear may bring that person into the court at which he is required to appear at any time during the sittings thereof and before his trial and the surety may discharge his obligation under the recognizance by giving that person into the custody of the court, and the court shall thereupon commit that person to prison until he is discharged according to law. R.S., c. C-34, s. 701.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The surety substitute procedure in s. 767.1 is applicable to s. 767 circumstances. See also s. 766 regarding a surety rendering a defendant bound by a recognizance into custody.

Section 769 makes the judicial interim release provision of Parts XVI, XXI and XXVII applicable to s. 767 proceedings. See ss. 770 to 773 for default proceedings.

SYNOPSIS

This section allows sureties to discharge their obligation under a recognizance by delivering the accused into the custody of the relevant court during a sitting thereof prior to the accused's trial.

SUBSTITUTION OF SURETY / Signing of recognizance by new sureties.

767.1 (1) Notwithstanding subsection 766(1) and section 767, where a surety for a person who is bound by a recognizance has rendered the person into the custody of a court pursuant to section 767 or applies to be relieved of his obligation under the recognizance pursuant to subsection 766(1), the court, justice or provincial court judge, as the case may be, may, instead of committing or issuing an order for the committal of the person to prison, substitute any other suitable person for the surety under the recognizance.

(2) Where a person substituted for a surety under a recognizance pursuant to subsection (1) signs the recognizance, the original surety is discharged, but the recognizance and the order for judicial interim release pursuant to which the recognizance was entered into are not otherwise affected. R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 167.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Particular persons may be named as sureties by the court under s. 515(2.1).

For review of bail generally, see note under ss. 515 and 522 and provisions of ss. 520, 521, 523 and 524. These provisions may be used instead of ss. 766(1) and 767.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides that where an existing surety wishes to be relieved of his or her obligations the court may, instead of issuing an order for the accused's committal (see s. 766(1)), permit the accused to obtain a new surety (subsec. (1)). Once the new surety has signed the recognizance the previous one is discharged (subsec. (2)).

RIGHTS OF SURETY PRESERVED.

768. Nothing in this Part limits or restricts any right that a surety has of taking and giving into custody any person for whom, under a recognizance, he is a surety. R.S., c. C-34, s. 702.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 766(1) provides for application for relief from obligations under a recognizance by the surety. Section 767 provides for such release upon the release of the defendant into the custody of the court.

See s. 767.1 for substitution of sureties.

SYNOPSIS

This section preserves common law rights of a surety to deliver the person for whom they are a surety into custody. See Note: E. Armour, "Bail in Criminal Cases", 47 C.C.C. 1 at pages 8 and 9.

APPLICATION OF JUDICIAL INTERIM RELEASE PROVISIONS.

769. Where a surety for a person has rendered him into custody and that person has been committed to prison, the provisions of Parts XVI, XXI and XXVII relating to judicial interim release apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require in respect of him and he shall forthwith be taken before a justice or judge as an accused charged with an offence or as an appellant, as the case may be, for the purposes of those provisions. R.S., c. C-34, s. 703; R.S., c. 2 (2nd Supp.), s. 14.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 515 governs the release of accused charged with an indictable offence not listed in s. 469. Section 522 applies where the offence is listed in s. 469.

Section 795 incorporates the provisions of Parts XVI and XVIII in compelling the defendant to appear before a judge. See ss. 816 to 818 and 831 and 832 for applicable appeal provisions.

SYNOPSIS

A new bail hearing is required when an accused has been rendered by a surety and committed to prison.

ANNOTATIONS

Where an accused has been committed to jail pursuant to s. 766 he is to be brought before a Justice for a new judicial interim release hearing notwithstanding he has already been committed for trial or that the original release order was made by a Judge under s. 520 on a bail review: R. v. Whalen (1980), 57 C.C.C. (2d) 10 (Ont. Dist. Ct.).

DEFAULT TO BE ENDORSED / Transmission to clerk of court / Certificate is evidence / Transmission of deposit.

770. (1) Where, in proceedings to which this Act applies, a person who is bound by recognizance does not comply with a condition of the recognizance, a court, justice or provincial court judge having knowledge of the facts shall endorse or cause to be endorsed on the back of the recognizance a certificate in Form 33 setting out

- (a) the nature of the default,
- (b) the reason for the default, if it is known;
- (c) whether the ends of justice have been defeated or delayed by reason of the default; and
- (d) the names and addresses of the principal and sureties.

(2) A recognizance that has been endorsed pursuant to subsection (1) shall be sent to the clerk of the court and shall be kept by him with the records of the court.

(3) A certificate that has been endorsed on a recognizance pursuant to subsection (1) is evidence of the default to which it relates.

(4) Where, in proceedings to which this section applies, the principal or surety has deposited money as security for the performance of a condition of a recognizance, that money shall be sent to the clerk of the court with the defaulted recognizance, to be dealt with in accordance with this Part. R.S., c. C-34, s. 704.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Sections 771 to 773 govern the proceedings taken against the principal and sureties upon a default in a recognizance. Under s. 145(2) and (3), the principal may incur criminal liability for failing to appear or comply.

SYNOPSIS

This section sets out the first step in the bail estreatment process.

Where an accused has breached the terms of a recognizance, a court with knowledge of the facts (usually the court which is otherwise dealing with the matter) will endorse the recognizance setting out: (a) the nature of the breach; (b) the reason for the breach, if known; (c) whether justice has been delayed or defeated; and (d) the name and address of the accused and those of any sureties (subsec. (1)).

The recognizance shall then be forwarded to the clerk of the court (see s. 762(2)) to be dealt with under s. 771 (subsec. (2)). Any moneys deposited as security will also be sent to the clerk (subsec. (4)).

ANNOTATIONS

In R. v. Mackie (1977), 38 C.C.C. (2d) 385 (Man. Q.B.) the accused acknowledged in the recognizance that he owed "nil" amount to the Queen if he failed to comply with the conditions while the sureties each acknowledged that they owed $1,000 if the accused failed in any of the conditions. It was held that to be bound by a recognizance the person must acknowledge that he owes a sum of money to the Queen and accordingly the accused was not bound by the recognizance. However, as the sureties did acknowledge their indebtedness and were thus bound by the recognizance and having failed to ensure that the accused attend for his trial they failed to comply with a condition of recognizance and it was ordered forfeited.

Merely endorsing on the certificate the words “fail to comply” does not meet the requirement in para. (1)(a): R. v. Gabrielson (1991), 62 C.C.C. (3d) 571 (Ont. Ct. (Gen. Div.)).

A separate certificate of default of appearance, although not actually endorsed on the back of the recognizance, was held to be adequate in Re Ingebrigtsen (1961), 37 C.R.21 (Man.Q.B.).

The recognizance need not be physically in Court at the precise time the accused is required to appear and the endorsement under this section may be made at a later time when the recognizance is obtained: R. v. Wolf (1982), 65 C.C.C. (2d) 331, 27 C.R. (3d) 393 (Alta. Q.B.).

Provided that the accused was bound by the recognizance at the time of the non-compliance therewith, the court has jurisdiction under this section to make the endorsement in Form 33, even if the information was stayed by the Crown after the act of non-compliance: Purves v. Canada (Attorney General) (1990), 54 C.C.C. (3d) 355 (B.C.C.A.).

PROCEEDINGS IN CASE OF DEFAULT / Order of judge / Judgment debtors of the Crown / Order may be filed / Transfer of deposit.

771. (1) Where a recognizance has been endorsed with a certificate pursuant to section 770 and has been received by the clerk of the court pursuant to that section,

- (a) a judge of the court shall, on the request of the clerk of the court or the Attorney General or counsel acting on his behalf, fix a time and place for the hearing of an application for the forfeiture of the recognizance; and
- (b) the clerk of the court shall, not less than ten days before the time fixed under paragraph (a) for the hearing, send by registered mail, or have served in the manner directed by the court or prescribed by the rules of court, to each principal and surety named in the recognizance, directed to the principal or surety at the address set out in the certificate, a notice requiring the person to appear at the time and place fixed by the judge to show cause why the recognizance should not be forfeited.

(2) Where subsection (1) has been complied with, the judge may, after giving the parties an opportunity to be heard, in his discretion grant or refuse the application and make any order with respect to the forfeiture of the recognizance that he considers proper.

(3) Where, pursuant to subsection (2), a judge orders forfeiture of a recognizance, the principal and his sureties become judgment debtors of the Crown, each in the amount that the judge orders him to pay.

(3.1) An order made under subsection (2) may be filed with the clerk of the superior court or, in the Province of Quebec, the prothonotary and, where an order is filed, the clerk or the prothonotary shall issue a writ of fiери facias in Form 34 and deliver it to the sheriff of each of the territorial divisions in which the principal or any of his sureties resides, carries on business or has property.

(4) Where a deposit has been made by a person against whom an order for forfeiture of a recognizance has been made, no writ of fiери facias shall issue, but the amount of the deposit shall be transferred by the person who has custody of it to the person who is entitled by law to receive it. R.S., c. C-34, s. 705; 1972, c. 13, s. 60; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 168; 1994, c. 44, s. 78.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 772 deals with execution of a writ of fiери facias. Section 773 provides for committal in the event of an insufficiency of property found to satisfy the court.

SYNOPSIS

This section sets out the procedures to be followed after a recognizance has been "marked for estreatment" pursuant to s. 770.

At the request of the clerk of the court (see s. 762(2)) or the Crown a judge shall fix a date for the hearing of a forfeiture application. Notice will then be sent, by registered mail, to the accused and any sureties at least 10 days before the hearing (subsec. (1)).

After giving the parties an opportunity to be heard the judge may grant or refuse the application. If forfeiture is ordered the amount is within the judge's discretion (subsec. (2)).

If all or any part of the recognizance is ordered forfeited the accused/sureties become judgment debtors of the Crown and civil action may be taken to collect the amount owing (subssecs. (3), (3.1), s. 772). Any moneys ordered forfeited are delivered to the Crown (subsec. (4)).

(Note: The Criminal Code does not provide an appeal from the decision on a forfeiture application.)

ANNOTATIONS

Where the judge "re-opened" the application for forfeiture proceedings after having dismissed the application, and without notice to the surety and without giving the accused an opportunity to be heard reversed himself, the resulting order was quashed: R. v. Policha, Ex p. Pawliwsky, [1970] 5 C.C.C.172, 11 C.R.N.S.199 sub nom. Pawliwsky v. The Queen (Sask.Q.B.).

Connivance with the accused's disappearance requires complete forfeiture, and lack of diligence to ensure his attendance, depending upon the degree of fault, will result in at least a substantial forfeiture: R. v. Andrews (1975), 34 C.R.N.S. 344, 9 Nfld. & P.E.I.R. 168 (Nfld. S.C.).

In determining that all or part of the recognizance should not be forfeited the court may take into account that the surety had not properly understood the nature of the obligations he assumed and that the terms of the recognizance had been varied without the knowledge of the surety: R. v. Sandhu (1984), 38 C.R. (3d) 56 (Que. S.C.).

It would appear that where a potential surety's property is wholly outside the province in which the release order is made such a surety is not put at risk of having his property taken in execution in the event of default. Accordingly such a person could not be taken as a sufficient surety: R. v. Martin (No. 2) (1980), 57 C.C.C. (2d) 31 (Ont. C.A. in Chambers).

A person who lent the accused the money which he deposited in order to comply with the terms of his recognizance has no standing when the Crown seeks to forfeit the recognizance: R. v. Cochrane (1981), 60 C.C.C. (2d) 329 (Sask. Dist. Ct.); R. v. Frenette (1982), 30 C.R. (3d) 123 (B.C. Co. Ct.).

There is no right of appeal from an order of forfeiture made under this section: R. v. Coles (1982), 2 C.C.C. (3d) 65, 41 B.C.L.R. 323 (C.A.).

Where the accused has not deliberately absented himself and in fact is, to the knowledge of the judge, in custody at the time of the estreatment proceedings then the judge cannot proceed without giving the accused an opportunity to make submissions: R. v. Gabrielson (1991), 62 C.C.C. (3d) 571 (Ont. Ct. (Gen. Div.)).

Lawyers, to whom bail moneys have been assigned by their client, are entitled to step into the shoes of the accused. They are not, however, entitled to a more favourable position than that of the accused and, in particular, are not entitled to the treatment of a surety. An accused who has not surrendered to justice has no standing to ask for the return of the recognizance: R. v. Webster (1994), 94 C.C.C. (3d) 562, 159 A.R. 278 (Q.B.).

LEVY UNDER WRIT / Costs.

772. (1) Where a writ of fieri facias is issued pursuant to section 771, the sheriff to whom it is delivered shall execute the writ and deal with the proceeds thereof in the same manner in which he is authorized to execute and deal with the proceeds of writs of fiery facias issued out of superior courts in the province in civil proceedings.

(2) Where this section applies the Crown is entitled to the costs of execution and of proceedings incidental thereto that are fixed, in the Province of Quebec, by any tariff applicable in the Superior Court in civil proceedings, and in any other province, by any tariff applicable in the superior court of the province in civil proceedings, as the judge may direct. R.S., c. C-34, s. 706.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 773 provides for committal when writ of fiery facias is not satisfied.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides that a writ issued under s. 771 to enforce a forfeiture of a recognizance may be enforced in the same manner as a writ issued civilly through the superior court of the province (subsec. (1)). The costs of executing the writ are also recoverable according to the provincial superior court tariff (subsec. (2)).

COMMITTAL WHEN WRIT NOT SATISFIED / Notice / Hearing / Warrant to committal / Definition of "Attorney General".

773. (1) Where a writ of fiery facias has been issued under this Part and it appears from a certificate in a return made by the sheriff that sufficient goods and chattels, lands and tenements cannot be found to satisfy the writ, or that the proceeds of the execution of the writ are not sufficient to satisfy it, a judge of the court may, upon the application of the Attorney General or counsel acting on his behalf, fix a time and place for the sureties to show cause why a warrant of committal should not be issued in respect of them.

(2) Seven clear days notice of the time and place fixed for the hearing pursuant to subsection (1) shall be given to the sureties.

(3) The judge shall, at the hearing held pursuant to subsection (1), inquire into the circumstances of the case and may in his discretion

(a) order the discharge of the amount for which the surety is liable; or

(b) make any order with respect to the surety and to his imprisonment that he considers proper in the circumstances and issue a warrant of committal in Form 27.

(4) A warrant of committal issued pursuant to this section authorizes the sheriff to take into custody the person in respect of whom the warrant was issued and to confine him in a prison in the territorial division in which the writ was issued or in the prison nearest to the court, until satisfaction is made or until the period of imprisonment fixed by the judge has expired.

(5) In this section and in section 771, "Attorney General" means, where subsection 723(2) applies, the Attorney General of Canada. R.S., c. C-34, s. 707.

NOTE: Subsection (5) amended 1995, c. 22, s. 10 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council) by replacing the reference to s. 723(2) with s. 734.4(2).

CROSS-REFERENCES

The court in which a show cause hearing shall be heard is prescribed in the Schedule, col. II.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides for the committal of a surety where the amount owing cannot be satisfied through the collection processes of the court (e.g., a writ of execution). The sheriff must certify such inability to satisfy the amount owing. The surety must be given seven clear days notice of the Crown's application in this regard (subsecs. (1) and (2)).

The judge hearing the matter may discharge the obligation or make an order for the imprisonment of the surety (subsec. (3)). Imprisonment shall be for the term imposed by the judge or until the surety is satisfied (subsec. (4)).

ANNOTATIONS

Except where the accused is released by the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeal, in Ontario application for forfeiture of recognizance is to the Court of the General Sessions of the Peace and not, for example, to the provincial Court although the failure to appear was in that Court: R. v. Moffatt (1981), 21 C.R. (3d) 372 (Ont. H.C.J.).

PART XXVI / EXTRAORDINARY REMEDIES*APPLICATION OF PART.

774. This Part applies to proceedings in criminal matters by way of certiorari, habeas corpus, mandamus, procedendo and prohibition. R.S., c. C-34, s. 708; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 169.

CROSS-REFERENCES

This part is chiefly concerned with the extraordinary remedies of certiorari and habeas corpus, and the extent of their applications. The sole reference to mandamus or prohibition occurs in s. 784(1). The single reference to procedendo occurs in this section. Section 780 provides a parallel procedure.

Extraordinary remedies are generally only available in respect of jurisdictional errors. In a case of excess of jurisdiction, certiorari is available to quash an order, and prohibition lies to prevent proceedings or their continuance. Mandamus and procedendo require a tribunal of limited jurisdiction to exercise that jurisdiction. Detention may be challenged on grounds of authority and jurisdiction through habeas corpus. Also see s. 10(c) of the Charter and pre-Confederation legislation which may still be in force in the province and the rules of court enacted pursuant to s. 482.

ANNOTATIONS

Applications under the Charter of Rights – In Mills v. The Queen (1986), 26 C.C.C. (3d) 481, 52 C.R. (3d) 1, [1986] 1 S.C.R. 863 (4:3), the court considered some of the problems raised by the Charter in relation to claims for prerogative relief. The plurality (McIntyre, Beetz and Chouinard JJ.) held that while the provincial superior court is a court of competent jurisdiction within the meaning of s. 24(1) of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms where a Charter violation arises in the context of the court exercising its supervisory jurisdiction over the inferior courts, not all Charter violations are jurisdictional and thus reviewable by way of the prerogative remedies. LaForest J. appeared to envisage a somewhat wider role for the superior court to fill the gap which could arise when a remedy is required and no other court, such as the trial court, is in a position to exercise an effective remedy. The dissenting members of the court (Dickson C.J.C., Lamer and Wilson JJ.) were of the view that original application may be made to the superior court under s. 24(1) and that while the court had a discretion to refuse the application where a more appropriate forum exists, the court could grant a remedy for Charter violations which are jurisdictional in nature.

Certiorari – The court ought not to refuse certiorari because of alternative remedies other than appeal unless it is clearly satisfied that those other remedies are more appropriate: Dubois v. The Queen, infra.

Receiving information – The act of a justice in receiving an information under s. 498 is ministerial and accordingly the information is not subject to certiorari: McDonald et al. v. A.-G. Alta. (1968), 4 C.R.N.S.362, 66 W.W.R.111 (Alta. C.A.).

Preliminary inquiry [Also see notes under s. 548] – Certiorari lies against a justice holding a preliminary hearing only for lack of jurisdiction and a decision concerning the admissibility of evidence, even if erroneous does not affect jurisdiction: A.-G. Que. v. Cohen (1979), 46 C.C.C. (2d) 473, [1979] 2 S.C.R. 305, 13 C.R. (3d) 36 (S.C.C.) (7:0), revg 32 C.C.C. (2d) 446, 34 C.R.N.S. 362 sub nom. Re Cohen and The Queen (Que. C.A.).

Lack of jurisdiction in this context means not merely lack of initial jurisdiction but loss of jurisdiction which can occur where the justice presiding at the preliminary hearing fails to observe a mandatory provision of this Act or where there has been a denial of natural justice. However, mere disallowance of some questions on cross-examination does not result in a loss of jurisdiction: Forsythe v. The Queen (1980), 53 C.C.C. (2d) 225, 15 C.R. (3d) 280, [1980] 2 S.C.R. 268 (7:0).

In Patterson v. The Queen (1970), 2 C.C.C. (2d) 227, 10 C.R.N.S.55 (S.C.C.), it was held (5:2) that even if a justice on a preliminary inquiry erred in failing to order production of a witness' previous statement it would amount to no more than an error in the exercise of jurisdiction. For success in attacking a committal for trial by certiorari the only ground is lack of jurisdiction.

Certiorari alone lies to review orders made by a justice on a preliminary hearing only where the grounds relate to the justice's jurisdiction. With respect to quashing a committal for trial on the basis that there was no evidence to support the committal for trial it was held that it cannot be said that the justice acted without jurisdiction unless he commits the accused "without any evidence at all, in the sense of an entire absence of proper material as a basis for the formation of a judicial opinion that the evidence was sufficient to put the accused on trial. That is quite a different question from the question 'whether in the opinion of the reviewing tribunal there was evidence upon which a properly instructed jury acting judicially could convict'": Re Martin, Simard and Desjardins and The Queen; Re Nichols and The Queen (1977), 41 C.C.C. (2d) 308, 87 D.L.R. (3d) 634 (Ont. C.A.).

Certiorari also lies to quash an order discharging the accused following a preliminary inquiry where there has been jurisdictional error, as where the judge assumed the jurisdiction of the trial court and applying the standard of proof beyond reasonable doubt purported to dismiss the charge: Dubois v. The Queen (1986), 25 C.C.C. (3d) 221, 51 C.R. (3d) 193, [1986] 1 S.C.R. 366.

Trial rulings – Where a trial Judge has embarked upon a trial in the proper exercise of his jurisdiction the superior Court will accord him the widest latitude in the conduct of the trial without prerogative intervention, the proper remedy if he errs being by way of appeal at the conclusion of the trial. Once having properly embarked on a trial in which he has jurisdiction, the trial Judge has a further jurisdiction to decide all matters of law, including questions as to the admissibility of evidence, necessary for the conduct of the trial and the final disposition of the charge, and the superior Court will not exercise its discretion to grant a prerogative remedy: Re Madden et al. and The Queen (1977), 35 C.C.C. (2d) 381 (Ont. H.C.J.).

A superior Court will intervene by way of prerogative remedies in the course of a trial only in an extraordinary case. Short of conducting himself in a manner that shocks the judicial conscience, a trial Judge who has embarked upon a trial, over which he has jurisdiction, is to be left free to complete it and challenges to decisions made by him in the course of the trial must be initiated by way of appeal: Re Madden et al. and The Queen (No. 2) (1977), 35 C.C.C. (2d) 385 (Ont. H.C.J.).

Habeas Corpus / Procedure – The application for a writ of habeas corpus is actually a two-stage process. In the first stage the judge to whom the application is made must determine whether probable and reasonable grounds for the complaint exist as provided, for example, in Ontario, in s. 1 of the pre-Confederation Habeas Corpus Act, S.C. 1866, c. 45. If such grounds are present, the writ issues and merits are determined on the return of the writ. The usual practice, however, in most provinces where the prisoner is represented by counsel, is to collapse both stages into one. However, where a written application is made by a prisoner then the judge must determine whether or not to issue the writ, although usually the formality of issuing the writ is dispensed with, the judge simply ordering the prisoner to be brought before the court to make submissions. In this case the Court of Appeal concluded that the motions court judge erred in refusing to consider the merits of the application made by a prisoner. However, rather than remitting the matter to that judge, it was open to the Court of Appeal to examine the merits itself, the prisoner being present in the Court of Appeal and participating in the argument: R. v. Olson (1989), 47 C.C.C. (3d) 491, 68 O.R. (2d) 256n, [1989] 1 S.C.R. 296.

On an application for habeas corpus without certiorari in aid affidavit evidence is admissible to establish jurisdictional error. The only limitation on the admissibility of extrinsic evidence on an application for habeas corpus arises from the conclusive character of the record of courts of superior or general common law jurisdiction: Miller v. The Queen (1985), 23 C.C.C. (3d) 97, 49 C.R. (3d) 1, 24 D.L.R. (4th) 9 (S.C.C.) (7:0).

Prerequisites for invoking *habeas corpus – An accused who is at liberty on interim release on his own recognizance and who has complied with the terms thereof and has not surrendered into custody for the purposes of the application cannot invoke the pre-confederation Habeas Corpus Act of 1866 (still in force in Ontario) to review his commitment for trial: Re Martin, Simard and Desjardins and The Queen; Re Nichols and The Queen (1977), 41 C.C.C. (2d) 308, 87 D.L.R. (3d) 634 (Ont. C.A.), affd on other grounds 41 C.C.C. (2d) 342, 87 D.L.R. (3d) 704, [1978] 2 S.C.R. 511. [Also, see note under s. 548, supra.]

Before a writ of habeas corpus may issue, the applicant must establish that he is in detention; assert the cause or basis for his detention; complain that his detention is unlawful and establish that there are probable and reasonable grounds for his complaint: Idziak v. Canada (Minister of Justice) (1989), 53 C.C.C. (3d) 464, 63 D.L.R. (4th) 267, 70 O.R. (2d) 498 (H.C.J.).

Availability of other remedies – Habeas corpus was refused where the inmate sought to quash his conviction and sentence made in adult Court on the basis that that Court lacked jurisdiction since he was a juvenile at the time of the offence. It was held that the accused could appeal the conviction and appeal was thus the appropriate remedy: Re Johnson and The Queen (1982), 68 C.C.C. (2d) 65, 31 C.R. (3d) 329 sub nom. A.-G. B.C. et al. v. Johnson (McLean) (B.C.C.A.).

Prohibition / General considerations – On an application for prohibition only judicial dignity would require the trial Judge to adjourn the case pending disposition of the prohibition application. In the particular circumstances it was not inconsistent with judicial dignity for the trial Judge to proceed with the accused's jury trial where the trial was almost at an end when the Judge was served with the notice of motion, the matters referred to could be raised on appeal in the event of conviction and a long interruption in the trial would be undesirable: R. v. Turkiewicz, Barrow and MacNamara (1979), 50 C.C.C. (2d) 406, 10 C.R. (3d) 352 (Ont. C.A.).

Bias – Where there is no proof of actual bias in the sense, for example, of financial gain, the test is whether the circumstances give rise to a reasonable apprehension, which reasonably well-informed persons could properly have, of a biased appraisal and judgment of the issues to be determined by the tribunal: Committee for Justice and Liberty et al. v. National Energy Board (1976), 68 D.L.R. (3d) 716, 9 N.R. 115 (S.C.C.) (5:3).

Validity of information – Where prohibition is sought on the ground that the information does not disclose a criminal offence, it will be refused unless the statute under which the charge was laid is ultra vires: R. v. Layton, Ex p. Thodas et al., [1970] 5 C.C.C. 260, 10 C.R.N.S. 290, sub nom. Re Thodas (B.C.C.A.) (2:1).

Where an information falls within a trial Court's jurisdiction the Judge has exclusive jurisdiction to determine its validity and his decision upholding it is not subject to either a motion to quash or to extraordinary remedy proceedings but only to an appeal against his disposition of the case: R. v. Jarman (1972), 10 C.C.C. (2d) 426 (Ont. C.A.).

A trial Judge's refusal to quash an information charging an offence within his jurisdiction, is not reviewable by prohibition proceedings: R. v. Acme Bedding & Felt Co. Ltd. (1974), 16 C.C.C. (2d) 292, [1974] 3 W.W.R. 66 (Man. Q.B.).

The correctness of a trial Judge's ruling on his interpretation of certain Code sections such as the scope of jury challenge for cause is not reviewable by an extraordinary remedy application: Re Regina and Jones (Nos. 1 and 2); Re Regina and Daley (Nos. 1 and 2) (1974), 16 C.C.C. (2d) 338, 2 O.R. (2d) 741 (Ont. C.A.) (3:2).

Rulings of trial judge – Where an information shows on its face that an applicable limitation period has expired then the Court has no jurisdiction to receive it. The proper remedy is to move by way of motion to quash before the trial Judge and prohibition, being a discretionary remedy, should be refused. However, where the expiration of the limitation period is not apparent on the face of the information the accused may move by way of prohibition and attempt to show, by adducing evidence, that the trial Judge is without jurisdiction to receive the information: Re Medicine Hat Greenhouses Ltd. and German and The Queen (No. 3) (1977), 37 C.C.C. (2d) 287, [1977] 5 W.W.R. 532 (Alta. S.C.T.D.); affd., but without reference to the point: 45 C.C.C. (2d) 27, [1979] 1 W.W.R. 296 (Alta. S.C. App. Div.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused C.C.C. loc. cit.

The rulings of a trial Judge in such matters as to whether or not to declare a mistrial, as where a Crown witness was seen talking to police officers during a break in his testimony, are within his jurisdiction and prohibition will not lie to review the decision: Re Stewart and Dalton and The Queen (1977), 36 C.C.C. (2d) 5 (Ont. C.A.).

Mandamus / Availability generally – Where an inferior Court makes an error in law in the course of actually exercising its jurisdiction mandamus will not lie, but where the inferior court makes an error in law which leads it away from exercising lawful jurisdiction this remedy may be invoked: Re Regina and Mann et al. (1971), 4 C.C.C. (2d) 319, [1971] 5 W.W.R. 84 (B.C.S.C.).

This extraordinary remedy, available to require an inferior court to accept its jurisdiction and discharge its duty will not lie where there is another remedy by appeal available: Cheyenne Realty Ltd. v. Thompson et al. (1974), 15 C.C.C. (2d) 49, 42 D.L.R. (3d) 733 (S.C.C.) (5:0).

A finding by the trial Judge that the charge is a nullity as the provision of the federal enactment under which it was laid was ultra vires Parliament is tantamount to an acquittal and the Crown must therefore appeal to the Court of Appeal rather than apply for mandamus: Re R. and Kripps Pharmacy Ltd. and Kripps (1981), 60 C.C.C. (2d) 332, [1981] 5 W.W.R. 190, sub nom. A.-G. Can. v. Wetmore Co. Ct. J. et al. (B.C.C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused 38 N.R. 180n.

Mandamus is available to review the decision of a Judge staying the charges or quashing the information on the basis that the accused's right to trial within a reasonable time as guaranteed by s. 11(b) of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms has been infringed: Re R. and Thompson (1983), 8 C.C.C. (3d) 127, 3 D.L.R. (4th) 642 (B.C.C.A.). On the other hand it was held in Re R. and Beason (1983), 7 C.C.C. (3d) 20, 36 C.R. (3d) 73 (Ont. C.A.) that such a ruling could also be appealed by the Crown under s. 676 and the latter was the preferable route of review.

In exceptional cases the Court of Appeal has original jurisdiction to make an order of mandamus but this jurisdiction should be exercised sparingly, the normal practice being to take the matter to the Court of Queen's Bench first: Re Forest and Registrar of Court of Appeal of Manitoba (1977), 35 C.C.C. (2d) 497, 77 D.L.R. (3d) 445 (Man. C.A.).

Preliminary inquiry – It was held in Re Depagie and The Queen (1976), 32 C.C.C. (2d) 89, 1 Alta. L.R. (2d) 30 (2:1) (Alta. S.C. App. Div.) that the principles limiting applications for certiorari to cases where the justice conducting the preliminary hearing has lost jurisdiction are equally applicable to an application for mandamus with certiorari in aid. Assuming a justice was wrong in disallowing certain questions, such error did not cause the Court to lose jurisdiction and mandamus with certiorari in aid would not lie. In cases where the accused desires to question a ruling by the justice, the proper procedure is to conclude the preliminary hearing and then apply for certiorari if the defence feels it is available.

Mandamus will not lie at the instance of the Crown to review the decision of a justice ruling inadmissible certain evidence at the accused's preliminary hearing: Re Regina and Commisso et al. (No. 2) (1977), 35 C.C.C. (2d) 237 (B.C.S.C.).

DETENTION ON INQUIRY TO DETERMINE LEGALITY OF IMPRISONMENT.

775. Where proceedings to which this Part applies have been instituted before a judge or court having jurisdiction, by or in respect of a person who is in custody by reason that he is charged with or has been convicted of an offence, to have the legality of his imprisonment determined, the judge or court may, without determining the question, make an order for the further detention of that person and direct the judge, justice or provincial court judge under whose warrant he is in custody, or any other judge, justice or provincial court judge, to take any proceedings, hear such evidence or do any other thing that, in the opinion of the judge or court, will best further the ends of justice. R.S., c. C-34, s. 709.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See s. 776 for the special circumstances where a conviction or order can not be removed by certiorari. In certain cases of procedural defects made at first instance, ss. 777 and 778 grant the superior court of criminal jurisdiction remedial authority.

See s. 781 for the operation of judicial notice of statutory Acts and rules in place of formal proof so as not to invalidate orders, convictions or other proceedings. See s. 782 for the circumstances in which certain formal defects do not invalidate a warrant of committal.

SYNOPSIS

This section permits the court to take remedial action on an application for habeas corpus, even though that detention is unlawful. The judge hearing the matter may order the continued detention of the applicant and direct the judge or other judicial officer under whose process the applicant is detained to do such other thing or hear such evidence as will best further the ends of justice.

ANNOTATIONS

This section is not inoperative by reason of s. 2(c) of the Canadian Bill of Rights and may be resorted to although s. 525 of the Criminal Code has not been complied with: Ex p. Gooden (1975), 27 C.C.C. (2d) 161 (Ont. H.C.J.); Kenny v. A.-G. Can. and A.-G. B.C., [1977] 5 W.W.R. 393 (B.C.S.C.).

In R. v. Pomfret (1990), 53 C.C.C. (3d) 56 (Man. C.A.), while the court did not reach a settled conclusion on the matter, it queried whether this section would violate ss. 9 and 10(c) of the Charter if the court, having found that the accused was not lawfully held, nevertheless ordered that the accused continue to be detained.

Notwithstanding the Court determines that the accused's detention is unlawful, as where it is demonstrated that the review procedure in s. 525 has not been complied with, the Court may still exercise the power under this section and make an order for the further detention of the accused: Re Ferreira and The Queen (1981), 58 C.C.C. (2d) 147 (B.C.C.A.).

In Re Demerais and The Queen (1978), 42 C.C.C. (2d) 287, 5 C.R. (3d) 229 (Ont. C.A.) the Court found that there was no evidence of planning and deliberation and therefore quashed the accused's committal for trial on charges of first degree murder. However, rather than ordering the accused's discharge the court invoked the provisions of this section and remitted the matter back to the magistrate to permit the Crown to call further evidence, if any, on the charges of first degree murder.

WHERE CONVICTION OR ORDER NOT REVIEWABLE.

776. No conviction or order shall be removed by certiorari

- (a) where an appeal was taken, whether or not the appeal has been carried to a conclusion; or
- (b) where the defendant appeared and pleaded and the merits were tried, and an appeal might have been taken, but the defendant did not appeal. R.S., c. C-34, s. 710.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See ss. 777 and 778 for the circumstances in which a conviction or order cannot, because of irregularity or insufficiency, be held to be invalid on removal by certiorari.

See s. 781 for the operation of judicial notice in place of formal proof. See s. 782 for the circumstances in which particular formal defects do not invalidate a warrant of committal.

SYNOPSIS

This section prohibits the removal by certiorari of a conviction or order where: (a) an appeal has been taken (regardless of whether it has been carried to a conclusion); or (b) the defendant appeared and pleaded, the merits were tried, and the defendant did not appeal.

ANNOTATIONS

In Sanders v. The Queen, [1970] 2 C.C.C.57, 8 C.R.N.S.345 (S.C.C.), the accused made a second application for habeas corpus ad subjiciendum with certiorari in aid to direct his release from a sentence of preventive detention following a finding that he was a criminal sexual psychopath. It was held (5:4) that s. 776(b) was a bar to the removal by certiorari of the preventive detention order. The majority were of the view that Parliament provided in clear terms by s. 776 that in any case falling within its provisions rectification of an error must be by way of appeal only and furthermore the so-called “exceptional cases” involving absence of jurisdiction or denial of natural justice constitute an erroneous refusal to apply this section. Folld: R. v. Stewart (1979), 7 C.R. (3d) 165, [1979] 3 W.W.R. 177 (B.C.C.A.).

The limitations of s. 776 do not, by virtue of s. 17 of the Interpretation Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. I-21, apply to the Crown: R. v. Eross, [1970] 5 C.C.C. 169, 73 W.W.R. 398 (B.C.C.A.). Folld: R. v. Conley (1979), 47 C.C.C. (2d) 359, [1979] 5 W.W.R. 692 (Alta. S.C. App. Div.). Similarly: R. v. Moodie (1984), 13 C.C.C. (3d) 264 (Ont. H.C.J.).

Once the accused has appeared and entered a plea, even if the judge lost jurisdiction because of a subsequent refusal of an adjournment, the defendant’s remedy is by way of appeal and not by certiorari: R. v. Mearns; R. v. Kreutziger, [1970] 5 C.C.C. 226, 73 W.W.R. 435, sub nom. R. v. Kreutziger, 73 W.W.R. 447 sub nom. R. v. Mearns (B.C.C.A.) (2:1). Branca, J.A., dissented on the ground that the refusal of the requested adjournment resulted in an ex parte trial at which the merits of the defendant’s case were not tried, resulting in a complete and total nullity of proceedings.

In Re Gallicano and The Queen (1978), 42 C.C.C. (2d) 113, [1978] 3 W.W.R. 452 (B.C.C.A.) following a plea of guilty the trial Judge imposed a fine but upon learning the accused had a record, imposed a jail sentence. The accused did not appeal but rather applied for certiorari. The Court in dismissing the application held that whether the second sentence was a nullity, invalid or otherwise ineffective, para. (b) of this section precluded resort to certiorari. A plea of guilty still constituted a trial on the merits.

Even where the section under which the accused was convicted was later held to be ultra vires, this section precludes resort to certiorari to quash the conviction: Re Beaupre and The Queen (1981), 61 C.C.C. (2d) 92, [1981] 5 W.W.R. 278 (Man. C.A.).

A warrant of committal is not a conviction or order within the meaning of this section: Re Carleton and The Queen (1982), 2 C.C.C. (3d) 310 (B.C.C.A.).

CONVICTION OR ORDER REMEDIABLE, WHEN / Correcting punishment / Amendment / Sufficiency of statement.

777. (1) No conviction, order or warrant for enforcing a conviction or order shall, on being removed by certiorari, be held to be invalid by reason of any irregularity, informality or insufficiency therein, where the court before which or the judge before whom the question is raised, on perusal of the evidence, is satisfied

- (a) that an offence of the nature described in the conviction, order or warrant, as the case may be, was committed,
- (b) that there was jurisdiction to make the conviction or order or issue the warrant, as the case may be, and
- (c) that the punishment imposed, if any, was not in excess of the punishment that might lawfully have been imposed, but the court or judge has the same powers to deal with the proceedings in the manner that he considers proper that are conferred upon a court to which an appeal might have been taken.

(2) Where, in proceedings to which subsection (1) applies, the court or judge is satisfied that a person was properly convicted of an offence but the punishment that was imposed is greater than the punishment that might lawfully have been imposed, the court or judge

- (a) shall correct the sentence,
  - (i) where the punishment is a fine, by imposing a fine that does not exceed the maximum fine that might lawfully have been imposed,
  - (ii) where the punishment is imprisonment, and the person has not served a term of imprisonment under the sentence that is equal to or greater than the term of imprisonment that might lawfully have been imposed, by imposing a

- term of imprisonment that does not exceed the maximum term of imprisonment that might lawfully have been imposed, or
- (iii) where the punishment is a fine and imprisonment, by imposing a punishment in accordance with subparagraph (i) or (ii), as the case requires; or
- (b) shall remit the matter to the convicting judge, justice or provincial court judge and direct him to impose a punishment that is not greater than the punishment that may be lawfully imposed.

(3) Where an adjudication is varied pursuant to subsection (1) or (2), the conviction and warrant of committal, if any, shall be amended to conform to the adjudication as varied.

(4) Any statement that appears in a conviction and is sufficient for the purpose of the conviction is sufficient for the purposes of an information, summons, order or warrant in which it appears in the proceedings. R.S., c. C-34, s. 711.

CROSS-REFERENCES

This section is deemed to apply in the circumstances set out in s. 778. Section 781 provides that no order, conviction or other proceeding shall be set aside for reason that evidence which by s. 781(2) shall be judicially noticed has not been given. See s. 782 for the circumstances in which defects in form will not invalidate a warrant of committal in proceedings on certiorari and habeas corpus.

SYNOPSIS

This section permits a judge hearing an application for prerogative relief to make certain remedial orders.

Subsection (1) provides that a conviction, warrant or order will not be invalidated on purely technical grounds and confers on the court the same curative powers as those exercisable in appeal proceedings.

Pursuant to subsec. (2) corrective steps may be taken with respect to a sentence which exceeds the maximum provided for by law, including remitting the matter to the trial judge.

ANNOTATIONS

This section empowers a Court to amend a carelessly recorded conviction to meet a technical objection first raised upon application for certiorari: R. v. Holuboff (1961), 130 C.C.C.414 (B.C.S.C.). Folld: R. v. Ringheim, [1965] 3 C.C.C.219 (B.C.S.C.).

To amend a faulty conviction the Court only needs to be satisfied that guilt appears upon evidence which has been believed by the trial Judge: R. v. Hickey, Ex p. Hebb Motors Ltd., [1965] 2 C.C.C.170 (N.S.S.C.).

The Court may on certiorari remove a warrant of committal and correct the warrant under subsec. (2) where it appears on the face of the warrant that an illegal sentence was imposed. The imposition of a consecutive sentence in circumstances where there is no power to do so falls within the meaning of subsec. (2): Re Carleton and The Queen (1982), 2 C.C.C. (3d) 310 (B.C.C.A.).

Under s. 149, a term of imprisonment imposed for escaping custody may be made concurrent to the sentence the accused was serving at the time of the escape or consecutive to such sentence, but not consecutive to a sentence imposed for some further offence. Where the trial judge mistakenly made an order that the escape sentence be consecutive to the sentence for new offences imposed on that day, then on an application in the nature of certiorari, rather than simply quashing the illegal sentence, the court, pursuant to this section, may carry out the obvious intention of the trial judge and reverse the sequence of sentences so that the escape sentence runs consecutive to the time remaining unserved and the new sentences run consecutive to the escape sentence: R. v. Easton (1989), 8 W.C.B. (2d) 206 (Ont. C.A.), affd [1991] 2 S.C.R. 209.

IRREGULARITIES WITHIN SECTION 777.

778. Without restricting the generality of section 777, that section shall be deemed to apply where

- (a) the statement of the adjudication or of any other matter or thing is in the past tense instead of in the present tense;
- (b) the punishment imposed is less than the punishment that might by law have been imposed for the offence that appears by the evidence to have been committed; or
- (c) there has been an omission to negative circumstances, the existence of which would make the act complained of lawful, whether those circumstances are stated by way of exception or otherwise in the provision under which the offence is charged or are stated in another provision. R.S., c. C-34, s. 712.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See the cross-references under s. 777.

SYNOPSIS

This section is a non-exhaustive set of examples of cases in which the remedial powers created by s. 777 may be used. These examples are: (a) where a document is in the past tense as opposed to the present tense; (b) where a punishment is imposed which is less than the maximum; and (c) where there has been a failure to negative circumstances which would have made the act complained of lawful.

GENERAL ORDER FOR SECURITY BY RECOGNIZANCE / Provisions of Part XXV.

779. (1) A court that has authority to quash a conviction, order or other proceeding on certiorari may prescribe by general order that no motion to quash any such conviction, order or other proceeding removed to the court by certiorari shall be heard unless the defendant has entered into a recognizance with one or more sufficient sureties, before one or more justices of the territorial division in which the conviction or order was made or before a judge or other officer, or has made a deposit to be prescribed with a condition that the defendant will prosecute the writ of certiorari at his own expense, without wilful delay, and, if ordered, will pay to the person in whose favour the conviction, order or other proceeding is affirmed his full costs and charges to be taxed according to the practice of the court where the conviction, order or proceeding is affirmed.

(2) The provisions of Part XXV relating to forfeiture of recognizances apply to a recognizance entered into under this section. R.S., c. C-34, s. 713.

CROSS-REFERENCES

“Justice” and “territorial division” are defined in s. 2.

By s. 482(1) and (3)(c), every superior court of criminal jurisdiction and every court of appeal, respectively, may make rules of court to regulate, inter alia, proceedings with respect to mandamus, certiorari, habeas corpus, prohibition and procedendo.

Procedure in respect of the forfeiture of recognizances is governed by s. 770 to 773 of Part XXV.

SYNOPSIS

This section makes provision for an order requiring that an applicant for certiorari agree to prosecute the matter, at his own expense and without wilful delay, by entering into a recognizance with a condition to that effect. The recognizance may also contain conditions with respect to costs.

EFFECT OF ORDER DISMISSING APPLICATION TO QUASH.

780. Where a motion to quash a conviction, order or other proceeding is refused, the order of the court refusing the application is sufficient authority for the clerk of the court forthwith to return the conviction, order or proceeding to the court from which or the person from whom it was removed, and for proceedings to be taken with respect thereto for the enforcement thereof. R.S., c. C-34, s. 714.

CROSS-REFERENCES

This is a parallel procedure to the old remedy of procedendo. The issuance of process to compel reattendance is affected by s. 507(8).

SYNOPSIS

This section provides that when a motion to quash is refused, the court order indicating the refusal is sufficient authority for the return forthwith of the original proceeding to the original court or official for enforcement thereof.

ANNOTATIONS

This section makes it unnecessary to invoke the old procedure of procedendo returning the proceedings back to the inferior Court upon dismissal of the motion to quash: Batchelor v. The Queen (1977), 38 C.C.C. (2d) 113, 81 D.L.R. (3d) 241 (S.C.C.) (9:0).

Once the application has been dismissed and the record returned to the lower Court pursuant to this section no particular form of notice is required to secure the accused's attendance in the lower Court. Thus a summons may properly be used for this purpose and should the accused fail to attend Court having been given notice then the Judge may issue a warrant for his arrest: Re R. and Batchelor (1980), 56 C.C.C. (2d) 20, 17 C.R. (3d) 349 (Ont. H.C.J.). [Also now see s. 507(8).]

WANT OF PROOF OF ORDER IN COUNCIL / Judicial notice.

781. (1) No order, conviction or other proceeding shall be quashed or set aside, and no defendant shall be discharged, by reason only that evidence has not been given

- (a) of a proclamation or order of the Governor in Council or the lieutenant governor in council;
- (b) of rules, regulations or by-laws made by the Governor in Council under an Act of Parliament or by the lieutenant governor in council under an Act of the legislature of the province; or
- (c) of the publication of a proclamation, order, rule, regulation or by-law in the Canada Gazette or in the official gazette for the province.

(2) Proclamations, orders, rules, regulations and by-laws mentioned in subsection (1) and the publication thereof shall be judicially noticed. R.S., c. C-34, s. 715.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Judicial notice must be taken of all Acts of the Imperial Parliament and Parliament of Canada, pursuant to ss. 17 and 18 of the Canada Evidence Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. C-5, which obviates the need for their formal proof. Documentary proof of certain types of proclamation, order, regulation and appointment made under federal or provincial enabling legislation is permitted by ss. 20 to 22 and 24 of the Canada Evidence Act.

By s. 782, a warrant of committal is not invalidated by its formal defects.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides that no conviction, order or other proceeding will be set aside or quashed solely by reason of the fact that evidence was not given with respect to proclamations, orders, rules, regulations or by-laws made by the Governor in Council or the Lieutenant Governor in Council, or of matters published in the official government Gazettes (subsec. (1)). Judicial notice is to be taken of such matters (subsec. (2)).

ANNOTATIONS

In R. v. Steam Tanker "Evgenia Chandris" (1976), 27 C.C.C. (2d) 241, 65 D.L.R. (3d) 553 (S.C.C.) (7:2) the majority of the Court held that by virtue of s. 23(1) of the Statutory Instruments Act, 1970-71-72 (Can.), c. 38 the trial Judge was required to take judicial notice of certain regulations published in the Canada Gazette and therefore there was no need to consider the Crown's alternative submission that s. 715(2) [now s. 781(2)] required that judicial notice be taken of such regulations. Laskin, C.J.C., dissenting as to the effect of s. 23 went on to consider s. 715 [now s. 781] and held that by virtue of s. 708 [now s. 774], s. 715(2) [now s. 781(2)] applied only on proceedings for the prerogative remedies and was not a provision of general application.

DEFECT IN FORM.

782. No warrant of committal shall, on certiorari or habeas corpus, be held to be void by reason only of any defect therein, where

- (a) it is alleged in the warrant that the defendant was convicted; and
- (b) there is a valid conviction to sustain the warrant. R.S., c. C-34, s. 716.

CROSS-REFERENCES

By s. 781, judicial notice must be taken of federal and provincial proclamations, orders, rules, regulations and by-laws, and no order, conviction or other proceeding shall be quashed or set aside and no defendant discharged by reason only that evidence of such matters has not been given.

See the note to s. 781 for other related provisions.

SYNOPSIS

This section states that a warrant of committal is immune from challenge on grounds of defect in form as long as it alleges a valid conviction which exists and which can sustain the warrant.

ANNOTATIONS

In general, on a habeas corpus application, the Court should only determine whether the face of the warrant discloses lawful authority for detaining a person, and if so, any technical objections should then be dismissed under this section: Fischer v. Warden Of The Manitoba Penitentiary (1961), 131 C.C.C. 101, 35 C.R. 191 (Man.Q.B.).

While it is not an order of the court, a warrant of committal, unless it is invalid on its face, must be considered valid until it is set aside. An error in a warrant of committal having been brought to the attention of the court, the clerk of the court has the power to amend the warrant to conform with the sentence as it was imposed by the trial judge: Ewing v. Mission Institution (1994), 92 C.C.C. (3d) 484 (B.C.C.A.).

NO ACTION AGAINST OFFICIAL WHEN CONVICTION, ETC., QUASHED.

783. Where an application is made to quash a conviction, order or other proceeding made or held by a provincial court judge acting under Part XIX or a justice on the ground that he exceeded his jurisdiction, the court to which or the judge to whom the application is made may, in quashing the conviction, order or other proceeding, order that no civil proceedings shall be taken against the justice or provincial court judge or against any officer who acted under the conviction, order or other proceeding or under any warrant issued to enforce it. R.S., c. C-34, s. 717.

CROSS-REFERENCES

"Provincial court judge" and "justice" are defined in s. 2.

See generally ss. 25 to 31 regarding the protection of persons administering and enforcing the law.

SYNOPSIS

This section gives a judge who grants an application for certiorari quashing the order of a provincial court judge or justice of the peace the power to make a further order protecting the person who made the order and anyone acting under it from civil proceedings in that connection.

ANNOTATIONS

In making a determination under this section the Court should consider where there was clear jurisdiction for the Justice of the Peace to act whether he acted with bad faith, malice or ulterior motive. Furthermore, where the law required the Justice to act, and particularly since his decision involved questions of some difficulty and nicety, an order should be made for his protection: Re Royal Canadian Legion (Branch 177) and Mount Pleasant Branch 177 Savings Credit Union, [1964] 3 C.C.C.381, 44 C.R.35 (B.C.S.C.).

As a general rule a protection order should be made in the absence of misconduct, malice or an oblique motive by the Judge of the inferior Court: Mayrand v. Cronier (1981), 63 C.C.C. (2d) 561, 23 C.R. (3d) 114 (Que. C.A.).

A protection order should not be made where there is some reasonable basis upon which a person complaining of police action might succeed in a civil action: Re Sieger and Avery and The Queen (1982), 65 C.C.C. (2d) 449, 27 C.R. (3d) 91 sub nom. Sieger and Avery v. Barker et al. (B.C.S.C.).

APPEAL IN MANDAMUS ETC. / Application of Part XXI / Refusal of application, and appeal / Where writ granted / Appeal from judgment on return of writ / Hearing of appeal.

784. (1) An appeal lies to the court of appeal from a decision granting or refusing the relief sought in proceedings by way of mandamus, certiorari or prohibition.

(2) Except as provided in this section, Part XXI applies, with such modifications as the circumstances require, to appeals under this section.

(3) Where an application for a writ of habeas corpus ad subjiciendum is refused by a judge of a court having jurisdiction therein, no application may again be made on the same grounds, whether to the same or to another court or judge, unless fresh evidence is adduced, but an appeal from such refusal shall lie to the court of appeal, and where on the appeal the application is refused a further appeal shall lie to the Supreme Court of Canada.

(4) Where a writ of habeas corpus ad subjiciendum is granted by any judge, no appeal therefrom shall lie at the instance of any party including the Attorney General of the province concerned or the Attorney General of Canada.

(5) Where a judgment is issued on the return of a writ of habeas corpus ad subjiciendum, an appeal therefrom lies to the court of appeal, and from a judgment of the court of appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, with the leave of that Court, at the instance of the applicant or the Attorney General of the province concerned or the Attorney General of Canada, but not at the instance of any other party.

(6) An appeal in habeas corpus matters shall be heard by the court to which the appeal is directed at an early date, whether in or out of the prescribed sessions of the court. R.S., c. C-34, s. 719.

CROSS-REFERENCES

"Court of appeal" is defined in s. 2.

See s. 675 for the rights of appeal of a person convicted in proceedings by indictment.

See s. 676 for the Crown's rights of appeal.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides for appeals from the granting or refusal of prerogative relief.

Decisions or applications for certiorari, mandamus, and prohibition may be appealed to the Court of Appeal (subsec. (1)). (Note: Leave to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada must be obtained under s. 40 of the Supreme Court Act.)

Specific rules are set out with respect to habeas corpus. (Note: The case-law draws a distinction between an application for the writ and a judgment on the merits after the writ has issued. Although historically a two-stage process there is now generally only one hearing at which the merits are determined.)

Where an application for the writ has been dismissed a further application cannot be made on the same grounds unless fresh evidence is adduced. An appeal from such a dismissal lies to the Court of Appeal and, if refused, the matter may be appealed "as of right" to the Supreme Court of Canada (subsec. (3)). No appeal lies from the simple issuance of the writ (subsec. (4)).

A decision on the merits with respect to an application for habeas corpus may be appealed to the Court of Appeal and thereafter, with leave, to the Supreme Court of Canada (subsec. (5)). Such appeals are to be heard as soon as possible (subsec. (6)).

ANNOTATIONS

Subsec. (1) – Although this subsection gives an accused a right to appeal from dismissal of an application for certiorari including an application to quash an order to stand trial, the accused does not have a right to a stay of the trial proceedings pending the appeal. The power to grant a stay is discretionary, the test being whether the accused can show the existence of a serious question, that unless the stay were granted he would suffer irreparable harm and that the balance of convenience favours granting the stay: R. v. Boutin (1990), 58 C.C.C. (3d) 237, [1990] R.J.Q. 1841 (C.A.).

Subsec. (2) – In Re Kipnes and A.-G. Alta., [1966] 4 C.C.C. 387, 56 W.W.R. 474 (Alta. S.C. App. Div.), it was held (2:1) that there being no Rule which specifically deals with service of the notice of appeal in this case, it would follow that service in accordance with Rule 39 of the Rules of Court in civil matters would apply.

Subsec. (3) – Where the Court of Appeal finds that the superior court judge erred in refusing to issue the writ it need not remit the application to the original judge but rather may deal with application on the merits itself as if the writ had issued, the inmate being present and participating in the application: R. v. Olson (1989), 47 C.C.C. (3d) 491, [1989] 1 S.C.R. 296, 68 O.R. (2d) 256n (5:0).

Subsec. (5) – Although costs of a certiorari application may be ordered under s. 779, there is no such other substantive authority under the Criminal Code for a habeas corpus application: Re Ange, [1970] 5 C.C.C. 371, [1970] 3 O.R. 153 (C.A.).

An appeal lies under this section to the provincial Court of Appeal from the dismissal of an application for habeas corpus in an extradition matter: Re Federal Republic of Germany and Rauca (1983), 4 C.C.C. (3d) 385, 34 C.R. (3d) 97, 145 D.L.R. (3d) 638 (Ont. C.A.); Re Meier and The Queen (1983), 8 C.C.C. (3d) 210 (B.C.C.A.). And a further appeal lies, with leave of the court, to the Supreme Court of Canada, notwithstanding s. 39 of the Supreme Court Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. S-26: Schmidt v. The Queen (1987), 33 C.C.C. (3d) 193, 58 C.R. (3d) 1, 39 D.L.R. (4th) 18, [1987] 1 S.C.R. 500 (7:0).

Part XXVII / SUMMARY CONVICTIONS

Interpretation

DEFINITIONS / “clerk of the appeal court” / “informant” / “information” / “order” / “proceedings” / “prosecutor” / “sentence” / “summary conviction court” / “trial”.

785. In this Part,

“clerk of the appeal court” includes a local clerk of the appeal court;

“informant” means a person who lays an information;

“information” includes

- (a) a count in an information, and
- (b) a complaint in respect of which a justice is authorized by an Act of Parliament or an enactment made thereunder to make an order;

“order” means any order, including an order for the payment of money;

“proceedings” means

- (a) proceedings in respect of offences that are declared by an Act of Parliament or an enactment made thereunder to be punishable on summary conviction, and
- (b) proceedings where a justice is authorized by an Act of Parliament or an enactment made thereunder to make an order;

“prosecutor” means the Attorney General or, where the Attorney General does not intervene, the informant, and includes counsel or an agent acting on behalf of either of them;

“sentence” includes

- (a) a declaration made under subsection 199(3),
- (b) an order made under subsection 100(2) or 259(1) or (2), section 261 or subsection 736(1), and
- (c) a disposition made under subsection 737(1) or 738(3) or (4);

NOTE: The definition “sentence” replaced by 1995, c. 22, s. 7(1) (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

“sentence” includes

- (a) a declaration made under subsection 199(3),
- (b) an order made under subsection 100(2) or 259(1) or (2), section 261, subsection 730(1) or section 737, 738, 739 or 742.3, and
- (c) a disposition made under section 731 or 732 or subsection 732.2(3) or (5), 742.4(3) or 742.6(9);

NOTE: Paragraph (b) of the definition “sentence” replaced by 1995, c. 22, s. 7(2) (to come into force when s. 747.1 as enacted by 1995, c. 22, s. 6 comes into force). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

- (b) an order made under subsection 100(2) or 259(1) or (2), section 261, subsection 730(1), section 737, 738, 739 or 742.3 or subsection 747.1(1), and

NOTE: Paragraph (b) of the definition “sentence” replaced 1995, c. 39, s. 156 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

- (b) an order made under subsection 110(1) or 259(1) or (2), section 261 or subsection 736(1), and

NOTE: Definition “sentence” amended 1996, Bill C-8, s. 76 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council, but not in force as of May 15, 1996) by striking out the word “and” at the end of para. (b), by adding the word “and” at the end of para. (c) and by adding new para. (d). The text of para. (d), which is not yet in force and also may change before receiving Royal Assent, is therefor printed in lightface italics and reads as follows:

(d) an order made under subsection 16(1) of the Controlled Drugs and Substances Act;

“summary conviction court” means a person who has jurisdiction in the territorial division where the subject-matter of the proceedings is alleged to have arisen and who

- (a) is given jurisdiction over the proceedings by the enactment under which the proceedings are taken,
- (b) is a justice or provincial court judge, where the enactment under which the proceedings are taken does not expressly give jurisdiction to any person or class of persons, or
- (c) is a provincial court judge, where the enactment under which the proceedings are taken gives jurisdiction in respect thereof to two or more justices;

“trial” includes the hearing of a complaint.

R.S., c. C-34, s. 720; 1972, c. 13, s. 61; 1974-75-76, c. 93, s. 85; 1976-77, c. 53, s. 4; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 170; 1992, c. 1, s. 58.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Whether an offence is exclusively indictable, prosecutable by summary conviction alone or triable either way (hybrid) is determined by the section creating or prescribing the punishment for the offence.

By virtue of s. 34(1)(a) of the Interpretation Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. I-21, hybrid offences are “indictable” until the prosecution elects to proceed by summary conviction. Part XXVII applies to the trial of a summary conviction offence as well as to any appeal from a summary conviction trial.

ANNOTATIONS

“prosecutor”—While counsel may not in the same prosecution and at the same time be agent of both the provincial and federal Attorneys General, he can be duly authorized by both so that his authority cannot be disputed: R. v. Thomas (1979), 53 C.C.C. (2d) 472 (B.C.C.A.).

The definition in this section applies only to the trial of summary conviction offences and has no application to indictable offences although the accused has elected to be tried by provincial court judge: R. v. Edmunds (1981), 58 C.C.C. (2d) 485, 21 C.R. (3d) 168, [1981] 1 S.C.R. 233 (4:1).

A police officer who was not the informant could only be “agent” for the Attorney-General if he were appointed as such by the Attorney-General. His superior officer could not appoint him. However, prosecution by a police officer properly appointed by the Attorney-General does not offend the fair hearing guarantees in s. 11(d) of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms: Re Regina and Hart (1986), 26 C.C.C. (3d) 438 (Nfld. C.A.).

Nor does it offend the fundamental justice and equality guarantees in ss. 7 and 15 of the Charter of Rights. R. v. White (1988), 41 C.C.C. (3d) 236, 69 Nfld. & P.E.I.R. 91 (Nfld. C.A.).

Further, the court has no discretion to refuse a right of audience to an agent who has been properly designated: R. v. Maher (1986), 27 C.C.C. (3d) 476 (Nfld. C.A.).

“summary conviction court” – By virtue of para. (b) a justice has jurisdiction to try a Crown option offence where the Crown elects to proceed by way of summary conviction: R. v. Ashoona; R. v. Jonah (1985), 19 C.C.C. (3d) 377 (N.W.T.S.C.).

APPLICATION OF PART / Limitation.

786. (1) Except where otherwise provided by law, this Part applies to proceedings as defined in this Part.

(2) No proceedings shall be instituted more than six months after the time when the subject-matter of the proceedings arose. R.S., c. C-34, s. 721.

CROSS-REFERENCES

There exists no limitation provision of general application in respect of proceedings on indictment. An accused will have the benefit of s. 11(b) of the Charter in terms of being tried within a reasonable time and s. 7 protection against undue delays in the prosecutorial process warranting a stay of proceedings or abuse of process.

Summary conviction proceedings are commenced by laying an information in Form 2, pursuant to s. 788(1).

See s. 789 for the formalities of the information. Proceedings against an accused in respect of an offence are instituted by the issuance of process to compel the accused's appearance or by the confirmation of the already issued process.

SYNOPSIS

This section limits the application of this Part to summary conviction proceedings as defined, unless otherwise provided for by law (subsec. (1)). This section also sets the summary conviction offence limitation period of six months from the arising of the subject-matter of the proceedings (subsec. (2)).

ANNOTATIONS

Subsec. (2) – In Dressler v. Tallman Gravel & Sand Supply Ltd., [1963] 2 C.C.C. 25, 36 D.L.R. (2d) 398 (Man. C.A.), it was held that where a continuing offence was charged, part of which was outside the six-month period of limitation, the information was not void but could be amended by striking the part that was out of time.

An information in respect of a continuing offence which commenced more than six months before the information was laid but continued into the six-month period is valid: R. v. Belgal Holdings Ltd., [1967] 3 C.C.C. 34, [1967] 1 O.R. 405 (H.C.J.).

A summons issued more than six months after the time when the subject-matter of the proceedings arose on the presentment of an information laid within the six months is valid: R. v. Southwick, ex p. Gilbert Steel Ltd., [1968] 1 C.C.C. 356, 2 C.R.N.S. 46 (Ont. C.A.).

It is not open to the court to convict an accused of a summary conviction offence included in an indictable offence where the information was laid outside the six-month limitation period: R. v. Chausse (1986), 28 C.C.C. (3d) 412, 51 C.R. (3d) 332 (Que. C.A.); R. v. Hoskins (1929), 52 C.C.C. 365, [1930] 1 W.W.R. 85 (Alta. S.C.); R. v. Halcrow (1993), 80 C.C.C. (3d) 320, 40 W.A.C. 197 (B.C.C.A.), affd [1995] 1 S.C.R. 440, 95 C.C.C. (3d) 94, 90 W.A.C. 72.

An election by the Crown to proceed by way of summary conviction on a hybrid offence is a nullity where the information was laid outside the six-month limitation period: R. v. Phelps (1993), 79 C.C.C. (3d) 550 (Ont. C.A.).

There are conflicting decisions as to whether the attempt by the Crown to relay a charge and proceed by indictment on a Crown option offence in order to avoid the limitation period in this section will constitute an abuse of process. Thus, in Re Parkin and the Queen (1986), 28 C.C.C. (3d) 252, 14 O.A.C. 150 (C.A.) and R. v. Quinn (1989), 54 C.C.C. (3d) 157, 73 C.R. (3d) 77, 48 C.R.R. 314 (Que. C.A.) the courts did find an abuse of process in the particular circumstances. Those decisions should, however, be compared with R. v. Belair (1988), 41 C.C.C. (3d) 329, 64 C.R. (3d) 179 (Ont. C.A.) and R. v. Jans (1990), 59 C.C.C. (3d) 398, 108 A.R. 324 (C.A.). See also R. v. Maramba (1995), 42 C.R. (4th) 177, 84 O.A.C. 133 (C.A.).

At least with the accused's consent, the Crown may re-elect to proceed by way of summary conviction provided that the charge was laid within the limitation period even though the preliminary inquiry has commenced. The judge would, however, have the ultimate decision to permit or deny such a re-election. Rare and exceptional cases may arise where a joint request to permit the Crown to re-elect to proceed summarily should be refused in view of the judge's overall responsibility to safeguard the integrity of the judicial process: R. v. Linton (1994), 90 C.C.C. (3d) 528, 18 O.R. (3d) 647 (Gen Div.).

Also see notes under s. 583.

Punishment

GENERAL PENALTY / Imprisonment in default where not otherwise specified.

787. (1) Except where otherwise provided by law, every one who is convicted of an offence punishable on summary conviction is liable to a fine of not more than two thousand dollars or to imprisonment for six months or to both.

(2) Where the imposition of a fine or the making of an order for the payment of money is authorized by law, but the law does not provide that imprisonment may be imposed in default of payment of the fine or compliance with the order, the court may order that in default of payment of the fine or compliance with the order, as the case may be, the defendant shall be imprisoned for a period not exceeding six months. R.S., c. C-34, s. 722; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 171(1).

(3) to (11) [Repealed. R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 171(2).]

CROSS-REFERENCES

A default term must not exceed the term of imprisonment prescribed in respect of the offence pursuant to s. 717(3). See s. 718(3) for default terms respecting indictable offences.

Section 719(b) imposes a maximum fine not exceeding $25,000 for corporate accused convicted of summary conviction offences subject to exceptions.

Section 718.1 sets out a fine-option program under which an individual accused may discharge a fine wholly or in part.

See ss. 723 and 724 for destination of fines and recovery in civil proceedings respectively. See ss. 725 to 727.9 for restitution orders.

SYNOPSIS

Unless otherwise provided, the maximum penalty for a summary conviction offence is a fine of $2000 and/or six months' imprisonment (subsec. (1)).

Unless otherwise provided, the maximum period of imprisonment for non-payment of a fine is six months (subsec. (2)).

ANNOTATIONS

Subsec. (2) – It is open to the Court to pass a sentence that does not provide for imprisonment in default of payment of a fine, leaving recovery thereof to civil process. This section does not offend the Canadian Bill of Rights: R. v. Natrall (1972), 9 C.C.C. (2d) 390, 20 C.R.N.S. 265 (2:1) (B.C.C.A.).

This subsection should not be used routinely as a practical method for the Crown to enforce the collection of its financial penalties. Rather, the Court should consider what, if any, rehabilitation or deterrence will occur if the accused is required to serve a term of imprisonment if he is unable to pay the fine within the time specified: R. v. Yamelst (1975), 22 C.C.C. (2d) 502, [1975] 3 W.W.R. 546 (B.C.S.C.). Similarly: R. v. Deeb; R. v. Wilson (1986), 28 C.C.C. (3d) 257 (Ont. Prov. Ct.).

Information

---

COMMENCEMENT OF PROCEEDINGS / One justice may act before the trial.

788. (1) Proceedings under this Part shall be commenced by laying an information in Form 2.

(2) Notwithstanding any other law that requires an information to be laid before or to be tried by two or more justices, one justice may

- (a) receive the information;
- (b) issue a summons or warrant with respect to the information; and
- (c) do all other things preliminary to the trial. R.S., c. C-34, s. 723.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Proceedings must be instituted within six months of the occurrence of the subject matter of the proceedings, under s. 786(2).

An information in Form 2 may charge more than one offence or relate to more than one matter of complaint as long as each is set out in a separate count. The information must be in writing and under oath. The Rules of criminal pleadings in ss. 581 to 593 and s. 601 of Part XX apply to summary conviction proceedings under s. 795 with modifications. There is no need to set out any exception, exemption, proviso, excuse or qualification in an information in summary conviction proceedings under s. 794.

SYNOPSIS

This section prescribes the form for the information which commences the proceedings under this Part and provides that a single justice may receive that information, issue a summons or warrant or do any other preliminary thing, notwithstanding any requirement, as is found in some other federal legislation, that two or more justices be present.

ANNOTATIONS

An information includes the face and back thereof and where the title of the person taking the information is set out on the back of the information but not under his signature on the jurat the information is valid. Such deviation from Form 2 is one permitted by s. 841: R. v. Deal (1978), 38 C.C.C. (2d) 425 (N.S.S.C. App. Div.).

Pursuant to this section, an information charging an offence contrary to the Excise Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. 15, which Act requires that a prosecution be brought before a police or stipendiary magistrate or “before any two justices of the peace”, may be laid before a single justice: R. v. Keefe (1990), 57 C.C.C. (3d) 573 (P.E.I.S.C.).

FORMALITIES OF INFORMATION / No reference to previous convictions.

789. (1) In proceedings to which this Part applies, the information

- (a) shall be in writing and under oath; and
- (b) may charge more than one offence or relate to more than one matter of complaint, but where more than one offence is charged or the information relates to more than one matter of complaint, each offence or matter of complaint, as the case may be, shall be set out in a separate count.

(2) No information in respect of an offence for which, by reason of previous convictions, a greater punishment may be imposed shall contain any reference to previous convictions. R.S., c. C-34, s. 724.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The rules of criminal pleadings in ss. 581 to 593 and s. 601 of Part XX apply to summary conviction proceedings under s. 795 with modifications. There is no need to set out any exception, exemption, proviso, excuse or qualification in an information or count in summary conviction proceedings under s. 794. See s. 664 for similar provision to s. 789(2).

Sections 665 to 667 permit the introduction of evidence of previous convictions. Such evidence applies to summary conviction proceedings under s. 795. Also see Canada Evidence Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. C-5, s. 12.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides that informations are to be written and under oath and shall divide charges or complaints into separate counts (subsec. (1)). It also provides that no information shall contain references to previous convictions where such convictions might result in a greater punishment (subsec. (2)).

ANNOTATIONS

Signature of justice of the peace [Also see notes under s. 504] – In Re R. v. Welsford, [1968] 1 C.C.C. 1, 2 C.R.N.S. 5 (Ont. C.A.), it was held that a rubber-stamped facsimile of the signature of a justice of the peace on the jurat invalidated an information on the ground that the use of such a facsimile, which could be applied by anyone, instead of his own signature, which has characteristics that could hardly be denied by him, was an insufficient method of evidencing the administration of a solemn oath on an information. Affid [1969] 4 C.C.C. 1, 6 C.R.N.S. 90 (S.C.C.) (9:0).

Defects in jurat [Also see notes under s. 504] – A typographical error in the jurat so that the year in which the information was sworn is not shown cannot operate to nullify the information. The insertion of the date in the jurat is merely evidence that the oath was administered on a certain date and the date is only relevant and material where the issue of a limitation period arises: R. v. Dean (1985), 17 C.C.C. (3d) 410, [1985] 3 W.W.R. 141 (Alta. Q.B.).

Belief of informant – Failure of the informant, who did not have personal knowledge of the alleged offence, to employ the alternative phrase “reasonable and probable grounds to believe and does believe” in his information constitutes a failure to comply with the Code and in the absence of the appropriate amendment before the evidence was heard, the conviction must be quashed: R. v. Lepage, [1969] 1 C.C.C. 187, 4 C.R.N.S. 61 (Ont. H.C.J.).

The word “oath” includes a solemn affirmation. Accordingly, an information which is affirmed is valid: Netley v. The Queen and Greer, Prov. J., [1983] 5 W.W.R. 508 (B.C.S.C.).

There must not be a wilful disregard of the statutory requirements of laying an information; there need only be reasonable compliance with those provisions. Accordingly, where the informant’s belief was conclusive within the bounds of reasonableness an information sworn on positive, rather than reasonable and probable grounds, was upheld: McGuffey v. The Queen (1972), 17 C.R.N.S. 393, [1972] 2 W.W.R. 462 (Sask. Dist. Ct.).

An information regular on its face is presumed to be valid and if the defendant claims a latent defect such that the informant did not have reasonable and probable grounds to believe the alleged offence had been committed, then the onus is upon him to demonstrate his claim upon a balance of probabilities: R. v. Peavoy (1974), 15 C.C.C. (2d) 97 (Ont. H.C.J.).

Duplicity – The primary test for duplicity is “does the accused know the case he has to meet, or is he prejudiced in the preparation of his defence by ambiguity in the charge?” A charge that the accused “did discharge, or cause to be discharged, or permitted to be discharged, or deposited materials” into a river contrary to s. 32(1) of the Ontario Water Resources Act, R.S.O. 1970, c. 332 is not duplicitous within this test. There is nothing ambiguous or uncertain in the charge and the accused knows the case it has to meet. The gist of the offence is pollution which may be committed in one or more of several modes:

Where an information is defective by reason of duplicity it is not null and void ab initio but is capable even after the expiry of a limitation period of being amended and resworn to cure the defect: R. v. Baldassara (1973), 11 C.C.C. (2d) 17 (Ont.H.C.J.).

Presence of information in court – There is no requirement that the information be physically present in Court during every step of the proceedings: Re Perrault and The Queen (1982), 65 C.C.C. (2d) 279, 15 Sask. R. 341 (C.A.); Re Veltri and Veltri Stamping Co. Ltd. (1986), 3 W.C.B. (2d) 88 (Ont. C.A.).

Subsec. (2) – The inadvertent reference by a Crown witness to the fact that the accused had been served with a notice seeking a greater penalty by reason of a previous conviction is not grounds to dismiss the charge: R. v. Peters (1991), 35 M.V.R. (2d) 14, 96 Sask. R. 177 (Q.B.).

Other notes – The date of the offence in an information is only an allegation and may not be treated as evidence by a court: R. v. Walker, [1968] 2 C.C.C. 150, 61 W.W.R. 383 (B.C.S.C.).

Although the use of a stamped signature of the informant in an information is to be deprecated, his manual signature is not required: R. v. Burton, [1970] 3 C.C.C. 381, 8 C.R.N.S. 269 (Ont. H.C.J.).

The prefacing of two separate counts with a common date and place of the offence does not invalidate the information: R. v. Schille (1976), 28 C.C.C. (2d) 230, [1976] 2 W.W.R. 570 (B.C.C.A.).

ANY JUSTICE MAY ACT BEFORE AND AFTER TRIAL / Two or more justices.

790. (1) Nothing in this Act or any other law shall be deemed to require a justice before whom proceedings are commenced or who issues process before or after the trial to be the justice or one of the justices before whom the trial is held.

(2) Where two or more justices have jurisdiction with respect to proceedings, they shall be present and act together at the trial, but one justice may thereafter do anything that is required or is authorized to be done in connection with the proceedings. R.S., c. C-34, s. 725; 1974-75-76, c. 93, s. 86.

(3) and (4) [Repealed. R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 172.]

CROSS-REFERENCES

Subsection (1) permits different justices to receive the information, issue process and adjourn the matter from time to time until trial in the application of ss. 798 to 803. Another summary conviction court may continue summary conviction proceedings under ss. 669.1 and 669.2 rendered applicable to Part XXVII by s. 795. Trials by two or more justices of the peace seem anachronistic in light of s. 483 and para. (c) of the definition “summary conviction court” in s. 785.

SYNOPSIS

This section states that the justice who issues process, before or after trial or before whom the trial is commenced, need not be the justice before whom the trial is held (subsec. (1)). Also, where two or more justices are required, they must act together at trial, but any one of them may deal with post-trial matters (subsec. (2)).

NO NEED TO NEGATIVE EXCEPTION, ETC. / Burden of proving exception, etc.

794. (1) No exception, exemption, proviso, excuse or qualification prescribed by law is required to be set out or negated, as the case may be, in an information.

(2) The burden of proving that an exception, exemption, proviso, excuse or qualification prescribed by law operates in favour of the defendant is on the defendant, and the prosecutor is not required, except by way of rebuttal, to prove that the exception, exemption, proviso, excuse or qualification does not operate in favour of the defendant, whether or not it is set out in the information. R.S., c. C-34, s. 730.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The rules of criminal pleadings in ss. 581 to 593 and s. 601 of Part XX apply to summary conviction proceedings under s. 795, with modifications. No comparable provision exists for proceedings upon indictment.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides that an exemption, or other proviso under which the accused might have a defence, need not be negated or referred to in the information (subsec. (1)). The onus of proving the applicability of the exculpatory proviso rests on the accused, and the prosecutor need not prove the inapplicability even if the proviso is negated in the information (subsec. (2)).

ANNOTATIONS

It is only necessary in an information for the Crown to allege the unlawful commission of an offence at a time and place, and the inclusion of any clauses negating any exceptions to the offence, as enumerated in the offence section, is surplusage and does not cast any further onus of proof upon the Crown: R. v. Hundi (1971), 3 C.C.C. (2d) 279, [1971] 3 W.W.R. 741 (Alta. S.C. App. Div.).

This section does not apply to defences such as self-defence and necessity: R. v. Walker (1979), 48 C.C.C. (2d) 126 (Ont. Co. Ct.).

It has been held that the provincial equivalent of this subsection does not offend the guarantee to the presumption of innocence in s. 11(d) of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms: R. v. Lee's Poultry Ltd. (1985), 17 C.C.C. (3d) 539, 43 C.R. (3d) 289 (Ont. C.A.).

R. v. Lee's Poultry Ltd., supra was followed in R. v. Daniels (1990), 60 C.C.C. (3d) 392 (B.C.C.A.), a prosecution under the Fisheries Act (Can.) where it was held that the Crown need not prove that the accused did not have a Minister's permit to take shellfish in a contaminated area.

Application

APPLICATION OF PARTS XVI, XVIII, XX and XX.1.

795. The provisions of Parts XVI and XVIII with respect to compelling the appearance of an accused before a justice, and the provisions of Parts XX and XX.1, in so far as they are not inconsistent with the Part, apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, to proceedings under this Part. R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 176; 1991, c. 43, s. 7.

CROSS-REFERENCES

For the provisions of Part XX which are incorporated, see ss. 581 to 593 for rules of pleading and joinder, ss. 601, 794, 606 to 610 and 613 regarding pleas.

SYNOPSIS

This section imports the procedures for compelling the appearance of the accused from Parts XVI, XVIII, XX and XX.1 into summary conviction proceedings.

JURISDICTION.

798. Every summary conviction court has jurisdiction to try, determine and adjudge proceedings to which this Part applies in the territorial division over which the person who constitutes that court has jurisdiction. R.S., c. C-34, s. 733.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Terms of the appointment of the court will determine the territorial jurisdiction in which a summary conviction court has jurisdiction. See ss. 476 to 481 for examples of Criminal Code provisions extending territorial jurisdiction.

ANNOTATIONS

A case is deemed to have properly proceeded in the summary conviction court where the Crown, on an ambivalent offence, failed to make its election as to mode of procedure: R. v. Robert (1973), 13 C.C.C. (2d) 43 (Ont. C.A.).

Once the accused is convicted and sentenced the summary conviction Court is functus officio and has no jurisdiction to declare a mistrial: R. v. Conley (1979), 47 C.C.C. (2d) 359, [1979] 5 W.W.R. 692 (Alta. S.C. App. Div.).

Nor does the court have power to issue a warrant for arrest of an accused who fails to comply with a term of a probation order that he appear before the court on a specified day: Re Langlois and The Queen (1985), 25 C.C.C. (3d) 191 (Que. S.C.).

No judge of the summary conviction court has jurisdiction to hear a pre-trial application, such as an application for an order allowing a defence expert access to the breathalyzer machine used to analyze samples of the accused's breath: R. v. Delaney (1989), 48 C.C.C. (3d) 276, 13 M.V.R. (2d) 1, 89 N.S.R. (2d) 253 (C.A.) sub nom. R. v. How.

NON-APPEARANCE OF PROSECUTOR.

799. Where, in proceedings to which this Part applies, the defendant appears for the trial and the prosecutor, having had due notice, does not appear, the summary conviction court may dismiss the information or may adjourn the trial to some other time upon such terms as it considers proper. R.S., c. C-34, s. 734.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 803 contains the general authority to adjourn summary conviction proceedings. See s. 840 for scale of fees. A summary conviction court may award and order such costs as it considers reasonable and consistent with the scale of fees, pursuant to s. 809.

The informant, Attorney General or his agent may appeal to the appeal court from an order dismissing an information, under s. 813(b)(i).

See s. 812 for definition of “appeal court”.

SYNOPSIS

This section allows for dismissal of the information or adjournment of the trial by the summary conviction court where, on due notice, the defendant appears and the prosecutor does not.

ANNOTATIONS

Where the prosecutor gives evidence of a merely formal nature, such as to prove service of a subpoena, this does not result in the prosecutor’s case being vacant and does not constitute grounds for dismissal of the Crown’s case for want of prosecution: R. v. Hayward (1981), 59 C.C.C. (2d) 134, 32 Nfld. & P.E.I.R. 465 (Nfld. C.A.).

WHEN BOTH PARTIES APPEAR / Counsel or agent / Appearance by corporation.

800. (1) Where the prosecutor and defendant appear for the trial, the summary conviction court shall proceed to hold the trial.

(2) A defendant may appear personally or by counsel or agent, but the summary conviction court may require the defendant to appear personally and may, if it thinks fit, issue a warrant in Form 7 for the arrest of the defendant and adjourn the trial to await his appearance pursuant thereto.

(3) Where the defendant is a corporation, it shall appear by counsel or agent, and if it does not appear, the summary conviction court may, on proof of service of the summons, proceed ex parte to hold the trial. R.S., c. C-34, s. 735.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The procedure in summary conviction trials is governed by the provisions of ss. 801 to 803 and those of Part XX, incorporated in summary conviction proceedings by s. 795 to the extent they are consistent with Part XXVII.

A summary conviction trial of either an individual or corporate accused may be held ex parte where either has been properly served and has failed to appear or remain in attendance as required.

Sections 804 to 809 outline the adjudicative powers and authority of the summary conviction court. See ss. 812 to 838 for appeal procedures.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides that, where both defendant and prosecutor appear, the trial should be held (subsec. (1)). A defendant may appear by counsel or agent, but the court may require the defendant’s personal appearance and enforce this requirement through warrant (subsec. (2)). In the case of a corporate defendant, a counsel or agent must appear, and if such a person does not, the court may proceed ex parte, on proof of service.

ANNOTATIONS

Subsec. (2) – It was held in R. v. Fedoruk, [1966] 3 C.C.C. 118, 55 W.W.R. 251 (Sask. C.A.) that a plea can only be entered on behalf of the person named in the information. Once counsel had done this, it was no longer open for him to argue either that the person named in the information had not been served with the summons, or that he was not appearing for that person named in the information.

The warrant itself should not be issued until there is non-compliance of the Court’s direction that the defendant appear personally: Richard v. The Queen (1974), 27 C.R.N.S. 337 (Que. S.C.).

Although this subsection gives the Court power to require the accused to appear personally, it is improper to issue a bench warrant where the accused has appeared by counsel: R. v. Okanee (1981), 59 C.C.C. (2d) 149, 9 Sask. R. 10 (C.A.).

A provincial court Judge has power to appoint counsel to represent an indigent accused in summary conviction proceedings: Re White and The Queen (1976), 32 C.C.C. (2d) 478, 73 D.L.R. (3d) 275 (Alta. S.C.T.D.).

Subsec. (3) – The Court may adjourn a case for an ex parte trial and such adjournment although made in the absence of the accused may be for more than eight days: Re Saskatoon Custom Drywall (1978) Ltd. and The Queen (1982), 69 C.C.C. (2d) 441 (Sask. Q.B.).

Once counsel appears on behalf of the corporation identified as the defendant in the information as amended and enters a plea it is not open to the corporation to argue that the Crown has failed to serve a summons on that company: R. v. Westmin Resources Ltd. (Western Mines Ltd.), [1985] 1 W.W.R. 30 (B.C.C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused 56 N.R. 240.

ARRAIGNMENT / Finding of guilt, conviction or order if charge admitted / Procedure if charge not admitted.

---

801. (1) Where the defendant appears for the trial, the substance of the information laid against him shall be stated to him, and he shall be asked,

- (a) whether he pleads guilty or not guilty to the information, where the proceedings are in respect of an offence that is punishable on summary conviction; or
- (b) whether he has cause to show why an order should not be made against him, in proceedings where a justice is authorized by law to make an order.

(2) Where the defendant pleads guilty or does not show sufficient cause why an order should not be made against him, as the case may be, the summary conviction court shall convict the defendant, discharge the defendant under section 736 or make an order against him accordingly.

NOTE: Subsection (2) amended 1995, c. 22, s. 10 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council) by replacing the reference to s. 736 with s. 730.

(3) Where the defendant pleads not guilty or states that he has cause to show why an order should not be made against him, as the case may be, the summary conviction court shall proceed with the trial, and shall take the evidence of witnesses for the prosecutor and the defendant in accordance with the provisions of Part XVIII relating to preliminary inquiries. R.S., c. C-34, s. 736; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 177(1).

(4) and (5) [Repealed. R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 177(2).]

CROSS-REFERENCES

No reference is made in subsec. (1) to the availability of the special pleas. The incorporation of the provisions of Part XX by s. 795 to the extent they are consistent with Part XXVII, include the special plea provisions in ss. 607 to 610. Also, the procedure followed at trial under Part XXVII is substantially the same as under Part XX, subject to some specific provisions in the former. There is no authorization in this section for the trial of separate informations together. The section does not permit the joint trial of summary conviction and indictable offences by a provincial court judge sitting under Part XIX and XXVII. The prosecution should elect the mode of procedure before opting for summary conviction or indictment in cases triable either way.

SYNOPSIS

This section states the procedure on arraignment. The defendant is to be asked for a plea or to show cause why an order against him should not be made, as the case may be. Where the plea is guilty or no cause is shown, the court shall convict, discharge or make the order. Where the plea is not guilty, or intent to show cause is indicated, the trial shall proceed according to the provisions of Part XVIII relating to preliminary inquiries.

ANNOTATIONS

Special pleas [subsec. (1)] – The special pleas to an indictment are also available to a defendant upon an information: R. v. Riddle (1977), 36 C.C.C. (2d) 391, [1977] 5 W.W.R. 58 (Alta. S.C. App. Div.), affd 48 C.C.C. (2d) 365, [1980] 1 W.W.R. 592 (S.C.C.) (7:0).

Arraignment and plea – Since in British Columbia it has been the practice of counsel in summary conviction trials to enter a plea vicariously on behalf of the defendant, where the Crown enters the plea in the presence of counsel and the defendant no error has been committed. Furthermore, the stating of the substance of the information to the defendant is a statutory requirement going to jurisdiction, and as such as a special jurisdiction over the defendant it may be, as it was in the facts of this case, waived: R. v. Franiek (1970), 13 C.R.N.S. 230, [1971] 1 W.W.R. 104 (B.C.S.C.).

The arraignment of the defendant to identify him to the Judge and the members of the public is an established procedure, and the power of the Court under s. 800(2) to require the personal appearance of the defendant includes the power to require him to identify himself in open Court: Re Conrad and The Queen (1973), 12 C.C.C. (2d) 405 (N.S.S.C.).

A judge may decline to accept a plea until the defendant appears before him at the commencement of trial: R. v. Jones (1973), 26 C.R.N.S. 398, [1974] 2 W.W.R. 396 (B.C.S.C.).

Joint trial of information [Also see notes under s. 591] – A provincial court judge may jointly try summary and indictable offences, even where they are contained on separate informations, provided that the accused has not elected trial by a higher court in respect of the indictable offence. In the event of any conflict as to the applicable procedure, indictable offences procedures would apply. Where joinder of offences or accused are being considered, the court should seek the consent of both of the accused and the prosecution. If consent is withheld, the reasons should be explored. Whether the accused consents or not, joinder should only occur when, in the opinion of the court, it is in the interests of justice to proceed jointly and the offences or the accused could initially have been jointly charged. Where the accused wishes to testify in respect of only one of the informations, then consent to a joint trial would be withheld. Furthermore, where the separate informations involve two accused, the Crown may not compel one accused to testify against the other: R. v. Clunas, [1992] 1 S.C.R. 595, 70 C.C.C. (3d) 115, 11 C.R. (4th) 238 (5:0).

Recording of evidence [subsec. (3)] – Where the summary conviction court fails to record the evidence in accordance with s. 540 the superior court judge, upon motion for certiorari, will be unable to review the evidence pursuant to s. 804 and accordingly must quash the conviction: R. v. Lichty, ex p. Zerawsky (1970), 2 C.C.C. (2d) 581, [1971] 2 O.R. 193 (H.C.J.).

In Re Boylan and The Queen (1979), 46 C.C.C. (2d) 415, 8 C.R. (3d) 36, [1979] 3 W.W.R. 435 (Sask. C.A.) Culliton, C.J.S., held that the provisions of s. 540 are mandatory, and in obiter expressed the opinion that failure to comply with those provisions in a summary conviction trial is the failure to carry out a basic requirement of the trial, in the absence of which a verdict rendered cannot stand and on appeal the Court would order a new trial.

RIGHT TO MAKE FULL ANSWER AND DEFENCE / Examination of witnesses / On oath.

802. (1) The prosecutor is entitled personally to conduct his case and the defendant is entitled to make his full answer and defence.

(2) The prosecutor or defendant, as the case may be, may examine and cross-examine witnesses personally or by counsel or agent.

(3) Every witness at a trial in proceedings to which this Part applies shall be examined under oath. R.S., c. C-34, s. 737.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The general order in which evidence is addressed on indictment is followed in summary conviction proceedings. The incorporation by s. 795 of s. 655 applicable in trials upon indictment permits admissions to be made in summary conviction proceedings.

Reception of evidence given by affirmation under the Canada Evidence Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. C-5, s. 14 is permissible notwithstanding the "under oath" provision in subsec. (3). The general adjectival rules of evidence apply in summary conviction procedures, including evidentiary provisions in Part XX, incorporated by reference in s. 795. See s. 785 for definition of "prosecutor" as "the Attorney General or where the Attorney General does not intervene, the informant and including counsel or an agent acting on behalf of either of them". Pursuant to s. 801(3), the evidence given at trial is taken in accordance with the provisions of Part XVIII regarding preliminary inquiries.

SYNOPSIS

This section sets further rules for summary conviction proceedings. The prosecutor is entitled to conduct the case personally and the accused is entitled to make full answer and defence (subsec. (1)). The prosecutor and the accused may examine and cross-examine through counsel or agent (subsec. (2)) and every witness shall testify under oath (subsec. (3)).

ANNOTATIONS

While inability to make full answer and defence is a substantive defence, it would seem that delay in laying the charge, provided it is laid within the statutory limitation period in s. 786(2), does not give rise to such a defence: R. v. Field (1983), 6 C.C.C. (3d) 182, 57 N.S.R. (2d) 35 (S.C. App. Div.).

This section is not inconsistent with the right of a provincial Crown Attorney to intervene in the prosecution of an offence: Re Bradley and The Queen (1975), 24 C.C.C. (2d) 482, 335 C.R.N.S. 192 (Ont. C.A.).

It is a fatal error for the Court to convict and sentence the defendant without giving him an opportunity to make his defence: R. v. Pestell (1976), 31 C.C.C. (2d) 436 (Ont. H.C.J.).

See also cases under s. 650(3), supra.

ADJOURNMENT / Non-appearance of defendant / Consent of Attorney General required / Non-appearance of prosecutor.

803. (1) The summary conviction court may, in its discretion, before or during the trial, adjourn the trial to a time and place to be appointed and stated in the presence of the parties or their counsel or agents.

(2) Where a defendant to whom an appearance notice that has been confirmed by a justice under section 508 has been issued or who has been served with a summons does not appear at the time and place appointed for the trial and the issue of the appearance notice or service of the summons within a reasonable time before the appearance was required is proved, or where a defendant does not appear for the resumption of a trial that has been adjourned in accordance with subsection (1), the summary conviction court

- (a) may proceed ex parte to hear and determine the proceedings in the absence of the defendant as fully and effectually as if the defendant had appeared; or
- (b) may, if it thinks fit, issue a warrant in Form 7 for the arrest of the defendant and adjourn the trial to await his appearance pursuant thereto.

(3) Where, at the trial of a defendant, the summary conviction court proceeds in the manner described in paragraph (2)(a), no proceedings under section 145 arising out of the failure of the defendant to appear at the time and place appointed for the trial or for the resumption of the trial shall be instituted or if instituted shall be proceeded with, except with the consent of the Attorney General.

(4) Where the prosecutor does not appear at the time and place appointed for the resumption of an adjourned trial, the summary conviction court may dismiss the information with or without costs. R.S., c. C-34, s. 738; R.S., c. 2 (2nd Supp.), s. 15; 1972, c. 13, s. 63; 1974-75-76, c. 93, s. 87; 1994, c. 44, s. 79.

(5) [Repealed. 1991, c. 43, s.9.]

(6) [Repealed. 1991, c. 43, s.9.]

(7) [Repealed. 1991, c. 43, s.9.]

(8) [Repealed. 1991, c. 43, s.9.]

CROSS-REFERENCES

The laying of an information under s. 505 is required procedure to confirm an appearance notice issued by a police officer. See s. 508 regarding the conduct of the hearing. Liability may be attracted under s. 145(2), (4) or (5) and the issuance of a warrant of arrest under subsec. (2)(b) of this section, in the event the accused fails to appear or reattend a trial in response to a confirmed appearance notice or summons. Section 475 provides the authority to proceed with trial of an indictable offence where the accused absconds during the course of the trial. Section 475 is not made applicable to summary conviction proceedings under s. 795. See s. 544 for similar provision regarding preliminary inquiries. Section 799 permits the court to dismiss the information or adjourn the trial in the event that the prosecution fails to appear for trial.

Note that s. 672.1 defines “court” for the purposes of Part XX.1 [Mental Disorder] to include a summary conviction court and, thus, a judge of that court may make the various orders provided for in that Part including an assessment order under s. 672.11. Further, s. 672.1 defines “accused” for the purposes of Part XX.1 to include a defendant in summary conviction proceedings and, thus, the procedures respecting fitness to stand trial are governed by Part XX.1 as are the consequences of a verdict of not criminally responsible on account of mental disorder.

SYNOPSIS

The court may adjourn the proceedings from time to time, but no adjournment can be for greater than eight clear days unless both parties consent (subsec. (1)).

If the accused does not appear or remain in attendance for the trial, the matter can be continued on an ex parte basis. Alternatively, an arrest warrant can be issued and the proceedings adjourned (subsec. (2)). In the event the trial proceeds in the absence of the accused, a failure to appear charge (see s. 145) cannot be laid without the consent of the Attorney General (subsec. (3)).

An Information may be dismissed, with or without costs, if the prosecutor does not appear (subsec. (4)).

Where, at any time before verdict or sentence, the court is of the opinion that the accused is mentally ill, it can direct the accused to attend for observation or remand the accused in custody, for a period not exceeding 30 days, for that purpose. Such an order must be based on the evidence of one doctor. If both parties agree, a report by the doctor can be filed in lieu of calling viva voce evidence (subsec. (5)). In special circumstances, the remand may be for up to 60 days (subsec. (6)).

A remand for up to 30 days may be made without the evidence or report of a doctor, if the circumstances warrant and a doctor is not readily available to assist the court in this regard (subsec. (6)).

If reason exists to doubt the accused’s fitness to stand trial, the court can proceed with a hearing to determine this question (subssecs. (7), (8)).

ANNOTATIONS

Adjournment [subsec. (1)] – The limitation of adjournments without consent to eight days applies only until the conclusion of the taking of the evidence: R. v. Welsh, [1968] 4 C.C.C. 243 (Sask. Q.B.).

An adjournment verbally correct, but recorded in error as to the date causes a loss of jurisdiction over the defendant only, and may be remedied by his counsel's right to correct this error: R. v. Wick (1974), 20 C.C.C. (2d) 203, [1974] 6 W.W.R. 335 sub nom. R. ex rel. Seale v. Wick (Sask. Q.B.).

A case adjourned to a holiday which being a non-juridical day, is a dies non, shall be considered as being adjourned to the following day: Re Brand and The Queen (1974), 20 C.C.C. (2d) 253, [1975] 2 W.W.R. 356 (Alta.S.C.).

A court will not lose jurisdiction by adjourning a case in the absence of the defendant or his representative: R. v. Szoboszloi, [1970] 5 C.C.C. 366, [1970] 3 O.R. 485 (C.A.).

Where the accused and Crown counsel are unable to agree on a date for trial the proper course is for the Judge to fix a date for trial and then adjourn the case for periods not exceeding eight days until the trial date is reached: Batchelor v. The Queen (1978), 38 C.C.C. (2d) 113, 81 D.L.R. (3d) 241 (S.C.C.); however, see Mayrand v. Cronier (1981), 63 C.C.C. (2d) 561, 23 C.R. (3d) 114 (Que. C.A.).

Ex parte trial – Although the accused has been released on an undertaking rather than an appearance notice, the Court may still proceed ex parte if he fails to appear personally or by counsel or agent on the date set for trial: R. v. Okanee (1981), 59 C.C.C. (2d) 149, 9 Sask. R. 10 (C.A.). Contra: R. v. Grimwood (1984), 15 C.C.C. (3d) 318 (B.C.Co.Ct.) where it was also held that the trial does not commence before a plea is entered and therefore there can be no "resumption" of a trial unless there has been a plea. Thus, the court had no jurisdiction to proceed ex parte where the accused was released on an undertaking, appeared to set a trial date but did not enter a plea prior to failing to appear on the date set for trial.

The Court should not proceed ex parte under para. (a) where the accused has been prevented from attending Court by reasons beyond his control, such as weather conditions: McLeod v. The Queen (1983), 36 C.R. (3d) 378, 49 A.R. 321 (N.W.T.S.C.).

The judge is not precluded from proceeding ex parte under this subsection although he has earlier issued a warrant for the accused's arrest: R. v. Tarrant (1984), 13 C.C.C. (3d) 219, 10 D.L.R. (4th) 751 (B.C.C.A.).

Provision for an ex parte trial does not offend the rights guaranteed in ss. 7 and 11(d) of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms: R. v. Tarrant (1984), 13 C.C.C. (3d) 219, 10 D.L.R. (4th) 751 (B.C.C.A.); R. v. Rogers, [1984] 6 W.W.R. 89, 34 Sask. R. 284 (C.A.).

Adjudication

FINDING OF GUILT, CONVICTION, ORDER OR DISMISSAL.

804. When the summary conviction court has heard the prosecutor, defendant and witnesses, it shall, after considering the matter, convict the defendant, discharge him under section 736, make an order against the defendant or dismiss the information, as the case may be. R.S., c. C-34, s. 739; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 178.

NOTE: Amended 1995, c. 22, s. 10 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council) by replacing the reference to s. 736 with s. 730.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 806 requires a minute or memorandum of the order of the court be made where a conviction is recorded of an order made. An accused may request an order of dismissal under s. 808.

See s. 809 for costs. See ss. 813 and 830 for rights of appeal in summary conviction matters and ss. 812 to 838 for procedure.

SYNOPSIS

This section states the options of the summary conviction court after hearing the prosecutor, defendant and witnesses. It shall convict, discharge, make an order or dismiss the information.

ANNOTATIONS

Motion for dismissal / directed verdict [Also see notes under s. 650] – In Vander-Beek and Albright v. The Queen (1970), 2 C.C.C. (2d) 45, 12 C.R.N.S. 168 (S.C.C.), at trial the motion of the two appellants for dismissal at the conclusion of the Crown's case on the ground that there was no evidence upon which they could be convicted was dismissed and their immediately succeeding motion that they be acquitted on the ground that there was insufficient evidence for conviction was reserved by the judge until he heard all of the evidence. Their counsel took no further part in the evidence, even when the third accused testified to raise a reasonable doubt on his part at the expense of his other two co-accused. The trial judge acquitted Ellsworth on his evidence and, excluding his evidence as against the two co-accused, acquitted them. It was held (9:0) that the case was not concluded until all of the evidence was in and that all the testimony heard was evidence for or against each accused. Further, per Laskin, J., the accused's closing of his case at the conclusion of the Crown's case does not allow a co-accused to separate his trial from the joint trial.

At the close of the Crown's case the trial judge, if requested by the defendant, must rule whether or not a prima facie case has been established: R. v. Kennedy (1973), 11 C.C.C. (2d) 263, 21 C.R.N.S. 251 (Ont. C.A.), apld R. v. Snyder (1974), 16 C.C.C. (2d) 331, [1974] 3 W.W.R. 372 (Sask.Q.B.).

A trial Judge must dispose of a motion for dismissal before he may put the defendant to his election as to calling evidence: R. v. Angelatoni (1975), 28 C.C.C. (2d) 179, 31 C.R.N.S. 342 (Ont. C.A.).

Charter remedies – In addition to the dispositions set out in this section, the summary conviction court may enter a stay of proceedings pursuant to s. 24(1) of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms where such a remedy is appropriate for violation of a provision of the Charter: R. v. Cutforth, [1988] 1 W.W.R. 274 (Alta. C.A.).

Other notes – Failure of the Crown to notify a defendant, who neither himself nor by agent or counsel was present for the verdict, of his conviction constitutes a denial of natural justice: R. v. Welsh, [1968] 4 C.C.C. 243 (Sask. Q.B.).

MEMO OF CONVICTION OR ORDER / Warrant of committal / Admissibility of certified copy.

806. (1) Where a defendant is convicted or an order is made in relation to the defendant, a minute or memorandum of the conviction or order shall be made by the summary conviction court indicating that the matter was dealt with under this Part and, on request by the defendant, the prosecutor or any other person, the court shall cause a conviction or order in Form 35 or 36, as the case may be, and a certified copy of the conviction or order to be drawn up and shall deliver the certified copy to the person making the request.

(2) Where a defendant is convicted or an order is made against him, the summary conviction court shall issue a warrant of committal in Form 21 or 22, and section 528 applies in respect of a warrant of committal issued under this subsection.

(3) Where a warrant of committal in Form 21 is issued by a clerk of a court, a copy of the warrant of committal, certified by the clerk, is admissible in evidence in any proceeding. R.S., c. C-34, s. 741; 1972, c. 13, s. 64; 1994, c. 44, s. 80.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 734 deals with execution of warrant of committal. The accused is taken, together with the warrant, to the prison named therein. The delivering officer is given a receipt in Form 43 detailing the state and condition of accused upon delivery.

The accused may request an order of dismissal under s. 808. See s. 809 for costs. Also see references cited under s. 804.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides that upon a conviction or the making of an order by the summary conviction court, there shall be a memo recording same made up, and that a party is entitled to a certified copy of the conviction or order on request (subsec. (1)). In these circumstances, there shall also be a warrant of committal issued, which may be enforced by endorsement as provided for in s. 528 (subsec. (2)).

DISPOSAL OF PENALTIES WHEN JOINT OFFENDERS.

807. Where several persons join in committing the same offence and on conviction each is adjudged to pay an amount to a person aggrieved, no more shall be paid to that person than an amount equal to the value of the property destroyed or injured or the amount of the injury done, together with costs, if any, and the residue of the amount adjudged to be paid shall be applied in the manner in which other penalties imposed by law are directed to be applied. R.S., c. C-34, s. 742.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Sections 725 to 727.8 govern restitution payments to aggrieved persons. Also see s. 737(2)(e) for terms of probation order.

Sections 722(4), 727.3 and 727.8(4) and (5) deal with application of money penalties. A V.F.S. under s. 727.9 is a payment to a fund to assist victims as prescribed by the Governor in Council, not a payment to a person aggrieved, and does not fall within s. 807.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides that the total of multiple payments made to the victim by multiple convicted accused shall not exceed the damage done to that victim, plus costs, and that any excess shall be applied against other penalties imposed by law.

ORDER OF DISMISSAL / Effect of certificate.

808. (1) Where the summary conviction court dismisses an information, it may, if requested by the defendant, draw up an order of dismissal and shall give to the defendant a certified copy of the order of dismissal.

(2) A copy of an order of dismissal, certified in accordance with subsection (1) is, without further proof, a bar to any subsequent proceedings against the defendant in respect of the same cause. R.S., c. C-34, s. 743.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 570 governs records of conviction, acquittal and orders in non-jury trials.

Under s. 795, special pleas in ss. 607 to 610 apply in summary conviction proceedings. See s. 11(h) of the Charter for relation to provisions of subsec. (2).

Rights of appeal of informant, Attorney General or his agent are dealt with in ss. 813(b) and 830(1). See s. 809 for costs.

SYNOPSIS

This section gives a defendant for whom an information has been dismissed the right to request and receive a certified copy of the order of dismissal, and such copy acts, absent other proof, as a bar to subsequent proceedings on the same subject-matter.

ANNOTATIONS

The procedure under this section does not supplant the common law right to raise the special pleas of autrefois but merely serves to supplement those rights and provide a second and convenient method of proving a previous acquittal to bar subsequent proceedings. Further, the plea of autrefois acquit is available where following a plea of not guilty the Crown offers no evidence: R. v. Riddle (1979), 48 C.C.C. (2d) 365, [1980] 1 W.W.R. 592 (S.C.C.) (7:0).

It was also held in R. v. Riddle, supra, that the drawing up of the order of dismissal and the giving of a certified copy of the order to the accused is a purely administrative act which may be performed at any time subsequent to the trial. The doctrine of functus officio has no application to such acts.

An order of dismissal under this section is not a bar to further proceedings where the magistrate was without jurisdiction to hear the charge because the information was not sworn: R. v. Nazaroff (1959), 123 C.C.C. 134 (B.C.S.C.).

An order of dismissal obtained after the dismissal of an information because the offence charged was ultra vires Parliament is not a bar to a subsequent charge under valid provincial legislation for the same conduct: R. v. Logan (1981), 64 C.C.C. (2d) 238, 25 C.R. (3d) 35 (N.S.S.C. App. Div.).

In Re R. v. Rothman, [1966] 4 C.C.C. 316, [1966] 2 O.R. 481 (H.C.J.), it was stated that a certificate issued under s. 715 [now s. 808] is only a bar to subsequent proceedings by way of summary conviction and not to proceedings by way of indictment.

Where the accused has pleaded not guilty and the Crown, because it was refused an adjournment, offered no evidence so that the charge was dismissed the accused is entitled to request a certificate under this section: R. v. Canadian Pacific Ltd. (1976), 32 C.C.C. (2d) 14, [1977] 1 W.W.R. 203 (Alta. S.C. App. Div.) (5:0) and semble, R. v. Davis and Lakehead Bag Co. Ltd. (1977), 34 C.C.C. (2d) 388, 37 C.R.N.S. 302 (Ont. C.A.).

Similarly, where the Crown, having been refused an amendment to the charge, offered no evidence the magistrate properly dismissed the charge and issued the certificate under this section: R. v. Pirri (1978), 41 C.C.C. (2d) 499, 27 N.S.R. (2d) 41 (S.C. App. Div.).

COSTS / Order set out / Costs are part of fine / Where no fine imposed / Definition of "costs".

809. (1) The summary conviction court may in its discretion award and order such costs as it considers reasonable and not inconsistent with such of the fees established by section 840 as may be taken or allowed in proceedings before that summary conviction court, to be paid

- (a) to the informant by the defendant, where the summary conviction court convicts or makes an order against the defendant; or
- (b) to the defendant by the informant, where the summary conviction court dismisses an information.

(2) An order under subsection (1) shall be set out in the conviction, order or order of dismissal, as the case may be.

(3) Where a fine or sum of money or both are adjudged to be paid by a defendant and a term of imprisonment in default of payment is imposed, the defendant is, in default of payment, liable to serve the term of imprisonment imposed, and for the purposes of this subsection, any costs that are awarded against the defendant shall be deemed to be part of the fine or sum of money adjudged to be paid.

(4) Where no fine or sum of money is adjudged to be paid by a defendant, but costs are awarded against the defendant or informant, the person who is liable to pay them is, in default of payment, liable to imprisonment for one month.

(5) In this section, "costs" includes the costs and charges, after they have been ascertained, of committing and conveying to prison the person against whom costs have been awarded. R.S., c. C-34, s. 744.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See ss. 826, 834(1) and 839(3) for other costs provisions in summary conviction proceedings. Specific costs provisions in indictable matters include s. 599(3) for change of venue granted at prosecution's request, ss. 728 to 729 for defamatory libel, and s. 601(5) and (6) for adjournment granted because accused was misled by the form of the indictment.

SYNOPSIS

Costs may be ordered in summary conviction proceedings (subsec. (1), s. 840).

If the accused is ordered to pay both a fine and costs the latter will be deemed to be part of the fine for the purposes of any term of imprisonment that is imposed for non-payment of the fine (subsec. (3)).

If the accused is not fined, but is ordered to pay costs, the maximum period of incarceration in default of payment that can be imposed is 2 months (subsec. (4)).

ANNOTATIONS

The summary conviction Court has no power to grant an adjournment conditional on the party requesting it paying the costs of the day and has no power to award costs to the defendant's counsel: R. v. Cross (1978), 42 C.C.C. (2d) 277, 6 C.R. (3d) 16 (P.E.I.S.C. in banco).

A summary conviction court is a court of competent jurisdiction within the meaning of s. 24(1) of the Charter for the purpose of awarding costs against the Crown as a remedy for a Charter violation, in this case, delayed disclosure: R. v. Pang (1994), 95 C.C.C. (3d) 60, 35 C.R. (4th) 371, [1994] 4 W.W.R. 442 (Alta. C.A.).

Sureties to Keep the Peace

WHERE INJURY OR DAMAGE FEARED / Duty of justice / Adjudication / Conditions / Idem / Forms / Procedure.

810. (1) An information may be laid before a justice by or on behalf of any person who fears on reasonable grounds that another person will cause personal injury to him or her or to his or her spouse or child or will damage his or her property.

(2) A justice who receives an information under subsection (1) shall cause the parties to appear before him or before a summary conviction court having jurisdiction in the same territorial division.

(3) The justice or the summary conviction court before which the parties appear may, if satisfied by the evidence adduced that the person on whose behalf the information was laid has reasonable grounds for his or her fears,

- (a) order that the defendant enter into a recognizance, with or without sureties, to keep the peace and be of good behaviour for any period that does not exceed twelve months, and comply with such other reasonable conditions prescribed in the recognizance, including the conditions set out in subsections (3.1) and (3.2), as the court considers desirable for securing the good conduct of the defendant; or

(b) commit the defendant to prison for a term not exceeding twelve months if he or she fails or refuses to enter into the recognizance.

(3.1) Before making an order under subsection (3), the justice or the summary conviction court shall consider whether it is desirable, in the interests of the safety of the defendant or of any other person, to include as a condition of the recognizance that the defendant be prohibited from possessing any firearm or any ammunition or explosive substance for any period of time specified in the recognizance and that the defendant surrender any firearms acquisition certificate that the accused possesses and, where the justice or summary conviction court decides that it is not desirable, in the interests of the safety of the defendant or of any other person, for the defendant to possess any of those things, the justice or summary conviction court may add the appropriate condition to the recognizance.

NOTE: Subsection (3.1) replaced 1995, c. 39, s. 157 by subssecs. (3.1) to (3.12) (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

Conditions / Surrender, etc. / Reasons.

(3.1) Before making an order under subsection (3), the justice or the summary conviction court shall consider whether it is desirable, in the interests of the safety of the defendant or of any other person, to include as a condition of the recognizance that the defendant be prohibited from possessing any firearm, crossbow, prohibited weapon, restricted weapon, prohibited device, ammunition, prohibited ammunition or explosive substance, or all such things, for any period specified in the recognizance and, where the justice or summary conviction court decides that it is so desirable, the justice or summary conviction court shall add such a condition to the recognizance.

(3.11) Where the justice or summary conviction court adds a condition described in subsection (3.1) to a recognizance order, the justice or summary conviction court shall specify in the order the manner and method by which

(a) the things referred to in that subsection that are in the possession of the accused shall be surrendered, disposed of, detained, stored or dealt with; and

(b) the authorizations, licences and registration certificates held by the person shall be surrendered.

(3.12) Where the justice or summary conviction court does not add a condition described in subsection (3.1) to a recognizance order, the justice or summary conviction court shall include in the record a statement of the reasons for not adding the condition.

(3.2) Before making an order under subsection (3), the justice or the summary conviction court shall consider whether it is desirable, in the interests of the safety of the informant, of the person on whose behalf the information was laid or of that person's spouse or child, as the case may be, to add either or both of the following conditions to the recognizance, namely, a condition

(a) prohibiting the defendant from being at, or within a distance specified in the recognizance from, a place specified in the recognizance where the person on whose behalf the information was laid or that person's spouse or child, as the case may be, is regularly found; and

(b) prohibiting the defendant from communicating, in whole or in part, directly or indirectly, with the person on whose behalf the information was laid or that person's spouse or child, as the case may be.

(4) A recognizance and committal to prison in default of recognizance under subsection (3) may be in Forms 32 and 23 respectively.

NOTE: Subsection (4.1) enacted by 1995, c. 22, s. 8 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

(4.1) The justice or the summary conviction court may, on application of the informant or the defendant, vary the conditions fixed in the recognizance.

(5) The provisions of this Part apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, to proceedings under this section. R.S., c. C-34, s. 745; 1974-75-76, c. 93, s. 88; 1980-81-82-83, c. 125, s. 28; 1991, c. 40, s. 33; 1994, c. 44, s. 81.

CROSS-REFERENCES

An information laid before a justice under this section does not contain a formal charge. Under s. 524, a similar procedure without laying an information initiates a misconduct hearing. The inquiry is to determine whether evidence indicates the informant had reasonable grounds for fear, not guilt or innocence of accused. Committal is for failure or refusal to enter recognizance. No plea is entered.

Breach of recognizance is a summary conviction offence under s. 811.

An accused under Part XXVII proceedings may appeal an order against him pursuant to s. 813(b). A party to Part XXVII proceedings may appeal against determination of a summary conviction court under s. 830(1), on specified grounds.

SYNOPSIS

This section authorizes a Provincial Court judge or justice of the peace to require an individual to enter into a recognizance (sometimes known as a "peace bond") where grounds exist to believe that he or she will cause injury to, or damage the property of another person, or will injure the spouse or child of the other person. The application must be supported by an information and there must be a hearing (subsecs. (1) and (2)).

The recognizance can be for a period of up to 12 months and may contain such conditions as the judge considers desirable for ensuring the defendant's good conduct. If the defendant refuses to sign the recognizance he or she can be imprisoned for up to 12 months (subsec. (3)). Subsections (3.1) and (3.2) require the justice to consider inclusion of specific terms respecting possession of firearms, ammunition or explosives, non-attendance at certain premises and non-communication.

ANNOTATIONS

Subsec. (1) – The provisions respecting the sufficiency of informations apply to an information under this section: R. v. Boyko (1978), 43 C.C.C. (2d) 408 (Ont. Prov. Ct.).

This section is intra vires Parliament, being a valid exercise of the criminal law power although it is directed at prevention of harm and does not create an offence: R. v. Dhesi (1983), 9 C.C.C. (3d) 149, 4 D.L.R. (3d) 714, [1984] 1 W.W.R. 185 (B.C.S.C.).

Subsec. (3) – In addition to the authority of subsec. (3)(a) a judge has common law jurisdiction on facts established to his satisfaction to bind anyone over to keep the peace: R. v. White, ex p. Chohan, [1969] 1 C.C.C. 19, 5 C.R.N.S. 30 sub nom. R. v. Chohan (B.C.S.C.).

Along with his common law jurisdiction the judge must have before him sufficient evidence and he must first accord any person who might be affected by such jurisdiction an opportunity to be fully heard: R. v. Shaben (1972), 8 C.C.C. (2d) 422, 19 C.R.N.S. 35 sub nom. Shaben, Ferrar and Talbot (Re) (Ont.H.C.J.).

The judge's common law jurisdiction to dispense "preventative justice" must not be exercised arbitrarily or unfairly and without giving the person bound over notice and an opportunity to be heard. It is a denial of natural justice resulting in a loss of jurisdiction to make an order against the petitioner on an application under this section when she has been given no notice that she, as well as the defendant, would be bound over: R. v. Compton (1978), 42 C.C.C. (2d) 163, 3 C.R. (3d) S-7 (B.C.S.C.).

A defendant on a charge of assault need not be specifically warned that the judge intends to dismiss that charge but exercise his common law jurisdiction to bind the defendant over to keep the peace: R. v. Broomes (1984), 12 C.C.C. (3d) 220 (Ont. H.C.J.).

The ordinary rules precluding admission of evidence of an accused's disposition for violence do not apply to proceedings under subsec. (3). The actions of the defendant in the past may well assist the court in determining the reasonableness of the informant's fears and the likelihood that the defendant will carry out his threats: R. v. Patrick (1990), 75 C.R. (3d) 222 (B.C. Co. Ct.).

Subsec. (5) – The person against whom an Information has been laid under this section may be dealt with pursuant to the provisions of Part XVI including s. 515 of the Criminal Code. Thus, the judge may order the release of the accused on an undertaking with conditions pursuant to s. 515 pending the determination of the proceedings under this section: R. v. Wakelin (1991), 71 C.C.C. (3d) 115 (Sask. C.A.). Contra: MacAusland (Informant) v. Pyke (1995), 96 C.C.C. (3d) 373, 37 C.R. (4th) 321, 139 N.S.R. (2d) 142 (S.C.).

WHERE FEAR OF SEXUAL OFFENCE / Duty of provincial court judge / Adjudication / Judge may vary recognizance / Other provisions to apply.

810.1 (1) Any person who fears on reasonable grounds that another person will commit an offence under section 151, 152, 155 or 159, subsection 160(2) or (3), section 170 or 171, subsection 173(2) or section 271, 272 or 273, in respect of one or more persons who are under the age of fourteen years, may lay an information before a provincial court judge, whether or not the person or persons in respect of whom it is feared that the offence will be committed are named.

(2) A provincial court judge who receives an information under subsection (1) shall cause the parties to appear before the provincial court judge.

(3) The provincial court judge before whom the parties appear may, if satisfied by the evidence adduced that the informant has reasonable grounds for the fear, order the defendant to enter into a recognizance and comply with the conditions fixed by the provincial court judge, including a condition prohibiting the defendant from engaging in any activity that involves contact with persons under the age of fourteen years and prohibiting the defendant from attending a public park or public swimming area where persons under the age of fourteen years are present or can reasonably be expected to be present, or a daycare centre, schoolground, playground or community centre, for any period fixed by the provincial court judge that does not exceed twelve months.

(4) The provincial court judge may, on application of the informant or the defendant, vary the conditions fixed in the recognizance.

(5) Subsections 810(4) and (5) apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, to recognizances made under this section. 1993, c. 45, s. 11.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Also see s. 161 which allows for the making of a prohibition order where the accused is actually found guilty of one of the offences named in this section. The recognizance made under this section is similar to the recognizance under s. 810 and so reference should be made to cases noted under that section.

SYNOPSIS

This section allows anyone to lay an information before a provincial court judge for the purpose of having the defendant enter into a recognizance including conditions that he not engage in activity that involves contact with persons under 14 years of age and prohibiting him from attending certain places where persons under 14 years of age are likely to be present. The informant must fear, on reasonable grounds, that the defendant will commit one of the specified sexual offences in respect of children under 14 years of age. The judge makes the order where satisfied on evidence that the informant has reasonable grounds for the fear. The maximum duration of the order is 12 months and the conditions may be varied by the judge on application of the informant or the defendant. Note that, unlike s. 810, no express provision is made for committing the defendant to prison if he refuses to sign the recognizance.

ANNOTATIONS

The principles of fundamental justice in s. 7 of the Charter require that there be a residual discretion to issue process. Subsection (2) must therefore be read down so that the word "may" should replace the word "shall": R. v. Budreo (1996), 104 C.C.C. (3d) 245 (Ont. Ct. (Gen. Div.)).

The inclusion of the term "community centre" in the restrictions imposed under subsec. (3), without a requirement that children be reasonably expected to be there, is overly broad and therefore a violation of s. 7 of the Charter. The appropriate remedy is to declare the term "community centre" inoperative. The provision is otherwise valid: R. v. Budreo, supra.

BREACH OF RECOGNIZANCE.

811. A person bound by a recognizance under section 810 or 810.1 who commits a breach of the recognizance is guilty of

- (a) an indictable offence and liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years; or
- (b) an offence punishable on summary conviction. R.S., c. C-34, s. 746; 1993, c. 45, s. 11; 1994, c. 44, s. 82.

ANNOTATIONS

An allegation that the defendant violated the terms of a recognizance made under s. 810 must be charged under this section. The general provisions in s. 145 respecting breach of recognizance are not applicable: R. v. Simanek (1993), 82 C.C.C. (3d) 576 (Ont. C.A.).

Appeal

---

DEFINITION OF "APPEAL COURT".

812. For the purposes of sections 813 to 828 "appeal court" means

- (a) in the Province of Ontario, the Ontario Court (General Division) sitting in the region, district or county or group of counties where the adjudication was made;
- (b) in the Province of Quebec, the Superior Court;
- (c) in the Provinces of Nova Scotia and British Columbia, the Supreme Court;
- (d) in the Provinces of New Brunswick, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Court of Queen's Bench;
- (e) [Repealed. 1992, c. 51, s. 43(2).]
- (f) in the Province of Prince Edward Island, the Trial Division of the Supreme Court;
- (g) in the Province of Newfoundland, the Trial Division of the Supreme Court;
- (h) in the Yukon Territory and Northwest Territories, a judge of the Supreme Court thereof. R.S., c. C-34, s. 747; 1972, c. 13, s. 65, c. 17, s. 2; 1974-75-76,

c. 19, s. 1; 1978-79, c. 11, s. 10; R.S.C. 1985, c. 11 (1st Supp.), s. 2; c. 27 (2nd Supp.), s. 10.; 1990, c. 16, s. 7; 1990, c. 17, s. 15; 1992, c. 51, s. 43.

NOTE: Paragraph (h) re-enacted 1993, c. 28, s. 78 (to come into force April 1, 1999). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

(h) in the Yukon Territory, the Northwest Territories and Nunavut, a judge of the Supreme Court.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 813 confers rights of appeal. Section 815 deals with filing of notice of appeal. Appeal procedures are governed by ss. 821 to 823 and s. 482(2). Sections 816 and 819 authorize the judicial interim release of an appellant who was a defendant in summary conviction proceedings.

Sections 817 and 818 govern appeals by a prosecutor other than the Attorney General or counsel acting on his behalf. Appeals under s. 813 are determined on the record in accordance with ss. 683 and 689, except for ss. 683(3) and 686(5), made applicable to summary conviction appeals by s. 822(1). An appeal may be determined by a trial de novo under s. 822(4) to (7) in certain circumstances. Further appeal lies under s. 839(1)(a).

SYNOPSIS

This section defines “appeal court” for each of the provinces and territories for the purposes of appeals from summary conviction.

ANNOTATIONS

Para. (c) – A County Court Judge who has heard summary conviction appeals in criminal proceedings has jurisdiction to deliver judgment after his resignation on reserved appeals if provincial legislation so provides. Such legislation is validly enacted under the province’s power to legislate with respect to the constitution, maintenance and organization of the Courts pursuant to s. 92(14) of the British North America Act, 1867: R. v. Ritcey (1980), 50 C.C.C. (2d) 481, 106 D.L.R. (3d) 1 (S.C.C.) (7:0).

APPEAL BY DEFENDANT, INFORMANT OR ATTORNEY GENERAL.

813. Except where otherwise provided by law,

- (a) the defendant in proceedings under this Part may appeal to the appeal court
  - (i) from a conviction or order made against him,
  - (ii) against a sentence passed on him, or
  - (iii) against a verdict of unfit to stand trial or not criminally responsible on account of mental disorder; and
- (b) the informant, the Attorney General or his agent in proceedings under this Part may appeal to the appeal court
  - (i) from an order that stays proceedings on an information or dismisses an information,
  - (ii) against a sentence passed upon a defendant, or
  - (iii) against a verdict of not criminally responsible on account of mental disorder or unfit to stand trial, and the Attorney General of Canada or his agent has the same rights of appeal in proceedings instituted at the instance of the Government of Canada and conducted by or on behalf of that Government as the Attorney General of a province or his agent has under this paragraph. R.S., c. C-34, s. 748; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 180; 1991, c. 43, s. 9.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See s. 812 for definition of “appeal court”, s. 785 for “informant” and “proceedings” and s. 2 for “Attorney General”. “Prosecutor” as used throughout Part XXVII does not appear in s. 813. See ss. 675 and 676 for corresponding rights of appeal in proceedings by indictment by accused and Attorney General respectively. Also see reference cited under s. 812.

See s. 672.1 for definition of "verdict of not criminally responsible on account of mental disorder" and s. 2 for definition of "unfit to stand trial".

SYNOPSIS

This section gives rights of appeal, except where otherwise provided by law, to defendants against conviction, order, sentence, finding of unfitness or verdict of not criminally responsible and to informants or the Crown (provincial or federal) against stay, dismissal or sentence.

ANNOTATIONS

Right of appeal [para. (a)(i)] – It is the nature of the trial proceedings, and not the ultimate conviction that determines the appeal procedure so where a summary conviction is the result of an indictable offence trial, appeal only lies under Part XXI of the Code: R. v. Yaworski (1959), 124 C.C.C. 151, 31 C.R. 55 (Man. C.A.).

Imposition of sentence is not a prerequisite to the hearing of an appeal against conviction: R. v. Benson (1978), 40 C.C.C. (2d) 271 (B.C.C.A.); R. v. MacNeil (1979), 46 C.C.C. (2d) 383 (Ont. C.A.). Contra: R. v. Hofer (1977), 36 C.C.C. (2d) 426, [1977] 4 W.W.R. 645 (Man. Co. Ct.).

Procedure [para. (a)(ii)] – Unless an appeal is specifically lodged against sentence the appeal court has no jurisdiction to deal with it: R. v. Praisley, [1965] 1 C.C.C. 316, 44 C.R. 296 (B.C.C.A.), and R. v. Ferencsik, [1970] 4 C.C.C. 166, 10 C.R.N.S. 273 (Ont. C.A.).

Crown appeal generally [para. (b)(i)] – Where a summary conviction Court refuses to dispose of a case on the ground that it lacks jurisdiction the only remedy is for the informant to mandamus the Court into dismissing the information and then appeal that dismissal: R. ex rel. Hickman v. Marshall (1960), 127 C.C.C. 76, 32 C.R. 271 (Ont. C.A.). [However, also see s. 830.]

Similarly where before plea objections are raised to an information and the summary conviction Court endorses it "no jurisdiction" no appeal lies under this section: R. ex rel. Lees v. Wacker et al. (1958), 121 C.C.C. 185, 28 C.R. 214 (Ont. C.A.).

A notice of appeal styled as "Her Majesty the Queen, (Informant) Appellant" and signed on her behalf by the Attorney-General's Agent as her solicitor is proper: R. v. Genser & Sons Ltd., [1969] 3 C.C.C. 87, 6 C.R.N.S. 140 (Man. C.A.).

It was held prior to the amendment of this paragraph permitting an appeal against a stay of proceedings as well as a dismissal that this paragraph gives the Crown a right of appeal only where the disposition by the summary conviction Court is in the nature of a judgment or verdict of acquittal or what is tantamount to an acquittal, that is, a disposition made after the issue raised in the information has been tried on the merits, in law or on the facts. An order quashing an information on an objection being taken to its form does not give a right of appeal. Dispositions which would give rise to a right of appeal are, for example, where the charge is dismissed on the ground that the information does not disclose an offence known to law, where the offence alleged is ultra vires, or where the prosecutor fails to appear. Where the summary conviction Court dismisses an information for failure of the Crown to supply particulars as previously ordered, such disposition gives the Crown a right of appeal only where the failure to provide particulars left the information in a state where it disclosed no offence known to law. Otherwise, the order is not an acquittal or tantamount to an acquittal as it does not purport to dispose of the issue raised in the information on the merits, in law or on the facts, and the Crown's remedy is by way of mandamus: R. v. Canadian Pacific Ltd. (1976), 32 C.C.C. (2d) 14, [1977] 1 W.W.R. 203 (Alta. S.C. App. Div.) (5:0).

An order quashing an information for failure to comply with s. 581 does not constitute an order dismissing an information and the appeal should be taken pursuant to s. 830: R. v. Moore (1987), 38 C.C.C. (3d) 471, 2 M.V.R. (2d) 169 (Ont. C.A.).

Crown appeal from dismissal of information – An order dismissing an information for want of prosecution is an appealable order: R. v. Allen (1960), 128 C.C.C. 409, 34 C.R. 240 (B.C.Co.Ct.); Re R. and Yanke (1983), 4 C.C.C. (3d) 26 (Sask. C.A.).

It is not necessary for appeal purposes that a formal dismissal order be taken out; it is sufficient if the trial Court made a finding of not guilty: R. v. Leblanc, [1964] 3 C.C.C. 40 (N.S.Co.Ct.).

Where a piece of evidence essential to the success of the prosecution is ruled inadmissible the Crown may elect to call no further evidence and proceed immediately to appeal upon dismissal of the charge: R. v. Aleksich (1979), 50 C.C.C. (2d) 62 (B.C.C.A.); Re R. and Croquet (1973), 12 C.C.C. (2d) 331, 23 C.R.N.S. 374, [1973] 5 W.W.R. 654 (B.C.C.A.); and similarly R. v. Davis and Lakehead Bag Co. Ltd. (1977), 34 C.C.C. (2d) 388, 37 C.R.N.S. 302 (Ont. C.A.) where as a result of certain rulings the verdict was a “foregone conclusion”.

Dismissal of a charge prior to plea on the basis that the enactment under which the charge was laid is ultra vires is a dismissal within the meaning of this paragraph against which the Crown may appeal: R. v. Miracle Mart Inc. (1982), 68 C.C.C. (2d) 242, 67 C.P.R. (2d) 80 (Que. S.C.).

Appeal by informant – An appellant is not entitled to be represented by an agent: R. v. Hammond (1972), 24 C.R.N.S. 309 (Ont.Co.Ct.).

An appeal against dismissal brought by the informant does not abate with his death: R. v. Fillmore (1974), 17 C.C.C. (2d) 66, 27 C.R.N.S. 357 (N.S.Co.Ct.).

While the informant has an unfettered right to appeal to the summary conviction appeal court from an order staying proceedings on an information or dismissing an information whether or not the prosecution at trial was conducted by an agent of the Attorney-General, the Attorney-General or his agent may intervene, either by taking carriage of the appeal itself or by indicating that he does not wish that the matter be further prosecuted by way of appeal. Where there is such active opposition by the Attorney-General or his agent, then the appeal by the informant must be dismissed: Bouree v. Parsons (1986), 29 C.C.C. (3d) 126 (Ont. Dist. Ct.).

MANITOBA AND ALBERTA / Saskatchewan / British Columbia / Yukon and Northwest Territories.

814. (1) In the Provinces of Manitoba and Alberta, an appeal under section 813 shall be heard at the sittings of the appeal court that is held nearest to the place where the cause of the proceedings arose, but the judge of the appeal court may, on the application of one of the parties, appoint another place for the hearing of the appeal.

(2) In the Province of Saskatchewan, an appeal under section 813 shall be heard at the sittings of the appeal court at the judicial centre nearest to the place where the adjudication was made, but the judge of the appeal court may, on the application of one of the parties, appoint another place for the hearing of the appeal.

(3) In the Province of British Columbia, an appeal under section 813 shall be heard at the sittings of the appeal court that is held nearest to the place where the adjudication was made, but the judge of the appeal court may, on the application of one of the parties, appoint another place for the hearing of the appeal.

(4) In the Yukon Territory and the Northwest Territories, an appeal under section 813 shall be heard at the place where the cause of the proceedings arose or at the place nearest thereto where a court is appointed to be held. R.S., c. C-34, s. 749; 1984, c. 41, s. 2.

NOTE: Subsection (4) re-enacted 1993, c. 28, s. 78 (to come into force April 1, 1999).

The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

Territories.

(4) In the Yukon Territory, the Northwest Territories and Nunavut, an appeal under section 813 shall be heard at the place where the cause of the proceedings arose or at the place nearest thereto where a court is appointed to be held.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 822(4) to (7) is authority to have appeal heard and determined as trial de novo. Also see references cited under s. 812.

NOTICE OF APPEAL / Extension of time.

815. (1) An appellant who proposes to appeal to the appeal court shall give notice of appeal in such manner and within such period as may be directed by rules of court.

(2) The appeal court or a judge thereof may at any time extend the time within which notice of appeal may be given. R.S., c. C-34, s. 750; 1972, c. 13, s. 66; 1974-75-76, c. 93, s. 89.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 482(2) is authority for the appeal court to pass rules consistent with the Criminal Code or other federal Acts governing procedures on appeals under s. 813. These rules determine the form of the notice of appeal, filing and service provisions.

An order, conviction or sentence must be appealed to challenge its validity under s. 820(2) and the onus is on the accused to establish appeal. Under s. 813, payment of fine does not waive accused's right of appeal.

Payment of a fine or other pecuniary penalty may be suspended by the court pending the determination of the appeal as authorized by the incorporation of s. 683(5) by s. 822(1). Section 689 authorizes stay in respect of restitution orders and is available to summary conviction appeals under s. 822(1).

SYNOPSIS

This section states that the appellant shall give notice of appeal according to the rules of court and that the appeal court or a judge thereof may extend the time for notice to be given.

ANNOTATIONS

Notice of appeal [subsec. (1)] – Failure to include the appellant's address for service as required by the rule of Court is not fatal to hearing of the appeal. The proper procedure is to permit amendment of the notice and proceed with the hearing of the appeal: R. v. Saad (1978), 45 C.C.C. (2d) 318 (Que. C.A.).

Extension of time generally / Extension of time sought by Crown – The Court has no power to grant the Crown an extension of time ex parte without notice to the accused whether the application for the extension is made after expiration of the appeal period: Neal v. A.-G. Sask. et al. (1977), 56 C.C.C. (2d) 128, [1977] 2 S.C.R. 624, 115 D.L.R. (3d) 20 (9:0); or before expiration of the appeal period: R. v. Taylor (1980), 56 C.C.C. (2d) 86, 28 N.B.R. (2d) 704 (Q.B.).

In R. v. Ruffo (1982), 1 C.C.C. (3d) 358 (Ont. C.A.) the Court considered Neal v. A.-G. Sask. et al., supra, but held that in exceptional circumstances the Court could grant the Crown an extension of time on an ex parte application as where it was impossible to give notice of the application because the respondent could not be found. In the absence of the most unusual circumstances there must be evidence by way of affidavit, documentary evidence or viva voce testimony as to the basis for the ex parte application. On the other hand, where objection to an order for an extension of time is taken at the hearing of the appeal it would be open to the appeal Court to grant an extension, on notice at that time, in which event the notice of appeal could then be re-served.

The order extending time for service on the accused/respondent must also provide for an extension of time in which to file the notice of appeal. A Judge on an application for extension of time has no power to validate the prior service of a notice of appeal made out of time. Where the notice of appeal is served out of time it must be re-served within the extended time: R. v. Holmes (1982), 2 C.C.C. (3d) 471, 18 M.V.R. 92 (Ont. C.A.). Contra: R. v. Fenrich, [1985] 6 W.W.R. 269 (Sask. Q.B.), where it was held that the court has power to grant an order nunc pro tunc to validate service already made.

There being no evidence that the Crown had an intention to appeal within the appeal period and no explanation having been offered for the long delay an extension of time should not be granted: R. v. Osgoode Sand & Gravel Ltd. (1978), 41 C.C.C. (2d) 503 (Ont. Div. Ct.).

Principles in granting extension of time – Although subsec. (2) was probably enacted to prevent miscarriages of justice, extensions of time should only be granted for substantial reasons and in exercising his discretion a Judge should consider: (1) whether the party applying has shown a bona fide intention to appeal while the right of appeal existed; (2) whether it is at least arguable that the judgment sought to be appealed is wrong; and (3) whether the appellant acted with reasonable diligence or has a reasonable excuse for the delay in not having launched his appeal within the prescribed time: R. v. Cole (1976), 33 C.C.C. (2d) 242 (Nfld. Dist. Ct.).

Setting aside dismissal of appeal – The appeal Court has a discretionary jurisdiction to rescind a notice of abandonment filed by the accused, set aside the dismissal of his appeal and restore the appeal for hearing on the merits: R. v. Robertson (1978), 45 C.C.C. (2d) 344 (Ont. C.A.).

Interim Release of Appellant

UNDERTAKING OR RECOGNIZANCE OF APPELLANT / Application of certain provisions of section 525.

816. (1) A person who was the defendant in proceedings before a summary conviction court and by whom an appeal is taken under section 813 shall, if he is in custody, remain in custody unless the appeal court at which the appeal is to be heard orders that the appellant be released

- (a) on his giving an undertaking to the appeal court, without conditions or with such conditions as the appeal court directs, to surrender himself into custody in accordance with the order,
- (b) on his entering into a recognizance without sureties in such amount, with such conditions, if any, as the appeal court directs, but without deposit of money or other valuable security, or
- (c) on his entering into a recognizance with or without sureties in such amount, with such conditions, if any, as the appeal court directs, and on his depositing with that appeal court such sum of money or other valuable security as the appeal court directs,

and the person having the custody of the appellant shall, where the appellant complies with the order, forthwith release the appellant.

(2) The provisions of subsections 525(5), (6) and (7) apply with such modifications as the circumstances require in respect of a person who has been released from custody under subsection (1). R.S., c. C-34, s. 752; R.S., c. 2 (2nd Supp.), s. 16; 1974-75-76, c. 39, s. 91; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 181.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 819 permits the hearing of an appeal to be expedited if not commenced within 30 days of the notice of appeal. There is no statutory right of review of an order made under s. 816 nor under subsec. (2) in the application of the provisions of s. 525(7).

Section 679(3) and (4) govern judicial interim release in indictable appeal proceedings.

Where the appellant under s. 813 is a private prosecutor, he is required by s. 817 to give an undertaking or enter into a recognizance. A private prosecutor must appear personally or by counsel at the sittings of the appeal court. Section 818 governs review by the court of appeal of an order of a justice under s. 817.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides for the granting of bail pending appeal to an accused appealing the decision of a summary conviction court. The court can order that the accused be released from custody on an undertaking or recognizance with or without sureties on deposit.

ANNOTATIONS

Bearing in mind that, generally, summary conviction offences are less serious, the principles governing release pending appeal on indictable matters as set out in s. 679 apply on an application under this section. Further, in Ontario, no rules having been adopted as to the proper procedure to be followed on the application, the provisions of the Criminal Rules relating to bail pending appeal in indictable matters should be applied by analogy: R. v. Simpson (1978), 44 C.C.C. (2d) 109 (Ont. Co. Ct.).

A judge of the summary conviction appeal Court has an inherent jurisdiction to stay the terms of a probation order pending an appeal to that Court: R. v. Anderson (1982), 70 C.C.C. (2d) 253 (Ont. Co. Ct.).

UNDERTAKING OR RECOGNIZANCE OF PROSECUTOR / Condition / Appeals by Attorney General / Form of undertaking or recognizance.

817. (1) The prosecutor in proceedings before a summary conviction court by whom an appeal is taken under section 813 shall, forthwith after filing the notice of appeal and proof of service thereof in accordance with section 815, appear before a justice, and the justice shall, after giving the prosecutor and the respondent a reasonable opportunity to be heard, order that the prosecutor

(a) give an undertaking as prescribed in this section; or

(b) enter into a recognizance in such amount, with or without sureties and with or without deposit of money or other valuable security, as the justice directs.

(2) The condition of an undertaking or recognizance given or entered into under this section is that the prosecutor will appear personally or by counsel at the sittings of the appeal court at which the appeal is to be heard.

(3) This section does not apply in respect of an appeal taken by the Attorney General or by counsel acting on behalf of the Attorney General.

(4) An undertaking under this section may be in Form 14 and a recognizance under this section may be in Form 32. R.S., c. 2 (2nd Supp.), s. 16.

CROSS-REFERENCES

An order of a justice is reviewable by the court of appeal under s. 818.

See s. 785 for definition of "prosecutor", "proceedings" and "summary conviction court" which apply strictly to Part XXVII. Section 816 contains the judicial interim release provisions where the appellant is the accused.

See also references cited under s. 816.

SYNOPSIS

Where the prosecutor, other than the Attorney General, is the appellant an undertaking or recognizance, with or without sureties or deposit containing a condition with respect to appearing for the hearing must be entered into before a justice of the peace. Both the prosecutor and the respondent must be given the opportunity to be heard before the justice.

ANNOTATIONS

The failure to give the respondent an opportunity to be heard is a substantive, not procedural, error and a loss of the appeal Court's jurisdiction follows: R. v. Esam Construction Ltd. (1974), 15 C.C.C. (2d) 335, 2 O.R. (2d) 344 (H.C.J.).

In Re Broadfoot and The Queen (1977), 35 C.C.C. (2d) 493 (Ont. C.A.) it was held that this section is mandatory and while compliance therewith is not a condition precedent to the right of appeal it is a condition precedent to the hearing of the appeal.

APPLICATION TO APPEAL COURT FOR REVIEW / Disposition of application by appeal court / Effect of order.

818. (1) Where a justice makes an order under section 817, either the appellant or the respondent may, before or at any time during the hearing of the appeal, apply to the appeal court for a review of the order made by the justice.

(2) On the hearing of an application under this section, the appeal court, after giving the appellant and the respondent a reasonable opportunity to be heard, shall

(a) dismiss the application; or

(b) if the person applying for the review shows cause, allow the application, vacate the order made by the justice and make the order that in the opinion of the appeal court should have been made.

(3) An order made under this section shall have the same force and effect as if it had been made by the justice. R.S., c. 2 (2nd Supp.), s. 16; 1974-75-76, c. 93, s. 91.1.

CROSS-REFERENCES

No similar right of review exists where a judicial interim release order has been determined respecting an accused who is an appellant under s. 819.

See references cited under s. 816.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides that either party may apply to the summary conviction appeal court to review the order made by a justice of the peace with respect to the undertaking or recognizance of the appellant/prosecutor (see s. 817).

APPLICATION TO FIX DATE FOR HEARING OF APPEAL / Order fixing date.

819. (1) Where, in the case of an appellant who has been convicted by a summary conviction court and who is in custody pending the hearing of his appeal, the hearing of his appeal has not commenced within thirty days from the day on which notice of his appeal was given in accordance with the rules referred to in section 815, the person having the custody of the appellant shall, forthwith upon the expiration of those thirty days, apply to the appeal court to fix a date for the hearing of the appeal.

(2) On receiving an application under subsection (1), the appeal court shall, after giving the prosecutor a reasonable opportunity to be heard, fix a date for the hearing of the appeal and give such directions as it thinks necessary for expediting the hearing of the appeal. R.S., c. 2 (2nd Supp.), s. 16; 1974-75-76, c. 93, s. 92.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See s. 525 for similar provision regarding delays in trial proceedings where accused is charged with an offence not listed in s. 469.

Section 526 is authority for expediting proceedings where accused appears before a court under Part XVI. Section 679(10) confers authority on a judge of the court of appeal in indictable matters.

SYNOPSIS

If the appeal of an appellant who is in custody has not commenced within 30 days of the filing of the notice of appeal the person who has custody of the appellant shall apply forthwith for a hearing date (subsec. (1)).

The court, in setting the date, may give such directions as are necessary to expedite the matter. The prosecutor must be given a reasonable opportunity to be heard before the date is set (subsec. (2)).

PAYMENT OF FINE NOT A WAIVER OF APPEAL / Presumption.

820. (1) A person does not waive his right of appeal under section 813 by reason only that he pays the fine imposed upon conviction, without in any way indicating an intention to appeal or reserving the right to appeal.

(2) A conviction, order or sentence shall be deemed not to have been appealed against until the contrary is shown. R.S., c. C-34, s. 753.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 683(5) permits the suspension of pecuniary penalty obligations pending appeal.

Section 689 permits the suspension, pending appeal, of a restitution order under ss. 725 to 727. The appeal court has, under s. 822(1), similar authority in summary conviction appeals under s. 813.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides that the payment of a fine does not act as a waiver of the right to appeal (subsec. (1)). An appeal is deemed not to be taken until the contrary is shown (subsec. (2)).

Procedure on Appeal

NOTIFICATION AND TRANSMISSION OF CONVICTION, ETC. / Saving / Appellant to furnish transcript of evidence.

821. (1) Where a notice of appeal has been given in accordance with the rules referred to in section 815, the clerk of the appeal court shall notify the summary conviction court that made the conviction or order appealed from or imposed the sentence appealed against of the appeal and on receipt of the notification that summary conviction court shall transmit the conviction, order or order of dismissal and all other material in its possession in connection with the proceedings to the appeal court before the time when the appeal is to be heard, or within such further time as the appeal court may direct, and the material shall be kept by the clerk of the appeal court with the records of the appeal court.

(2) An appeal shall not be dismissed by the appeal court by reason only that a person other than the appellant failed to comply with the provisions of this Part relating to appeals.

(3) Where the evidence on a trial before a summary conviction court has been taken by a stenographer duly sworn or by a sound recording apparatus, the appellant shall, unless the appeal court otherwise orders or the rules referred to in section 815 otherwise provide, cause a transcript thereof, certified by the stenographer or in accordance with subsection 540(6), as the case may be, to be furnished to the appeal court and the respondent for use on the appeal. R.S., c. C-34, s. 754; 1972, c. 13, s. 67; 1974-75-76, c. 93, s. 93.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Evidence of witnesses in summary conviction proceedings is governed by the provisions relating to preliminary inquiries in Part XVIII, under s. 801(3).

Section 822 provides the authority of the appeal court to hear appeals under s. 813. The appeal is usually determined on the record of the lower court but a trial de novo under s. 822(4) to (7) may be necessary. Under s. 825, the appeal court may dismiss an appeal for appellant's failure to comply with orders under ss. 816 and 817 or failure to prosecute the appeal. See ss. 826 to 828 for cost provisions.

SYNOPSIS

This section deals with the transfer of the record from the trial court to the summary conviction appeal court. The appellant will not be held responsible if another person fails to comply with these provisions (subsecs. (1) and (2)).

Unless the appeal court orders otherwise it is the appellant's responsibility to obtain, file and serve transcripts of the evidence, if available (subsec. (3)).

CERTAIN SECTIONS APPLICABLE TO APPEALS / New trial / Order of detention or release / Trial de novo / Former evidence / Appeal against sentence / General provisions re appeals.

822. (1) Where an appeal is taken under section 813 in respect of any conviction, acquittal, sentence, verdict or order, sections 683 to 689, with the exception of subsections 683(3) and 686(5), apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require.

(2) Where an appeal court orders a new trial, it shall be held before a summary conviction court other than the court that tried the defendant in the first instance, unless the appeal court directs that the new trial be held before the summary conviction court that tried the accused in the first instance.

(3) Where an appeal court orders a new trial, it may make such order for the release or detention of the appellant pending the trial as may be made by a justice pursuant to section 515 and the order may be enforced in the same manner as if it had been made by a justice under that section, and the provisions of Part XVI apply with such modifications as the circumstances require to the order.

(4) Notwithstanding subsections (1) to (3), where an appeal is taken under section 813 and where, because of the condition of the record of the trial in the summary conviction court or for any other reason, the appeal court, on application of the defendant, the informant, the Attorney General or his agent, is of the opinion that the interests of justice would be better served by hearing and determining the appeal by holding a trial de novo, the appeal court may order that the appeal shall be heard by way of trial de novo in accordance with such rules as may be made under section 482 and for this purpose the provisions of sections 793 to 809 apply with such modifications as the circumstances require.

(5) The appeal court may, for the purpose of hearing and determining an appeal under subsection (4), permit the evidence of any witness taken before the summary conviction court to be read if that evidence has been authenticated in accordance with section 540 and if

(a) the appellant and respondent consent,

- (b) the appeal court is satisfied that the attendance of the witness cannot reasonably be obtained, or
  - (c) by reason of the formal nature of the evidence or otherwise the court is satisfied that the opposite party will not be prejudiced,
- and any evidence that is read under the authority of this subsection has the same force and effect as if the witness had given the evidence before the appeal court.
- (6) Where an appeal is taken under subsection (4) against sentence, the appeal court shall, unless the sentence is one fixed by law, consider the fitness of the sentence appealed against and may, on such evidence, if any, as it thinks fit to require or receive, by order,
- (a) dismiss the appeal, or
  - (b) vary the sentence within the limits prescribed by law for the offence of which the defendant was convicted,
- and in making any order under paragraph (b) the appeal court may take into account any time spent in custody by the defendant as a result of the offence.
- (7) The following provisions apply in respect of appeals under subsection (4):
- (a) where an appeal is based on an objection to an information or any process, judgment shall not be given in favour of the appellant
    - (i) for any alleged defect therein in substance or in form, or
    - (ii) for any variance between the information or process and the evidence adduced at the trial, unless it is shown
    - (iii) that the objection was taken at the trial, and
    - (iv) that an adjournment of the trial was refused notwithstanding that the variance referred to in subparagraph (ii) had deceived or misled the appellant; and
  - (b) where an appeal is based on a defect in a conviction or an order, judgment shall not be given in favour of the appellant, but the court shall make an order curing the defect. R.S., c. C-34, s. 755; R.S., c. 2 (2nd Supp.), s. 17; 1974-75-76, c. 93, s. 94; 1984, c. 40, s. 20; 1991, c. 43, s. 9.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 482(2) contains authority for the appeal court to make rules under s. 813. Such rules require the approval of the Lieutenant Governor in Council and must be consistent with the Criminal Code and other federal Acts. The nature of the rules passed under s. 482(2) prescribes the procedure to be followed. Procedure on trial de novo imitates that prescribed in trial proceedings before a summary conviction court and includes the provisions of Parts XVI and XVIII (compelling accused's appearance), as well as those of Parts XX and XX.1 provided they are consistent with Part XXVII, which are incorporated by s. 795 with modifications.

An accused who is an appellant may be remanded or directed to attend for observation in accordance with s. 681 under s. 823. Costs may be awarded under s. 826. Appeal may be dismissed under s. 825 for failure to appear or want of prosecution.

SYNOPSIS

The provisions apply to verdicts which include a verdict of unfit to stand trial or not criminally responsible on account of mental disorder.

Certain of the provisions applicable to appeals in indictable matters apply to appeals under s. 813 (subsec. (1)).

Unless the appeal court directs otherwise a new trial is to be heard by a different judge (subsec. (2)).

The appeal court can grant bail or continue detention pending a new trial (subsec. (3)).

If it determines that such would be in the interests of justice an appeal court can hear an appeal by way of a trial de novo, on application of one of the parties (subsec. (4)). For this purpose the court can permit evidence from the trial to be “read in” (subsec. (5)).

On a sentence appeal, the court will consider the fitness of the sentence imposed and may vary the same within the limits prescribed by law (subsec. (6)).

Technical objections to the information or process will not succeed unless (a) the objection in question was raised at trial, and (b) in the case of a variance between the information or process and the evidence, an adjournment of the trial was refused. The appeal court may cure any defect in the formal conviction or order (subsec. (7)).

ANNOTATIONS

Representation by counsel [subsec. (1)] – In R. v. Chmilar, [1963] 3 C.C.C. 373, 40 C.R. 105 (B.C.C.A.), it was held that attendance of counsel at the date set for hearing a summary conviction appeal does not constitute waiver of objection to jurisdiction.

An appellant may not be represented by an agent: R. v. Duggan (1976), 31 C.C.C. (2d) 167 (Ont. C.A.).

Procedure – While the mere filing of the appeal does not stay or suspend the operation of the conviction, order or sentence appealed against the appeal Court does have the power to stay or suspend the operation of an order which is subject to review on an appeal pending before the Court: R. v. Borger Industries Ltd. and Ladco Co. Ltd. (1979), 49 C.C.C. (2d) 527, [1979] 6 W.W.R. 474 (Man. Co. Ct.).

Nature of jurisdiction to review findings of fact – The summary convictions appeal Court has no jurisdiction to retry the case. Its jurisdiction is limited to determining whether the evidence is so weak that a verdict of guilty was unreasonable: R. v. Colbeck (1978), 42 C.C.C. (2d) 117 (Ont. C.A.); R. v. Arthur (1981), 63 C.C.C. (2d) 117, [1982] 1 W.W.R. 122 (B.C.C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused December 21, 1981. However, this jurisdiction is not limited to cases where there is no evidence but like the Court of Appeal in indictable matters under s. 686(1)(a)(i), includes the power to allow an appeal where the verdict cannot be supported by the evidence or is unreasonable: R. v. Ponsford (1978), 41 C.C.C. (2d) 433, 6 Alta. L.R. (2d) 370 (S.C. App. Div.). And even where the conviction turns on questions of credibility, if the Court is satisfied that the basis for a finding of credibility is so tenuous that it would be an unreasonable basis for a conviction: R. v. Saikaley (1979), 52 C.C.C. (2d) 191 (Ont. C.A.).

Crown appeal on issues of fact – Despite the changes in procedure governing summary conviction appeals so that the primary procedure is an appeal on the record rather than by way of trial de novo, the Crown may appeal the dismissal of a charge on a question of fact alone. The amendments change the procedure on appeal but not the jurisdiction of the appeal court: R. v. Antonelli (1977), 38 C.C.C. (2d) 206 (B.C.C.A.); R. v. Purves and Purves (1979), 50 C.C.C. (2d) 211, 12 C.R. (3d) 362, [1980] 1 W.W.R. 148 (Man. C.A.); R. v. Wilke (1980), 56 C.C.C. (2d) 61 (Ont. C.A.); R. v. Nelson, [1979] 3 W.W.R. 97, 3 Sask. R. 45 (C.A.); R. v. Sall (1990), 54 C.C.C. (3d) 48 (Nfld. C.A.).

At least where the Crown appeal proceeds on the record in the lower court rather than by way of trial de novo, the availability of an appeal on questions of fact does not violate the Charter of Rights and Freedoms guarantees to fundamental justice, equality and protection against double jeopardy: R. v. Century 21 Ramos Realty Inc. and Ramos (1987), 32 C.C.C. (3d) 353, 56 C.R. (3d) 150, 37 D.L.R. (4th) 649 (Ont. C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused 44 D.L.R. (4th) vii, 22 O.A.C. 319n, 80 N.R. 313n.

Although the Crown has a right of appeal on questions of fact the limitations on the appeal court's jurisdiction in appeals by the accused also apply to Crown appeals and, in particular, the appeal court has no right to retry the case: R. v. Sall, supra.

It may be that where the Crown appeal is not on a question of law alone the appeal Court's only power is to order a new trial, and that the Court would have no power to enter a conviction in view of the wording of s. 686(4)(b)(ii) which is applicable mutatis mutandis and which founds the Court's jurisdiction to enter a conviction on a Crown appeal on the error in law: R. v. Medicine Hat Greenhouses Ltd. and German (1981), 59 C.C.C. (2d) 257, [1981] 3 W.W.R. 587 (Alta. C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused 30 A.R. 360n, 38 N.R. 180n. Also see the discussion of this point in R. v. Century 21 Ramos Realty Inc. and Ramos, supra, and R. v. Sall, supra, where however the court left the issue open.

Trial de novo [subsec. (4)] – The words “or for any other reason” should be given a restrictive interpretation and the trial de novo procedure should be resorted to only where there was a denial of natural justice in the summary conviction Court or a deficiency in the transcript of the trial. In particular a trial de novo should not be ordered solely because the accused, having elected to call no evidence in the summary conviction Court, wishes to present a defence on appeal. Nor should the Court allow such evidence to be called on the appeal under the power to hear fresh evidence pursuant to s. 683 of the Criminal Code made applicable to summary conviction appeals to subsec. (1): R. v. Faulkner (1977), 37 C.C.C. (2d) 26, 39 C.R.N.S. 331 (N.S. Co. Ct.).

Although the circumstances did not warrant the ordering of a trial de novo the accused may still be entitled to have evidence admitted on the appeal as fresh evidence pursuant to s. 683: R. v. Winters (1981), 59 C.C.C. (2d) 454, 21 C.R. (3d) 230 (B.C.C.A.).

However, in appropriate circumstances the discovery of fresh evidence may be grounds for allowing an application under subsec. (4): R. v. Steinmiller (1979), 47 C.C.C. (2d) 151 (Ont. C.A.).

On the hearing of an application under subsec. (4) the judge has no jurisdiction to dispose of the appeal itself and allow a new trial: R. v. Steinmiller, supra.

Where, because of the state of the record, the Court has ordered that the accused's appeal proceed by way of trial de novo, the Court may allow the appeal and enter an acquittal when neither the informant nor his counsel appear on the date set for the trial de novo: R. v. Lacasse (1979), 55 C.C.C. (2d) 337 (Que. C.A.).

It has now been held that provincial legislation which gave the Crown a right of appeal by way of trial de novo from an acquittal for a provincial offence was of no force and effect by reason of s. 11(h) of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms: Corporation Professionnelles des Medecins du Quebec v. Thibault (1988), 42 C.C.C. (3d) 1, 63 C.R. (3d) 273, [1988] 1 S.C.R. 1033 (6:0). It may well be that similar reasoning would apply to preclude an application by the Crown under this subsection.

Where the transcript is unavailable due to a malfunctioning of the recording equipment an application for a trial de novo on a Crown appeal against an acquittal should be granted: R. v. Street (1981), 60 C.C.C. (2d) 376, 10 Sask. R. 266 (Dist. Ct.).

Sentence appeals [subsec. (6)] – In R. v. Sproule (1978), 39 C.C.C. (2d) 430 (Ont. C.A.) a case decided under the former s. 755(3) which is worded in a similar manner to this subsection the Court of Appeal held that the summary conviction appeal Court had no jurisdiction on an appeal by the accused against his sentence to increase the sentence, at least in the absence of notice by the Crown that it would be seeking such an increase. This decision accords generally with the decision of the Supreme Court of Canada in Hill v. The Queen (No. 2) (1975), 25 C.C.C. (2d) 6, 62 D.L.R. (3d) 193, [1977] 1 S.C.R. 827 which considered an appeal against sentence in an indictable offence under s. 687 and is therefore likely applicable to an ordinary sentence appeal pursuant to subsec. (1).

Defects in information [subsec. (7)] – Where a charge omits or makes a defective statement of an essential element, but contains in substance a statement that the defendant committed the offence, an appellate Court may, if the absence of the correct averment did not cause any substantial wrong or miscarriage of justice, amend the information and affirm the conviction: R. v. Major (1975), 25 C.C.C. (2d) 62, 10 N.S.R. (2d) 348 (S.C. App. Div.), revd on other grounds (1976), 27 C.C.C. (2d) 239n, 14 N.S.R. (2d) 705n (S.C.C.) (9:0). In any event inclusion of the offence section number will provide a reasonable description of the transaction alleged: R. v. Cote (1977), 33 C.C.C. (2d) 353, 73 D.L.R. (3d) 752 (S.C.C.) (6:2).

An information that is duplicitous or multifarious contains a defect apparent on its face and must be raised at trial. Where no objection is taken at trial this subsection prevents the raising of the matter on appeal. Nor may the objection be raised on a further appeal to the Court of Appeal under s. 839(1)(a): R. v. City of Sault Ste. Marie (1976), 30 C.C.C. (2d) 257, 70 D.L.R. (3d) 430 (Ont. C.A.). On further appeal (1978), 40 C.C.C. (2d) 353, 85 D.L.R. (3d) 161, [1978] 2 S.C.R. 1299 (9:0) the Court found that the information was not duplicitous and therefore did not find it necessary to deal with this issue.

823. [Repealed. 1991, c. 43, s. 9.]

ADJOURNMENT.

824. The appeal court may adjourn the hearing of the appeal from time to time as may be necessary. R.S., c. C-34, s. 756.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The hearing of an appeal may be ordered expedited where accused is in custody and the appeal is not commenced within 30 days of notice of appeal, under s. 819(2).

Under s. 825, an appeal may be dismissed for failure to appear or want of prosecution.

ANNOTATIONS

An adjournment for judgment may be made sine die: Hawryluk v. McLellan (1967), 3 C.R.N.S. 66 (Sask.Q.B.).

DISMISSAL FOR FAILURE TO APPEAR OR WANT OF PROSECUTION.

825. The appeal court may, on proof that notice of an appeal has been given and that (a) the appellant has failed to comply with any order made under section 816 or 817 or with the conditions of any undertaking or recognizance given or entered into as prescribed in either of those sections, or (b) the appeal has not been proceeded with or has been abandoned, order that the appeal be dismissed. R.S., c. C-34, s. 757; R.S., c. 2 (2nd Supp.), s. 18.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The appeal court may summarily determine frivolous appeals under s. 795. A similar provision is s. 685 in indictable matters. The court is not given the added authority of s. 825 in indictable matters. Formal notice of the applicable rules passed under s. 482(2) may be abandoned by the provisions of those rules.

ANNOTATIONS

It is open to the appeal Court to find that the appeal has not been proceeded with within the meaning of para. (b) where the appellant has failed to comply with the Rules of the Court requiring the filing of a memorandum at a certain time prior to the hearing: R. v. Clarke (1981), 62 C.C.C. (2d) 442, [1981] 6 W.W.R. 289 (Alta. C.A.).

COSTS.

826. Where an appeal is heard and determined or is abandoned or is dismissed for want of prosecution, the appeal court may make any order with respect to costs that it considers just and reasonable. R.S., c. C-34, s. 758.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 827 provides for remedies in the event of non-payment of costs and directions as to whom costs are payable.

Costs may be awarded under s. 809 in summary conviction trial proceedings if they are consistent with the s. 840 provisions. Section 826 has no similar limitation.

Costs may be awarded under s. 839(3) where a further appeal is brought under s. 839(1)(a).

ANNOTATIONS

It was held in R. v. Masurak (1962), 132 C.C.C. 279, 37 C.R. 5 (Sask. C.A.) that the making of an order for costs of appeal is within the discretion of the judge. His failing to do so does not raise a question of law upon which to base an appeal to the Court of Appeal.

The power to award costs under this section includes the power to award costs against the Crown: R. v. Ouellette (1979), 50 C.C.C. (2d) 346 (Que. C.A.), affd 52 C.C.C. (2d) 336, [1980] 1 S.C.R. 568, 15 C.R. (3d) 372 (7:0).

The appeal court has the power to order imprisonment of the appellant in default of payment of costs: R. v. Duguay (1990), 57 C.C.C. (3d) 309 (Que. C.A.).

Provincial legislation limiting costs against the Crown to $50 is inapplicable to criminal proceedings: R. v. Hughes (1981), 60 C.C.C. (2d) 16, 31 Nfld. & P.E.I.R. 349 (P.E.I.S.C. in banco).

TO WHOM COSTS PAYABLE, AND WHEN / Certificate of non-payment of costs / Committal.

827. (1) Where the appeal court orders the appellant or respondent to pay costs, the order shall direct that the costs be paid to the clerk of the court, to be paid by him to the person entitled to them, and shall fix the period within which the costs shall be paid.

(2) Where costs are not paid in full within the period fixed for payment and the person who has been ordered to pay them has not been bound by a recognizance to pay them, the clerk of the court shall, on application by the person entitled to the costs, or by any person on his behalf, and on payment of any fee to which the clerk of the court is entitled, issue a certificate in Form 42 certifying that the costs or a part thereof, as the case may be, have not been paid.

(3) A justice having jurisdiction in the territorial division in which a certificate has been issued under subsection (2) may, on production of the certificate, by warrant in Form 26, commit the defaulter to imprisonment for a term not exceeding one month, unless the amount of the costs and, where the justice thinks fit so to order, the costs of the committal and of conveying the defaulter to prison are sooner paid. R.S., c. C-34, s. 759.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 809 governs the awarding and enforcement of costs at a summary conviction trial. Authorization for the award of costs on an appeal under s. 813 may be found in s. 826. For similar provisions relating to appeals under s. 830, see s. 834(1) and for costs on further summary conviction appeals, see s. 839(3).

SYNOPSIS

This section makes the clerk of the court the administrator of the enforcement of cost orders under s. 826 (subsecs. (1) and (2)). On failure to pay such costs, a justice may order the defaulter imprisoned for up to one month, unless costs and costs of committal, if ordered, are paid sooner.

ENFORCEMENT OF CONVICTION OR ORDER BY COURT OF APPEAL / Enforcement by justice / Duty of clerk of court.

828. (1) A conviction or order made by the appeal court may be enforced

- (a) in the same manner as if it had been made by the summary conviction court; or
 (b) by process of the appeal court.

(2) Where an appeal taken against a conviction or order adjudging payment of a sum of money is dismissed, the summary conviction court that made the conviction or order or a justice for the same territorial division may issue a warrant of committal as if no appeal had been taken.

(3) Where a conviction or order that has been made by an appeal court is to be enforced by a justice, the clerk of the appeal court shall send to the justice the conviction or order and all writings relating thereto, except the notice of intention to appeal and any recognizance. R.S., c. C-34, s. 760.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Sections 701 to 708 of Part XXII provide for the service and execution of process to compel the attendance of witnesses. See Part XXV regarding enforcement of recognizances. The enforcement of sentences is described in Part XXIII, which applies without the need for express incorporation in Part XXVII proceedings. A court of appeal decision under s. 839(1) is enforceable under s. 839(4) in the same manner as if made in summary conviction trial proceedings. See s. 835 for a similar provision regarding s. 830 appeals.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides that a conviction or order of the appeal court may be enforced by that court or the original court, and in the event of a dismissal the original court may proceed by way of warrant of committal as if there had been no appeal (subsecs. (1) and (2)). Where a conviction or order of the appeal court is to be enforced by a justice, the clerk of the court shall forward to that justice the documentary record except the notice of appeal and recognizances (subsec. (3)).

ANNOTATIONS

In R. v. Green, [1967] 2 C.C.C. 95, 50 C.R. 281 (Sask. Dist. Ct.) it was held that “process of the appeal court” includes processes available to enforce judgments in civil proceedings, so that where imprisonment for default is not ordered, judgment may be enforced by the Crown.

Summary Appeal on Transcript or Agreed Statement of Facts

Editor’s Note: The above heading and the following ss. 829 to 838 were substituted for old heading “Stated Case” and ss. 761 to 770 by the Criminal Law Amendment Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 182.

Transitional provision

Note: R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 206, proclaimed in force December 4, 1985, provides as follows:

206. The Criminal Code, as it read immediately before the coming into force of the amendments made by section 182 of this Act, continues to apply to any case in which the notice of application to state a case was served on the summary conviction court before the coming into force of that amendment.

DEFINITION OF “APPEAL COURT”.

829. For the purposes of sections 830 to 838, “appeal court” means, in any province, the superior court of criminal jurisdiction for the province. R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 182.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See s. 812 for the definition of "appeal court" for the purposes of ss. 813 to 828. It contains territorial limitations respecting provinces where the "appeal court" is not also the superior court of criminal jurisdiction. Section 829 has no such limitation.

Section 830 deals with the right of appeal and the form and manner for commencement, hearing and determination of such appeals. Pursuant to s. 836, an appeal under s. 830 precludes an appeal under s. 813 from the same decision.

Section 830 creates no right of appeal if none is otherwise provided by law.

Sections 816 and 819 govern the judicial interim release of an appellant who was the defendant at trial, made applicable by s. 831. Under ss. 831 and 832, an appeal by a private prosecutor requires compliance with s. 817. See s. 834 for the authority of the court of appeal to make determinations under s. 830 and for consequential enforcement provisions under s. 835.

APPEALS / Form of appeal / Rules for appeals / Rights of Attorney General of Canada.

830. (1) A party to proceedings to which this Part applies or the Attorney General may appeal against a conviction, judgment, verdict of acquittal or verdict of not criminally responsible on account of mental disorder or of unfit to stand trial or other final order or determination of a summary conviction court on the ground that

- (a) it is erroneous in point of law;
- (b) it is in excess of jurisdiction; or
- (c) it constitutes a refusal or failure to exercise jurisdiction.

(2) An appeal under this section shall be based on a transcript of the proceedings appealed from unless the appellant files with the appeal court, within fifteen days of the filing of the notice of appeal, a statement of facts agreed to in writing by the respondent.

(3) An appeal under this section shall be made within the period and in the manner directed by any applicable rules of court and where there are no such rules otherwise providing, a notice of appeal in writing shall be served on the respondent and a copy thereof, together with proof of service, shall be filed with the appeal court within thirty days after the date of the conviction, judgment or verdict of acquittal or other final order or determination that is the subject of the appeal.

(4) The Attorney General of Canada has the same rights of appeal in proceedings instituted at the instance of the Government of Canada and conducted by or on behalf of that Government as the Attorney General of a province has under this section. R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 182; 1991, c. 43, s. 9.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The "Attorney General", as defined in s. 2, retains a right of appeal under s. 830(1), even where he did not intervene at trial and thereby become the prosecution and a party to the trial proceedings.

See s. 672.1 for definition of "verdict of not criminally responsible on account of mental disorder" and s. 2 for definition of "unfit to stand trial".

Also see references cited under s. 829.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides for summary conviction appeals, to a superior court of criminal jurisdiction, on points of law or jurisdiction. Such are argued on the trial transcript unless an agreed statement of facts is filed within 15 days of the filing of the notice of appeal (subsecs. (1) and (2)).

Unless the rules of court otherwise provide the notice of appeal must be served on the respondent and filed within 30 days of the decision under appeal (subsec. (3)).

ANNOTATIONS

Subsec. (1) – Note: Some of the following cases were decided under former s. 762 which determined the availability of an appeal by way of stated case. These cases were considered to be of continuing relevancy to issues which may arise on summary appeals, but the differences in wording and procedure must be borne in mind, particularly the change from “conviction, order, determination or other proceeding” and the broadening of the grounds to include a “refusal or failure to exercise jurisdiction”.

It was held in R. v. Canadian Pacific Ltd. (1976), 32 C.C.C. (2d) 14, [1977] 1 W.W.R. 203 (Alta. S.C. App. Div.) that an appeal by way of stated case lies only from a final judgment, that is, one that determines the issue raised on the information. Thus no appeal lies where the information is dismissed for failure of the Crown to supply particulars as ordered by the Court. The Crown’s remedy is by way of mandamus. The correctness of the holding, that the decision must be “final” in the sense of determining the issue raised in the information rather than merely “final” in the sense that it brings to an end that particular proceeding was doubted in R. v. B & B Stone Ltd. (No. 2) (1977), 34 C.C.C. (2d) 464 (Ont. C.A.) where it was held that the quashing of an information in summary conviction proceedings on the grounds of duplicity is a final order or determination and an appeal by way of stated case under this section is the appropriate remedy, not an application by way of mandamus. However, where the Judge finds the information is a nullity and so declines jurisdiction the proper remedy is by way of mandamus.

A stay of proceedings as an abuse of process is a “determination” within the meaning of subsec. (1) from which the Crown may appeal by way of stated case: R. v. Kathis (1977), 36 C.C.C. (2d) 551 (Ont. H.C.J.).

An interlocutory order dismissing an application to quash an information is not a final order and hence is not appealable by way of stated case: R. v. Goldrick (1974), 17 C.C.C. (2d) 74, 25 C.R.N.S. 389 (Ont. H.C.J.), and R. v. Appleby (1974), 21 C.C.C. (2d) 282, 18 C.P.R. (2d) 194 (N.B.S.C. App. Div.). Contra: Chisholm v. The Queen (1973), 21 C.R.N.S. 181 (Que. S.C.).

The decision of a judge quashing an information prior to plea, because the signature of the justice of the peace who took the information was illegible, was a refusal or failure to exercise jurisdiction within the meaning of para. (c) against which the Crown may appeal: R. v. Kapoor (1989), 52 C.C.C. (3d) 41 (Ont. H.C.J.).

This section gives a right of appeal only to a party, which would include the informant, and the Attorney-General. Thus, in a prosecution under the Canada Elections Act while the police officer who laid the charge would have a right of appeal, the Commissioner of Elections would not, even though the police officer in laying the charge was acting on the Commissioner’s instructions: R. v. Trimarchi (1987), 40 C.C.C. (3d) 433, 62 C.R. (3d) 204, 49 D.L.R. (4th) 382 (Ont. C.A.).

Subsec. (3) – It was held with respect to the former procedure by way of stated case that where the Criminal Code is silent as to the method of service then resort may be had to the Criminal Rules promulgated by the provincial Supreme Court: R. v. Hummell (1972), 9 C.C.C. 380, [1973] 1 W.W.R. 663 (B.C.C.A.).

APPLICATION.

831. The provisions of sections 816, 817, 819 and 825 apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, in respect of an appeal under section 830, except that on receiving an application by the person having the custody of an appellant described in section 819 to appoint a date for the hearing of the appeal, the appeal court shall, after giving the prosecutor a reasonable opportunity to be heard, give such directions as it thinks necessary for expediting the hearing of the appeal. R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 182.

CROSS-REFERENCES

These provisions should apply in conjunction with s. 832 which permits the appeal court to order the appellant to appear before a justice to enter into a recognizance or give an undertaking under ss. 816 or 817.

Also see references cited under ss. 816, 817, 819, 825 and 829.

SYNOPSIS

This section states that the provisions with respect to recognizances (ss. 816 and 817), applications by persons having custody (s. 819) and dismissal for failure to comply or proceed (s. 825) apply to summary appeals, with the exception that no date for hearing need be fixed.

UNDERTAKING OR RECOGNIZANCE / Attorney General.

832. (1) When a notice of appeal is filed pursuant to section 830, the appeal court may order that the appellant appear before a justice and give an undertaking or enter into a recognizance as provided in section 816 where the defendant is the appellant, or as provided in section 817, in any other case.

(2) Subsection (1) does not apply where the appellant is the Attorney General or counsel acting on behalf of the Attorney General. R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 182.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The provisions of ss. 816 and 817 to appeals under s. 830 are incorporated by s. 831.

Also see references cited under ss. 816, 817, 819, 825 and 829.

NO WRIT REQUIRED.

833. No writ of certiorari or other writ is required to remove any conviction, judgment, verdict or other final order or determination of a summary conviction court for the purpose of obtaining the judgment, determination or opinion of the appeal court. R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 182; 1991, c. 43, s. 9.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 830 appeals are characterized as "summary appeal on transcript or agreed statement of facts" indicating the rationale for the section. A provision, similar to s. 821 and applicable to s. 825 appeals, requires the summary conviction court to transmit the record to the "appeal court" under s. 829.

See Part XXVI for the "Extraordinary Remedies" of certiorari, habeas corpus, mandamus, procedendo and prohibition.

SYNOPSIS

This section states that no writ is required to obtain the reversal of a summary conviction court from a court on summary appeal.

POWERS OF APPEAL COURT / Authority of judge.

834. (1) When a notice of appeal is filed pursuant to section 830, the appeal court shall hear and determine the grounds of appeal and may

(a) affirm, reverse or modify the conviction, judgment, verdict or other final order or determination, or

(b) remit the matter to the summary conviction court with the opinion of the appeal court, and may make any other order in relation to the matter or with respect to costs that it considers proper.

(2) Where the authority and jurisdiction of the appeal court may be exercised by a judge of that court, such authority and jurisdiction may, subject to any applicable rules of court, be exercised by a judge of the court sitting in chambers as well in vacation as in term time. R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 182; 1991, c. 43, s. 9.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The authority of the appeal court over s. 830 appeals is much more restrictive than that given to the appeal court by s. 822(1) over s. 813 appeals. None of the disposition or ancillary powers of the court of appeal in indictable matters are incorporated under s. 834.

Section 835 contains enforcement provisions for decisions of the court in s. 830 appeals.

SYNOPSIS

The appeal court has the power to affirm, reverse or modify the decision under appeal. In addition, it can remit the matter to the trial judge to continue the proceedings in a manner consistent with the opinion expressed on the appeal and may make any other order, including an order with respect to costs. These powers may be exercised in chambers.

ANNOTATIONS

The following cases were decided under former s. 768 which contained the powers of the appeal court in relation to an appeal by way of stated case. The wording of this section is similar, however, to former s. 768 and therefore these cases were considered to be of continuing relevancy to issues which may arise under this section.

The superior Court has no power to dismiss an appeal merely because the error at trial did not result in a substantial wrong or miscarriage of justice: R. v. Tunke (1975), 25 C.C.C. (2d) 518 (Alta. S.C.).

In R. v. McMullen (1979), 47 C.C.C. (2d) 499, 100 D.L.R. (3d) 671 (Ont. C.A.) the Court remitted the matter to the summary conviction Court under para. (c) [now (b)] and therefore left open the question whether under this section the appeal Court has power to order a new trial rather than merely a resumption of the impugned trial.

However, in the subsequent case of R. v. Giambalvo (1982), 70 C.C.C. (2d) 324, 39 O.R. (2d) 588 (C.A.) the Court held that s. 771(2) [now s. 839] did not give the Court of Appeal any wider powers than the Superior Court hearing the initial appeal possessed under this section. The Court noted that there did not appear to be any case where a new trial had been ordered such as may be ordered under s. 686(2)(b).

An extension of time was granted to the Crown where it launched an application for mandamus within 30 days of the decision quashing an information but realized later that an appeal lay under s. 830. The Crown had established a bona fide intention to impeach the correctness of the decision of the judge within the appeal period: R. v. Kapoor (1989), 52 C.C.C. (3d) 41 (Ont. H.C.J.).

ENFORCEMENT / Idem.

835. (1) Where the appeal court renders its decision on an appeal, the summary conviction court from which the appeal was taken or a justice exercising the same jurisdiction has the same authority to enforce a conviction, order or determination that has been affirmed, modified or made by the appeal court as the summary conviction court would have had if no appeal had been taken.

(2) An order of the appeal court may be enforced by its own process. R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 182.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 828(1) contains a similar provision which applies to appeals under s. 813.

See also references cited under s. 828.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides that the appeal court, the original court or a justice with the same jurisdiction as the original court may enforce the decision of the summary appeal court.

APPEAL UNDER SECTION 830.

836. Every person who appeals under section 830 from any conviction, judgment, verdict or other final order or determination in respect of which that person is entitled to an appeal under section 813 shall be taken to have abandoned all the person's rights of appeal under section 813. R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 182; 1991, c. 43, s. 9.

CROSS-REFERENCES

Section 813 rights of appeal permit appeals from conviction, orders made against a defendant, staying proceedings or dismissing an information and sentence. The grounds of appeal are not restricted. An appeal may be taken against a conviction, judgment or verdict of acquittal or other final order or decision, under s. 830, upon questions of law or allegations of jurisdictional error.

SYNOPSIS

This section provides that an appellant who proceeds by way of summary appeal (s. 830) is deemed to have given up his rights of regular appeal (s. 813).

---

APPEAL BARRED.

837. Where it is provided by law that no appeal lies from a conviction or order, no appeal under section 830 lies from such a conviction or order. R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 182.

CROSS-REFERENCES

There is no similar provision relating to s. 813 appeals.

SYNOPSIS

This section bars summary appeals where the law states that there is no appeal from a conviction or order.

---

EXTENSION OF TIME.

838. The appeal court or a judge thereof may at any time extend any time period referred to in section 830, 831 or 832. R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 182.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The criteria used in determining whether to order an extension of time is not contained in this section. The statutory provision may be supplemented by rules of court passed under s. 482(1).

A judge of the appeal court, as defined in s. 812, may extend the time within which notice of appeal is to be given, under s. 815(2).

Rights of appeal to the "appeal court", as defined in s. 829, are conferred under s. 830 which establishes time limits for the service and filing of notice of appeal and agreed statement of facts. Time limits relating to service and filing of notice of appeal apply only where no applicable rules of court provide to the contrary.

Interim release of a defendant who is an appellant under s. 830 is dealt with in ss. 831 and 832, as well as the obligation of a private prosecutor to give an undertaking or enter into a recognizance to prosecute an appeal in which he is the appellant.

Appeals to Court of Appeal

APPEAL ON QUESTION OF LAW / Sections applicable / Costs / Enforcement of decision / Right of Attorney General of Canada to appeal.

839. (1) An appeal to the court of appeal as defined in section 673 may, with leave of that court or a judge thereof, be taken on any ground that involves a question of law alone, against

(a) a decision of a court in respect of an appeal under section 822; or

(b) a decision of an appeal court under section 834, except where that court is the court of appeal.

(2) Sections 673 to 689 apply with such modifications as the circumstances require to an appeal under this section.

(3) Notwithstanding subsection (2), the court of appeal may make any order with respect to costs that it considers proper in relation to an appeal under this section.

(4) The decision of the court of appeal may be enforced in the same manner as if it had been made by the summary conviction court before which the proceedings were originally heard and determined.

(5) The Attorney General of Canada has the same rights of appeal in proceedings instituted at the instance of the Government of Canada and conducted by or on behalf of that Government as the Attorney General of a province has under this Part. R.S., c. C-34, s. 771; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 183.

CROSS-REFERENCES

The Supreme Court Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. S-26, s. 41, governs appeals to the Supreme Court of Canada in summary conviction matters.

See references cited under ss. 673 to 689, incorporated by subsec. (2) for discussion of those provisions.

SYNOPSIS

The decision of a summary conviction appeal court may be appealed, with leave, to the court of appeal. Such appeals are restricted to questions of law alone. However, no such appeal is available where the first appeal was heard by a court of appeal sitting as a superior court of criminal jurisdiction (see ss. 2 and 829) (subsec. (1)).

Costs may be awarded on the appeal (subsec. (3)).

(Note: Leave to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada must be obtained under s. 40 of the Supreme Court Act.)

ANNOTATIONS

Determinations from which appeal lies [subsec. (1)] – The refusal of a trial de novo court [now summary conviction appeal court], upon a preliminary objection, to hear an appeal is a decision of that Court which may be appealed: R. v. Dennis (1960), 125 C.C.C. 321, 32 C.R. 210 (S.C.C.) (7:0).

It was held in R. v. Canadian Pacific Ltd. (1976), 32 C.C.C. (2d) 14, [1977] 1 W.W.R. 203 (Alta. S.C. App. Div.) that an appeal lies under this section only where the order made by the Court below has the effect of disposing of the appeal. Thus in that case it was held that no appeal lay from an order setting down for hearing the appeal (which at that time was an appeal by way of trial de novo). Folld: R. v. Hunt (1978), 39 C.C.C. (2d) 135, 25 N.S.R. (2d) 1 (S.C. App. Div.).

Thus an appeal under this section did lie where the Judge refused to set the appeal down for hearing: R. v. Cuthill (1976), 32 C.C.C. (2d) 495, 73 D.L.R. (3d) 720 (Alta. S.C. App. Div.).

An appeal to the Court of Appeal is from the judgment of the Summary Conviction Appeal Court, not the trial Judge: R. v. Emery (1981), 61 C.C.C. (2d) 84 (B.C.C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused 40 N.R. 358n.

Right of appeal – Even if a question of law alone is raised on a Crown application the Court may refuse leave to appeal: R. v. Giftwares Wholesale Co. Ltd. (No. 2) (1980), 53 C.C.C. (2d) 380, [1980] 3 W.W.R. 573 (Man. C.A.).

The informant as well as the Attorney-General may appeal to the Court of Appeal from the decision of the summary conviction appeal Court: Scullion v. Canadian Breweries Transport Ltd. (1956), 114 C.C.C. 337, 24 C.R. 223, [1956] S.C.R. 512; R. v. Lacasse (1979), 55 C.C.C. (2d) 337 (Que. C.A.).

Question of law – While the question whether there is any evidence to support a conviction is a question of law, the question whether on the evidence an inference of guilt should be drawn cannot be said to involve a question of law alone: R. v. Waite, [1965] 1 C.C.C. 301, 46 C.R. 23 (N.B.S.C.App.Div.).

An inference to be drawn from proved facts is in itself a question of fact, and not of law: R. v. Hook (1955), 113 C.C.C. 248, 22 C.R. 378 (Ont. C.A.) (2:1).

Sentence appeal – Where the error as to sentence was so bound up as to be inherent in it, then that decision involves a question of law alone: R. v. Paterson, [1963] 2 C.C.C. 369 and 375, 39 C.R. 156 and 195 (B.C.C.A.).

Where a judge in refusing a discharge holds that the discharge provisions are primarily applicable to young offenders he errs in law and since the sentence imposed is inextricably bound up in this error an appeal lies to the Court of Appeal as a question of law alone is involved. The Court of Appeal may therefore grant leave to appeal and consider the fitness of the sentence: R. v. Culley (1977), 36 C.C.C. (2d) 433 (Ont. C.A.).

It was held in R. v. S. S. Kresge Co. Ltd. (1975), 27 C.C.C. (2d) 420, 65 D.L.R. (3d) 628 (P.E.I.C.A.) considering the former s. 755(3) [now s. 822(6)] that as the summary conviction appeal Court is required to consider the “fitness of the sentence appealed against” whether or not the sentence was proper in the circumstances is a question of law upon which an appeal lies under this section to the Court of Appeal.

It was held, however, in R. v. Thomas (No. 2) (1980), 53 C.C.C. (2d) 285 (B.C.C.A.) that fitness of sentence per se does not raise a question of law alone.

To a similar effect is R. v. Guida (1989), 51 C.C.C. (3d) 305 (Que. C.A.), where a majority of the court held that whether or not the sentence is too severe, whether or not it is a fit sentence, does not raise a question of law alone. Also see R. v. Loughery (1992), 73 C.C.C. (3d) 411 (Alta. C.A.).

Procedure – Where the Court of Appeal restores a conviction, but the respondent had also appealed his sentence to the summary conviction appeal court, the case must be remitted to that Court to complete the sentence appeal. The Court of Appeal may only impose sentence on a Crown appeal where no sentence was imposed by the trial court, by invoking s. 686(4)(b)(ii): R. v. Broda (1983), 7 C.C.C. (3d) 161, [1983] 5 W.W.R. 747 (Sask. C.A.).

The Court of Appeal has no jurisdiction to review the decision of a single judge of the Court of Appeal under subsec. (1) refusing leave to appeal: R. v. Gelz (1990), 55 C.C.C. (3d) 425 (B.C.C.A.).

Costs [subsec. (3)] – In R. v. Danyleyko (1962), 39 W.W.R. 576 (B.C.C.A.) it was held that the case was one in which appellant ought to have costs of the appeal.

The Court's power under this subsection includes the power to award costs against the Crown: R. v. Ouellette (1980), 52 C.C.C. (2d) 336, [1980] 1 S.C.R. 568, 15 C.R. (3d) 372 (7:0).

Costs should be awarded in criminal matters only in special circumstances as in the case of a successful appeal by the accused where the prosecution was frivolous, conducted for an oblique motive or taken by the Crown as a test case: R. v. King (1986), 26 C.C.C. (3d) 349 (B.C.C.A.).

An appellant who successfully appeals his conviction to the Supreme Court of Canada is not automatically entitled to costs: Trask v. The Queen (1987), 37 C.C.C. (3d) 92, 59 C.R. (3d) 179, [1987] 2 S.C.R. 304 (6:0).

Fees and Allowances

FEES AND ALLOWANCES / Order of lieutenant governor in council.

840. (1) Subject to subsection (2), the fees and allowances mentioned in the schedule to this Part are the fees and allowances that may be taken or allowed in proceedings before summary conviction courts and justices under this Part.

(2) The lieutenant governor in council of a province may order that all or any of the fees and allowances mentioned in the schedule to this Part shall not be taken or allowed in proceedings before summary conviction courts and justices under this Part in that province and, when the lieutenant governor in council so orders, he or she may fix other fees and allowances for items similar to those mentioned in the schedule to be taken or allowed instead. R.S., c. C-34, s. 772; 1994, c. 44, s. 83.

CROSS-REFERENCES

See ss. 809, 826, 830(1) and 839(3) for authority to award costs in summary conviction trial and appeal proceedings.

ANNOTATIONS

It was held in Lockett v. City of Kingston, [1966] 2 O.R. 843, 58 D.L.R. (2d) 689, that this section does not entitle a justice of the peace who issues summonses and warrants and receives informations to charge the municipality for all such services, but rather sets out a limitation on the costs that may be awarded against an informant or defendant in such proceedings.

This schedule has no application once an appeal has been launched and thus in particular the appellant must pay for the transcript on the basis of the fees set by the appeal Court rules not at the rate provided for in para. 14: R. v. Dubuc (1978), 49 C.C.C. (2d) 54 (Que. S.C.).

While there have been some minor amendments to this section and the companion provision s. 809 since the decision of the court in A.-G. Que. v. A.-G. Can. (1945), 84 C.C.C. 369, [1945] 4 D.L.R. 305, [1945] S.C.R. 600, it would still appear to be the case as there held that only the fees and allowances set out in this schedule may be awarded by a summary conviction court. Thus the court has no power to award a counsel fee: R. v. Abram et al. (1945), 1 C.R. 151 (Ont. Co. Ct.); R. v. Cross (1978), 42 C.C.C. (2d) 277, 6 C.R. (3d) 16 (P.E.I.S.C. in banco).

Part XXVIII / FORMS

FORMS / Seal not required / Official languages.

841. (1) The forms set out in this Part varied to suit the case or forms to the like effect shall be deemed to be good, valid and sufficient in the circumstances for which, respectively, they are provided.

(2) No justice is required to attach or affix a seal to any writing or process that he is authorized to issue and in respect of which a form is provided by this Part.

(3) Any pre-printed portions of a form set out in this Part varied to suit the case or of a form to the like effect shall be printed in both official languages. R.S., c. C-34, s. 773; R.S.C. 1985, c. 31 (4th Supp.), s. 97.

ANNOTATIONS

The provisions of s. 26(5) of the Interpretation Act, R.S.C. 1970, c. I-23, which provide that “where a form is prescribed, deviations therefrom, not affecting the substance or calculated to mislead, do not invalidate the form used” apply to these forms: R. v. Crawford (1981), 23 C.R. (3d) 83 (B.C.S.C.).

The failure of the Crown to comply with the provisions of subsec. (3) in respect of an information in Form 2 does not render the information a nullity and does not necessitate the quashing of the information: R. v. Goodine (1992), 71 C.C.C. (3d) 146 (N.S.C.A.). Failure of the Crown to translate the preprinted portions of the form is a defect within the meaning of s. 601(3)(c) which is capable of amendment when the omission has not caused irreparable prejudice to the accused. The proper course is for the trial judge to order that the preprinted portions of the information be translated into the other official language: R. v. Sorensen (1990), 59 C.C.C. (3d) 211 (Ont. Ct. (Gen. Div.)).

Failure to employ the French language in the pre-printed portions of Form 35 was not a matter of substance and therefore did not invalidate the form: R. v. Langlois (1991), 67 C.C.C. (3d) 375 (B.C.S.C.).

Summons to a person charged with an offence

Canada,
Province of..... ,
(territorial division).

To A.B., of ....., (occupation):

Whereas you have this day been charged before me that (set out briefly the offence in respect of which the accused is charged);

This is therefore to command you, in Her Majesty's name:

(a) to attend court on ..... , the ..... day of ..... A.D....., at ..... o'clock in the ..... noon, at ..... or before any justice for the said (territorial division) who is there, and to attend thereafter as required by the court, in order to be dealt with according to law; and

(b) to appear on ....., the ..... day of ..... A.D....., at ..... o'clock in the .....noon, at ....., for the purposes of the Identification of Criminals Act. (Ignore, if not filled in.)

You are warned that failure without lawful excuse to attend court in accordance with this summons is an offence under subsection 145(4) of the Criminal Code.

Subsection 145(4) of the Criminal Code states as follows:

“(4) Every one who is served with a summons and who fails, without lawful excuse, the proof of which lies on him, to appear at a time and place stated therein, if any, for the purposes of the Identification of Criminals Act or to attend court in accordance therewith, is guilty of

- (a) an indictable offence and is liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years; or
- (b) an offence punishable on summary conviction.”

Section 510 of the Criminal Code states as follows:

“510 Where an accused who is required by a summons to appear at a time and place stated therein for the purposes of the Identification of Criminals Act does not appear at that time and place, a justice may issue a warrant for the arrest of the accused for the offence with which he is charged.”

This warrant is issued for the arrest of A.B., of ....., (occupation), hereinafter called the accused.

Whereas the accused has been charged that (set out briefly the offence in respect of which the accused is charged);

And whereas:*

- (a) there are reasonable grounds to believe that it is necessary in the public interest to issue this warrant for the arrest of the accused [507(4); 512(1)];
- (b) the accused failed to attend court in accordance with the summons served on him [512(2)];
- (c) (an appearance notice or a promise to appear or a recognizance entered into before an officer in charge) was confirmed and the accused failed to attend court in accordance therewith [512(2)];
- (d) it appears that a summons cannot be served because the accused is evading service [512(2)];
- (e) the accused was ordered to be present at the hearing of an application for a review of an order made by a justice and did not attend the hearing [520(5); 521(5)];
- (f) there are reasonable grounds to believe that the accused has contravened or is about to contravene the (promise to appear or undertaking or recognizance) on which he was released [542(1); 525(5); 679(6)];

- (g) there are reasonable grounds to believe that the accused has since his release from custody on (a promise to appear or an undertaking or a recognizance) committed an indictable offence [524(1); 525(5); 679(6)];
- (h) the accused was required by (an appearance notice or a promise to appear or a recognizance entered into before an officer in charge or a summons) to attend at a time and place stated therein for the purposes of the Identification of Criminals Act and did not appear at that time and place [502; 510];
- (i) an indictment has been found against the accused and the accused has not appeared or remained in attendance before the court for his trial [597];
- (j) **

To the peace officers in the said (territorial division) and to the keeper of the (prison) at .....

This warrant is issued for the committal of A.B., of .....,
(occupation), hereinafter called the accused.

Whereas the accused has been charged that (set out briefly the offence in respect of which the accused is charged);

And whereas:*

- (a) the prosecutor has shown cause why the detention of the accused in custody is justified [515(5)];
- (b) an order has been made that the accused be released on (giving an undertaking or entering into a recognizance) but the accused has not yet complied with the order [519(1); 520(9); 521(10); 524(12); 525(8)];**
- (c) the application by the prosecutor for a review of the order of a justice in respect of the interim release of the accused has been allowed and that order has been vacated, and the prosecutor has shown cause why the detention of the accused in custody is justified [521];

- (d) the accused has contravened or was about to contravene his (promise to appear or undertaking or recognizance) and the same was cancelled, and the detention of the accused in custody is justified or seems proper in the circumstances [524(4); 524(8)];
- (e) there are reasonable grounds to believe that the accused has after his release from custody on (a promise to appear or an undertaking or a recognizance) committed an indictable offence and the detention of the accused in custody is justified or seems proper in the circumstances [524(4); 524(8)];
- (f) the accused has contravened or was about to contravene the (undertaking or recognizance) on which he was released and the detention of the accused in custody seems proper in the circumstances [525(7); 679(6)];

APPEARANCE NOTICE ISSUED BY A PEACE OFFICER TO A PERSON NOT YET CHARGED WITH AN OFFENCE

Canada,
Province of .....,
(territorial division).

To A.B., of ....., (occupation):

You are alleged to have committed (set out substance of offence).

1. You are required to attend court on ..... day, the ..... day of ..... A.D. ...., at ..... o'clock in the ..... noon, in courtroom No. ...., at ..... court, in the municipality of ....., and to attend thereafter as required by the court, in order to be dealt with according to law.

2. You are also required to appear on ..... day, the ..... day of ..... A.D. ...., at ..... o'clock in the ..... noon, at..... (police station), (address), for the purposes of the Identification of Criminals Act. (Ignore if not filled in.)

You are warned that failure to attend court in accordance with this appearance notice is an offence under subsection 145(5) of the Criminal Code.

Subsections 145(5) and (6) of the Criminal Code state as follows:

"(5) Every person who is named in an appearance notice or promise to appear, or in a recognizance entered into before an officer in charge, that has been confirmed by a justice under section 508 and who fails, without lawful excuse, the proof of which lies on the person, to appear at the time and place stated therein, if any, for the purposes of the Identification of Criminals Act, or to attend court in accordance therewith, or to comply with any condition of an undertaking entered into pursuant to subsection 499(2) or 503(2.1), is guilty of

- (a) an indictable offence and liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years; or
- (b) an offence punishable on summary conviction.

(6) For the purposes of subsection (5), it is not a lawful excuse that an appearance notice, promise to appear or recognizance states defectively the substance of the alleged offence."

Section 502 of the Criminal Code states as follows:

"502. Where an accused who is required by an appearance notice or promise to appear or by a recognizance entered into before an officer in charge to appear at a time and place stated therein for the purposes of the Identification of Criminals Act does not appear at that time and place, a justice may, where the appearance notice, promise to appear or recognizance has been confirmed by a justice under section 508, issue a warrant for the arrest of the accused for the offence with which he is charged."

UNDERTAKING GIVEN TO A PEACE OFFICER OR AN OFFICER IN CHARGE

Canada,
Province of ..... ,
(territorial division).

I, A.B., of....., (occupation), understand that it is alleged that I have committed (set out substance of the offence).

In order that I may be released from custody by way of (a promise to appear or a recognizance entered into before an officer in charge), I undertake to (insert any conditions that are directed):

- (a) report at (state times) to (name of peace officer or other person designated);
- (b) remain within (designated territorial jurisdiction);
- (c) notify (name of peace officer or other person designated) of any change in my address, employment or occupation;

- (e) deposit my passport (as the justice or judge directs); and
- (f) (any other reasonable conditions).

I understand that failure without lawful excuse to attend court in accordance with this undertaking is an offence under subsection 145(2) of the Criminal Code.

Subsections 145(2) and (3) of the Criminal Code state as follows:

“(2) Every one who,

- (a) being at large on his undertaking or recognizance given to or entered into before a justice or judge, fails, without lawful excuse, the proof of which lies on him, to attend court in accordance with the undertaking or recognizance, or
- (b) having appeared before a court, justice or judge, fails, without lawful excuse, the proof of which lies on him, to attend court as thereafter required by the court, justice or judge, or to surrender himself in accordance with an order of the court, justice or judge, as the case may be, is guilty of an indictable offence and is liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or is guilty of an offence punishable on summary conviction.

(3) Every person who is at large on an undertaking or recognizance given to or entered into before a justice or judge and is bound to comply with a condition of that undertaking or recognizance directed by a justice or judge, and every person who is bound to comply with a direction ordered under subsection 515(12) or 522(2.1), and who fails, without lawful excuse, the proof of which lies on that person, to comply with that condition or direction, is guilty of

- (a) an indictable offence and is liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years; or
- (b) an offence punishable on summary conviction.”

Recognizance

Canada,
 Province of ..... ,
 (territorial division).

Be it remembered that on this day the persons named in the following schedule personally came before me and severally acknowledged themselves to owe to Her Majesty the Queen the several amounts set opposite their respective names, namely,

Name	Address	Occupation	Amount
A.B.
C.D.
E.F.

to be made and levied of their several goods and chattels, lands and tenements, respectively, to the use of Her Majesty the Queen, if the said A.B. fails in any of the conditions hereunder written.

Taken and acknowledged before me on the ..... day of .....
A.D. ...., at .....

Judge, Clerk of the Court, Provincial Court
Judge or Justice

1. Whereas the said ....., hereinafter called the accused, has been charged that (set out the offence in respect of which the accused has been charged);

Now, therefore, the condition of this recognizance is that if the accused attends court on

..... day, the ..... day of ..... A.D. ...., at ..... o'clock in the ..... noon and attends thereafter as required by the court in order to be dealt with according to law (or, where date and place of appearance before court are not known at the time recognizance is entered into if the accused attends at the time and place fixed by the court and attends thereafter as required by the court in order to be dealt with according to law) [515; 520; 521; 522; 523; 524; 525; 680];

And further, if the accused (insert in Schedule of Conditions any additional conditions that are directed),

the said recognizance is void, otherwise it stands in full force and effect,

2. Whereas the said ....., hereinafter called the appellant, is an appellant against his conviction (or against his sentence) in respect of the following charge (set out the offence for which the appellant was convicted) [679; 680]:

Now, therefore, the condition of this recognizance is that if the appellant attends as required by the court in order to be dealt with according to law;

And further, if the appellant (insert in Schedule of Conditions any additional conditions that are directed),

the said recognizance is void, otherwise it stands in full force and effect.

3. Whereas the said ....., hereinafter called the appellant, is an appellant against his conviction (or against his sentence or against an order or by way of stated case) in respect of the following matter (set out offence, subject-matter of order or question of law) [816; 831; 832; 834];

Now, therefore, the condition of this recognizance is that if the appellant appears personally at the sittings of the appeal court at which the appeal is to be heard;

And further, if the appellant (insert in Schedule of Conditions any additional conditions that are directed),

the said recognizance is void, otherwise it stands in full force and effect.

4. Whereas the said ....., hereinafter called the appellant, is an appellant against an order of dismissal (or against sentence) in respect of the following charge (set out the name of the defendant and the offence, subject-matter of order or question of law) [817; 831; 832; 834];

Now, therefore, the condition of this recognizance is that if the appellant appears personally or by counsel at the sittings of the appeal court at which the appeal is to be heard the said recognizance is void, otherwise it stands in full force and effect.

5. Whereas the said ....., hereinafter called the accused, was ordered to stand trial on a charge that (set out the offence in respect of which the accused has been charged);

And whereas A.B. appeared as a witness on the preliminary inquiry into the said charge [550; 706; 707];

Now, therefore, the condition of this recognizance is that if the said A.B. appears at the time and place fixed for the trial of the accused to give evidence on the indictment that is found against the accused, the said recognizance is void, otherwise it stands in full force and effect.

6. The condition of the above written recognizance is that if A.B. keeps the peace and is of good behaviour for the term of ..... commencing on ....., the said recognizance is void, otherwise it stands in full force and effect [810 and 810.1].

Schedule of Conditions

- (a) reports at (state times) to (name of peace officer or other person designated);
- (b) remains within (designated territorial jurisdiction);
- (c) notifies (name of peace officer or other person designated) of any change in his address, employment or occupation;
- (d) abstains from communicating with (name of witness or other person) except in accordance with the following conditions: (as the justice or judge specifies);
- (e) deposits his passport (as the justice or judge directs); and
- (f) (any other reasonable conditions).

Note: Section 763 and subsections 764(1) to (3) of the Criminal Code state as follows:

“763. Where a person is bound by recognizance to appear before a court, justice or provincial court judge for any purpose and the session or sittings of that court or the proceedings are adjourned or an order is made changing the place of trial, that person and his sureties continue to be bound by the recognizance in like manner as if it had been entered into with relation to the resumed proceedings or the trial at the time and place at which the proceedings are ordered to be resumed or the trial is ordered to be held.

764. (1) Where an accused is bound by recognizance to appear for trial, his arraignment or conviction does not discharge the recognizance, but it continues to bind him and his sureties, if any, for his appearance until he is discharged or sentenced, as the case may be.

(2) Notwithstanding subsection (1), the court, justice or provincial court judge may commit an accused to prison or may require him to furnish new or additional sureties for his appearance until he is discharged or sentenced, as the case may be.

(3) The sureties of an accused who is bound by recognizance to appear for trial are discharged if he is committed to prison pursuant to subsection (2).”

7. Whereas a warrant was issued under section 462.32 or a restraint order was made under subsection 462.33(3) of the Criminal Code in relation to any property (set out a description of the property and its location);

Now, therefore, the condition of this recognizance is that A.B. shall not do or cause anything to be done that would result, directly or indirectly, in the disappearance, dissipation or reduction in value of the property or otherwise affect the property so that all or a part thereof could not be subject to an order of forfeiture under section 462.37 or 462.38 of the Criminal Code or any other provision of the Criminal Code or any other Act of Parliament [462.34].

An Act respecting witnesses and evidence

SHORT TITLE

SHORT TITLE.

1. This Act may be cited as the Canada Evidence Act. R.S., c. E-10, s. 1.

Part I

Application

APPLICATION.

2. This Part applies to all criminal proceedings and to all civil proceedings and other matters whatever respecting which Parliament has jurisdiction. R.S., c. E-10, s. 2.

Witnesses

INTEREST OR CRIME.

3. A person is not incompetent to give evidence by reason of interest or crime. R.S., c. E-10, s. 3.

ANNOTATIONS

While an accomplice who is separately charged from the accused and has not yet been sentenced is a competent and compellable witness at the instance of the Crown, a trial judge does have a discretion to exclude his evidence if satisfied that it is in the interests of justice to do so. That discretion however can only be exercised with knowledge of the evidence to be tendered and after inquiry into all the surrounding circumstances. It was not proper for the trial judge to simply refuse to hear the witness: R. v. Piercey (1988), 42 C.C.C. (3d) 475, 70 Nfld. & P.E.I.R. 271 (Nfld. C.A.). See also R. v. Williams (1974), 21 C.C.C. (2d) 1 (Ct. Mart. App. Ct.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused C.C.C. loc. cit., and R. v. Caulfield (1972), 10 C.C.C. (2d) 539, 10 C.R. (3d) (Alta. C.A.).

The fact that the accomplice has not yet been sentenced for his involvement in the offence does not affect the admissibility of the witness's evidence and admission of such evidence does not infringe the accused's rights under s. 7 of the Charter: R. v. Cruikshanks (1990), 58 C.C.C. (3d) 26 (B.C.C.A.).

ACCUSED AND SPOUSE / Idem / Communications during marriage / Offences against young persons / Saving / Failure to testify.

4. (1) Every person charged with an offence, and, except as otherwise provided in this section, the wife or husband, as the case may be, of the person so charged, is a competent witness for the defence, whether the person so charged is charged solely or jointly with any other person.

(2) The wife or husband of a person charged with an offence against subsection 50(1) of the Young Offenders Act or with an offence against any of sections 151, 152, 153, 155 or 159, subsection 160(2) or (3), or sections 170 to 173, 179, 212, 215, 218, 271 to 273, 280 to 283, 291 to 294 or 329 of the Criminal Code, or an attempt to commit any such offence, is a competent and compellable witness for the prosecution without the consent of the person charged.

(3) No husband is compellable to disclose any communication made to him by his wife during their marriage, and no wife is compellable to disclose any communication made to her by her husband during their marriage.

(4) The wife or husband of a person charged with an offence against any of sections 220, 221, 235, 236, 237, 239, 240, 266, 267, 268 or 269 of the Criminal Code where the complainant or victim is under the age of fourteen years is a competent and compellable witness for the prosecution without the consent of the person charged.

(5) Nothing in this section affects a case where the wife or husband of a person charged with an offence may at common law be called as a witness without the consent of that person.

(6) The failure of the person charged, or of the wife or husband of that person, to testify shall not be made the subject of comment by the judge or by counsel for the prosecution. R.S., c. E-10, s. 4; 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 71, c. 125, s. 29; 1984, c. 40, s. 27; R.S.C. 1985, c. 19 (3rd Supp.), s. 17.

ANNOTATIONS

Incompetency of spouse generally [subsec. (1)] – On the joint trial of two accused on a charge of conspiracy the wife of one accused is not a compellable witness at the instance of the Crown against the co-accused: R. v. Singh and Amar, [1970] 1 C.C.C. 299, 69 W.W.R. 297, 7 C.R.N.S. 258 sub nom. R. v. Amar (B.C.C.A.).

A valid marriage at common law requires that the verba de praesenti be pronounced in the presence and with the intervention of an episcopally ordained priest: Ex p. Cote (1971), 5 C.C.C. (2d) 49, 122 D.L.R. (3d) 353 (Sask. C.A.).

A so-called “common-law” wife is a competent witness at the instance of the Crown: R. v. Jackson (1981), 61 C.C.C. (2d) 540, 23 C.R. (3d) 4 (N.S.S.C. App. Div.). Requiring a “common law” spouse to testify against the accused does not infringe the equality rights of the testifying spouse as guaranteed by s. 15 of the Charter: R. v. Duviolier (1990), 60 C.C.C. (3d) 353, 75 O.R. (2d) 203 (Gen. Div.). To a similar effect see: R. v. Thompson (1994), 90 C.C.C. (3d) 519, 32 C.R. (4th) 143, [1994] 7 W.W.R. 653 (Alta. C.A.).

A person is the wife or husband of the accused for the purposes of this section even where the marriage takes place after the incident leading to the charge but before the trial: R. v. Lonsdale (1973), 15 C.C.C. (2d) 201, 24 C.R.N.S. 225 (Alta. S.C. App. Div.).

The accused's wife was not a competent witness for the Crown although she and the accused were married after the events giving rise to the charges and notwithstanding evidence that she married the accused to avoid having to testify against the accused: R. v. Hawkins (1995), 96 C.C.C. (3d) 503, 37 C.R. (4th) 229, 22 O.R. (3d) 193 (C.A.).

Once the marriage has been dissolved by divorce the common law rule of spousal incompetency no longer applies and the ex-spouse is a compellable witness at the instance of the Crown, notwithstanding the offences were allegedly committed during the marriage: R. v. Marchand (1980), 55 C.C.C. (2d) 77, 115 D.L.R. (3d) 403 (N.S.S.C. App. Div.); R. v. Bailey (1983), 4 C.C.C. (3d) 21, 32 C.R. (3d) 337 (Ont. C.A.).

The common law exception to spousal incompetency where the spouses have become divorced by the time of trial, although not at the time of the offence, should be extended to cases where there is no reasonable possibility of reconciliation at the time of the trial: R. v. Salituro (1991), 68 C.C.C. (3d) 289 (S.C.C.) (5:0).

The fact of irreconcilable separation need only be proved on a balance of probabilities: R. v. Jeffrey (1993), 84 C.C.C. (3d) 31, 25 C.R. (4th) 104, 106 D.L.R. (4th) 442 (Alta. C.A.).

An objection to the competency of the accused's former spouse to testify at the instance of the Crown, on the basis that the marriage was not validly dissolved, must be taken at trial and cannot be raised for the first time on appeal: R. v. Clark (1983), 7 C.C.C. (3d) 46, 35 C.R. (3d) 357 (Ont. C.A.).

Competency of employees of corporation – An officer or employee of an accused corporation although he is determined to be the directing mind and will of the corporation is a compellable witness at the instance of the Crown: R. v. N. M. Paterson and Sons Ltd. (1980), 55 C.C.C. (2d) 289, 19 C.R. (3d) 164, [1980] 2 S.C.R. 679, [1981] 2 W.W.R. 103 (7:0). And compelling the officer or employee to testify does not violate s. 11(c) of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms: R. v. Amway Corp. (1989), 68 C.R. (3d) 97 (S.C.C.) (7:0).

Spousal communications privilege [subsec. (3)] – It would seem that once the marriage has been dissolved by divorce the marital privilege with respect to communication between spouses may not be claimed: R. v. Marchand (1980), 55 C.C.C. (2d) 77, 115 D.L.R. (3d) 403 (N.S. C.A.).

The spouse cannot be compelled to disclose marital communications even if a compellable witness at the instance of the Crown: R. v. Jean and Piesinger (1979), 46 C.C.C. (2d) 176, 7 C.R. (3d) 338, 15 A.R. 147 (C.A.), affd [1980] 1 S.C.R. 400, 51 C.C.C. (2d) 192n, 16 C.R. (3d) 193; R. v. Zylstra (1995), 99 C.C.C. (3d) 477, 41 C.R. (4th) 130, 82 O.A.C. 394 (C.A.) Contra: R. v. St Jean (1976), 32 C.C.C. (2d) 438, 34 C.R.N.S. 378 (Que. C.A.).

On the other hand, the spouse is required to assert the privilege in the presence of the jury. However, a special instruction would be required that at least informs the jury that the privilege is that of the witness and that the decision whether or not to assert the privilege lies with the witness, not the accused: R. v. Zylstra, supra.

By virtue of subsec. (3) when combined with s. 189(5) of the Criminal Code, which preserves the privilege of information obtained by an interception of a private communication, the intercepted private communications between spouses are inadmissible in evidence at the instance of the Crown (except, semble, with the consent of the spouse enjoying the privilege): R. v. Lloyd and Lloyd (1981), 64 C.C.C. (2d) 169, 31 C.R. (3d) 157, [1981] 2 S.C.R. 645 (6:3).

However, the privilege does not prevent the admission into evidence of communications intercepted prior to the marriage even if the parties to the communication are married by the time of the trial: R. v. Andrew (1986), 26 C.C.C. (3d) 111 (B.C.S.C.).

The privilege in subsec. (3) is testimonial only and does not prevent the introduction into evidence of a document written by the accused and sent to his wife which is later found by police in a search of the accused's home: R. v. Kotapski (1981), 66 C.C.C. (2d) 78 (Que. S.C.), affd 13 C.C.C. (3d) 185 (C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused November 22, 1984.

Competency in cases of child victims [subsec. (4)] – The trend of authority even prior to enactment of this subsection was that the spouse of the accused was a competent witness for the Crown where the case involved violence by one of the spouses to their infant children: R. v. MacPherson (1980), 52 C.C.C. (2d) 547, 110 D.L.R. (3d) 582 (N.S. C.A.); R. v. McNamara (1979), 48 C.C.C. (2d) 201, 12 C.R. (3d) 210 (Ont. Co. Ct.); R. v. Fellichle (1979), 12 C.R. (3d) 207 (B.C.S.C.). Of course, this new subsection is not limited to cases where the victim was the child of the accused or his spouse.

Common law competency of spouse [subsec. (5)] – In R. v. Singh and Amar, supra, the common law exceptions were said to include, broadly speaking, offences where the spouse alleges offences affecting his or her person, health or liberty against the accused spouse.

On the trial of a charge of attempted murder of a wife, she is a competent witness against the accused. This offence being one involving personal violence falls within the category of offences which at common law one spouse is competent to testify against the other even where the spouse is not injured. Further, being a competent witness at common law she is also a compellable witness at the instance of the Crown: R. v. Lonsdale (1973), 15 C.C.C. (2d) 201, 24 C.R.N.S. 225 (Alta. C.A.); R. v. Czipps (1979), 48 C.C.C. (2d) 166, 12 C.R. (3d) 193 (Ont. C.A.); R. v. McGinty (1986), 27 C.C.C. (3d) 36, 52 C.R. (3d) 161, [1986] 4 W.W.R. 97 (Y.T.C.A.).

A spouse is a competent witness at the instance of the Crown where her evidence will disclose an interference with the person, liberty or health of the other spouse whether or not the charge in the information so alleges: R. v. Sillars (1978), 45 C.C.C. (2d) 283, 12 C.R. (3d) 202, [1979] 1 W.W.R. 743 (B.C.C.A.); R. v. Czipps, supra.

An information charging the accused with breach of probation, in that he failed to comply with a term of the probation order that he not harass his wife, on its face alleges an interference with the person, liberty or health of his spouse and she is therefore a competent witness for the prosecution. A voir dire is not required to determine the admissibility of her testimony: R. v. Giroux (1985), 19 C.C.C. (3d) 153 (Sask. Q.B.).

Comment by trial judge [subsec. (6)] – A comment in the trial Judge's charge to the jury that the accused's statement to the police was not under oath and subject to cross-examination was held (4:1) not to be improper: R. v. Marciniak, [1963] 2 C.C.C. 212, 40 C.R. 182 (Man.C.A.).

This subsection has no application where a trial Judge is sitting alone: Pratte v. Maher and The Queen, [1965] 1 C.C.C. 77, 43 C.R. 214 (Que. C.A.).

The trial judge may only draw an adverse inference from the failure of the accused to testify where the prosecution's evidence has reached the point where, standing alone, it could support a conclusion of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. The accused's failure to testify is not an independent piece of evidence to be placed on the evidentiary scale, but rather a feature of the trial which may assist in deciding what inferences should be drawn from the evidence. In the face of proven facts calling for an explanation, the failure of the accused to testify has evidentiary significance when the accused is in a unique position to provide such an explanation: R. v. Johnson (1993), 79 C.C.C. (3d) 42, 21 C.R. (4th) 336, 12 O.R. (3d) 340 (C.A.).

In R. v. McConnell and Beer, [1968] 4 C.C.C. 257, 4 C.R.N.S. 269 (S.C.C.), it was held (3:2), that the trial Judge's re-charge, explaining to the jury that, when he had charged them earlier that they did not have to accept exculpatory statements of the accused, they were not to take it that there was any onus on the accused to prove their innocence by going into the witness-box and testifying, and that they were not to be influenced by the failure of the accused to testify, did not amount to a violation of this subsection.

This subsection is to be interpreted in a purposive rather than literal manner, that purpose being to protect an accused from the danger of having his right not to testify presented to the jury in such a fashion as to suggest that the accused's silence is being used as a cloak for his guilt. Off-hand comments by the trial judge that evidence should not be disregarded based simply on speculation particularly when it was not contradicted and that the accused did not present a defence do not constitute comments prohibited by this subsection: R. v. Potvin (1989), 47 C.C.C. (3d) 289, 68 C.R. (3d) 193 (S.C.C.) (5:0).

It is incorrect for a trial Judge to direct a jury that they must not draw any unfavourable conclusion from the accused's failure to testify. It is open to the jury to draw such an adverse inference particularly where there is alibi evidence in his defence: R. v. Vezeau (1976), 28 C.C.C. (2d) 81, 66 D.L.R. (3d) 418, [1977] 2 S.C.R. 277 (7:2).

The statement by the trial Judge at the opening of the trial in outlining trial procedure that at the close of the Crown's case defence counsel may open to the jury and outline the evidence to be called does not infringe this section even where in fact no defence evidence is called: R. v. Agawa and Mallet (1975), 28 C.C.C. (2d) 379, 31 C.R.N.S. 293 (Ont. C.A.); R. v. Sherman (1979), 47 C.C.C. (2d) 521 (B.C.C.A.).

Comment by prosecutor [subsec. (6)] – An explanation by Crown counsel as to why he did not call the accused's wife, that is, that as a matter of law he was prohibited from doing so, was held not to constitute a comment prohibited by this subsection: R. v. Wildman (1981), 60 C.C.C. (2d) 289 (Ont. C.A.), rev'd on other grounds 14 C.C.C. (3d) 321, [1985] 2 S.C.R. 311.

A statement by the prosecutor of the obvious fact that the jury had not heard from the accused's wife in a case where the accused's defence was that he was asleep at home at the time of the offence, would seem not to constitute a comment prohibited by this subsection, and in any event did not result in any miscarriage of justice: R. v. Gray (1986), 25 C.C.C. (3d) 145 (B.C.C.A.).

A statement by the prosecutor that only the accused, alleged to have killed his common law spouse, knew what really happened and "now the rest of us know", and that the jury should consider the evidence put before them "as well as the evidence not put before you", when considered in context, did not violate this subsection: R. v. Emile (1988), 42 C.C.C. (3d) 408, 65 C.R. (3d) 135, [1988] 5 W.W.R. 481 (N.W.T.C.A.).

Subsection (6) does not apply to proceedings under s. 745 to review the period of parole ineligibility of a prisoner serving sentence for murder: Poulin v. Quebec (Attorney General) (1991), 68 C.C.C. (3d) 472 (Que. S.C.).

Application of Charter to subsec. (6) – Subsection (6) does not violate ss. 7 and 11(c) and (d) of the Charter of Rights. While the prosecutor and the trial judge are precluded from commenting on the failure of the accused to testify, his own counsel may make an appropriate comment and explain that the accused is under no duty to testify. Further, neither s. 11(c) nor (d) of the Charter requires that a trial judge specifically instruct jurors that no adverse inference can be drawn from the failure of the accused to testify: R. v. Boss (1988), 46 C.C.C. (3d) 523, 68 C.R. (3d) 123 (Ont. C.A.).

The Charter of Rights does not prevent counsel for one accused commenting on the failure of a co-accused to testify: R. v. Cuff (1989), 49 C.C.C. (3d) 65, 75 Nfld. & P.E.I.R. 1 (C.A.).

This section does not prohibit comment by counsel for the co-accused from commenting on an accused's failure to testify. Further, such comment does not violate s. 11(c) of the Charter. This does not mean, however, that counsel has free rein and, accordingly, could encourage the jury to speculate or draw unwarranted inferences: R. v. Naglik (1991), 65 C.C.C. (3d) 272, 3 O.R. (3d) 385, 46 O.A.C. 81 (C.A.), rev'd on other grounds 83 C.C.C. (3d) 526, 105 D.L.R. (4th) 712 (S.C.C.).

The accused having been cross-examined by his co-accused, whom he incriminated in his testimony, as to his failure to give a statement to the police, the trial judge was required to direct the jury that the accused had a right to pre-trial silence. Further, the judge should have instructed the jury that the exercise of this right was not evidence as to guilt or innocence but merely went to credibility: R. v. Crawford, [1995] 1 S.C.R. 858, 96 C.C.C. (3d) 481, 37 C.R. (4th) 197.

INCRIMINATING QUESTIONS / Answer not admissible against witness.

5. (1) No witness shall be excused from answering any question on the ground that the answer to the question may tend to criminate him, or may tend to establish his liability to a civil proceeding at the instance of the Crown or of any person.

(2) Where with respect to any question a witness objects to answer on the ground that his answer may tend to criminate him, or may tend to establish his liability to a civil proceeding at the instance of the Crown or of any person, and if but for this Act, or the Act of any provincial legislature, the witness would therefore have been excused from answering the question, then although the witness is by reason of this Act or the provincial Act compelled to answer, the answer so given shall not be used or admissible in evidence against him in any criminal trial or other criminal proceeding against him thereafter taking place, other than a prosecution for perjury in the giving of that evidence. R.S., c. E-10, s. 5.

ANNOTATIONS

Effect of provision on common law right – This section and comparable provincial legislation have abolished the common law right of a witness to refuse to answer a question on the grounds that it may incriminate him and the witness must answer questions put to him, notwithstanding he was then facing criminal charges in a foreign jurisdiction: Summa Corp v. Meier (1981), 127 D.L.R. (3d) 238, 30 B.C.L.R. 69 (C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused D.L.R. loc. cit. 39 N.R. 538.

Absent conduct on the part of the Crown amounting to an abuse of process, a witness who is charged in separate proceedings with the same offence as the accused is a compellable witness at the instance of the Crown at the accused's trial. However, s. 7 of the Charter provides protection to the witness in addition to the protection afforded by this section and s. 13 of the Charter. Thus, derivative evidence which could not have been obtained, or the significance of which could not have been appreciated, but for the testimony of the witness ought generally to be excluded under s. 7 of the Charter at the witness' subsequent trial since its admission would tend to affect the fairness of the trial: R. v. S. (R.J.), [1995] 1 S.C.R. 451, 96 C.C.C. (3d) 1, 36 C.R. (4th) 1. [Also see notes under ss. 7 and 13 of the Charter.]

Admission of evidence of refusal to comply with investigative tests – There is no general privilege against self-incrimination. The privilege in its modern form means only the right of a witness as qualified by this section to refuse to answer certain questions, if the answer will tend to incriminate the witness, and the absolute right of the accused to refuse to go into the witness box. Thus, in particular, evidence may be led of the accused's refusal to see a Crown psychiatrist where the accused relies on the defence of insanity: R. v. Sweeney (No. 2) (1977), 35 C.C.C. (2d) 245, 76 D.L.R. (3d) 211, 16 O.R. (2d) 814 (C.A.).

The privilege against self-incrimination guaranteed by s. 2(d) of the Canadian Bill of Rights is as set out in this section and with respect to an accused, the privilege is the right to stand mute. The privilege extends to the accused qua witness not qua accused, and is concerned with testimonial compulsion specifically, not compulsion generally. Thus, in circumstances where it is relevant, evidence may be led by the Crown as to the accused's refusal to participate in a lineup: Marcoux and Solomon v. The Queen (1975), 24 C.C.C. (2d) 1, [1976] 1 S.C.R. 763, 60 D.L.R. (3d) 119 (9:0).

Where it can be reasonably anticipated that defence counsel would challenge the adequacy of the police identification procedures the Crown may anticipate that the trial judge or the defence would make adverse comments on the unexplained absence of an identification parade and the danger of a "one on one" or court-room identification and lead evidence as to the accused's refusal to attend for a line-up or provide a photograph for a photo line-up. The evidence is admissible however for a limited purpose, to explain the absence of an identification parade, and not admissible as evidence of a consciousness of guilt: R. v. Shortreed (1990), 54 C.C.C. (3d) 292, 75 C.R. (3d) 306 (Ont. C.A.).

Where, however, the suspect's conduct goes beyond a mere refusal to participate in a line-up or provide a photograph and he takes extraordinary efforts to prevent the taking of a photograph by altering or concealing his facial appearance then, in the absence of a plausible explanation, the jury is entitled to draw an inference that he has something to conceal and that this is evidence of a consciousness of guilt: R. v. Shortreed, supra.

Application of subsec. (2) – If a witness does not avail himself of the protection of this section his answers may be given against him at his own trial notwithstanding that he did not know his rights under this subsection: Tass v. The King (1946), 87 C.C.C. 97, 2 C.R. 503 (S.C.C.).

The objection may only be made after the question is asked but in practice a trial judge may permit a general objection for the ensuing series of questions to follow: R. v. Mottola And Vallee (1959), 124 C.C.C. 288, 31 C.R. 4 (Ont. C.A.); R. v. Cote (1979), 50 C.C.C. (2d) 564, 8 C.R. (3d) 171 sub nom. A.-G. Que. v. Cote (Que. C.A.), and the objection may even be made by counsel prior to the witness being sworn: R. v. Chaperon (1979), 52 C.C.C. (2d) 85 (Ont. C.A.).

However, where the objection is made only part way through the witness' testimony the presiding officer, such as a coroner, has no power to extend the protection of this section retroactively back to the commencement of the testimony: R. v. Vigeant (1982), 3 C.C.C. (3d) 445 (Que. C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused C.C.C. loc. cit., 46 N.R. 260n.

The testimony of an accused on the voir dire as to the admissibility of his confession in answer to questions as to whether the confession is true is inadmissible on the trial proper even if the accused does not claim the protection under this subsection. In fact it is doubtful whether this subsection can apply in such circumstances: R. v. Magdish, Bennett and Sweet (1978), 41 C.C.C. (2d) 449, 3 C.R. (3d) 377 (Ont. H.C.J.). Support for this view may be found in the statement of Dickson, J., for the plurality in Erven v. The Queen (1978), 44 C.C.C. (2d) 76, 92 D.L.R. (3d) 507, 6 C.R. (3d) 97 (S.C.C.) (6:3) that the "accused may testify on the voir dire while remaining silent during the trial. Evidence on the voir dire cannot be used in the trial itself".

Whatever the scope of this subsection, at least where the statement is ruled inadmissible, the accused may not be cross-examined by the Crown at the trial proper on his testimony given at the voir dire: R. v. Coughlin and Nicholson (1982), 3 C.C.C. (3d) 259 (Ont. C.A.), applying Wong Kam-Ming v. The Queen, [1979] 2 W.L.R. 81 (P.C.).

The words "a prosecution for perjury" refer to that specific offence and thus the protection afforded by this subsection would extend to a subsequent prosecution for giving contradictory evidence contrary to s. 136 of the Criminal Code: R. v. Chaperon, supra.

This subsection only prevents the use of the previous evidence at the witness' own trial on a charge laid against him: R. v. Vermette (No. 3) (1982), 68 C.C.C. (2d) 572 (Que. S.C.).

This section does not prevent cross-examination of an accused on testimony given in an earlier proceeding, notwithstanding an objection under subsec. (2), where the purpose of the cross-examination is to impeach the accused's credibility and not to incriminate him: R. v. Kuldip (1990), 61 C.C.C. (3d) 385, [1990] 3 S.C.R. 618, 1 C.R. (4th) 285 (4:3).

Effect of s. 13 of the Charter of Rights [subsec. (2)] – Cases under this subsection must now be considered in light of s. 13 of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. The leading case under s. 13 is Dubois v. The Queen (1985), 22 C.C.C. (3d) 513, 48 C.R. (3d) 193, [1985] 2 S.C.R. 350 (6:1) where it was held as follows: (1) section 13 applies although the first proceeding took place prior to the Charter's proclamation; (2) section 13 applies to a technically voluntary witness such as the accused at his own trial and its protection does not depend on an objection, unlike this subsection; (3) the evidence need not have been incriminating in the first proceedings; (4) any evidence which the Crown tenders as part of its case against the accused is "used to incriminate" within the meaning of s. 13; (5) the retrial of the same offence following an appeal is another proceeding and the accused's testimony at the first trial can therefore not be tendered at the second trial as part of the Crown's case.

Some of the issues left unresolved by Dubois v. The Queen are: (1) whether testimony by an accused at his own preliminary inquiry is admissible at the trial, which in turn may depend on whether s. 541 of the Criminal Code is a reasonable limit within the meaning of s. 1 of the Charter; however, see the pre-Dubois case of R. v. Yakeleya (1985), 20 C.C.C. (3d) 193, 46 C.R. (3d) 282 (Ont. C.A.); (2) whether the accused's testimony at a voir dire at his trial is admissible; however, see dissenting reasons of McIntyre J. in Dubois at p. 528 C.C.C.

In the subsequent case of R. v. Mannion (1986), 28 C.C.C. (3d) 544, 53 C.R. (3d) 193, [1986] 2 S.C.R. 272, [1986] 6 W.W.R. 525 (7:0), the court held that cross-examination of the accused on his testimony at a prior trial was a violation of s. 13, the cross-examination being directed to show that the accused had left the jurisdiction out of consciousness of guilt and thus its purpose was to incriminate the accused.

Section 13 does not prevent cross-examination of an accused on testimony given in another proceeding where the purpose of the cross-examination is to impeach the accused's credibility and not to incriminate him. In such a case, however, the previous statement may not be used to establish the truth of its contents and the trial judge must so instruct the jury: R. v. Kuldip, supra.

Section 13 of the Charter is violated by testimony of a police officer that he was able to identify the accused as a result of hearing him testify in another proceeding: R. v. Skinner (1988), 42 C.C.C. (3d) 575 (Ont. C.A.).

EVIDENCE OF MUTE.

6. A witness who is unable to speak may give his evidence in any other manner in which he can make it intelligible. R.S., c. E-10, s. 6.

EXPERT WITNESSES.

7. Where, in any trial or other proceeding, criminal or civil, it is intended by the prosecution or the defence, or by any party, to examine as witnesses professional or other experts entitled according to the law or practice to give opinion evidence, not more than five of such witnesses may be called on either side without the leave of the court or judge or person presiding. R.S., c. E-10, s. 7.

ANNOTATIONS

Where the opinion evidence played a minor and insignificant part of the evidence the failure of the Crown to obtain leave to call over five experts was excused: R. v. Vincent (1963), 40 C.R. 365, 42 W.W.R. 638 (Man. C.A.).

Ordinarily an expert medical witness may only be asked to volunteer his opinion upon a hypothetical question based on proven facts and the only time when he may give his opinion based on all the trial evidence that he has observed is when there was no conflict in the evidence and it was made clear to the jury that that evidence was the foundation for his opinion: Bleta v. The Queen, [1965] 1 C.C.C. 1, 44 C.R. 193 (S.C.C.) (7:0).

The doctrine of privilege of communication does not apply to expert witnesses in a criminal case: R. v. Potvin (1971), 16 C.R.N.S. 233 (Que. C.A.).

It is only in unusual circumstances that expert medical evidence is admissible to attack the credibility of a witness. Such evidence would only be admissible where there is some hidden fact which affects a witness' credibility which only expert medical evidence can reveal: R. v. French (1977), 37 C.C.C. (2d) 201 (Ont. C.A.). (An appeal by the accused to the S.C.C. on other grounds was dismissed 47 C.C.C. (2d) 411, [1980] 1 S.C.R. 158, 98 D.L.R. (3d) 385 (7:0).)

HANDWRITING COMPARISON.

8. Comparison of a disputed writing with any writing proved to the satisfaction of the court to be genuine shall be permitted to be made by witnesses, and such writings, and the evidence of witnesses respecting those writings, may be submitted to the court and jury as proof of the genuineness or otherwise of the writing in dispute. R.S., c. E-10, s. 8.

ANNOTATIONS

A witness may be competent to prove a person's handwriting through having carried on regular correspondence or having frequently seen the person's handwriting: Pitre v. The King (1932), 59 C.C.C. 148, [1933] 1 D.L.R. 417 (S.C.C.).

Particularly in light of the possibility of calling a witness under this section a judge ought not himself become a witness by attempting to compare signatures, in this case the signature of the accused on the appearance notice with a signature of a certificate of business name and style which the Crown relied upon to prove the accused's connection with premises alleged to have contained gaming devices: R. v. Boudreau (1987), 81 N.B.R. (2d) 148 (C.A.).

ADVERSE WITNESSES / Previous statements by witness not proved adverse.

9. (1) A party producing a witness shall not be allowed to impeach his credit by general evidence of bad character, but if the witness, in the opinion of the court, proves adverse, the party may contradict him by other evidence, or, by leave of the court, may prove that the witness made at other times a statement inconsistent with his present testimony, but before the last mentioned proof can be given the circumstances of the supposed statement, sufficient to designate the particular occasion, shall be mentioned to the witness, and he shall be asked whether or not he did make the statement.

(2) Where the party producing a witness alleges that the witness made at other times a statement in writing, reduced to writing, or recorded on audio tape or video tape or otherwise, inconsistent with the witness' present testimony, the court may, without proof that the witness is adverse, grant leave to that party to cross-examine the witness as to the statement and the court may consider the cross-examination in determining whether in the opinion of the court the witness is adverse. R.S., c. E-10, s. 9; 1994, c. 44, s. 85.

ANNOTATIONS

Proof of statement of adverse witness [subsec. (1)] – The difficult problem of the meaning to be assigned to the word “adverse” has been considered by a number of courts. The majority of the Ontario Court of Appeal in Wawanese Mutual Ins. Co. v. Hanes, [1963] 1 C.C.C. 176, 28 D.L.R. (2d) 386 (Ont. C.A.) held in relation to the comparable provision of the Ontario Evidence Act, R.S.O. 1950, c. 119 that “adverse” was not limited to hostility but included a witness who, though not hostile, was unfavourable in the sense of assuming by his testimony a position opposite to that of the party calling him. This position apparently has been accepted in Ontario as representing the law with respect to this subsection. See: R. v. Cassibo, infra; R. v. Gushue (No. 4) (1975), 30 C.R.N.S. 178 (Ont. Co. Ct.). The narrower view that “adverse” means “hostile” is represented by the dissenting judgment of Roach, J.A., in Wawanesa Mutual Ins. Co. v. Hanes, following the judgment of the Court in Greenough v. Eccles (1859), 28 L.J.C.P. 160 in relation to a similar provision in the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854 (U.K.), c. 125. This narrower view has been adopted by several courts, see: R. v. Wyman (1958), 122 C.C.C. 65, 28 C.R. 371 (N.B.S.C. App. Div.) and R. v. McIntyre, [1963] 2 C.C.C. 380, 43 C.R. 262 (N.S.S.C. in banco). In this latter case reference was made by Ilsley, C.J., to Wawanesa Mutual Ins. Co. v. Hanes and to a passage in Reference re R. v. Coffin (1956), 114 C.C.C. 1 at p. 24, [1956] S.C.R. 191 at p. 213, where Kellock, J. appeared to equate adversity with hostility which he defined as "not giving her evidence fairly and with a desire to tell the truth because of a hostile animus towards the prosecution".

On the voir dire to determine adversity the trial Judge may receive evidence of both oral and written statements by the witness which are alleged to be inconsistent with his present testimony. However, the Judge after hearing evidence with respect to the making of a previous oral statement may refuse to declare the witness adverse or may refuse to grant leave to prove the statement at the trial proper because the evidence with respect to its making is too conflicting, unsatisfactory or the words allegedly spoken are ambiguous. In some circumstances a Judge may find a witness adverse solely on the basis of a previous inconsistent statement. On the voir dire the witness should only be examined, not cross-examined, on the prior inconsistent oral statement: R. v. Cassibo (1982), 70 C.C.C. (2d) 498, 39 O.R. (2d) 288 (C.A.).

In some circumstances, to preclude an accused by mechanical application of the adverse witness requirement of this subsection from cross-examining a witness whom he has called with respect to a prior confession made by the witness that he, rather than the accused, had committed the crime might deprive the accused of his constitutional right to a fair trial as guaranteed by the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, and a court has a residual discretion to relax in favour of the accused a strict rule of evidence where it is necessary to prevent a miscarriage of justice and where the danger against which an exclusionary rule aims to provide a safeguard does not exist. However, there should be some indication of the reliability of the alleged prior confession as a basis for holding that the refusal, without a finding that the witness is adverse, to permit cross-examination on the witness' prior confession by an accused calling a witness, will deprive the accused of his constitutional right to a fair trial: R. v. Williams (1985), 18 C.C.C. (3d) 356, 44 C.R. (3d) 351 (Ont. C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused C.C.C. and C.R. loc. cit.

A witness may be allowed to refresh his memory by reference to his earlier deposition, such as the preliminary hearing transcript, unless the object of the examination is to discredit or contradict the party's own witness in which case the procedure under this section must be followed: Reference re R. v. Coffin (1956), 114 C.C.C. 1, [1956] S.C.R. 191, 23 C.R. 1.

Cross-examination without proof of adversity [subsec. (2)] – In R. v. Milgaard (1971), 2 C.C.C. (2d) 206, 14 C.R.N.S. 34 (Sask. C.A.) at the trial for non-capital murder, in the absence of the jury, the Crown in making an application under this subsection produced a statement in writing allegedly inconsistent with a witness' evidence-in-chief. The trial judge read the statement, ruled that he was satisfied that it was inconsistent, and recalled the jury and allowed Crown counsel to cross-examine her on it. She admitted signing the pages but could not remember the contents. Upon application by the Crown she was declared hostile and upon further cross-examination on that statement she admitted remembering the events referred to in it. It was held (5:0) that the trial judge's error in declaring, without hearing evidence, that the previous statement was inconsistent, and allowing her to be cross-examined on it, was in those particular circumstances not prejudicial to the appellant, and applied the present s. 686(1)(b)(iii) to dismiss the appeal. In its reasons for judgment the Court recommended the procedure for an application under this subsection where a jury is trying the case at p.221-2 C.C.C.:

“(1) Counsel should advise the Court that he desires to make an application under s. 9(2) of the Canada Evidence Act.

(2) When the Court is so advised, the Court should direct the jury to retire.

(3) Upon retirement of the jury, counsel should advise the learned trial Judge of the particulars of the application and produce for him the alleged statement in writing, or the writing to which the statement has been reduced.

(4) The learned trial Judge should read the statement, or writing, and determine whether, in fact, there is an inconsistency between such statement or writing and the evidence the witness has given in Court. If the learned trial Judge decides there is no inconsistency, then that ends the matter. If he finds there is an inconsistency, he should call upon counsel to prove the statement or writing.

(5) Counsel should then prove the statement, or writing. This may be done by producing the statement or writing to the witness. If the witness admits the statement, or the statement reduced to writing, such proof would be sufficient. If the witness does not so admit, counsel then could provide the necessary proof by other evidence.

(6) If the witness admits making the statement, counsel for the opposing party should have the right to cross-examine as to the circumstances under which the statement was made. A similar right to cross-examine should be granted if the statement is proved by other witnesses. It may be that he will be able to establish that there were circumstances which would render it improper for the learned trial Judge to permit the cross-examination, notwithstanding the apparent inconsistencies. The opposing counsel, too, should have the right to call evidence as to factors relevant to obtaining the statement, for the purpose of attempting to show that cross-examination should not be permitted.

(7) The learned trial Judge should then decide whether or not he will permit the cross-examination. If so, the jury should be recalled.”

This procedure was referred to with apparent approval in McInroy and Rouse v. The Queen, infra.

While it may be appropriate to attempt to refresh the memory of an honest but forgetful witness by showing him the previous statement, where the Crown witness was an accomplice whose testimony was inconsistent with the previous statement and who even Crown counsel considered was not acting honestly then the trial judge should hold a voir dire following the procedure set out in R. v. Milgaard, supra. The trial judge ought not to put the prior statement to the witness himself and conduct a cross-examination before the conclusion of that procedure: R. v. Booth (1984), 15 C.C.C. (3d) 237, 58 B.C.L.R. 63 (C.A.).

The notes of a police officer as to his interview with a witness which the witness has never confirmed prior to testifying do not constitute a statement in writing or reduced to writing within the meaning of this subsection: R. v. Handy (1978), 45 C.C.C. (2d) 232, 5 C.R. (3d) 97 (B.C.C.A.).

However, a conversation in the form of questions and answers recorded by the officer at the time although translated in the process from French to English is a statement reduced to writing within the meaning of this subsection: R. v. Carpenter (No. 2) (1982), 1 C.C.C. (3d) 149, 31 C.R. (3d) 261 (Ont. C.A.).

A trial Judge may first direct how the witness should be examined before deciding whether or not to grant leave to counsel to cross-examine: Stewart v. The Queen (1976), 31 C.C.C. (2d) 497, 71 D.L.R. (3d) 449, [1977] 2 S.C.R. 748 (9:0).

The trial Judge has a discretion whether or not to permit cross-examination on the prior inconsistent statement, depending on whether the ends of justice would be best attained by allowing it: R. v. Carpenter (No. 2), supra.

In R. v. Soobrian (1995), 96 C.C.C. (3d) 208, 21 O.R. (3d) 603, 76 O.A.C. 7 (C.A.), Crown counsel, before calling the witness, a friend of the accused, was aware that he would testify in conformity to a second statement he had given to the police and as he had testified at the preliminary inquiry, and thereby exculpate the accused. Crown counsel should not have been permitted to cross-examine his own witness on an earlier statement where the admitted purpose of the cross-examination was to provide a foundation to argue that the accused were not telling the truth, because the Crown witness was not telling the truth in his testimony. Absent an evidentiary foundation to support the Crown's contention that the witness was acting in collusion with the accused, the cross-examination should not have been permitted.

There is no requirement that the witness be proved adverse before cross-examination may be permitted under this subsection. Further, even where the witness simply claims he has no recollection of the matters which are contained in the prior statement it is open to the Judge, having heard the witness, to find that he is lying about his lack of recollection and that there is therefore an inconsistency within the meaning of this section: McInroy and Rouse v. The Queen (1978), 42 C.C.C. (2d) 481, 89 D.L.R. (3d) 609, [1979] 1 S.C.R. 588 (7:0).

In a proper case the court may grant a party leave to cross-examine his own witness on a prior inconsistent statement even at the stage of re-examination where the witness in cross-examination has given evidence on a material matter which is contrary to the prior statement: R. v. Moore (1984), 15 C.C.C. (3d) 541 (Ont. C.A.) leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused C.C.C. loc. cit.

Evidentiary value of prior statement – Where a witness is cross-examined pursuant to this subsection on a prior inconsistent statement and does not adopt the statement then it merely goes to the witness' credibility and is not admissible for the truth of its contents: Deacon v. The King (1947), 89 C.C.C. 1, 3 C.R. 265, [1947] S.C.R. 531 (5:0).

In certain circumstances a prior inconsistent statement will be admissible for its truth, notwithstanding the "orthodox" rule enunciated in Deacon v. The King, supra. For the statement to be admissible for its truth, the party tendering the statement must establish the following on a voir dire: The party must show on a balance of probabilities that there are sufficient indicia of reliability, namely, "(i) the statement is made under oath or solemn affirmation following a warning as to the existence of sanctions and the significance of the oath or affirmation, (ii) the statement is videotaped in its entirety, and (iii) the opposing party, whether the Crown or defence, has a full opportunity to cross-examine the witness respecting the statement . . . Alternatively, other circumstantial guarantees of reliability may suffice to render such statements substantively admissible, provided that the judge is satisfied that the circumstances provide adequate assurances of reliability". In addition, where the prior statement was made to a person in authority, the judge must be satisfied that the statement was made voluntarily and that there are no factors which would tend to bring the administration of justice into disrepute if the statement were admitted for its truth. Even if the statement is admitted as substantive evidence, the trial judge must direct the jury to consider carefully the circumstances in assessing the credibility of the prior inconsistent statement relative to the witness' testimony at trial: R. v. B. (K.G.) (1993), 79 C.C.C. (3d) 257, 19 C.R. (4th) 1, [1993] 2 S.C.R. 740 (7:0).

In R. v. Biscette (1995), 99 C.C.C. (3d) 326, 97 W.A.C. 81, 169 A.R. 81 (C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. granted 101 C.C.C. (3d) vi, it was held that it was open to the judge to make substantive use of the witness' preliminary hearing testimony when she recanted that testimony at the accused's trial.

Even where the requirements laid down in R. v. B. (K.G.), supra have not been met, it would be open to the trier of fact to make substantive use of the prior inconsistent statement of the complainant where there is a striking similarity between the contents of that statement and the accused's confession. The trial judge must as well be satisfied on a balance of probabilities that there was neither reason nor opportunity for the declarants to collude and no improper influence by interrogators or other third parties. Having determined on a balance of probabilities that the statement is likely to be reliable, the trial judge must also be satisfied that the prior statement relates evidence which would be admissible as the witness' sole testimony and that the statement was not the product of coercion of any form, whether involving threats, promises, excessively leading questions by the investigator or other person in a position of authority, or other forms of investigatory misconduct: R. v. U. (F.J.), [1995] 3 S.C.R. 764, 101 C.C.C. (3d) 97, 42 C.R. (4th) 133.

Exceptionally a prior inconsistent statement may be admissible for its truth in favour of the accused where there is some persuasive assurance of trustworthiness of the statement: R. v. Ullrich (1991), 69 C.C.C. (3d) 473 (B.C.C.A.).

CROSS-EXAMINATION AS TO PREVIOUS STATEMENTS / Deposition of witness in criminal investigation.

10. (1) On any trial a witness may be cross-examined as to previous statements that the witness made in writing, or that have been reduced to writing, or recorded on audio tape or video tape or otherwise, relative to the subject-matter of the case, without the writing being shown to the witness or the witness being given the opportunity to listen to the audio tape or view the video tape or otherwise take cognizance of the statements, but, if it is intended to contradict the witness, the witness' attention must, before the contradictory proof can be given, be called to those parts of the statement that are to be used for the purpose of so contradicting the witness, and the judge, at any time during the trial, may require the production of the writing or tape or other medium for inspection, and thereupon make such use of it for the purposes of the trial as the judge thinks fit.

(2) A deposition of a witness, purporting to have been taken before a justice on the investigation of a criminal charge and to be signed by the witness and the justice, returned to and produced from the custody of the proper officer shall be presumed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, to have been signed by the witness. R.S., c. E-10, s. 10; 1994, c. 44, s. 86.

ANNOTATIONS

Production of statements or notes – Where the witness has not used his notes to refresh his memory in examination-in-chief he cannot be required to produce them on cross-examination: R. v. Kerenko, Cohen And Stewart, [1965] 3 C.C.C.52, 45 C.R.291 (Man.C.A.).

A preliminary inquiry is not a trial, so subsec. (1) is not applicable and the presiding judge does not have the power to order production for the defence of a Crown witness' previous written statement: Patterson v. The Queen (1970), 2 C.C.C. (2d) 227, 10 C.R.N.S. 55 (S.C.C., 5:2). Contra, R. v. Harbison, Harbison And Gerz (1972), 9 C.C.C. (2d) 259, 20 C.R.N.S.336 (B.C.Prov.Ct.).

However in R. v. Littlejohn (1972), 21 C.R.N.S.349, [1972] 3 W.W.R.476 (Man. Mag. Ct.) it was noted that s. 2(e) of the Canadian Bill of Rights, which gives the accused a fair hearing, was not mentioned in Patterson v. The Queen, supra and accordingly it was held that, a preliminary inquiry being a hearing, the accused was entitled to an order for production of a Crown witness' previous written statement for cross-examination.

The trial judge has a power at trial to require the production of statements made by Crown witnesses for use by the defence in order to ensure a fair trial and guarantee that an accused can make full answer and defence. The trial judge's discretion should be exercised in favour of production in the absence of any cogent reason to the contrary. There is also a power of production under this section and where it is established that a statement has been made within the meaning of this section then, generally, counsel for the accused is entitled to a copy of the statement. There is a broad right of cross-examination under this section, the exercise of which must be left in the hands of counsel for the accused. The statement given by a witness is important not only for purposes of cross-examination, but it may also disclose information which the witness has forgotten. While this section seems to imply that the trial judge may examine the statement without disclosing it to counsel, it is not appropriate that the decision should be left solely to the trial judge to determine whether the statement is contradictory or of any use to the defence. The trial judge is not privy to information available to the defence: R. v. Doiron (1985), 19 C.C.C. (3d) 350 (N.S.S.C. App. Div.).

As to disclosure of statements, aside from this section, to defence, see notes under ss. 603 and 650 of the Criminal Code.

Meaning of previous statement in writing or reduced to writing – A report prepared by a police officer from notes of a conversation with the witness the contents of which the witness has never seen, read nor otherwise verified is not a statement within the meaning of this subsection: R. v. Cherpak (1978), 42 C.C.C. (2d) 166, [1978] 5 W.W.R. 315 (Alta. S.C. App. Div.).

A “will say” statement which was based on a transcript of the witness’ videotaped statements was a statement reduced to writing within the meaning of s. 10 if the document was an accurate transcript of the things said by the witness during the interviews, whether or not the witness was involved in the actual preparation of the document: R. v. Morgan (1993), 80 C.C.C. (3d) 16 (Ont. C.A.).

Procedure – As this section makes clear, at least where it is not intended to contradict the witness by proof of the statement, there is no requirement that it be shown to the witness: R. v. Valley (1986), 26 C.C.C. (3d) 207 (Ont. C.A.).

The distinction between this section and s. 9 must be kept in mind. In particular, the trial Judge has no right to determine whether the previous statement is inconsistent before permitting it to be put to the witness in cross-examination: Cormier v. The Queen (1973), 25 C.R.N.S. 94 (5:0) (Que. C.A.); R. v. Savion and Mizrahi (1980), 52 C.C.C. (2d) 276, 13 C.R. (3d) 259 (Ont. C.A.).

It was held in R. v. Peebles (1989), 49 C.C.C. (3d) 168 (B.C.C.A.), that the accused could not be cross-examined on statements made by his counsel in the course of a show cause hearing.

On a joint trial counsel for the co-accused may cross-examine another accused on a previous statement whether or not it is shown to be voluntary. The only limitation is that the trial Judge has a very significant discretion to hold in balance fairness to the witness in his role as an accused and fairness to the accused whose counsel is cross-examining: R. v. Ma, Ho and Lai (1978), 44 C.C.C. (2d) 537, 6 C.R. (3d) 325 and S-45 (B.C.C.A.).

Where one accused voluntarily enters the witness box and gives evidence which incriminates his co-accused, much as a Crown witness might have done, then justice requires that he be liable to impeachment by counsel for the co-accused on a previous inconsistent statement even if that statement was to a person in authority and was not proved voluntary. Such an accused is not entitled to the same rights he would have as an accused if the Crown were adducing the statement as part of its case or was seeking to cross-examine the accused on it: R. v. Logan (1988), 46 C.C.C. (3d) 354, 67 O.R. (2d) 87 (C.A.).

Evidentiary value of statement [subsec. (1)] – The Crown is not required to produce for the accused as of right a witness previous statement. In any event such a statement is not admissible as proof of the contents but only to test the witness credibility: R. v. Tousignant (1962), 133 C.C.C. 270, 38 C.R. 319 (B.C.C.A.).

A prior statement by a witness, even if sworn, is, if not adopted by the witness, not evidence of the truth of its contents but rather is only admissible with respect to the credibility of the witness. Further, the fact that the trial Judge requires its production pursuant to this subsection and has it marked as an exhibit does not make the statement evidence of the truth of its contents: R. v. Campbell, (1977), 38 C.C.C. (2d) 6, 17 O.R. (2d) 673, 1 C.R. (3d) 309 (C.A.).

It is open to the trial Judge to mark the written statement as an exhibit. Further, while counsel has the right to contradict the witness by the statement, the witness has the right to show that the writing generally, not merely those parts referred to by counsel, does not necessarily contradict his testimony. This may be done in re-examination or by reference to the writing generally: R. v. Smith (1983), 35 C.R. (3d) 86, 45 B.C.L.R. 286 (B.C.C.A.); R. v. Newall et al. (1983), 9 C.C.C. (3d) 519, [1984] 2 W.W.R. 131 (B.C.C.A.).

A statement upon which a witness has been cross-examined under this section and re-examined is not evidence and should not be made an exhibit which goes to the jury room during the jury's deliberations: R. v. Rowbotham (1988), 41 C.C.C. (3d) 1, 63 C.R. (3d) 113 (Ont. C.A.).

As indicated by the decisions in R. v. Smith, R. v. Newall and R. v. Rowbotham, supra, there is a division of opinion as to the use to be made of a prior inconsistent written statement. In R. v. Rodney (1988), 46 C.C.C. (3d) 322 (B.C.C.A.) the court reaffirmed its view that in a proper case the trial judge may permit the statement to go to the jury as an exhibit. However, if the cross-examination has not been extensive the proper exercise of the discretion might lead the trial judge to permit none or only edited parts of the writing to be marked as an exhibit. To a similar effect, see: R. v. Campbell (1990), 57 C.C.C. (3d) 200, 106 A.R. 308 (C.A.).

CROSS-EXAMINATION AS TO PREVIOUS ORAL STATEMENTS.

11. Where a witness, on cross-examination as to a former statement made by him relative to the subject-matter of the case and inconsistent with his present testimony, does not distinctly admit that he did make the statement, proof may be given that he did in fact make it, but before that proof can be given the circumstances of the supposed statement, sufficient to designate the particular occasion, shall be mentioned to the witness, and he shall be asked whether or not he did make the statement. R.S., c. E-10, s. 11.

ANNOTATIONS

Editor's Note: The heading to this section is somewhat misleading. This section applies to both oral and written statements and provides the procedure for when any prior statement may be proved. Cross-examination on a prior written statement is governed by s. 10. Cross-examination on a prior oral statement is governed by the common law but the procedure is not unlike the procedure laid down in s. 10 with respect to written statements. See the article by A.W. Bryant, "The adversary's Witness: Cross-examination and proof of prior inconsistent statements" (1984), 62 Can. Bar Rev. 43.

Where at trial a hostile witness is confronted with previous inconsistent preliminary inquiry answers which she either refuses to acknowledge or denies the truth of, the jury must be instructed that those previous answers only are to be considered in assessing the credibility of her trial testimony and may not be accepted as being truthful unless she specifically accepts or adopts them as being true: R. v. Hamelin (1972), 10 C.C.C. (2d) 114 (B.C.C.A.).

It is essential that a jury be instructed that those discrepancies between a witness' previous statement and his evidence at trial may only be considered to assess the witness' credibility and not as evidence of the truth of the previous statement: R. v. Blunden (1976), 30 C.C.C. (2d) 122 (Ont. C.A.).

This section is confined to allowing the leading of evidence to rebut testimony shown to be inconsistent with a former statement made by the witness: R. v. Krause (1984), 12 C.C.C. (3d) 392 (B.C.C.A.), revd on other grounds 29 C.C.C. (3d) 385, 54 C.R. (3d) 294, [1986] 2 S.C.R. 466.

It was held in R. v. Grant (1989), 49 C.C.C. (3d) 410, 71 C.R. (3d) 231, [1989] 5 W.W.R. 762 (Man. C.A.), that counsel for the accused need not have complied with the provisions of this section in order to prove a statement by the complainant, in a sexual assault case, that she had agreed to accept and had accepted payment of money for a sexual act. This statement constituted an admission by a party and was admissible as such and not merely as a prior inconsistent statement. While not formally a party, the complainant is in the position of a party for the purposes of the admissions exception to the hearsay rule. It was therefore sufficient that counsel complied with the common law rule that requires before contradicting a witness that, in fairness, the witness be given notice of the allegation being made against her and an opportunity to explain herself.

Where defence counsel has failed to cross-examine a witness including the complainant in a prior inconsistent statement the trial judge has a discretion to permit extrinsic evidence of the statement to be given, with the Crown being given an opportunity to call the witness in reply: R. v. MacDonald (1989), 48 C.C.C. (3d) 230, 90 N.S.R. (2d) 218 (C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused 50 C.C.C. (3d) vii.

If what the Crown witness said to another person is relevant then the jury ought to be allowed to hear the statement even if the procedure set out in this section was not followed. It would then be open to the judge to allow the Crown to call the witness in rebuttal: R. v. Demerchant (1991), 66 C.C.C. (3d) 49 (N.B.C.A.).

EXAMINATION AS TO PREVIOUS CONVICTION / How conviction proved.

12. (1) A witness may be questioned as to whether he has been convicted of any offence, and, on being so questioned, if he either denies the fact or refuses to answer, the opposite party may prove the conviction.

NOTE: Section 12(1) re-enacted by 1992, c. 47, s. 66 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council) as subsecs. (1) and (1.1). The text, which is not yet in force and therefore printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

EXAMINATION AS TO PREVIOUS CONVICTIONS/Proof of previous convictions.

12. (1) A witness may be questioned as to whether the witness has been convicted of any offence, excluding any offence designated as a contravention under the Contraventions Act, but including such an offence where the conviction was entered after a trial on an indictment.

(1.1) If the witness either denies the fact or refuses to answer, the opposite party may prove the conviction.

(2) A conviction may be proved by producing

- (a) a certificate containing the substance and effect only, omitting the formal part, of the indictment and conviction, if it is for an indictable offence, or a copy of the summary conviction, if it is for an offence punishable upon summary conviction, purporting to be signed by the clerk of the court or other officer having the custody of the records of the court in which the conviction, if on indictment, was had, or to which the conviction, if summary, was returned; and
- (b) proof of identity. R.S., c. E-10, s. 12.

ANNOTATIONS

Meaning of "conviction" and "any offence" [subsec. (1)] – A "conviction" includes sentence so that a cross-examination as to credibility on a previous conviction may include the penalty imposed: R. v. Boyce (1975), 23 C.C.C. (2d) 16, 28 C.R.N.S. 336 (Ont. C.A.).

A witness, including the accused, may be cross-examined as to his record under the [now repealed] Juvenile Delinquents Act at least where the offence would have been punishable under the Criminal Code if the witness had been an adult at the time of its commission: Morris v. The Queen (1978), 43 C.C.C. (2d) 129, 6 C.R. (3d) 36, [1979] 1 S.C.R. 405 (5:4).

The words "any offence" may include conviction for offences outside of Canada. However, only the process of adjudication of guilt of a character which would constitute a conviction under Canadian law should be considered a conviction for impeachment purposes. The accused would be entitled to explain the circumstances surrounding the conviction and it may be that if the circumstances surrounding the "conviction" in another jurisdiction were so oppressive then the judge would be justified in ruling that the adjudication was not a conviction at all: R. v. Stratton (1978), 42 C.C.C. (2d) 449, 90 D.L.R. (3d) 420, 3 C.R. (3d) 289 (Ont. C.A.).

The term “any offence” in this section is wide enough to permit cross-examination on any offence under a federal statute and not merely offences which truly relate to the criminal law power of the federal government. Thus, the accused could be cross-examined on her previous convictions under the Unemployment Insurance Act (Can.): R. v. Watkins (1992), 70 C.C.C. (3d) 341 (Ont. C.A.).

In Hewson v. The Queen (1978), 42 C.C.C. (2d) 507, 89 D.L.R. (3d) 573, [1978] 2 S.C.R. 111 (5:4) the majority held that an accused’s previous conviction was admissible under s. 360 of the Criminal Code although that conviction was then under appeal. There would seem to be no reason why the same principle should not apply where this section is invoked and in fact the minority dealt with the problem without apparently distinguishing between s. 360 and this section, the previous conviction having been elicited during cross-examination of the accused.

Cross-examination of accused on other misconduct – Subject to cross-examination on previous convictions as permitted by this section an accused may not be cross-examined upon past misconduct or discreditable associations for the purpose of attacking his credibility, unless such cross-examination is relevant to prove the falsity of his own evidence: R. v. Davison, Derosie and MacArthur (1974), 20 C.C.C. (2d) 424, 6 O.R. (2d) 103 (Ont. C.A.).

Procedure – A Crown witness may disclose his previous record during his examination-in-chief: R. v. Boyko (1975), 28 C.C.C. (2d) 193 (B.C.C.A.).

Similarly, defence counsel may lead the accused’s criminal record during his examination-in-chief and whether the criminal record is brought out in direct or in cross-examination it goes only to the accused’s credibility: R. v. St. Pierre (1974), 17 C.C.C. (2d) 489, 3 O.R. (2d) 642 (C.A.).

It is permissible to simply ask the witness a general question, as in this case, whether he has ever been convicted of an offence in the United States. There is no need to specify the prior conviction in the question: R. v. Clark (1977), 41 C.C.C. (2d) 561, 1 C.R. (3d) 368 (B.C.C.A.).

Instructions to jury – The fact that a witness has been convicted of a crime is relevant to his trustworthiness as a witness, but the probative value that previous convictions have on the issue will vary not only with the type of convictions but the number and their proximity to the time when the witness gives evidence. A jury might well be justified in concluding that a conviction, even for a serious offence committed many years before was of little, if any, value in relation to credibility and the trial Judge in the exercise of his discretion ought so to instruct the jury. However, it is serious misdirection to instruct the jury that the evidence of a defence witness, with a single prior conviction for a crime of dishonesty many years before, must be carefully scrutinized before it is accepted: R. v. Brown (1978), 38 C.C.C. (2d) 339 (Ont. C.A.).

It is misdirection to instruct the jury that “having a criminal record brands [the accused] as an unreliable person to give evidence under oath”: R. v. McIlvride, [1979] 6 W.W.R. 93 (B.C.C.A.).

It constituted error for the trial judge to direct the jury that the accused’s previous convictions for dishonesty were of little or no weight on the issue of the accused’s credibility because the value of the goods stolen was less than $200: R. v. Turlon (1989), 49 C.C.C. (3d) 186, 70 C.R. (3d) 376, 32 O.A.C. 396 (C.A.).

Interpretation of provision – It was held in R. v. Corbett (1988), 41 C.C.C. (3d) 385, 64 C.R. (3d) 1, [1988] 1 S.C.R. 670 (5:1) that this section does not violate the right to a fair trial as guaranteed by s. 11(d) of the Charter nor semble of the principles of fundamental justice under s. 7. However, a majority of the court also held that a trial judge does have a discretion to exclude evidence of previous convictions in an appropriate case where a mechanical application of this section would undermine the right to a fair trial. Factors to be considered in exercising this discretion would include the nature of the the conviction, its similarity to the offence with which the accused is presently on trial, the remoteness of the previous conviction and the nature of the defence including whether it consisted of a deliberate attack upon the credibility of Crown witnesses. With respect to this latter factor it will be of importance that exclusion of the accused's criminal record not create a serious imbalance. The court also summarized some of the rules which courts have laid down in respect to treatment of evidence of a prior criminal record as follows: The accused may only be cross-examined as to the fact of the conviction itself and not concerning the conduct which led to the conviction; the accused cannot be cross-examined as to whether he testified on the prior occasion; the Crown is not entitled to go beyond prior convictions to cross-examine an accused as to discreditable conduct or association with disreputable individuals to attack his credibility, and the accused can only be cross-examined on "convictions" strictly construed and not on discharges.

Discretion to exclude record – In determining whether or not to exercise the discretion to preclude the Crown from cross-examining an accused on his prior criminal record, the judge should consider a number of factors including the nature of the offence of which the accused has been convicted, its similarity to the offence charged, and its remoteness in time. A test which would preclude cross-examination on the record only as a "last resort" is too narrow. In this case, where the accused was charged with sexual assault, cross-examination on 15-year-old convictions for rape should not have been permitted. On the other hand, cross-examination on prior convictions for wounding would have been proper: R. v. P. (G.F.) (1994), 89 C.C.C. (3d) 176, 29 C.R. (4th) 35, 18 O.R. (3d) 3 (C.A.). Also see: R. v. T. (D.B.) (1994), 89 C.C.C. (3d) 466, 71 O.A.C. 233 (C.A.). Similarly, in R. v. Trudel (1994), 90 C.C.C. (3d) 318, [1994] R.J.Q. 678, 60 Q.A.C. 138 (C.A.) it was held that the Crown should not have been permitted to cross-examine the accused, who was charged with first degree murder, on a prior conviction for threatening death.

Ordinarily, an application with respect to the admissibility of evidence concerning an accused's prior criminal record should not be dealt with until the Crown's case has concluded: R. v. P. (G.F.), supra.

The accused is not entitled to have the admissibility of the criminal record determined in advance of an election by the accused to testify: R. v. Underwood (1995), 102 C.C.C. (3d) 281, 102 W.A.C. 234, 174 A.R. 234 (C.A.).

Proof of prior conviction – Where the accused is a witness and in cross-examination cannot recall a particular conviction the proper procedure is to prove the conviction pursuant to subsec. (2) rather than embark on a prejudicial line of cross-examination to "refresh" the memory of the accused, for example, by putting to the accused the name of the victim of the offence for which he was allegedly convicted: R. v. Howard And Trudel (1983), 3 C.C.C. (3d) 399 (Ont. C.A.).

Oaths and Solemn Affirmations

WHO MAY ADMINISTER OATHS.

13. Every court and judge, and every person having, by law or consent of parties, authority to hear and receive evidence, has power to administer an oath to every witness who is legally called to give evidence before that court, judge or person. R.S., c. E-10, s. 13.

SOLEMN AFFIRMATION BY WITNESS INSTEAD OF OATH / Effect.

14. (1) A person may, instead of taking an oath, make the following solemn affirmation:

I solemnly affirm that the evidence to be given by me shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

(2) Where a person makes a solemn affirmation in accordance with subsection (1), his evidence shall be taken and have the same effect as if taken under oath. R.S., c. E-10, s. 14; 1994, c. 44, s. 87.

ANNOTATIONS

It was held, considering the predecessor to s. 16, that the right to affirm does not extend to a child of tender years. If the child does not understand the nature of the oath then the procedure under s. 16 must be followed: R. v. Budin (1981), 58 C.C.C. (2d) 352, 20 C.R. (3d) 86, 32 O.R. (2d) 1 (C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused C.C.C. loc. cit.

However, it was held in R. v. Conners, [1986] 5 W.W.R. 94, 46 Alta. L.R. (2d) 65 (C.A.), that a child, in this case a 12 year old, could be affirmed pursuant to this section and s. 15 if it is found that the child of tender years although not having a belief in a deity has a sense of moral obligation to tell the truth on taking the oath and feels her conscience bound by it. The court applied the dicta of MacKinnon, A.C.J.O. in R. v. Fletcher (1982), 1 C.C.C. (3d) 370 (Ont. C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused 48 N.R. 319n, noted, infra, under s. 16. Similarly, see: R. v. Dawson, [1968] 4 C.C.C. 33, 4 C.R.N.S. 263, 64 W.W.R. 108 (B.C.C.A.) and R. v. Hanna (1993), 80 C.C.C. (3d) 289, 45 W.A.C. 42 (B.C.C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused 91 C.C.C. (3d) vi.

Where an objection is taken to the competency of a witness, not just to take an oath, but to give evidence, the trial Judge must allow the party objecting an opportunity to call evidence on that issue and then if he dismisses that objection he must by his examination of the witness and such other evidence that he deems appropriate decide whether the witness should be sworn or affirmed: R. v. Hawke (1975), 22 C.C.C. (2d) 19, 29 C.R.N.S.1, 7 O.R. (2d) 145 (C.A.).

In R. v. D.(T.C.) (1987), 38 C.C.C. (3d) 434, 61 C.R. (3d) 168 (Ont. C.A.), it was held that although the mentally retarded adult did not understand the oath and therefore could not be sworn under the predecessor to s. 16 she could be affirmed if the trial judge was satisfied that she was competent to testify having regard to her capacity to observe, remember and recount and felt a duty to tell the truth.

In R. v. Walsh (1978), 45 C.C.C. (2d) 199 (Ont. C.A.) the Court held that the trial Judge erred in refusing to permit a "satanist" to affirm. While he was incompetent to take the oath because it would not bind his conscience due to absence of religious belief this did not render him incompetent to affirm. Moral depravity or a disposition to lie does not render a witness incompetent to testify.

A witness who objects to swearing an oath on the Bible may be given the opportunity to swear another form of religious oath and is not required to affirm: R. v. Kalevar (1991), 4 C.R. (4th) 114 (Ont. Ct. (Gen. Div.)).

SOLEMN AFFIRMATION BY DEPONENT / Effect.

15. (1) Where a person who is required or who desires to make an affidavit or deposition in a proceeding or on an occasion on which or concerning a matter respecting which an oath is required or is lawful, whether on the taking of office or otherwise, does not wish to take an oath, the court or judge, or other officer or person qualified to take affidavits or depositions, shall permit the person to make a solemn affirmation in the words following, namely, "I,....., do solemnly affirm, etc.", and that solemn affirmation has the same force and effect as if that person had taken an oath.

(2) Any witness whose evidence is admitted or who makes a solemn affirmation under this section or section 14 is liable to indictment and punishment for perjury in all respects as if he had been sworn. R.S., c. E-10, s. 15; 1994, c. 44, s. 88.

tion, its similarity to the offence with which the accused is presently on trial, the remoteness of the previous conviction and the nature of the defence including whether it consisted of a deliberate attack upon the credibility of Crown witnesses. With respect to this latter factor it will be of importance that exclusion of the accused's criminal record not create a serious imbalance. #### SOLEMN AFFIRMATION BY DEPONENT / Effect.

(1) Where a person who is required or who desires to make an affidavit or deposition in a proceeding or on an occasion on which or concerning a matter respecting which an oath is required or is lawful, whether on the taking of office or otherwise, does not wish to take an oath, the court or judge, or other officer or person qualified to take affidavits or depositions, shall permit the person to make a solemn affirmation

(3d) 1, the court upheld the decision of the court of appeal. Also see: R. v. Marquard, supra.

A promise to tell the truth is a prerequisite to receiving the unsworn testimony of a child witness and where the promise was not obtained, the evidence of the child was wrongly admitted and the accused's conviction must be quashed: R. v. S. (J.J.) (1991), 104 N.S.R. (2d) 385 (C.A.). However, where in the course of the examination of the child, it was clear that the child understood the duty to tell the truth and undertook to tell the truth, the failure to obtain an explicit promise to tell the truth did not invalidate the conviction: R. v. Barsoum (1991), 13 W.C.B. (2d) 382 (N.W.T.C.A.). See also R. v. Peterson, supra.

The requirement that the witness, in this case a severely intellectually handicapped adult, promise to tell the truth includes that the witness has the capacity to make a meaningful promise. Thus, the witness should be allowed to testify only if he or she understands the duty to speak the truth in terms of everyday social conduct. An understanding of the duty to speak the truth entails an appreciation by the witness that he or she must answer all questions in accordance with the witness' recollection of what actually occurred: R. v. Farley (1995), 99 C.C.C. (3d) 76, 40 C.R. (4th) 190, 23 O.R. (3d) 445 (C.A.).

Judicial Notice

IMPERIAL ACTS, ETC.

17. Judicial notice shall be taken of all Acts of the Imperial Parliament, of all ordinances made by the Governor in Council, or the lieutenant governor in council of any province or colony that, or some portion of which, now forms or hereafter may form part of Canada, and of all the Acts of the legislature of any such province or colony, whether enacted before or after the passing of the Constitution Act, 1867. R.S., c. E-10, s. 17.

ANNOTATIONS

In R. v. Markin, [1970] 1 C.C.C.14, 7 C.R.N.S.135 (B.C.C.A.), it was held (2:1) that "ordinances" do not include a proclamation of the Lieutenant-Governor of British Columbia.

An Order in Council amending Schedule J to the Food and Drugs Act is an ordinance within this section: R. v. Whalen (1971), 4 C.C.C. (2d) 560, 15 C.R.N.S.187 (N.B.S.C. App. Div.).

---

ACTS OF CANADA.

18. Judicial notice shall be taken of all Acts of Parliament, public or private, without being specially pleaded. R.S., c. E-10, s. 18.

---

Documentary Evidence

---

COPIES BY QUEEN'S PRINTER.

19. Every copy of any Act of Parliament, public or private, printed by the Queen's Printer, is evidence of that Act and of its contents, and every copy purporting to be printed by the Queen's Printer shall be deemed to be so printed, unless the contrary is shown. R.S., c. E-10, s. 19.

ANNOTATIONS

Where there is a discrepancy between an Act of Parliament as certified by the Clerk of Parliament and the version as printed by the Queen's Printer, the former must govern: R. v. Welsh and Iannuzzi (No. 6) (1977), 32 C.C.C. (2d) 363, 74 D.L.R. (3d) 748, 15 O.R. (2d) 1 (C.A.).

IMPERIAL PROCLAMATIONS, ETC.

20. Imperial proclamations, orders in council, treaties, orders, warrants, licences, certificates, rules, regulations, or other Imperial official records, Acts or documents may be proved

- (a) in the same manner as they may from time to time be provable in any court in England;
- (b) by the production of a copy of the Canada Gazette, or a volume of the Acts of Parliament purporting to contain a copy of the same or a notice thereof; or
- (c) by the production of a copy thereof purporting to be printed by the Queen's Printer. R.S., c. E-10, s. 20.

PROCLAMATIONS, ETC. OF GOVERNOR GENERAL.

21. Evidence of any proclamation, order, regulation or appointment, made or issued by the Governor General or by the Governor in Council, or by or under the authority of any minister or head of any department of the Government of Canada and evidence of a treaty to which Canada is a party, may be given in all or any of the following ways:

- (a) by the production of a copy of the Canada Gazette, or a volume of the Acts of Parliament purporting to contain a copy of that treaty, proclamation, order, regulation, or appointment or a notice thereof;
- (b) by the production of a copy of the proclamation, order, regulation or appointment, purporting to be printed by the Queen's Printer;
- (c) by the production of a copy of the treaty purporting to be printed by the Queen's Printer;
- (d) by the production, in the case of any proclamation, order, regulation or appointment made or issued by the Governor General or by the Governor in Council, of a copy or extract purporting to be certified to be true by the clerk or assistant or acting clerk of the Queen's Privy Council for Canada; and
- (e) by the production, in the case of any order, regulation or appointment made or issued by or under the authority of any minister or head of a department of the Government of Canada, of a copy or extract purporting to be certified to be true by the minister, by his deputy or acting deputy, or by the secretary or acting secretary of the department over which he presides. R.S., c. E-10, s. 21; 1976-77, c. 28, s. 14.

ANNOTATIONS

By s. 23 of the Statutory Instruments Act 1970-71-72 (Can.), c. 38, Parliament intended to obviate the necessity of a Court requiring formal proof of the publication and text of statutory instruments published in the Canada Gazette: R. v. Steam Tanker "Evgenia Chandris" (1976), 27 C.C.C. (2d) 241, 65 D.L.R. (3d) 553 (9:0) (S.C.C.).

PROCLAMATIONS, ETC., OF LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR / In the case of the Territories.

22. (1) Evidence of any proclamation, order, regulation or appointment made or issued by a lieutenant governor or lieutenant governor in council of any province, or by or under the authority of any member of the executive council, being the head of any department of the government of the province, may be given in all or any of the following ways:

- (a) by the production of a copy of the official gazette for the province purporting to contain a copy of the proclamation, order, regulation or appointment, or a notice thereof;
- (b) by the production of a copy of the proclamation, order, regulation or appointment, purporting to be printed by the government or Queen's Printer for the province, and
- (c) by the production of a copy or extract of the proclamation, order, regulation or appointment, purporting to be certified to be true by the clerk or assistant or acting clerk of the executive council, by the head of any department of the government of a province, or by his deputy or acting deputy, as the case may be.

(2) Evidence of any proclamation, order, regulation or appointment made by the Lieutenant Governor or Lieutenant Governor in Council of the Northwest Territories, as constituted prior to September 1, 1905, or of the Commissioner in Council of the Yukon Territory or of the Commissioner in Council of the Northwest Territories, may be given by the production of a copy of the Canada Gazette purporting to contain a copy of the proclamation, order, regulation or appointment, or a notice thereof. R.S., c. E-10, s. 22.

NOTE: Subsec. (2) re-enacted 1993, c. 28, s. 78 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

In the case of the territories.

(2) Evidence of any proclamation, order, regulation or appointment made by the Lieutenant Governor or Lieutenant Governor in Council of the Northwest Territories, as constituted prior to September 1, 1905, or by the Commissioner in Council of the Yukon Territory, the Commissioner in Council of the Northwest Territories or the Legislature for Nunavut, may be given by the production of a copy of the Canada Gazette purporting to contain a copy of the proclamation, order, regulation or appointment, or a notice there.

EVIDENCE OF JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS, ETC. / Certificate where court has no seal.

23. (1) Evidence of any proceeding or record whatever of, in or before any court in Great Britain, the Supreme Court, Federal Court or Tax Court of Canada, any court in any province, any court in any British colony or possession or any court of record of the United States, of any state of the United States or of any other foreign country, or before any justice of the peace or coroner in any province, may be given in any action or proceeding by an exemplification or certified copy of the proceeding or record, purporting to be under the seal of the court or under the hand or seal of the justice or coroner, as the case may be, without any proof of the authenticity of the seal or of the signature of the justice or coroner or other proof whatever.

(2) Where any such court, justice or coroner referred to in subsection (1) has no seal, or so certifies, the evidence may be given by a copy purporting to be certified under the signature of a judge or presiding provincial court judge of the court or of the justice or coroner, without any proof of the authenticity of the signature or other proof whatever. R.S., c. E-10, s. 23; R.S., c. 10 (2nd Supp.), s. 64; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 203(1); 1993, c. 34, s. 15.

This section may be used to prove a document but cannot be extended to authenticate a document which was not properly confirmed in accordance with the mandatory provisions of the Extradition Act: Re Wong Shue Teen and the United States Of America (1975), 24 C.C.C. (2d) 501, 61 D.L.R. (3d) 181 (Fed. C.A.).

A Judge who grants an authorization to intercept private communications does so as a Judge of the Court not as a persona designata and a certified copy of the authorization is therefore admissible under this section: Cordes v. The Queen (1979), 47 C.C.C. (2d) 46, [1979] 1 S.C.R. 1062, 10 C.R. (3d) 186 (7:0).

CERTIFIED COPIES.

24. In every case in which the original record could be admitted in evidence,

- (a) a copy of any official or public document of Canada or of any province, purporting to be certified under the hand of the proper officer or person in whose custody the official or public document is placed, or
- (b) a copy of a document, by-law, rule, regulation or proceeding, or a copy of any entry in any register or other book of any municipal or other corporation, created by charter or Act of Parliament or the legislature of any province, purporting to be certified under the seal of the corporation, and the hand of the presiding officer, clerk or secretary thereof, is admissible in evidence without proof of the seal of the corporation, or of the signature or official character of the person or persons appearing to have signed it, and without further proof thereof. R.S., c. E-10, s. 24.

ANNOTATIONS

A certificate of incorporation of a provincial company is a public document admissible under this section. To determine whether the document was properly certified resort must be had to the relevant provincial legislation by virtue of s. 40 of this Act: R. v. John and Murray Motors Ltd. (1979), 47 C.C.C. (2d) 49, 8 C.R. (3d) 80 (B.C.C.A.).

Aeronautical charts prepared by a department of the Government of Canada which are in regular and everyday use for navigation purposes and are relied upon implicitly by qualified pilots and which are presumably the best evidence available of distances and directions by air are admissible in evidence, although not certified in the manner provided by this section or s. 25; R. v. Inuvik Coastal Airways Ltd. and McKerral (1983), 10 C.C.C. (3d) 89, 51 A.R. 353 (N.W.T.S.C.).

On the trial of a young offender on a charge of breach of probation, a copy of the original information and of the probation order certified by the clerk of the court are admissible pursuant to this section. The records of the youth court which are maintained by employees of the government are public documents, notwithstanding the privacy provisions of the Young Offenders Act. While s. 23 of this Act makes specific provision for the admissibility of court records, that provision is not the exclusive means by which court documents may be admitted in evidence: R. v. P. (A.) (1992), 75 C.C.C. (3d) 178 (Ont. Ct. (Gen. Div.)).

BOOKS AND DOCUMENTS.

25. Where a book or other document is of so public a nature as to be admissible in evidence on its mere production from the proper custody, and no other Act exists that renders its contents provable by means of a copy, a copy thereof or extract therefrom is admissible in evidence in any court of justice or before a person having, by law or by consent of parties, authority to hear, receive and examine evidence, if it is proved that it is a copy or extract purporting to be certified to be true by the officer to whose custody the original has been entrusted. R.S., c. E-10, s. 25.

BOOKS KEPT IN OFFICES UNDER GOVERNMENT OF CANADA / Proof of non-issue of licence or document / Proof of mailing departmental matter / Proof of official character.

26. (1) A copy of any entry in any book kept in any office or department of the Government of Canada, or in any commission, board or other branch of the public service of Canada, shall be admitted as evidence of that entry, and of the matters, transactions and accounts therein recorded, if it is proved by the oath or affidavit of an officer of the office or department, commission, board or other branch of the public service of Canada that the book was, at the time of the making of the entry, one of the ordinary books kept in the office, department, commission, board or other branch of the public service of Canada, that the entry was made in the usual and ordinary course of business of the office, department, commission, board or other branch of the public service of Canada and that the copy is a true copy thereof.

(2) Where by any Act of Parliament or regulation made thereunder provision is made for the issue by a department, commission, board or other branch of the public service of Canada of a licence requisite to the doing or having of any act or thing or for the issue of any other document, an affidavit of an officer of the department, commission, board or other branch of the public service, sworn before any commissioner or other person authorized to take affidavits, setting out that he has charge of the appropriate records and that after careful examination and search of those records he has been unable to find in any given case that any such licence or other document has been issued, shall be admitted in evidence as proof, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that in that case no licence or other document has been issued.

(3) Where by any Act of Parliament or regulation made thereunder provision is made for sending by mail any request for information, notice or demand by a department or other branch of the public service of Canada an affidavit of an officer of the department or other branch of the public service, sworn before any commissioner or other person authorized to take affidavits, setting out that he has charge of the appropriate records, that he has a knowledge of the facts in the particular case, that the request, notice or demand was sent by registered letter on a named date to the person or firm to whom it was addressed (indicating that address) and that he identifies as exhibits attached to the affidavit the post office certificate of registration of the letter and a true copy of the request, notice or demand, shall, on production and proof of the post office receipt for the delivery of the registered letter to the addressee, be admitted in evidence as proof, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, of the sending and of the request, notice or demand.

(4) Where proof is offered by affidavit pursuant to this section, it is not necessary to prove the official character of the person making the affidavit if that information is set out in the body of the affidavit. R.S., c. E-10, s. 26.

ANNOTATIONS

A computer is not a "book" within the meaning of this section and therefore a print-out produced by an armed forces computer is not admissible under this section: R. v. Sunila and Solayman (1986), 26 C.C.C. (3d) 331 (N.S.S.C.).

It was held in Éthier v. Canada (RCMP) Commissioner, [1992] 1 F.C. 109, 45 F.T.R. 310 (T.D.) that the word "book" does not include any kind of record and did not extend to reports consisting of opinion and interpretation. However, on appeal (1993), 63 F.T.R. 29n, 151 N.R. 374 (C.A.) it was held that the documents could be admitted as an exception to the hearsay rule pursuant to R. v. Khan (1990), 59 C.C.C. (3d) 92, [1990] 2 S.C.R. 531, 79 C.R. (3d) 1, the documents meeting the requirements of reliability and necessity.

NOTARIAL ACTS IN QUEBEC.

27. Any document purporting to be a copy of a notarial act or instrument made, filed or registered in the Province of Quebec, and to be certified by a notary or prothonotary to be a true copy of the original in his possession as such notary or prothonotary, shall be admitted in evidence in the place and stead of the original and has the same force and effect as the original would have if produced and proved, but it may be proved in rebuttal that there is no such original, that the copy is not a true copy of the original in some material particular or that the original is not an instrument of such nature as may, by the law of the Province of Quebec, be taken before a notary or be filed, enrolled or registered by a notary in that Province. R.S., c. E-10, s. 27.

NOTICE OF PRODUCTION OF BOOK OR DOCUMENT / Not less than 7 days.

28. (1) No copy of any book or other document shall be admitted in evidence, under the authority of section 23, 24, 25, 26 or 27, on any trial, unless the party intending to produce the copy has before the trial given to the party against whom it is intended to be produced reasonable notice of that intention.

(2) The reasonableness of the notice referred to in subsection (1) shall be determined by the court, judge or other person presiding, but the notice shall not in any case be less than seven days. R.S., c. E-10, s. 28.

ANNOTATIONS

Where the statute, such as the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1970-71-72 (Can.), c. 48, has its own provisions governing the admissibility of copies of documents there is no need to comply with this section: R. v. Yerxa (1978), 42 C.C.C. (2d) 177, 21 N.B.R. (2d) 569 (C.A.).

In determining whether there has been 7 days notice as required by subsec. (2), s. 27(1) of the Interpretation Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. I-21, applies and requires exclusion of the date of service and the date of the trial. However, none of the intervening days are to be excluded, although they are Sundays or statutory holidays: R. v. Bourque (1991), 66 C.C.C. (3d) 548 (N.S.C.A.).

COPIES OF ENTRIES / Admission in evidence / Cheques, proof of "no account" / Proof of official character / Compulsion of production or appearance / Order to inspect and copy / Warrants to search / Computation of time / Definitions / "court" / "financial institution" / "legal proceeding".

29. (1) Subject to this section, a copy of any entry in any book or record kept in any financial institution shall in all legal proceedings be admitted in evidence as proof, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, of the entry and of the matters, transactions and accounts therein recorded.

(2) A copy of an entry in the book or record described in subsection (1) shall not be admitted in evidence under this section unless it is first proved that the book or record was, at the time of the making of the entry, one of the ordinary books or records of the financial institution, that the entry was made in the usual and ordinary course of business, that the book or record is in the custody or control of the financial institution and that the copy is a true copy of it, and such proof may be given by any person employed by the financial institution who has knowledge of the book or record or the manager or accountant of the financial institution, and may be given orally or by affidavit sworn before any commissioner or other person authorized to take affidavits.

(3) Where a cheque has been drawn on any financial institution or branch thereof by any person, an affidavit of the manager or accountant of the financial institution or branch, sworn before any commissioner or other person authorized to take affidavits, setting out that he is the manager or accountant, that he has made a careful examination and search of the books and records for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not that person has an account with the financial institution or branch and that he has been unable to find such an account, shall be admitted in evidence as proof, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that that person has no account in the financial institution or branch.

(4) Where evidence is offered by affidavit pursuant to this section, it is not necessary to prove the signature or official character of the person making the affidavit if the official character of that person is set out in the body of the affidavit.

(5) A financial institution or officer of a financial institution is not in any legal proceedings to which the financial institution is not a party compellable to produce any book or record, the contents of which can be proved under this section, or to appear as a witness to prove the matters, transactions and accounts therein recorded unless by order of the court made for special cause.

(6) On the application of any party to a legal proceeding, the court may order that that party be at liberty to inspect and take copies of any entries in the books or records of a financial institution for the purposes of the legal proceeding, and the person whose account is to be inspected shall be notified of the application at least two clear days before the hearing thereof, and if it is shown to the satisfaction of the court that he cannot be notified personally, the notice may be given by addressing it to the financial institution.

(7) Nothing in this section shall be construed as prohibiting any search of the premises of a financial institution under the authority of a warrant to search issued under any other Act of Parliament, but unless the warrant is expressly endorsed by the person under whose hand it is issued as not being limited by this section, the authority conferred by any such warrant to search the premises of a financial institution and to seize and take away anything in it shall, with respect to the books or records of the institution, be construed as limited to the searching of those premises for the purpose of inspecting and taking copies of entries in those books or records, and section 490 of the Criminal Code does not apply in respect of the copies of those books or records obtained under a warrant referred to in this section.

(8) Holidays shall be excluded from the computation of time under this section.

(9) In this section

“court” means the court, judge, arbitrator or person before whom a legal proceeding is held or taken;

“financial institution” means the Bank of Canada, the Business Development Bank of Canada and any institution incorporated in Canada that accepts deposits of money from its members or the public, and includes a branch, agency or office of any such Bank or institution;

“legal proceeding” means any civil or criminal proceeding or inquiry in which evidence is or may be given, and includes an arbitration. R.S., c. E-10, s. 29; 1974-75-76, c. 14, s. 57; 1994, c. 44, s. 90; 1995, c. 28, s. 47.

ANNOTATIONS

The notice provisions of s. 30 do not apply to copies of records admissible under this section. Such documents are admissible without notice to the other party: R. v. Best (1978), 43 C.C.C. (2d) 236, [1978] 5 W.W.R. 421 (B.C.C.A.).

Subsec. (1) – A computer print-out of entries stored in a bank’s computer falls within the phrase “a copy of any entry in any book on record” in this subsection and therefore may be admissible under this section: R. v. McMullen (1978), 42 C.C.C. (2d) 67, 6 C.R. (3d) 218 (Ont. H.C.J.), affd 47 C.C.C. (2d) 499, 100 D.L.R. (3d) 671 (Ont. C.A.).

“Entry” in this subsection means an ordinary financial or bookkeeping entry and would not cover such things as inter-office memos or written reports between branches: M.N.R. v. Furnasman Ltd., [1973] F.C. 1327, [1973] C.T.C. 830 (T.D.) or memoranda of conversations or meetings between a bank employee and the bank's customers: I.T.L. Industries Ltd. v. Winterbottom (1980), 27 O.R. (2d) 496, 106 D.L.R. (3d) 577 (C.A.) [considering the comparable provision of the Ontario Evidence Act, s. 34].

Subsec. (2) – Proof of compliance with this subsection may be given by persons other than the manager or accountant, such as the bank employee in charge of the records: R. v. McGrayne (1979), 46 C.C.C. (2d) 63 (Ont. C.A.).

In R. v. Bell and Bruce (1982), 65 C.C.C. (2d) 377, 35 O.R. (2d) 164 (C.A.), the Court gave further consideration to the application of this section to computerized bank records. It was held that: a “record” may be in any, even in an illegible, form; the form in which the information is recorded may change from time to time; a “record” may be a compilation or collation of other records; and the “record” must have been produced for the bank's purposes as a reference source, or as part of its internal audit system and, at the relevant time, must be kept for that purpose. It was also possible for the bank to have more than one record at any one time, for example, the record stored in the computer and a monthly statement prepared by the computer which the bank retained for a number of years.

Subsec. (5) – The argument by the accused that production of certain bank records would help him present a full and complete defence is not a special cause for a Court order for production: R. v. Palardy (1973), 14 C.C.C. (2d) 162 (Que.Sess.Ct.).

BUSINESS RECORDS TO BE ADMITTED IN EVIDENCE / Inference where information not in business record / Copy of records / Where record kept in form requiring explanation / Court may order other part of record to be produced / Court may examine record and hear evidence / Notice of intention to produce record or affidavit / Not necessary to prove signature and official character / Examination on record with leave of court / Evidence inadmissible under this section / Construction of this section / Definitions / “business” / “copy” and “photographic film” / “court” / legal proceeding” / “record”.

30. (1) Where oral evidence in respect of a matter would be admissible in a legal proceeding, a record made in the usual and ordinary course of business that contains information in respect of that matter is admissible in evidence under this section in the legal proceeding on production of the record.

(2) Where a record made in the usual and ordinary course of business does not contain information in respect of a matter the occurrence or existence of which might reasonably be expected to be recorded in that record, the court may on production of the record admit the record for the purpose of establishing that fact and may draw the inference that the matter did not occur or exist.

(3) Where it is not possible or reasonably practicable to produce any record described in subsection (1) or (2), a copy of the record accompanied by two documents, one that is made by a person who states why it is not possible or reasonably practicable to produce the record and one that sets out the source from which the copy was made, that attests to the copy's authenticity and that is made by the person who made the copy, is admissible in evidence under this section in the same manner as if it were the original of the record if each document is

(a) an affidavit of each of those persons sworn before a commissioner or other person authorized to take affidavits; or

(b) a certificate or other statement pertaining to the record in which the person attests that the certificate or statement is made in conformity with the laws of a foreign state, whether or not the certificate or statement is in the form of an affidavit attested to before an official of the foreign state.

(4) Where production of any record or of a copy of any record described in subsection (1) or (2) would not convey to the court the information contained in the record by reason of its having been kept in a form that requires explanation, a transcript of the explanation of the record or copy prepared by a person qualified to make the explanation is admissible in evidence under this section in the same manner as if it were the original of the record if it is accompanied by a document that sets out the person's qualifications to make the explanation, attests to the accuracy of the explanation, and is

- (a) an affidavit of that person sworn before a commissioner or other person authorized to take affidavits; or
- (b) a certificate or other statement pertaining to the record in which the person attests that the certificate or statement is made in conformity with the laws of a foreign state, whether or not the certificate or statement is in the form of an affidavit attested to before an official of the foreign state.

(5) Where part only of a record is produced under this section by any party, the court may examine any other part of the record and direct that, together with the part of the record previously so produced, the whole or any part of the other part thereof be produced by that party as the record produced by him.

(6) For the purpose of determining whether any provision of this section applies, or for the purpose of determining the probative value, if any, to be given to information contained in any record admitted in evidence under this section, the court may, on production of any record, examine the record, admit any evidence in respect thereof given orally or by affidavit including evidence as to the circumstances in which the information contained in the record was written, recorded, stored or reproduced, and draw any reasonable inference from the form or content of the record.

(7) Unless the court orders otherwise, no record or affidavit shall be admitted in evidence under this section unless the party producing the record or affidavit has, at least seven days before its production, given notice of his intention to produce it to each other party to the legal proceeding and has, within five days after receiving any notice in that behalf given by any such party, produced it for inspection by that party.

(8) Where evidence is offered by affidavit under this section, it is not necessary to prove the signature or official character of the person making the affidavit if the official character of that person is set out in the body of the affidavit.

(9) Subject to section 4, any person who has or may reasonably be expected to have knowledge of the making or contents of any record produced or received in evidence under this section may, with leave of the court, be examined or cross-examined thereon by any party to the legal proceeding.

(10) Nothing in this section renders admissible in evidence in any legal proceeding

- (a) such part of any record as is proved to be
  - (i) a record made in the course of an investigation or inquiry,
  - (ii) a record made in the course of obtaining or giving legal advice or in contemplation of a legal proceeding,
  - (iii) a record in respect of the production of which any privilege exists and is claimed, or
  - (iv) a record of or alluding to a statement made by a person who is not, or if he were living and of sound mind would not be, competent and compellable to disclose in the legal proceeding a matter disclosed in the record;
- (b) any record the production of which would be contrary to public policy; or
- (c) any transcript or recording of evidence taken in the course of another legal proceeding.

(11) The provisions of this section shall be deemed to be in addition to and not in derogation of

- (a) any other provision of this or any other Act of Parliament respecting the admissibility in evidence of any record or the proof of any matter; or
- (b) any existing rule of law under which any record is admissible in evidence or any matter may be proved.

(12) In this section,

“business” means any business, profession, trade, calling, manufacture or undertaking of any kind carried on in Canada or elsewhere whether for profit or otherwise, including any activity or operation carried on or performed in Canada or elsewhere by any government, by any department, branch, board, commission or agency of any government, by any court or other tribunal or by any other body or authority performing a function of government;

“copy”, in relation to any record, includes a print, whether enlarged or not, from a photographic film of the record, and “photographic film” includes a photographic plate, microphotographic film or photostatic negative;

“court” means the court, judge, arbitrator or person before whom a legal proceeding is held or taken;

“legal proceeding” means any civil or criminal proceeding or inquiry in which evidence is or may be given, and includes an arbitration;

“record” includes the whole or any part of any book, document, paper, card, tape or other thing on or in which information is written, recorded, stored or reproduced, and, except for the purposes of subsections (3) and (4), any copy or transcript admitted in evidence under this section pursuant to subsection (3) or (4). R.S., c. E-10, s. 30; 1994, c. 44, s. 91.

ANNOTATIONS

Subsec. (1) – An inventory sheet made contemporaneously by employees with personal knowledge of the matters then being recorded and under a duty to make the record is admissible through the employees and prima facie proof of the truth of its contents at common law or in the alternative is admissible as a business record under this section: R. v. Penno (1977), 35 C.C.C. (2d) 266, 76 D.L.R. (3d) 529, 37 C.R.N.S. 391 (B.C.C.A.).

Fingerprint records kept by the United States Federal Bureau of Investigation are admissible under this subsection. An official of the F.B.I. who has knowledge of the contents of the records kept by the agency based on his experience, although he has no original knowledge of their contents, is competent to give evidence as to the contents of the documents: R. v. Grimba and Wilder (1977), 38 C.C.C. (2d) 469 (Ont.Co.Ct.).

Subsec. (2) – In order to prove that a certain item had not been imported by the accused the proper procedure is to produce the customs records under this section giving rise to the inference under this subsection of the non-occurrence of the importation from the fact that there was no entry of it in the records, rather than merely call an officer who had inspected the records: R. v. Garofoli (1988), 41 C.C.C. (3d) 97, 64 C.R. (3d) 193 (Ont. C.A.).

Subsec. (3) – An air way-bill is a document made in the usual and ordinary course of business a copy of which would be admissible if this subsection were complied with. In determining which parts of the way-bill are originals and which are merely copies the Court must resort to the Carriage By Air Act, R.S.C. 1970, c. C-14. That Act provides that an air way-bill consists of three originals and therefore any other part such as a delivery receipt is a copy whose admissibility is governed by the provisions of this subsection: Cloutier v. The Queen (1979), 48 C.C.C. (3d) 1, [1979] 2 S.C.R. 709, 12 C.R. (3d) 10 (6:3).

The technical requirements laid down by provincial legislation for the swearing of an affidavit had no application to an affidavit tendered under subsec. (3) in a prosecution for violation of a federal statute: R. v. Nickerson (1991), 106 N.S.R. (2d) 300 (C.A.).

Subsec. (6) – Affidavit evidence is admissible not only to prove the matters referred to in subsecs. (3) and (4) but to prove that the record was one made in the usual and ordinary course of business: R. v. Parker (1984), 16 C.C.C. (3d) 478 (Ont. C.A.). Contra: Re State of California and Meier and Hazelwood (No. 2) (1982), 69 C.C.C. (2d) 180, 40 B.C.L.R. 297 (S.C.).

Subsec. (7) – The notice required by this subsection need not be written or formal thus introduction of the record at the accused's preliminary hearing is sufficient compliance with this subsection where it is sought to tender the document at the accused's trial: R. v. Penno, supra.

Similarly, the document is produced for inspection within the meaning of this subsection where it is entered as an exhibit at the preliminary inquiry and is thereafter available for inspection as provided for in the Criminal Code: R. v. Voykin (1986), 29 C.C.C. (3d) 280 (Alta. C.A.).

Subsec. (10) – Notes made by an investigator with the fire marshall's office, who is conducting an investigation into a fire at the accused's premises are inadmissible in view of para. (a)(i) of this subsection: R. v. Lavery (No. 2) (1979), 47 C.C.C. (2d) 60, 9 C.R. (3d) 288 (Ont. C.A.). Similarly, logs kept by police officers monitoring intercepted private communications are inadmissible: R. v. Biasi et al. (No. 2) (1981), 66 C.C.C. (2d) 563 (B.C.S.C.). Contra: R. v. McLarty (No. 3) (1978), 45 C.C.C. (2d) 184 (Ont. Co. Ct.) where a narrow interpretation was given to para. (a), the court holding that "investigation or inquiry" is the type of inquiry contemplated by the Inquiries Act, R.S.C. 1970, c. I-13. Thus records kept by the R.C.M.P. to account for the whereabouts of exhibits were admitted.

While computer print-outs made by detection equipment on board armed forces aircraft could otherwise qualify as business records within the meaning of this section, where, as in this case, the records are made in the course of surveillance operations conducted to assist law enforcement personnel in tracking alleged narcotics smugglers, then the records are not admissible by virtue of subpara. (i): R. v. Sunila and Solayman (1986), 26 C.C.C. (3d) 331 (N.S.S.C.). However, in this case, the court did admit these records relying on a common-law business records exception.

An authorization to intercept private communications while a "record" within this section is clearly intended to enable the obtaining of evidence upon which a prosecution may be founded and is thus a record made in contemplation of a legal proceeding and excluded by para. (a)(ii): R. v. Baker (1977), 35 C.C.C. (2d) 314 (B.C.C.A.).

The case of R. v. Scheel (1978), 42 C.C.C. (2d) 31, 3 C.R. (3d) 359 (Ont. C.A.) is of note although not directly related to this section. It was held in that case that summaries, prepared by an accountant retained by the Crown, from the accused's records are admissible in evidence at least where the summaries are based on evidence which had been properly admitted at the trial.

Subsec. (11) – This section is neither mandatory nor exclusive and it was open to the court to admit business records under the common law exception to the hearsay rule. Further, it was open to the court to modify the common law criteria (one of which required proof that the maker of the document was since deceased). In R. v. Monkhouse (1987), 61 C.R. (3d) 343, [1988] 1 W.W.R. 725, 56 Alta. L.R. (2d) 97 (C.A.), the court set down the following criteria for admissibility under the modified common law exception: a record containing (1) an original entry (2) made contemporaneously (3) in the routine (4) of business (5) by a recorder who has a duty to make the record and (6) who had no motive to misrepresent. There is no requirement that the recorder have personal knowledge of the thing recorded if he is functioning in the usual and ordinary course of a system in effect for the preparation of business records. The court warned however that this exception should only be applied where the circumstances make the records inherently trustworthy; where there is an established system in the business which produces records which are regarded as reliable and customarily relied upon by those affected by them.

Subsec. (12) – A computer generated print-out produced by an employee of the telephone company showing calls to and from a particular telephone number is a “record” within the meaning of this section not merely a copy of a record: R. v. Bicknell (1988), 41 C.C.C. (3d) 545 (B.C.C.A.).

DEFINITIONS / “corporation” / “government” / “photographic film” / When print admissible in evidence / Evidence of compliance with conditions / Proof by notarial copy.

31. (1) In this section,

“corporation” means any bank, including the Bank of Canada and the Business Development Bank of Canada, and each of the following carrying on business in Canada, namely, every railway, express, telegraph and telephone company (except a street railway and tramway company), insurance company or society, trust company and loan company (except a company subject to Part II of the Small Loans Act, chapter S-11 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1970);

NOTE: Definition “corporation” re-enacted by 1992, c. 1, s. 142(1) (Sch. V, item 9(2)) (to come into force as provided by s. 142(2)). The text, which is not yet in force and therefore printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

“corporation” means any bank, including the Bank of Canada and the Federal Business Development Bank, and each of the following carrying on business in Canada, namely, every railway, express, telegraph and telephone company (except a street railway and tramway company), insurance company or society, trust company and loan company;

“government” means the government of Canada or of any province and includes any department, commission, board or branch of any such government; “photographic film” includes any photographic plate, microphotographic film and photostatic negative.

(2) A print, whether enlarged or not, from any photographic film of

- (a) an entry in any book or record kept by any government or corporation and destroyed, lost or delivered to a customer after the film was taken,
- (b) any bill of exchange, promissory note, cheque, receipt, instrument or document held by any government or corporation and destroyed, lost or delivered to a customer after the film was taken, or
- (c) any record, document, plan, book or paper belonging to or deposited with any government or corporation, is admissible in evidence in all cases in which and for all purposes for which the object photographed would have been admitted on proof that

- (d) while the book, record, bill of exchange, promissory note, cheque, receipt, instrument or document, plan, book or paper was in the custody or control of the government or corporation, the photographic film was taken thereof in order to keep a permanent record thereof, and
- (e) the object photographed was subsequently destroyed by or in the presence of one or more of the employees of the government or corporation, or was lost or was delivered to a customer.

(3) Evidence of compliance with the conditions prescribed by this section may be given by any one or more of the employees of the government or corporation, having knowledge of the taking of the photographic film, of the destruction, loss, or delivery to a customer, or of the making of the print, as the case may be, either orally or by affidavit sworn in any part of Canada before any notary public or commissioner for oaths.

(4) Unless the court otherwise orders, a notarial copy of an affidavit under subsection (3) is admissible in evidence in lieu of the original affidavit. R.S., c. E-10, s. 31; 1974-75-76, c. 14, s. 57; 1992, c. 1, s. 142(1) (Sch. V, item 9(1)); 1995, c. 28, s. 47.

ANNOTATIONS

A private organization controlled and entrusted by a provincial government to administer a provincial medical care insurance scheme is included within the definition of "government": R. v. Sanghi (1971), 6 C.C.C. (2d) 123, 3 N.S.R. (2d) 70 (N.S.S.C. App. Div.).

ORDER SIGNED BY SECRETARY OF STATE / Copies printed in Canada Gazette.

32. (1) An order signed by the Secretary of State of Canada and purporting to be written by command of the Governor General shall be admitted in evidence as the order of the Governor General.

(2) All copies of official and other notices, advertisements and documents printed in the Canada Gazette are admissible in evidence as proof, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, of the originals and of the contents thereof. R.S., c. E-10, s. 32.

PROOF OF HANDWRITING OF PERSON CERTIFYING / Printed or written.

33. (1) No proof shall be required of the handwriting or official position of any person certifying, in pursuance of this Act, to the truth of any copy of or extract from any proclamation, order, regulation, appointment, book or other document.

(2) Any copy or extract referred to in subsection (1) may be in print or in writing, or partly in print and partly in writing. R.S., c. E-10, s. 33.

---

ATTESTING WITNESS / Instrument, how proved.

34. (1) It is not necessary to prove by the attesting witness any instrument to the validity of which attestation is not requisite.

(2) Any instrument referred to in subsection (1) may be proved by admission or otherwise as if there had been no attesting witness thereto. R.S., c. E-10, s. 34.

IMPOUNDING OF FORGED INSTRUMENT.

35. Where any instrument that has been forged or fraudulently altered is admitted in evidence, the court or the judge or person who admits the instrument may, at the request of any person against whom it is admitted in evidence, direct that the instrument shall be impounded and be kept in the custody of an officer of the court or other proper person for such period and subject to such conditions as to the court, judge or person admitting the instrument seem meet. R.S., c. E-10, s. 35.

CONSTRUCTION.

36. This Part shall be deemed to be in addition to and not in derogation of any powers of proving documents given by any existing Act or existing at law. R.S., c. E-10, s. 36.

Disclosure of Government Information

OBJECTION TO DISCLOSURE OF INFORMATION / Where objection made to superior court / Where objection not made to superior court / Limitation period / Appeal to court of appeal / Limitation period for appeal under subsection (5) / Limitation periods for appeal to Supreme Court of Canada.

37. (1) A Minister of the Crown in right of Canada or other person interested may object to the disclosure of information before a court, person or body with jurisdiction to compel the production of information by certifying orally or in writing to the court, person or body that the information should not be disclosed on the grounds of a specified public interest.

(2) Subject to sections 38 and 39, where an objection to the disclosure of information is made under subsection (1) before a superior court, that court may examine or hear the information and order its disclosure, subject to such restrictions or conditions as it deems appropriate, if it concludes that, in the circumstances of the case, the public interest in disclosure outweighs in importance the specified public interest.

(3) Subject to sections 38 and 39, where an objection to the disclosure of information is made under subsection (1) before a court, person or body other than a superior court, the objection may be determined, on application, in accordance with subsection (2) by

(a) the Federal Court – Trial Division, in the case of a person or body vested with power to compel production by or pursuant to an Act of Parliament if the person or body is not a court established under a law of a province; or

(b) the trial division or trial court of the superior court of the province within which the court, person or body exercises its jurisdiction, in any other case.

(4) An application pursuant to subsection (3) shall be made within ten days after the objection is made or within such further or lesser time as the court having jurisdiction to hear the application considers appropriate in the circumstances.

(5) An appeal lies from a determination under subsection (2) or (3)

(a) to the Federal Court of Appeal from a determination of the Federal Court – Trial Division; or

(b) to the court of appeal of a province from a determination of a trial division or trial court of a superior court of a province.

(6) An appeal under subsection (5) shall be brought within ten days from the date of the determination appealed from or within such further time as the court having jurisdiction to hear the appeal considers appropriate in the circumstances.

(7) Notwithstanding any other Act of Parliament,

(a) an application for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada from a judgment made pursuant to subsection (5) shall be made within ten days from the date of the judgment appealed from or within such further time as the court having jurisdiction to grant leave to appeal considers appropriate in the circumstances; and

(b) where leave to appeal is granted, the appeal shall be brought in the manner set out in subsection 60(1) of the Supreme Court Act but within such time as the court that grants leave specifies. 1980-81-82-83, c. 111, s. 4.

ANNOTATIONS

The predecessor to this legislation, s. 41 of the Federal Court Act, R.S.C. 1970, c. 10 (2nd Supp.), has been held to be intra vires Parliament and not contrary to the Canadian

Bill of Rights: Human Rights Com'n v. A.-G. Can. et al. (1982), 134 D.L.R. (3d) 17, [1982] 1 S.C.R. 215 sub nom. Com'n des Droits de la Personne v. A.-G. Can. et al.

In this case the accused alleged that certain documents in the possession of the Parole Board would support his contention that his confession to a murder was the result of improper inducements. The court held that if there was any evidence to support the contention the documents would be disclosed, with the question of their admissibility dealt with by the trial judge. However, since the documents upon examination by the court did not contain any evidence of inducement and in view of the sensitivity of the documents, disclosure would be refused: Re Stewart and The Queen (1984), 13 C.C.C. (3d) 278 (B.C.S.C.).

It is a good ground for preventing disclosure that the disclosure would offend the common-law police informer privilege: Re Regina and Jensen et al. (1984), 15 C.C.C. (3d) 532 (Nfld. S.C.).

An objection to disclosure of the identity of a police informer referred to in an information to obtain a search warrant was properly upheld, although the accused sought the informer's identity to explore for evidence of an unreasonable seizure in violation of s. 8 of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. The right to explore for such evidence must be exercised in accordance with the rules of evidence, including the rule prohibiting disclosure of the identity of a police informer: R. v. Archer (1989), 47 C.C.C. (3d) 567, 94 A.R. 323 (C.A.).

Police reports setting out the relationship between unindicted co-conspirators and the police should not be disclosed where, inter alia, it was shown that disclosure of the information would be injurious to the operation of the police and the accused had not demonstrated that the information sought contained evidence that was necessary to establish the innocence of the accused or would establish a fact crucial to their defence: Bailey v. Royal Canadian Mounted Police (1990), 43 F.T.R. 73 (T.D.).

The phrase "other person interested" contemplates an objection by a person like a minister of the Crown who is a person in authority in relation to the public interest specified. An accused who seeks to exclude from evidence information obtained by an employee of the Public Service of Canada does not have standing to raise an objection under this section. The objection would have to be raised by someone with an official status and duty in relation to the Public Service of Canada and therefore who had an official interest in preventing the disclosure: R. v. Lines (1986), 27 C.C.C. (3d) 377 (N.W.T.C.A.).

An objection may be made under this section to disclosure of information by certifying orally that the information should not be disclosed on the ground of a specified public interest, namely police practices. Where the objection is made, the trial judge may examine or hear the information in circumstances which he considers appropriate, including the absence of the parties, their counsel and the public. In a criminal case, if the trial judge finds that the information could not affect the outcome then the privilege claim should generally be upheld. If, however, the decision to uphold the claim might affect the outcome of the trial, the judge must consider whether upholding the claim of privilege would have the effect of preventing the accused from making full answer and defence. If the trial judge so concludes then he should consider giving the Crown the alternative of either withdrawing the claim of privilege or entering a stay of proceedings. If the Crown refuses to do either then the trial judge may permit the introduction of the evidence, imposing whatever safeguards seem appropriate. In effect, the trial judge must consider whether the public interest, in allowing the accused to make full answer and defence, can be overridden by the interest asserted by the Crown: R. v. Meuckon (1990), 57 C.C.C. (3d) 193, 78 C.R. (3d) 196 (B.C.C.A.).

Where objection was taken to the disclosure of communications between the police and a government lawyer, it is necessary to weigh the importance of the items of information to a defence which may properly be raised by the accused, against a public interest specified in the certificate. Before making the determination, the judge may wish to examine or hear the evidence and will then be able to give consideration to the possibility that other issues bearing on the relevance of the information sought ought to be dealt with first: R. v. Gray (1993), 79 C.C.C. (3d) 332, 39 W.A.C. 208 (B.C.C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused 83 C.C.C. (3d) vi.

On an application under this section, the trial judge may view the contents of the sealed packet without disclosing the entire contents to the accused: R. v. Desjardins (1990), 61 C.C.C. (3d) 376, 88 Nfld. & P.E.I.R. 143 (Nfld. S.C.).

The requirement that an objection to disclosure which is raised in the provincial court must, pursuant to subsec. (3), be determined in the superior court does not violate an accused's right to a fair trial: Canada (Attorney-General) v. Sander (1992), 79 C.C.C. (3d) 63, 76 B.C.L.R. (2d) 53 (S.C.), rev'd on other grounds 90 C.C.C. (3d) 41, 91 B.C.L.R. (2d) 145 (C.A.).

This section does not confer jurisdiction on a superior court judge to review an order of the judge of another court or to entertain an interlocutory appeal from such an order. The application under this section is an independent inquiry which, by statute, may require the attention of a judge other than the trial judge where the trial judge is not a judge of the superior court: Canada (Attorney General) v. Sander (1994), 90 C.C.C. (3d) 41, 114 D.L.R. (4th) 455, [1994] 8 W.W.R. 512 (C.A.).

A claim of public interest immunity under this section is distinct from an assertion of solicitor-client privilege. Whether a solicitor-client privilege prevails in respect to a particular communication will depend upon the nature of the relationship between the parties, and the purpose for which the communication was made. Cases involving public interest immunity, however, are concerned with a class of documents or their actual content and involve a balancing of the injuries which would be caused by a possible denial of justice as a result of non-disclosure on the one hand and the injury to the public as a result of revelation of government documents which were never intended to be made public. It may be that the proper functioning of government could include a public interest in maintaining the confidentiality of discussions between government lawyers and those government officials that they advise. Legal communications between government investigators and Department of Justice lawyers can be subject to public interest immunity, whether or not a claim at common law of solicitor-client privilege succeeds or fails: Canada (Attorney General) v. Sander, supra.

A certificate filed under this section cannot prevent a court from examining records of an R.C.M.P. investigation in determining an application under s. 41 of the Privacy Act, S.C. 1980-81-82, c. 111, (Sch. II): Davidson v. Canada (Solicitor General) (1990), 47 C.C.C. (3d) 104, [1989] 2 F.C. 341, 61 D.L.R. (4th) 342.

Moreover, this section would not apply where the applicant is seeking the information for his own use and there was no question of disclosure of information before a "court, person, or body with jurisdiction to compel the production of information": Davidson v. Canada (Solicitor General), supra.

While subsec. (6) requires that an appeal be filed within 10 days, if the objection to disclosure is upheld in the course of a trial it is preferable that, except in exceptional circumstances, the appeal not be disposed of until conclusion of the trial. It is undesirable to adjourn a trial for the purpose of an interlocutory appeal which may turn out to be academic: R. v. Archer, supra.

OBJECTION RELATING TO INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS OR NATIONAL DEFENCE OR SECURITY / Limitation period / Appeal to Federal Court of Appeal / Subsections 37(6) and (7) apply / Special rules for hearings / Ex parte representations.

38. (1) Where an objection to the disclosure of information is made under subsection 37(1) on grounds that the disclosure would be injurious to international relations or national defence or security, the objection may be determined, on application, in accordance with subsection 37(2) only by the Chief Justice of the Federal Court, or such other judge of that Court as the Chief Justice may designate to hear such applications.

(2) An application under subsection (1) shall be made within ten days after the objection is made or within such further or lesser time as the Chief Justice of the Federal Court, or such other judge of that Court as the Chief Justice may designate to hear such applications, considers appropriate.

(3) An appeal lies from a determination under subsection (1) to the Federal Court of Appeal.

(4) Subsection 37(6) applies in respect of appeals under subsection (3), and subsection 37(7) applies in respect of appeals from judgments made pursuant to subsection (3), with such modifications as the circumstances require.

(5) An application under subsection (1) or an appeal brought in respect of the application shall

(a) be heard in camera; and

(b) on the request of the person objecting to the disclosure of information, be heard and determined in the National Capital Region described in the schedule to the National Capital Act.

(6) During the hearing of an application under subsection (1) or an appeal brought in respect of the application, the person who made the objection in respect of which the application was made or the appeal was brought shall, on the request of that person, be given the opportunity to make representations ex parte. 1980-81-82-83, c. 111, s. 4.

ANNOTATIONS

Subsec. (1) – Where an objection is made to disclosure of information on the grounds that disclosure would be injurious to international relations or national security, the Chief Justice of the Federal Court has a discretion whether or not to inspect the documents involved and may properly conclude that they should only be inspected if it appears necessary to determine whether disclosure should be made. In determining whether to examine the information the Chief Justice may properly consider the apparent balance of the competing public interests and the likelihood that examination could alter the view of that balance and the impression as to whether disclosure should be ordered. Thus in this case the refusal to order disclosure of the documents was upheld although the Chief Justice did not inspect the documents and relied on the certificate of the Solicitor General and a secret affidavit filed to explain why disclosure would be injurious to national security and international relations and identifying the general nature of the documents: Re Goguen and Albert and Gibson (1984), 10 C.C.C. (3d) 492, 7 D.L.R. (4th) 144, [1983] 2 F.C. 463 (C.A.).

There is a heavy onus on an accused to justify disclosure where objection is taken on the basis of national security and may require that it be established that the evidence sought would probably establish a fact crucial to the defence. Moreover, it is unlikely that a case could ever be made out for disclosure where the evidence is sought for use on a preliminary inquiry, having regard to the function of the preliminary inquiry: Re Kevork et al. and The Queen (1984), 17 C.C.C. (3d) 426, [1984] 2 F.C. 753 (T.D.).

Where the Chief Justice of the Federal Court or his designate, has refused disclosure to the accused of certain evidence by reason of an objection by the Canadian Security Intelligence Service on the basis of national security, then at the subsequent trial of the accused the trial judge would be entitled to grant a stay of proceedings, in view of the breach of the accused's right to fundamental justice brought about by the unavailability of this evidence, only where it is established that the evidence is critical or essential. Such a burden is reasonable in order to avoid fishing expeditions in all cases when it is likely that C.S.I.S. had some hand in gathering information. The burden is on the accused to persuade the trial court that there is evidence being denied that is of a critical nature without which the accused will probably not be able to make full answer and defence. Finally, it may be that where the Federal Court Judge has not even inspected the material before making his decision to refuse disclosure, the trial court may be in a position to grant a conditional stay urging inspection of the material: R. v. Kevork, Balian and Gharakhanian (1986), 27 C.C.C. (3d) 523 (Ont. H.C.J.).

It is not necessary for a party seeking documents, concerning which a claim of privilege has been made on the basis of the public interest in national security, to show that production is absolutely essential to the case. Nor is it an established rule that production will be refused if it is merely corroborative evidence or if the matter can otherwise be proved. The courts cannot abdicate their responsibility to balance the public interests involved merely because a claim of national security is made. On the other hand, the designated judge did not err in refusing production without examining the documents, where the information was not required as evidence at trial but merely for general discovery to determine whether any helpful evidence might in fact be available: Gold v. The Queen In Right Of Canada (1986), 25 D.L.R. (4th) 285, 64 N.R. 260 (F.C.A.).

Subsec. (3) – In Re Goguen and Albert and Gibson (1984), 10 C.C.C. (3d) 492, 7 D.L.R. (4th) 144, [1983] 2 F.C. 463 (C.A.) only Marceau J. considered the role of the Court of Appeal on an appeal from the decision of the Chief Justice refusing to order disclosure. His Lordship was of the view that the Court of Appeal was to proceed to an appreciation of its own without having to give special weight to the decision of the Chief Justice.

OBJECTION RELATING TO A CONFIDENCE OF THE QUEEN'S PRIVY COUNCIL / Definition / Definition of "Council" / Exception.

39. (1) Where a Minister of the Crown or the Clerk of the Privy Council objects to the disclosure of information before a court, person or body with jurisdiction to compel the production of information by certifying in writing that the information constitutes a confidence of the Queen's Privy Council for Canada, disclosure of the information shall be refused without examination or hearing of the information by the court, person or body.

(2) For the purpose of subsection (1), "a confidence of the Queen's Privy Council for Canada" includes, without restricting the generality thereof, information contained in

- (a) a memorandum the purpose of which is to present proposals or recommendations to Council;
- (b) a discussion paper the purpose of which is to present background explanations, analyses of problems or policy options to Council for consideration by Council in making decisions;
- (c) an agenda of Council or a record recording deliberations or decisions of Council;
- (d) a record used for or reflecting communications or discussions between ministers of the Crown on matters relating to the making of government decisions or the formulation of government policy;
- (e) a record the purpose of which is to brief Ministers of the Crown in relation to matters that are brought before, or are proposed to be brought before, Council or that are the subject of communications or discussions referred to in paragraph (d); and
- (f) draft legislation.

(3) For the purposes of subsection (2), "Council" means the Queen's Privy Council for Canada, committees of the Queen's Privy Council for Canada, Cabinet and committees of Cabinet.

(4) Subsection (1) does not apply in respect of

- (a) a confidence of the Queen's Privy Council for Canada that has been in existence for more than twenty years; or
- (b) a discussion paper described in paragraph (2)(b)
  - (i) if the decisions to which the discussion paper relates have been made public, or
  - (ii) where the decisions have not been made public, if four years have passed since the decisions were made. 1980-81-82-83, c. 111, s. 4.

ANNOTATIONS

While the court is not entitled to go behind a proper certificate by the Clerk of the Privy Council, it is open to the court to see whether the certificate on its face asserts a privilege within the limitations on claims for privilege by the executive, particularly the limitation in subsec. (4). Thus where the certificate asserts that a document is a confidence on the basis of the definitions in subsec. (2) it should clearly assert that the document meets the requirements spelled out in those paragraphs, and does not fall within the proviso in subsec. (4). A letter passing between Ministers may fall within the term "record" in subsec. (2)(d) and (e): Smith, Kline & French Laboratories Ltd. et al. v. A.-G. Can., [1983] 1 F.C. 917, 76 C.P.R. (2d) 192 (T.D.).

An objection to disclosure is properly taken under this section in respect of material in the possession of the body whose decision it is sought to review under s. 28 of the Federal Court Act. The determination of the validity of the objection is made pursuant to this section by the Chief Justice or a judge designated by him: Henrie v. Canada (Security Intelligence Review Committee) (1992), 88 D.L.R. (4th) 575, 55 F.T.R. 96n, 5 Admin. L.R. (2d) 269 (C.A.).

A memorandum to a single minister of the Crown acting under statutory authority cannot amount to a confidence of the Privy Council within the meaning of this section, since the section makes it clear that only information that concerns the Cabinet in the collegial sense can qualify for the absolute privilege. However, documents which were sent to two ministers because two ministers were responsible for making the single decision did qualify under this section: Canadian Assn. of Regulated Importers v. Canada (Attorney General), [1992] 2 F.C. 130, 87 D.L.R. (4th) 730, 6 Admin. L.R. (2d) 191 (C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused 96 D.L.R. (4th) vi.

In Carey v. The Queen (1986), 30 C.C.C. (3d) 498, [1986] 2 S.C.R. 637 (7:0), the court reviewed at length the question of state privilege at common law in relation to cabinet documents and held that there is no rule at common law that cabinet documents are absolutely immune from disclosure. While that case must be read with care when applied to the statutory provisions under this Act it may prove of assistance in interpreting those provisions.

To a similar effect see Nova Scotia (Attorney General) v. Nova Scotia (Royal Commission Into Marshall Prosecution) (1988), 44 C.C.C. (3d) 330, 54 D.L.R. (4th) 153 (N.S.C.A.), holding that a Royal Commission could properly require cabinet members (the present and former Attorneys-General) to testify as to the nature of cabinet discussions concerning the prosecution under investigation by the Royal Commission.

A certificate under this section cannot prevent the introduction into evidence at trial of information already produced at discovery without objection: Best Cleaners and Contractors Ltd. v. The Queen, [1985] 2 F.C. 293, 58 N.R. 295 (C.A.).

This section does not violate the equality rights in s. 15 of the Charter: Canadian Assn. of Regulated Importers v. Canada (Attorney General) (1991), 87 D.L.R. (4th) 730, [1992] 2 F.C. 130, 6 Admin. L.R. (2d) 191 (C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused 96 D.L.R. (4th) vi.

Provincial Laws of Evidence

HOW APPLICABLE.

40. In all proceedings over which Parliament has legislative authority, the laws of evidence in force in the province in which those proceedings are taken, including the laws of proof of service of any warrant, summons, subpoena or other document, subject to this Act and other Acts of Parliament, apply to those proceedings. R.S., c. E-10, s. 37.

ANNOTATIONS

Provincial procedural enactments, such as one providing for use of another language at trial, are not "laws of evidence" within this section: R. v. Murphy, ex p. Belisle and Moreau, [1968] 4 C.C.C. 229, 5 C.R.N.S. 68 (N.B.C.A.).

It was held in Marshall v. The Queen (1960), 129 C.C.C. 232, 26 D.L.R. (2d) 459, [1961] S.C.R. 123, 34 C.R. 216 (5:0) (S.C.C.) that provincial legislation, rendering inadmissible an accident report made by a motorist at "any trial", when properly construed applied only to trials of offences within provincial jurisdiction and not for criminal offences. Nor could such legislation apply to the trial of criminal offences by virtue of this section. The words "subject to this and other Acts of the Parliament of Canada" include s. 8 of the Criminal Code which preserves the common law relating to the admissibility of confessions. If the statement is proved voluntary then it is admissible even though made under compulsion of statute.

Similarly, it was held that the combined effect of this section and s. 8(2) of the Criminal Code is to incorporate in the criminal law by legislation the common law in effect in a province immediately before April 1, 1955, including for example the rule respecting secrecy of the identities of police informers. Thus, provincial legislation which sought to abrogate that rule would be either ultra vires or inoperative: Bisaillon v. Keable et al. (1983), 7 C.C.C. (3d) 385, 2 D.L.R. (4th) 193 (S.C.C.) (7:0).

This section must be given a narrow scope so as to avoid unacceptable differences from province to province on fundamental matters of criminal evidence and thus, for example, should be restricted to the proof of matters within provincial competence: R. v. Albright (1987), 37 C.C.C. (3d) 105, 60 C.R. (3d) 97, [1987] 2 S.C.R. 383 (5:0).

Provincial legislation making admissible at trial an accident report made by a motorist to prove identity of the driver cannot alter the common law which requires proof of voluntariness before any statement by an accused is admissible at his trial for an offence under the Criminal Code: R. v. Ward (1977), 38 C.C.C. (2d) 353, [1978] 1 W.W.R. 514 (Alta. S.C. App.Div.). This point was not argued on appeal to the S.C.C. (1979), 44 C.C.C. (2d) 498.

Provincial legislation making admissible a certificate of the Deputy Registrar of Motor Vehicles demonstrating ownership of a motor vehicle is not applicable to trial of federal offences. Such legislation is inconsistent with s. 8(2) of the Criminal Code which preserves the common law and the certificate would be inadmissible hearsay at common law: R. v. Richardson (1980), 57 C.C.C. (2d) 403, [1981] 2 W.W.R. 755 (Alta. C.A.).

This section is to be given a narrow scope and restricted to matters within provincial competency so as to avoid unacceptable differences between provinces respecting the admissibility of relevant evidence tendered by affidavit under s. 30 in a prosecution under federal legislation: R. v. Nickerson (1991), 106 N.S.R. (2d) 300 (C.A.).

A medical report prepared for the defence which may have been admissible in civil proceedings by virtue of provincial legislation was not admissible in criminal proceedings. The admissibility of such evidence was a matter completely within federal jurisdiction and this section did not make the provincial legislation applicable: R. v. Driver (1992), 16 W.C.B. (2d) 127 (Ont. Ct. (Prov. Div.)).

Statutory Declarations

SOLEMN DECLARATION.

41. Any judge, notary public, justice of the peace, police or provincial court judge, recorder, mayor or commissioner authorized to take affidavits to be used either in the provincial or federal courts, or any other functionary authorized by law to administer an oath in any matter, may receive the solemn declaration of any person voluntarily making the declaration before him, in the following form, in attestation of the execution of any writing, deed or instrument, or of the truth of any fact, or of any account rendered in writing:

I,....., solemnly declare that (state the fact or facts declared to),
and I make this solemn declaration conscientiously believing it to be true, and knowing that it is of the same force and effect as if made under oath.

Declared before me..... at..... this ..... day of..... 19.....

R.S., c. E-10, s. 38; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 203(1).

Insurance Proofs

AFFIDAVITS, ETC.

42. Any affidavit, solemn affirmation or declaration required by any insurance company authorized by law to do business in Canada, in regard to any loss of or injury to person, property or life insured or assured therein, may be taken before any commissioner or other person authorized to take affidavits, before any justice of the peace or before any notary public for any province, and the commissioner, person, justice of the peace or notary public is required to take the affidavit, solemn affirmation or declaration. R.S., c. E-10, s. 39.

Part II

Application

---

FOREIGN COURTS.

43. This Part applies to the taking of evidence relating to proceedings in courts out of Canada. R.S., c. E-10, s. 40.

---

Interpretation

---

DEFINITIONS / "cause" / "court" / "judge" / "oath".

44. In this Part,

"cause" includes a proceeding against a criminal;

"court" means any superior court in any province;

"judge" means any judge of any superior court in any province;

"oath" includes a solemn affirmation in cases in which, by the law of Canada, or of a province, as the case may be, a solemn affirmation is allowed instead of an oath. R.S., c. E-10, s. 41; 1984, c. 40, s. 27.

CONSTRUCTION.

45. This Part shall not be so construed as to interfere with the right of legislation of the legislature of any province requisite or desirable for the carrying out of the objects hereof. R.S., c. E-10, s. 42.

Procedure

ORDER FOR EXAMINATION OF WITNESS IN CANADA.

46. Where, on an application for that purpose, it is made to appear to any court or judge that any court or tribunal of competent jurisdiction in the Commonwealth and Dependent Territories or in any foreign country, before which any civil, commercial or criminal matter is pending, is desirous of obtaining the testimony in relation to that matter of a party or witness within the jurisdiction of the first mentioned court, of the court to which the judge belongs or of the judge, the court or judge may, in its or his discretion, order the examination on oath on interrogatories, or otherwise, before any person or persons named in the order, of that party or witness accordingly, and by the same or any subsequent order may command the attendance of that party or witness for the purpose of being examined, and for the production of any writings or other documents mentioned in the order and of any other writings or documents relating to the matter in question that are in the possession or power of that party or witness. R.S., c. E-10, s. 43.

ANNOTATIONS

Letters rogatory may be enforced by the Court of one province with respect to documents then held by an employee of a federal department in another province: Re Request For International Judicial Assistance (1979), 49 C.C.C. (2d) 276, 102 D.L.R. (3d) 18 (Alta. Q.B.), rev'd on other grounds 58 C.C.C. (2d) 274, 120 D.L.R. (3d) 732, [1981] 4 W.W.R. 148 (Alta. C.A.), judgment restored, the court not dealing with this point 66 C.C.C. (2d) 125, 27 C.R. (3d) 1, 134 D.L.R. (3d) 32, [1982] 1 S.C.R. 414, sub nom. District Court of the United States, Middle District of Florida v. Royal American Shows Inc. et al.; United States v. Royal American Shows Inc. et al.

In an unusual case, Gulf Oil Corp. v. Gulf Canada Ltd. et al. (1980), 111 D.L.R. (3d) 74, [1980] 2 S.C.R. 39, the Supreme Court of Canada took jurisdiction under this section but refused to exercise its discretion to enforce letters rogatory from United States Courts in view of federal government policy which was contrary to disclosure of the documents sought by the United States Courts.

A Canadian Court may grant a request for production of documents only. The order for production need not be ancillary to an order for examination of a specific witness: District Court of the United States, Middle District of Florida v. Royal American Shows Inc. et al.; United States of America v. Royal American Shows Inc. et al. (1982), 66 C.C.C. (2d) 125, 27 C.R. (3d) 1, [1982] 1 S.C.R. 414 (5:0).

The Court's power under this section will not be exercised where the person whose attendance for examination is sought is an accused in pending criminal proceedings in the requesting Court and the testimony sought is for the purpose of such proceedings. While Canadian Courts in the interest of comity will give judicial assistance whenever possible, comity recognizes that judicial assistance may be denied where its exercise would violate the public policy of the state to which the appeal is made or conflicts with local notions of justice, such as in Canada the right of an accused not to be compelled to testify against himself: Re Uzsinska and Republic of France (1980), 52 C.C.C. (2d) 39, 27 O.R. (2d) 604 (H.C.J.).

Courts will not generally exercise their discretion in favour of enforcing letters rogatory merely to provide a basis for corroboration of available evidence. Further, the court will not enforce a request for production of documents which is too wide, too vague and too general to call for production by persons who are strangers to the litigation: Seminole Electric Co-operative, Inc. v. BBC Brown Boveri, Inc. (1987), 35 D.L.R. (4th) 102, 80 N.B.R. (2d) 91 (Q.B.).

The court has no power to limit a specific request for production of documents from a foreign court and where the request is too general to be enforced then the request must be refused: Re Scholnick and Bank of Nova Scotia (1987), 59 O.R. (2d) 538 (H.C.J.); Seminole Electric Cooperative Inc. v. BBC Brown Boveri, Inc., supra.

An order for examination of witnesses may be made under this section even where the proceedings are at a pre-trial stage. Thus an order was made at the request of Swiss authorities where the provisions of this section had been complied with, and the request for assistance had come through the proper diplomatic channels, and if the order were refused the purpose of the Treaty under which Switzerland would conduct a surrogate criminal prosecution in respect of Canadian charges against Swiss citizens would be frustrated: Zingre, Wuest and Reiser v. The Queen (1981), 61 C.C.C. (2d) 465, 127 D.L.R. (3d) 223, [1981] 2 S.C.R. 392 (9:0).

An order will be made under this Part to examine a witness, merely for investigation purposes to determine whether charges should be laid, only in exceptional circumstances. The potential accused has standing to challenge the validity of an order made under this Part: France (Republic) v. De Havilland Aircraft of Canada Ltd. (1989), 50 C.C.C. (3d) 167 (Ont. H.C.J.).

ENFORCEMENT OF THE ORDER.

47. On the service on the party or witness of an order referred to in section 46, and of an appointment of a time and place for the examination of the party or witness signed by the person named in the order for taking the examination, or, if more than one person is named, by one of the persons named, and on payment or tender of the like conduct money as is properly payable on attendance at a trial, the order may be enforced in like manner as an order made by the court or judge in a cause pending in that court or before that judge. R.S., c. E-10, s. 44.

EXPENSES AND CONDUCT MONEY.

48. Every person whose attendance is required in the manner described is entitled to the like conduct money and payment for expenses and loss of time as on attendance at a trial. R.S., c. E-10, s. 45.

ADMINISTERING OATH.

49. On any examination of parties or witnesses, under the authority of any order made in pursuance of this Part, the oath shall be administered by the person authorized to take the examination, or, if more than one person is authorized, by one of those persons. R.S., c. E-10, s. 46.

---

RIGHT OF REFUSAL TO ANSWER OR PRODUCE DOCUMENT / Nature of right.

50. (1) Any person examined under any order made under this Part has the like right to refuse to answer questions tending to criminate himself, or other questions, as a party or witness, as the case may be, would have in any cause pending in the court by which, or by a judge whereof, the order is made.

(2) No person shall be compelled to produce, under any order referred to in subsection (1), any writing or other document that he could not be compelled to produce at a trial of such a cause. R.S., c. E-10, s. 47.

RULES OF COURT / Letters rogatory.

51. (1) The court may frame rules and orders in relation to procedure and to the evidence to be produced in support of the application for an order for examination of parties and witnesses under this Part, and generally for carrying this Part into effect.

(2) In the absence of any order in relation to the evidence to be produced in support of the application referred to in subsection (1), letters rogatory from any court of justice in the Commonwealth and Dependent Territories, or from any foreign tribunal, in which the civil, commercial or criminal matter is pending, shall be deemed and taken to be sufficient evidence in support of the application. R.S., c. E-10, s. 48.

Part III

Application

APPLICATION OF THIS PART.

52. This Part extends to the following classes of persons:

- (a) officers of any of Her Majesty's diplomatic or consular services while performing their functions in any foreign country, including ambassadors, envoys, ministers, charges d'affaires, counsellors, secretaries, attaches, consuls general, consuls, vice-consuls, pro-consuls, consular agents, acting consuls general, acting consuls, acting vice-consuls and acting consular agents;
- (b) officers of the Canadian diplomatic, consular and representative services while performing their functions in any foreign country or in any part of the Commonwealth and Dependent Territories other than Canada, including, in addition to the diplomatic and consular officers mentioned in paragraph (a), high commissioners, permanent delegates, acting high commissioners, acting permanent delegates, counsellors and secretaries;
- (c) Canadian Government Trade Commissioners and Assistant Canadian Government Trade Commissioners while performing their functions in any foreign country or in any part of the Commonwealth and Dependent Territories other than Canada;
- (d) honorary consular officers of Canada while performing their functions in any foreign country or in any part of the Commonwealth and Dependent Territories other than Canada; and
- (e) judicial officials in a foreign country in respect of oaths, affidavits, solemn affirmations, declarations or similar documents that the official is authorized to administer, take or receive. R.S., c. E-10, s. 49; 1984, c. 40, s. 27(3); 1994, c. 44, s. 92.

Oaths and Solemn Affirmations

OATHS TAKEN ABROAD.

53. Oaths, affidavits, solemn affirmations or declarations administered, taken or received outside Canada by any person mentioned in section 52 are as valid and effectual and are of the like force and effect to all intents and purposes as if they had been administered, taken or received in Canada by a person authorized to administer, take or receive oaths, affidavits, solemn affirmations or declarations therein that are valid and effectual under this Act. R.S., c. E-10, s. 50.

ANNOTATIONS

While it is not clear that this section when taken with s. 40 of this Act was intended to be exclusive and to limit the admissibility of affidavits to those sworn abroad before persons mentioned in s. 52, where the trial is in the Federal Court, s. 53 of the Federal Court Act, R.S.C. 1970, c. 10 (2nd Supp.) makes the law of evidence of the province applicable notwithstanding s. 40 of this Act. Thus if the trial is in Ontario an affidavit sworn before a notary public as permitted by the Ontario Evidence Act was admissible: Kemanord AB v. PPG Industries, Inc. et al. (1980), 49 C.P.R. (2d) 29, [1981] 1 F.C. 567 (T.D.); Cooper & Beatty Ltd. v. Alpha Graphics Ltd. et al. (1980), 49 C.P.R. (2d) 145 (Fed. Ct. T.D.).

Documentary Evidence

DOCUMENTS TO BE ADMITTED IN EVIDENCE / Status of statements.

54. (1) Any document that purports to have affixed, impressed or subscribed on it or to it the signature of any person authorized by any of paragraphs 52(a) to (d) to administer, take or receive oaths, affidavits, solemn affirmations or declarations, together with their seal or with the seal or stamp of their office, or the office to which the person is attached, in testimony of any oath, affidavit, solemn affirmation or declaration being administered, taken or received by the person, shall be admitted in evidence, without proof of the seal or stamp or of the person's signature or official character.

(2) An affidavit, solemn affirmation, declaration or other similar statement taken or received in a foreign country by an official referred to in paragraph 52(e) shall be admitted in evidence without proof of the signature or official character of the official appearing to have signed the affidavit, solemn affirmation, declaration or other statement. R.S., c. E-10, s. 51; 1994, c. 44, s. 93.

An Act respecting food, drugs, cosmetics and therapeutic devices

SHORT TITLE

1. This Act may be cited as the Food and Drugs Act. R.S., c. F-27, s. 1.

INTERPRETATION

DEFINITIONS / "advertisement" / "analyst" / "contraceptive device" / "cosmetic" / "department" / "device" / "drug" / "food" / "inspector" / "label" / "minister" / "package" / "prescribed" / "sell" / "unsanitary conditions".

2. In this Act,

"advertisement" includes any representation by any means whatever for the purpose of promoting directly or indirectly the sale or disposal of any food, drug, cosmetic or device;

"analyst" means any person designated as an analyst under section 28;

"contraceptive device" means any instrument, apparatus, contrivance or substance other than a drug, that is manufactured, sold or represented for use in the prevention of conception;

"cosmetic" includes any substance or mixture of substances manufactured, sold or represented for use in cleansing, improving or altering the complexion, skin, hair or teeth, and includes deodorants and perfumes;

"Department" means the Department of National Health and Welfare;

"device" means any article, instrument, apparatus or contrivance, including any component, part or accessory thereof, manufactured, sold or represented for use in

- (a) the diagnosis, treatment, mitigation or prevention of a disease, disorder or abnormal physical state, or its symptoms, in human beings or animals,
- (b) restoring, correcting or modifying a body function or the body structure of human beings or animals,
- (c) the diagnosis of pregnancy in human beings or animals, or
- (d) the care of human beings or animals during pregnancy and at and after birth of the offspring, including care of the offspring, and includes a contraceptive device but does not include a drug;

"drug" includes any substance or mixture of substances manufactured, sold or represented for use in

- (a) the diagnosis, treatment, mitigation or prevention of a disease, disorder or abnormal physical state, or its symptoms, in human beings or animals,
- (b) restoring, correcting or modifying organic functions in human beings or animals, or
- (c) disinfection in premises in which food is manufactured, prepared or kept;

"food" includes any article manufactured, sold or represented for use as food or drink for human beings, chewing gum, and any ingredient that may be mixed with food for any purpose whatever;

"inspector" means any person designated as an inspector for the purpose of the enforcement of this Act under

- (a) subsection 22(1) of this Act,
- (b) The Department of Agriculture and Agri-Food Act, or
- (c) the Department of Industry Act;

"label" includes any legend, word or mark attached to, included in, belonging to or accompanying any food, drug, cosmetic, device or package;

"Minister" means the Minister of National Health and Welfare;

"package" includes any thing in which any food, drug, cosmetic or device is wholly or partly contained, placed or packed;

"prescribed" means prescribed by the regulations;

"sell" includes offer for sale, expose for sale, have in possession for sale and distribute, whether or not the distribution is made for consideration;

"unsanitary conditions" means such conditions or circumstances as might contaminate with dirt or filth, or render injurious to health, a food, drug or cosmetic. R.S., c. F-27, s. 2; 1980-81-82-83, c. 47, s. 19; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 191; 1993, c. 34, s. 71; 1994, c. 38, s. 18; 1995, c. 1, s. 62(1)(I).

ANNOTATIONS

"Sell" – The definition of this word is carried through to interpret the word "sell" in the regulations under this Act: R. v. Hancock (1978), 39 C.C.C. (2d) 275, [1978] 2 W.W.R. 197 (B.C.C.A.). In this case it was held that an "offer to sell" is not equivalent to "offer for sale" within the meaning of this section. The definition of "sell" in this section contemplates that all the acts included in the definition must be in relation to a specific substance. Thus on a charge of offering mescaline for sale the accused must be acquitted where he held out as mescaline a substance which was not in fact mescaline.

It was held, prior to the amendment to this section which added the phrase "whether or not the distribution is made for consideration", that the mere giving of a drug does not come within the meaning of the word "distribute" even if there is no requirement of proof of commerciality: R. v. Cole (1981), 64 C.C.C. (2d) 119, 34 O.R. (2d) 416 (C.A.).

In R. v. Davidson (1984), 11 C.C.C. (3d) 460, 52 N.B.R. (2d) 338 (C.A.) the accused, a physician, was convicted of unlawful sale of a Sch. F. drug. Although the accused did not charge for the drugs his conduct came within the definition of "distribute". The accused had a large quantity of diazepam on hand and had been prohibited by the medical council from dispensing drugs from his office. The accused collected medicare payments for the patients' visits, which provided the element of commerciality, and in the guise of treating the patients he was really distributing drugs.

Part I / FOODS, DRUGS, COSMETICS AND DEVICES

General

PROHIBITED ADVERTISING / Prohibited label or advertisement where sale made / Unauthorized advertising of contraceptive device prohibited.

3. (1) No person shall advertise any food, drug, cosmetic or device to the general public as a treatment, preventative or cure for any of the diseases, disorders or abnormal physical states referred to in Schedule A.

(2) No person shall sell any food, drug, cosmetic or device

(a) that is represented by label, or

(b) that the person advertises to the general public as a treatment, preventative or cure for any of the diseases, disorders or abnormal physical states referred to in Schedule A.

(3) Except as authorized by regulation, no person shall advertise to the general public any contraceptive device or any drug manufactured, sold or represented for use in the prevention of conception. R.S., c. F-27, s. 3.

ANNOTATIONS

This section constitutes a reasonable limit on freedom of expression as guaranteed by the Charter of Rights and Freedoms and is therefore not unconstitutional: R. v. Thomas Lipton Inc. (1989), 51 C.C.C. (3d) 104, 26 C.P.R. (3d) 385 (Ont. Prov. Ct.).

---

Food

---

PROHIBITED SALES OF FOOD.

4. No person shall sell an article of food that

(a) has in or on it any poisonous or harmful substance;

(b) is unfit for human consumption;

(c) consists in whole or in part of any filthy, putrid, disgusting, rotten, decomposed or diseased animal or vegetable substance;

(d) is adulterated; or

(e) was manufactured, prepared, preserved, packaged or stored under unsanitary conditions. R.S., c. F-27, s. 4.

DECEPTION, ETC., REGARDING FOOD / Food labelled or packaged in contravention of regulations.

5. (1) No person shall label, package, treat, process, sell or advertise any food in a manner that is false, misleading or deceptive or is likely to create an erroneous impression regarding its character, value, quantity, composition, merit or safety.

(2) An article of food that is not labelled or packaged as required by, or is labelled or packaged contrary to, the regulations shall be deemed to be labelled or packaged contrary to subsection (1). R.S., c. F-27, s. 5.

ANNOTATIONS

On a charge that the accused did "sell" a side of beef in a manner likely to create an erroneous impression as to its "composition" the word "sell" may properly describe the whole continuum of events from the advertisement through the processing of the meat to its delivery and payment and the word "composition" properly describes the various cuts from the side of the beef sold. The charge is therefore made out where the meat as delivered to the customer did not include all the parts of the side of beef and included extraneous parts: R. v. Grotoli (1978), 43 C.C.C. (2d) 158 (Ont. C.A.).

In light of the Charter this provision must now be interpreted as creating a strict liability offence only, where the accused can avoid liability by proof of due diligence: R. v. Rube (1991), 63 C.C.C. (3d) 47, 54 B.C.L.R. (2d) 106 (C.A.), affd 75 C.C.C. (3d) 575n, [1993] 1 W.W.R. 365, 74 B.C.L.R. (2d) 1n (S.C.C.) (7:0).

IMPORTATION AND INTERPROVINCIAL MOVEMENT OF FOOD / Not applicable to carriers / Labelling, etc., of food that is imported or moved interprovincially.

- 6. (1) Where a standard for a food has been prescribed, no person shall
- (a) import into Canada,
  - (b) send, convey or receive for conveyance from one province to another, or
  - (c) have in possession for the purpose of sending or conveying from one province to another any article that is intended for sale and that is likely to be mistaken for that food unless the article complies with the prescribed standard.

(2) Paragraphs (1)(b) and (c) do not apply to an operator of a conveyance that is used to carry an article or to a carrier of an article whose sole concern, in respect of the article, is the conveyance of the article unless the operator or carrier could, with reasonable diligence, have ascertained that the conveying or receiving for conveyance of the article or the possession of the article for the purpose of conveyance would be in violation of subsection (1).

(3) Where a standard for a food has been prescribed, no person shall label, package, sell or advertise any article that

- (a) has been imported into Canada,
- (b) has been sent or conveyed from one province to another, or
- (c) is intended to be sent or conveyed from one province to another in such a manner that it is likely to be mistaken for that food unless the article complies with the prescribed standard. R.S., c. F-27, s. 6; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (3rd Supp.), s. 1.

GOVERNOR IN COUNCIL MAY IDENTIFY STANDARD OR PORTION THEREOF / Where standard or portion thereof is identified.

6.1. (1) The Governor in Council may, by regulation, identify a standard prescribed for a food, or any portion of the standard, as being necessary to prevent injury to the health of the consumer or purchaser of the food.

(2) Where a standard or any portion of a standard prescribed for a food is identified by the Governor in Council pursuant to subsection (1), no person shall label, package, sell or advertise any article in such a manner that it is likely to be mistaken for that food unless the article complies with the standard or portion of a standard so identified. R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (3rd Supp.), s. 1.

---

UNSANITARY MANUFACTURE, ETC., OF FOOD.

7. No person shall manufacture, prepare, preserve, package or store for sale any food under unsanitary conditions. R.S., c. F-27, s. 7.

Drugs

---

PROHIBITED SALES OF DRUGS.

8. No person shall sell any drug that

- (a) was manufactured, prepared, preserved, packed or stored under unsanitary conditions; or
  - (b) is adulterated. R.S., c. F-27, s. 8.

DECEPTION, ETC., REGARDING DRUGS / Drugs labelled or packaged in contravention of regulations.

9. (1) No person shall label, package, treat, process, sell or advertise any drug in a manner that is false, misleading or deceptive or is likely to create an erroneous impression regarding its character, value, quantity, composition, merit or safety.

(2) A drug that is not labelled or packaged as required by, or is labelled or packaged contrary to, the regulations shall be deemed to be labelled or packaged contrary to subsection (1). R.S., c. F-27, s. 9.

WHERE STANDARD PRESCRIBED FOR DRUG / Trade standards / Where no prescribed or trade standard.

10. (1) Where a standard has been prescribed for a drug, no person shall label, package, sell or advertise any substance in such a manner that it is likely to be mistaken for that drug, unless the substance complies with the prescribed standard.

(2) Where a standard has not been prescribed for a drug, but a standard for the drug is contained in any publication referred to in Schedule B, no person shall label, package, sell or advertise any substance in such a manner that it is likely to be mistaken for that drug, unless the substance complies with the standard.

(3) Where a standard for a drug has not been prescribed and no standard for the drug is contained in any publication referred to in Schedule B, no person shall sell the drug unless

- (a) it is in accordance with the professed standard under which it is sold; and
  - (b) it does not resemble, in a manner likely to deceive, any drug for which a standard has been prescribed or is contained in any publication referred to in Schedule B. R.S., c. F-27, s. 10.

UNSANITARY MANUFACTURE, ETC., OF DRUG.

11. No person shall manufacture, prepare, preserve, package or store for sale any drug under unsanitary conditions. R.S., c. F-27, s. 11.

DRUGS NOT TO BE SOLD UNLESS SAFE MANUFACTURE INDICATED.

12. No person shall sell any drug described in Schedule C or D unless the Minister has, in prescribed form and manner, indicated that the premises in which the drug was manufactured and the process and conditions of manufacture therein are suitable to ensure that the drug will not be unsafe for use. R.S., c. F-27, s. 12.

DRUGS NOT TO BE SOLD UNLESS SAFE BATCH INDICATED.

13. No person shall sell any drug described in Schedule E unless the Minister has, in prescribed form and manner, indicated that the batch from which the drug was taken is not unsafe for use. R.S., c. F-27, s. 13.

---

SAMPLES / Exception.

14. (1) No person shall distribute or cause to be distributed any drug as a sample.

(2) Subsection (1) does not apply to the distribution, under prescribed conditions, of samples of drugs to physicians, dentists, veterinary surgeons or pharmacists. R.S., c. F-27, s. 14.

---

SCHEDULE F DRUGS NOT TO BE SOLD.

15. No person shall sell any drug described in Schedule F. R.S., c. F-27, s. 15.

Cosmetics

---

PROHIBITED SALES OF COSMETICS.

16. No person shall sell any cosmetic that

- (a) has in or on it any substance that may cause injury to the health of the user when the cosmetic is used,
    - (i) according to the directions on the label or accompanying the cosmetic, or
    - (ii) for such purposes and by such methods of use as are customary or usual therefor;
  - (b) consists in whole or in part of any filthy or decomposed substance or of any foreign matter; or
  - (c) was manufactured, prepared, preserved, packaged or stored under unsanitary conditions. R.S., c. F-27, s. 16.

WHERE STANDARD PRESCRIBED FOR COSMETIC.

17. Where a standard has been prescribed for a cosmetic, no person shall label, package, sell or advertise any article in such a manner that it is likely to be mistaken for that cosmetic, unless the article complies with the prescribed standard. R.S., c. F-27, s. 17.

---

UNSANITARY CONDITIONS.

18. No person shall manufacture, prepare, preserve, package or store for sale any cosmetic under unsanitary conditions. R.S., c. F-27, s. 18.

---

Devices

---

PROHIBITED SALES OF DEVICES.

19. No person shall sell any device that, when used according to directions or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may cause injury to the health of the purchaser or user thereof. R.S., c. F-27, s. 19.

---

DECEPTION, ETC., REGARDING DEVICES / Devices labelled or packaged in contravention of regulations.

---

20. (1) No person shall label, package, treat, process, sell or advertise any device in a manner that is false, misleading or deceptive or is likely to create an erroneous impression regarding its design, construction, performance, intended use, quantity, character, value, composition, merit or safety.

(2) A device that is not labelled or packaged as required by, or is labelled or packaged contrary to, the regulations shall be deemed to be labelled or packaged contrary to subsection (1). R.S., c. F-27, s. 20; 1976-77, c. 28, s. 16.

WHERE STANDARD PRESCRIBED FOR DEVICE.

21. Where a standard has been prescribed for a device, no person shall label, package, sell or advertise any article in such a manner that it is likely to be mistaken for that device, unless the article complies with the prescribed standard. R.S., c. F-27, s. 21.

Part II / ADMINISTRATION AND ENFORCEMENT

Inspection, Seizure and Forfeiture

---

INSPECTORS / Certificate to be produced.

22. (1) The Minister may designate any person as an inspector for the purpose of the enforcement of this Act.

(2) An inspector shall be furnished with a prescribed certificate of his designation as an inspector and on entering any place pursuant to subsection 23(1) an inspector shall, if so required, produce the certificate to the person in charge of that place. R.S., c. F-27, s. 22; 1980-81-82-83, c. 47, s. 19.

POWERS OF INSPECTORS / Warrant required to enter dwelling-house / Authority to issue warrant / Use of force / Definition of "article to which this Act or the regulations apply" / Assistance and information to be given inspector.

23. (1) Subject to subsection (1.1), an inspector may at any reasonable time enter any place where the inspector believes on reasonable grounds any article to which this Act or the regulations apply is manufactured, prepared, preserved, packaged or stored, and may

- (a) examine any such article and take samples thereof, and examine anything that the inspector believes on reasonable grounds is used or capable of being used for that manufacture, preparation, preservation, packaging or storing;
- (a.1) enter any conveyance that the inspector believes on reasonable grounds is used to carry any article to which section 6 or 6.1 applies and examine any such article found therein and take samples thereof;
- (b) open and examine any receptacle or package that the inspector believes on reasonable grounds contains any article to which this Act or the regulations apply;
- (c) examine and make copies of, or extracts from, any books, documents or other records found in any place referred to in this subsection that the inspector believes on reasonable grounds contain any information relevant to the enforcement of this Act with respect to any article to which this Act or the regulations apply; and
- (d) seize and detain for such time as may be necessary any article by means of or in relation to which the inspector believes on reasonable grounds any provision of this Act or the regulations has been contravened.

(1.1) Where any place mentioned in subsection (1) is a dwelling-house, an inspector may not enter that dwelling-house without the consent of the occupant except under the authority of a warrant issued under subsection (1.2).

(1.2) Where on ex parte application a justice of the peace is satisfied by information on oath

- (a) that the conditions for entry described in subsection (1) exist in relation to a dwelling-house,
- (b) that entry to the dwelling-house is necessary for any purpose relating to the administration or enforcement of this Act, and
- (c) that entry to the dwelling-house has been refused or that there are reasonable grounds for believing that entry thereto will be refused, the justice of the peace may issue a warrant under his hand authorizing the inspector named therein to enter that dwelling-house subject to such conditions as may be specified in the warrant.

(1.3) In executing a warrant issued under subsection (1.2), the inspector named therein shall not use force unless the inspector is accompanied by a peace officer and the use of force has been specifically authorized in the warrant.

(2) In subsection (1), "article to which this Act or the regulations apply" includes

- (a) any food, drug, cosmetic or device;
- (b) anything used for the manufacture, preparation, preservation, packaging or storing thereof; and
- (c) any labelling or advertising material.

(3) The owner or person in charge of a place entered by an inspector pursuant to subsection (1) and every person found therein shall give the inspector all reasonable assistance and furnish the inspector with any information he may reasonably require. R.S., c. F-27, s. 22; R.S.C. 1985, c. 31 (1st Supp.), s. 11; c. 27 (3rd Supp.), s. 2.

ANNOTATIONS

This section constitutes a code of search and seizure for Parts I and II of this Act and thus there is no requirement that the inspector also have a search warrant issued under s. 443 [now s. 487] of the Criminal Code notwithstanding the reason for the inspector's entry onto the premises is a suspected violation of this Act or the Regulations: Re Vienna Clinic Ltd. and Skaken and The Queen (1980), 53 C.C.C. (2d) 556 (Alta. Q.B.).

It was held in C.E. Jamieson & Co. (Dominion) Ltd. v. Attorney-General of Canada (1987), 37 C.C.C. (3d) 193, 46 D.L.R. (4th) 582, [1988] 1 F.C. 590 (T.D.), however, considering the predecessor to this section that, to the extent that subsec. (1)(d) authorizes a warrantless seizure from an office or warehouse in the context of a criminal investigation, it violates s. 8 of the Charter and is of no force and effect. In the case of exigent circumstances, a "peace officer" could obtain a telewarrant under s. 487.1 of the Criminal Code.

OBSTRUCTION AND FALSE STATEMENTS / Interference.

24. (1) No person shall obstruct or hinder, or knowingly make any false or misleading statement either orally or in writing to, an inspector while the inspector is engaged in carrying out his duties or functions under this Act or the regulations.

(2) Except with the authority of an inspector, no person shall remove, alter or interfere in any way with anything seized under this Part. R.S., c. F-27, ss. 22, 37.

STORAGE AND REMOVAL.

25. Any article seized under this Part may, at the option of an inspector, be kept or stored in the building or place where it was seized or, at the direction of an inspector, the article may be removed to any other proper place. R.S., c. F-27, ss. 22, 37.

RELEASE OF SEIZED ARTICLES.

26. An inspector who has seized any article under this Part shall release it when he is satisfied that all the provisions of this Act and the regulations with respect thereto have been complied with. R.S., c. F-27, ss. 23, 37.

DESTRUCTION WITH CONSENT / Forfeiture on conviction / Order for forfeiture on application of inspector.

27. (1) Where an inspector has seized an article under this Part and its owner or the person in whose possession the article was at the time of seizure consents to its destruction, the article is thereupon forfeited to Her Majesty and may be destroyed or otherwise disposed of as the Minister, the Minister of Agriculture and Agri-Food or the Minister of Industry may direct.

(2) Where a person has been convicted of a contravention of this Act or the regulations, the court or judge may order that any article by means of or in relation to which the offence was committed, and any thing of a similar nature belonging to or in the possession of the accused or found with the article, be forfeited and, on the making of the order, the article and thing are forfeited to Her Majesty and may be disposed of as the Minister, the Minister of Agriculture and Agri-Food or the Minister of Industry may direct.

(3) Without prejudice to subsection (2), a judge of a superior court of the province in which any article is seized under this Part may, on the application of an inspector and on such notice to such persons as the judge directs, order that the article and any thing of a similar nature found therewith be forfeited to Her Majesty, to be disposed of as the Minister, the Minister of Agriculture and Agri-Food or the Minister of Industry may direct, if the judge finds, after making such inquiry as the judge considers necessary, that the article is one by means of or in relation to which any of the provisions of this Act or the regulations have been contravened. R.S., c. F-27, ss. 23, 37; 1994, c. 38, s. 19; 1995, c. 1, s. 62(1)(l).

Analysis*ANALYSTS.

28. The Minister may designate any person as an analyst for the purpose of the enforcement of this Act. 1980-81-82-83, c. 47, s. 19.

ANALYSIS AND EXAMINATION / Certificate or report.

29. (1) An inspector may submit to an analyst, for analysis or examination, any article seized by the inspector, any sample therefrom or any sample taken by the inspector.

(2) An analyst who has made an analysis or examination may issue a certificate or report setting out the results of the analysis or examination. R.S., c. F-27, s. 24.

Regulations

REGULATIONS / Regulations respecting drugs manufactured outside Canada / Regulations re the North American Free Trade Agreement and WTO Agreement / Definitions / "North American Free Trade Agreement" / "WTO Agreement".

30. (1) The Governor in Council may make regulations for carrying the purposes and provisions of this Act into effect, and, in particular, but without restricting the generality of the foregoing, may make regulations

- (a) declaring that any food or drug or class of food or drugs is adulterated if any prescribed substance or class of substances is present therein or has been added thereto or extracted or omitted therefrom;
- (b) respecting
  - (i) the labelling and packaging and the offering, exposing and advertising for sale of food, drugs, cosmetics and devices,
  - (ii) the size, dimensions, fill and other specifications of packages of food, drugs, cosmetics and devices,
  - (iii) the sale or the conditions of sale of any food, drug, cosmetic or device, and
  - (iv) the use of any substance as an ingredient in any food, drug, cosmetic or device, to prevent the purchaser or consumer thereof from being deceived or misled in respect of the design, construction, performance, intended use, quantity, character, value, composition, merit or safety thereof, or to prevent injury to the health of the purchaser or consumer;

- (c) prescribing standards of composition, strength, potency, purity, quality or other property of any article of food, drug, cosmetic or device;
- (d) respecting the importation of foods, drugs, cosmetics and devices in order to ensure compliance with this Act and the regulations;
- (e) respecting the method of manufacture, preparation, preserving, packing, storing and testing of any food, drug, cosmetic or device in the interest of, or for the prevention of injury to, the health of the purchaser or consumer;
- (f) requiring persons who sell food, drugs, cosmetics or devices to maintain such books and records as the Governor in Council considers necessary for the proper enforcement and administration of this Act and the regulations;
- (g) respecting the form and manner of the Minister's indication under section 12, including the fees payable therefor, and prescribing what premises or what processes or conditions of manufacture, including qualifications of technical staff, shall or shall not be deemed to be suitable for the purposes of that section;
- (h) requiring manufacturers of any drugs described in Schedule E to submit test portions of any batch of those drugs and respecting the form and manner of the Minister's indication under section 13, including the fees payable therefor;
- (i) respecting the powers and duties of inspectors and analysts and the taking of samples and the seizure, detention, forfeiture and disposition of articles;
- (j) exempting any food, drug, cosmetic or device from all or any of the provisions of this Act and prescribing the conditions of the exemption;
- (k) prescribing forms for the purposes of this Act and the regulations;
- (l) providing for the analysis of food, drugs or cosmetics other than for the purposes of this Act and prescribing a tariff of fees to be paid for that analysis;
- (m) adding anything to any of the schedules, in the interest of, or for the prevention of injury to, the health of the purchaser or consumer, or deleting anything therefrom;
- (n) respecting the distribution or the conditions of distribution of samples of any drug;
- (o) respecting
  - (i) the method of manufacture, preparation, preserving, packing, labelling, storing and testing of any new drug, and
  - (ii) the sale or the conditions of sale of any new drug, and defining for the purposes of this Act the expression "new drug"; and
- (p) authorizing the advertising to the general public of contraceptive devices and drugs manufactured, sold or represented for use in the prevention of conception and prescribing the circumstances and conditions under which, and the persons by whom, those devices and drugs may be so advertised.

(2) Without limiting or restricting the authority conferred by any other provisions of this Act or any Part thereof for carrying into effect the purposes and provisions of this Act or any Part thereof, the Governor in Council may make such regulations governing, regulating or prohibiting

- (a) the importation into Canada of any drug or class of drugs manufactured outside Canada, or
- (b) the distribution or sale in Canada, or the offering, exposing or having in possession for sale in Canada, of any drug or class of drugs manufactured outside Canada, as the Governor in Council deems necessary for the protection of the public in relation to the safety and quality of any such drug or class of drugs.

(3) Without limiting or restricting the authority conferred by any other provisions of this Act or any Part thereof for carrying into effect the purposes and provisions of this Act or any Part thereof, the Governor in Council may make such regulations as the Governor in Council deems necessary for the purpose of implementing, in relation to drugs, Article 1711 of the North American Free Trade Agreement or paragraph 3 of Article 39 of the Agreement on Trade-related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights set out in Annex 1C to the WTO Agreement.

(4) In subsection (3),

“North American Free Trade Agreement” has the meaning given to the word “Agreement” by subsection 2(1) of the North American Free Trade Agreement Implementation Act;

“WTO Agreement” has the meaning given to the word “Agreement” by subsection 2(1) of the World Trade Organization Agreement Implementation Act. R.S., c. F-27, s. 25; 1976-77, c. 28, s. 16; 1980-81-82-83, c. 47, s. 19; 1993, c. 44, s. 158; 1994, c. 47, s. 117.

ANNOTATIONS

Subsection (1)(e) authorizes the making of regulations respecting the prohibition of sale except by prescription of certain drugs: R. v. Davidson (1984), 11 C.C.C. (3d) 460, 52 N.B.R. (3d) 338 (C.A.).

Subsection 1(o) permitting the making of regulations with respect to new drugs is intra vires Parliament: C.E. Jamieson & Co. (Dominion) Ltd. v. Attorney-General Of Canada (1987), 37 C.C.C. (3d) 193, 46 D.L.R. (4th) 582, [1988] 1 F.C. 590 (T.D.).

Offences and Punishment

CONTRAVENTION OF ACT, EXCEPT PARTS III AND IV, OR REGULATIONS.

31. Every person who contravenes any of the provisions of this Act, except Parts III and IV, or of the regulations made under this Part is guilty of an offence and liable

- (a) on summary conviction for a first offence to a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months or to both and, for a subsequent offence, to a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months or to both; and
- (b) on conviction on indictment to a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three years or to both. R.S., c. F-27, ss. 26, 39, 46.

NOTE: The portion preceding para. (a) replaced 1996, Bill C-8, s. 77 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The text, which is not yet in force as of May 15, 1996 and also may change before receiving Royal Assent, is therefor printed in lightface italics and reads as follows:

CONTRAVENTION OF ACT AND REGULATIONS.

31. Every person who contravenes any of the provisions of this Act or of the regulations made under this Part is guilty of an offence and liable

LIMITATION PERIOD.

32. A prosecution under paragraph 31(a) may be instituted at any time within but not later than twelve months from the time the subject-matter of the prosecution arose. R.S., c. F-27, s. 27.

---

VENUE.

33. A prosecution for a contravention of this Act or the regulations may be instituted, heard, tried or determined in the place in which the offence was committed or the subject-matter of the prosecution arose or in any place in which the accused is apprehended or happens to be. R.S., c. F-27, s. 28.

WANT OF KNOWLEDGE / Notice of reliance on want of knowledge.

34. (1) Subject to subsection (2), in a prosecution for the sale of any article in contravention of this Act, except Parts III and IV, or of the regulations made under this Part, if the accused proves to the satisfaction of the court or judge that

(a) the accused purchased the article from another person in packaged form and sold it in the same package and in the same condition the article was in at the time it was so purchased, and

(b) that the accused could not with reasonable diligence have ascertained that the sale of the article would be in contravention of this Act or the regulations, the accused shall be acquitted.

(2) Subsection (1) does not apply in any prosecution unless the accused, at least ten days before the day fixed for the trial, has given to the prosecutor notice in writing that the accused intends to avail himself of the provisions of subsection (1) and has disclosed to the prosecutor the name and address of the person from whom the accused purchased the article and the date of purchase. R.S., c. F-27, ss. 29, 39, 46.

CERTIFICATE OF ANALYST / Requiring attendance of analyst / Notice of intention to produce certificate / Proof of service / Attendance for examination.

35. (1) Subject to this section, in any prosecution for an offence under section 31 or an offence referred to in subsection 41(1) or 50(1), a certificate purporting to be signed by an analyst and stating that an article, sample or substance has been submitted to, and analyzed or examined by, the analyst and stating the results of the analysis or examination is admissible in evidence and, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, is proof of the statements contained in the certificate without proof of the signature or official character of the person appearing to have signed the certificate.

NOTE: Subsection (1) replaced 1996, Bill C-8, s. 78 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The text, which is not yet in force as of May 15, 1996 and also may change before receiving Royal Assent, is therefor printed in lightface italics and reads as follows:

CERTIFICATE OF ANALYST.

35. (1) Subject to this section, in any prosecution for an offence under section 31, a certificate purporting to be signed by an analyst and stating that an article, sample or substance has been submitted to, and analysed or examined by, the analyst and stating the results of the analysis or examination is admissible in evidence and, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, is proof of the statements contained in the certificate without proof of the signature or official character of the person appearing to have signed it.

(2) The party against whom a certificate of an analyst is produced pursuant to subsection (1) may, with leave of the court, require the attendance of the analyst for the purposes of cross-examination.

(3) No certificate shall be admitted in evidence pursuant to subsection (1) unless, before the trial, the party intending to produce the certificate has given reasonable notice of that intention, together with a copy of the certificate, to the party against whom it is intended to be produced.

(4) For the purposes of this Act, service of any certificate referred to in subsection (1) may be proved by oral evidence given under oath by, or by the affidavit or solemn declaration of, the person claiming to have served it.

(5) Notwithstanding subsection (4), the court may require the person who appears to have signed an affidavit or solemn declaration referred to in that subsection to appear before it for examination or cross-examination in respect of the issue of proof of service. R.S., c. F-27, s. 30; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 192.

ANNOTATIONS

A notice which incorrectly referred to the wrong statute in a way that could not have caused confusion to the accused is reasonable: R. v. Hillis (1975), 24 C.C.C. (2d) 318, [1975] 5 W.W.R. 684 (B.C.C.A.).

See also cases noted under s. 9 of the Narcotic Control Act, infra.

PROOF AS TO MANUFACTURER OR PACKAGER / Offence by employee or agent / Certified copies and extracts / Where accused had adulterating substances.

36. (1) In a prosecution for a contravention of this Act, except Parts III and IV, or of the regulations made under this Part, proof that a package containing any article to which this Act or the regulations apply bore a name or address purporting to be the name or address of the person by whom it was manufactured or packaged is, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, proof that the article was manufactured or packaged, as the case may be, by the person whose name or address appeared on the package.

NOTE: Subsection (1) replaced 1996, Bill C-8, s. 79 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The text, which is not yet in force as of May 15, 1996 and may change before receiving Royal Assent, is therefor printed in lightface italics and reads as follows:

PROOF AS TO MANUFACTURER OR PACKAGER.

36. (1) In a prosecution for a contravention of this Act or of the regulations made under this Part, proof that a package containing any article to which this Act or the regulations apply bore a name or address purporting to be the name or address of the person by whom it was manufactured or packaged is, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, proof that the article was manufactured or packaged, as the case may be, by the person whose name or address appeared on the package.

(2) In a prosecution for a contravention described in subsection (1), it is sufficient proof of the offence to establish that it was committed by an employee or agent of the accused whether or not the employee or agent is identified or has been prosecuted for the offence.

(3) In a prosecution for a contravention described in subsection (1), a copy of a record or an extract therefrom certified to be a true copy by the inspector who made it pursuant to paragraph 23(1)(c) is admissible in evidence and is, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, proof of its contents.

(4) Where a person is prosecuted under this Part for having manufactured an adulterated food or drug for sale, and it is established that the person had in his possession or on his premises any substance the addition of which to that food or drug has been declared by regulation to cause the adulteration of the food or drug, the onus of proving that the food or drug was not adulterated by the addition of that substance lies on the accused. R.S., c. F-27, ss. 31, 39, 46.

Exports

CONDITIONS UNDER WHICH EXPORTS EXEMPT / Definition of "drug".

37. (1) This Act does not apply to any packaged food, drug, cosmetic or device, not manufactured for consumption in Canada and not sold for consumption in Canada, if the package is marked in distinct overprinting with the word "Export" or "Exportation" and a certificate that the package and its contents do not contravene any known requirement of the law of the country to which it is or is about to be consigned has been issued in respect of the package and its contents in prescribed form and manner.

(2) In subsection (1), "drug" does not include a drug or other substance defined as a controlled drug by Part III or as a restricted drug by Part IV. R.S., c. F-27, s. 32; 1993, c. 34, 73.

NOTE: Subsection (2) repealed 1996, Bill C-8, s. 80 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council, but not in force as of May 15, 1996 Bill C-8 has not yet received Royal Assent and not in force as of May 15, 1996).

Part III / CONTROLLED DRUGS

NOTE: Part III (ss. 38 to 45) repealed 1996, Bill C-8, s. 81 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council, but not in force as of May 15, 1996 and Bill C-8 has not yet received Royal Assent).

---

DEFINITIONS / "controlled drug" / "possession" / "practitioner" / "prescription" / "traffic".

38. In this Part,

"controlled drug" means any drug or other substance included in Schedule G;

"possession" means possession within the meaning of subsection 4(3) of the Criminal Code;

"practitioner" means a person who is registered and entitled under the laws of a province to practise in that province the profession of medicine, dentistry or veterinary medicine;

"prescription" means, in respect of a controlled drug, an authorization given by a practitioner that a stated amount of the controlled drug be dispensed for the person named therein; “traffic” means to manufacture, sell, export from or import into Canada, transport or deliver, otherwise than under the authority of this Part or the regulations. R.S., c. F-27, s. 33; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 193.

FAILURE TO DISCLOSE PREVIOUS PRESCRIPTIONS / Offence and punishment / Limitation period.

38.1 (1) No person shall, at any time, seek or obtain a controlled drug or a prescription for a controlled drug from a practitioner unless that person discloses to the practitioner particulars of every controlled drug or prescription for a controlled drug issued to that person by a different practitioner within the preceding thirty days.

(2) Every person who contravenes subsection (1)

- (a) is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three years; or
- (b) is guilty of an offence punishable on summary conviction and liable
  - (i) for a first offence, to a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, and
  - (ii) for a subsequent offence, to a fine not exceeding two thousand dollars or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding one year.

(3) Summary conviction proceedings in respect of an offence under this section may be instituted at any time within but not later than one year from the time when the subject-matter of the proceedings arose. R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 194.

---

TRAFFICKING IN CONTROLLED DRUG / Possession for trafficking / Offence and punishment.

39. (1) No person shall traffic in a controlled drug or any substance represented or held out by the person to be a controlled drug.

(2) No person shall have in possession any controlled drug for the purpose of trafficking.

(3) Every person who contravenes subsection (1) or (2) is guilty of an offence and liable

- (a) on summary conviction, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding eighteen months; or
- (b) on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years. R.S., c. F-27, s. 34.

ANNOTATIONS

On a charge of conspiracy to traffic in a controlled drug it is not necessary that the Crown prove an agreement between the parties to “jointly” sell, transport or deliver a controlled drug. Where the evidence establishes that the accused D agreed with the accused S to obtain and transport and deliver at S’s request a substantial quantity of drugs and that S agreed to pay D for his services the conspiracy charge is made out: R. v. Davis and Sokoloski (1973), 14 C.C.C. (2d) 517 (Ont. C.A.), affd 33 C.C.C. (2d) 496, 74 D.L.R. (3d) 126, [1977] 2 S.C.R. 523, sub nom. Sokoloski v. The Queen (5:4).

A genuine though mistaken belief on the part of the accused that the laboratory in which they were employed was authorized to manufacture the controlled drug is a defence to the charge: R. v. Darquea and Martyn (1979), 47 C.C.C. (2d) 567 (Ont. C.A.).

It was held in R. v. Dumais (1979), 51 C.C.C. (2d) 106 (Ont. C.A.) that the words “jointly traffic” in the indictment did not preclude the conviction of only one of two accused. The Court distinguished R. v. Maxwell, Watson and Shaw (1978), 39 C.C.C. (2d) 439 (B.C.C.A.) noted under s. 4 of the Narcotic Control Act, infra.

To constitute the offence under this section there must be trafficking in controlled drugs. Merely providing a drug purchaser with a means to acquire drugs by improperly providing the person with a prescription is not an offence under this section: R. v. Burke (1989), 50 C.C.C. (3d) 286 (P.E.I.C.A.).

Also see cases noted under s. 48, infra.

PROCEDURE IN PROSECUTION FOR POSSESSION FOR TRAFFICKING / Procedure on finding in respect of possession / Acquittal on conviction.

40. (1) In any prosecution for a contravention of subsection 39(2), if the accused does not plead guilty, the trial shall proceed as if the issue to be tried is whether the accused was in possession of a controlled drug.

(2) If, pursuant to subsection (1), the court finds that the accused was not in possession of a controlled drug, the accused shall be acquitted but, if the court finds that the accused was in possession of a controlled drug, the accused shall be given an opportunity of establishing that he was not in possession of the controlled drug for the purpose of trafficking and, thereafter, the prosecutor shall be given an opportunity of adducing evidence to the contrary.

(3) If the accused establishes, pursuant to subsection (2), that he was not in possession of the controlled drug for the purpose of trafficking, the accused shall be acquitted of the offence as charged and, if the accused fails to so establish, the accused shall be convicted of the offence as charged and sentenced accordingly. R.S., c. F-27, s. 35.

ANNOTATIONS

In light of the decision of the Supreme Court of Canada in R. v. Oakes (1986), 24 C.C.C. (3d) 321, [1986] 1 S.C.R. 103, 50 C.R. (3d) 1 (7:0) in relation to s. 8 of the Narcotic Control Act, R.S.C. 1970, c. N-1, it must be considered that this section as well is of no force and effect.

SETTING OUT OR NEGATING EXCEPTION, ETC., NOT REQUIRED / Burden of proving exception, etc.

41. (1) No exception, exemption, excuse or qualification prescribed by law is required to be set out or negated, as the case may be, in an information or indictment for an offence under section 39 or under section 463, 464 or 465 of the Criminal Code in respect of an offence under section 39.

(2) In any prosecution under this Part, the burden of proving that an exception, exemption, excuse or qualification prescribed by law operates in favour of the accused is on the accused, and the prosecutor is not required, except by way of rebuttal, to prove that the exception, exemption, excuse or qualification does not operate in favour of the accused, whether or not it is set out in the information or indictment. R.S., c. F-27, s. 36.

ENTRY AND SEARCH / Search of person and seizure / Warrant to search dwelling-house / Powers of peace officer.

42. (1) A peace officer may, at any time, without a warrant enter and search any place other than a dwelling-house, and under the authority of a warrant issued under subsection (3), enter and search any dwelling-house in which the peace officer believes on reasonable grounds there is a controlled drug by means of or in respect of which an offence under this Part has been committed.

Transitional provision

Note: Section 208 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.) provides as follows:

"208. Nothing in sections 190, 195, 199 and 200 of this Act shall be construed as rendering invalid or inadmissible in any proceedings any evidence obtained by the exercise of a writ of assistance prior to the coming into force of those sections."

(2) A peace officer may search any person found in a place entered pursuant to subsection (1) and may seize and, from a place so entered, take away any controlled drug found in that place and any other thing that may be evidence that an offence under this Part has been committed.

(3) A justice who is satisfied by information on oath that there are reasonable grounds for believing that there is a controlled drug, by means of or in respect of which an offence under this Part has been committed, in any dwelling-house may issue a warrant under his hand authorizing a peace officer named therein at any time to enter the dwelling-house and search for controlled drugs.

(4) [Repealed. R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 195(2).]

Transitional provision

Note: Section 208 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.) provides as follows:

"208. Nothing in sections 190, 195, 199 and 200 of this Act shall be construed as rendering invalid or inadmissible in any proceedings any evidence obtained by the exercise of a writ of assistance prior to the coming into force of those sections."

(5) For the purpose of exercising authority under this section, a peace officer may, with such assistance as that officer deems necessary, break open any door, window, lock, fastener, floor, wall, ceiling, compartment, plumbing fixture, box, container or any other thing. R.S., c. F-27, s. 37; R.S., c. 10 (2nd Supp.), s. 64; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 195.

ANNOTATIONS

By reason of s. 8 of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms this section is of no force and effect to the extent that it authorizes the warrantless search of a place other than a dwelling house, such as an office, business or shop: R. v. La Plante (1987), 40 C.C.C. (3d) 63, 48 D.L.R. (4th) 615, 59 Sask. R. 251 (C.A.).

The police officer who must have reasonable and probable grounds for believing that a suspect is in possession of a controlled drug is the officer who decides that the suspect should be searched. That officer may or may not perform the actual search and if another officer conducts the search he is entitled to assume that the officer who ordered the search had the requisite grounds for doing so: R. v. Debot (1989), 52 C.C.C. (3d) 193 (S.C.C.) (5:0). [Also see the note of this case under s. 11 of the Narcotic Control Act, infra.]

The stopping of the accused's vehicle and the search of the accused and the vehicle, upon mere suspicion that the accused is in possession of drugs, infringes ss. 8 and 9 of the Charter of Rights: R. v. Ironeagle (1989), 49 C.C.C. (3d) 339, 70 C.R. (3d) 164, 40 C.R.R. 161, 76 Sask. R. 253 (C.A.).

APPLICATION FOR RESTORATION / Order of immediate restoration / Order of restoration at later time / Where application not made or order refused.

43. (1) Where a controlled drug or other thing has been seized under subsection 42(2), any person may, within two months after the date of the seizure, on prior notification being given to the Crown in the manner prescribed by the regulations, apply to a provincial court judge within whose territorial jurisdiction the seizure was made for an order of restoration under this section.

(2) Subject to section 44, where on the hearing of an application made under subsection (1) the provincial court judge is satisfied that the applicant is entitled to possession of the controlled drug or other thing seized, and that the thing seized is not or will not be required as evidence in any proceedings in respect of an offence under this Part, the provincial court judge shall order that the thing seized be restored forthwith to the applicant.

(3) Where on the hearing of an application made under subsection (1) the provincial court judge is satisfied that the applicant is entitled to possession of the thing seized but is not satisfied that the thing is not or will not be required as evidence in any proceedings in respect of an offence under this Part, the provincial court judge shall order that the thing seized be restored to the applicant

(a) on the expiration of four months after the date of seizure, if no proceedings in respect of an offence under this Part have been commenced before that time;
or

(b) on the final conclusion of any such proceedings, in any other case.

(4) Where no application has been made for the return of any controlled drug or other thing seized pursuant to subsection 42(2) within two months after the date of the seizure, or an application therefor has been made but, on the hearing of the application, no order of restoration is made, the thing seized shall be delivered

(a) in the case of a controlled drug, to the Minister, who may make such disposition thereof as the Minister thinks fit; and

(b) in the case of any other thing,

(i) where the prosecution of the offence in respect of which the thing was seized was commenced at the instance of the government of a province and conducted by or on behalf of that government, to the Attorney General or Solicitor General of that province, and

(ii) in any other case, to the Minister of Supply and Services, who may dispose of the thing in accordance with the law. R.S., c. F-27, s. 37; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 203(1); 1993, c. 37, s. 22.

FORFEITURE ON CONVICTION.

44. Where a person has been convicted of an offence under this Part,

(a) any controlled drug seized pursuant to subsection 42(2) by means of or in respect of which the offence was committed is forfeited to Her Majesty in right of Canada and shall be disposed of by the Minister as the Minister thinks fit; and

(b) any money so seized that was used for the purchase of that controlled drug is,

(i) where the prosecution of the offence in respect of which the money was seized was commenced at the instance of the government of a province and conducted by or on behalf of that government, forfeited to Her Majesty in right of that province and shall be disposed of by the Attorney General or Solicitor General of that province in accordance with the law, and

(ii) in any other case, forfeited to Her Majesty in right of Canada and shall be disposed of by the Minister of Supply and Services in accordance with the law. R.S., c. F-27, s. 37; 1993, c. 37, s. 23.

INTERPRETATION.

44.1 For the purposes of sections 44.2 to 44.4, a reference therein to an offence under section 39, 44.2 or 44.3 shall be deemed to include a reference to a conspiracy or an attempt to commit, being an accessory after the fact in relation to, or any counselling in relation to, such an offence. R.S., c. 42 (4th Supp.), s. 9.

POSSESSION OF PROPERTY OBTAINED BY TRAFFICKING IN CONTROLLED DRUGS / Punishment.

44.2 (1) No person shall possess any property or any proceeds of any property knowing that all or part of the property or of those proceeds was obtained or derived directly or indirectly as a result of

- (a) the commission in Canada of an offence under section 39; or
- (b) an act or omission anywhere that, if it had occurred in Canada, would have constituted an offence under section 39.

(2) Every person who contravenes subsection (1)

- (a) is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years, where the value of the subject-matter of the offence exceeds one thousand dollars; or
- (b) is guilty
  - (i) of an indictable offence and liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, or
  - (ii) of an offence punishable on summary conviction, where the value of the subject-matter of the offence does not exceed one thousand dollars. R.S., c. 42 (4th Supp.), s. 9.

LAUNDERING PROCEEDS OF TRAFFICKING IN CONTROLLED DRUGS / Punishment.

44.3 (1) No person shall use, transfer the possession of, send or deliver to any person or place, transport, transmit, alter, dispose of or otherwise deal with, in any manner or by any means, any property or any proceeds of any property with intent to conceal or convert that property or those proceeds and knowing that all or a part of that property or of those proceeds was obtained or derived directly or indirectly as a result of

- (a) the commission in Canada of an offence under section 39; or
- (b) an act or omission anywhere that, if it had occurred in Canada, would have constituted an offence under section 39.

(2) Every person who contravenes subsection (1)

- (a) is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years; or
- (b) is guilty of an offence punishable on summary conviction. R.S., c. 42 (4th Supp.), s. 9.

PART XII.2 OF THE CRIMINAL CODE APPLICABLE / Idem.

44.4 (1) Sections 462.3 and 462.32 to 462.5 of the Criminal Code apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, in respect of proceedings for an offence under section 39, 44.2 or 44.3

(2) For the purposes of subsection (1),

- (a) a reference in section 462.37 or 462.38 or subsection 462.41(2) of the Criminal Code to an enterprise crime offence shall be deemed to be a reference to an offence under section 39, 44.2 or 44.3; and
- (b) a reference, in relation to the manner in which forfeited property is to be disposed of, in subsection 462.37(1) or 462.38(2), paragraph 462.43(c) or section 462.5 of the Criminal Code, to the Attorney General shall be deemed to be a reference to

- (i) where the prosecution of the offence in respect of which the thing was forfeited was commenced at the instance of the government of a province and conducted by or on behalf of that government, the Attorney General or Solicitor General of that province, and
- (ii) in any other case, the Minister of Supply and Services. R.S.C. 1985, c. 42 (4th Supp.), s. 9; 1993, c. 37, s. 24.

REGULATIONS RESPECTING CONTROLLED DRUGS / Amendment of Schedule G.

45. (1) The Governor in Council may make regulations for carrying out the purposes and provisions of this Part, and, in particular, but without restricting the generality of the foregoing, may make regulations

- (a) authorizing the manufacture, sale, importation, transportation, delivery or other dealing in controlled drugs and prescribing the circumstances and conditions under which, and the persons by whom, controlled drugs may be manufactured, sold, imported, transported, delivered or otherwise dealt in;
- (b) providing for the issue of licences for the importation, manufacture or sale of controlled drugs;
- (c) prescribing the form, duration and terms and conditions of any licence described in paragraph (b) and the fees payable therefor, and providing for the cancellation and suspension of those licences;
- (d) requiring persons who import, manufacture, sell, administer or deal in controlled drugs to maintain such books and records as the Governor in Council considers necessary for the proper administration and enforcement of this Part and the regulations made under this Part and to make such returns and furnish such information relating to the said controlled drugs as the Governor in Council may require;
- (e) authorizing the communication of any information obtained under this Part or the regulations to provincial professional licensing authorities; and
- (f) prescribing a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars or a term of imprisonment not exceeding six months, or both, to be imposed on summary conviction as punishment for the contravention of any regulation.

(2) The Governor in Council may amend Schedule G by adding thereto or deleting therefrom any substance, the inclusion or exclusion of which, as the case may be, is deemed necessary by the Governor in Council in the public interest. R.S., c. F-27, s. 38.

Part IV / RESTRICTED DRUGS

NOTE: Part IV (ss. 46 to 51) repealed 1996, Bill C-8, s. 81 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council, but not in force as of May 15, 1996 and Bill C-8 has not yet received Royal Assent).

DEFINITIONS / "possession" / "regulations" / "restricted drug" / "traffic".

46. In this Part,

"possession" means possession within the meaning of subsection 4(3) of the Criminal Code;

"regulations" means regulations made as provided for by or under section 51;

"restricted drug" means any drug or other substance included in Schedule H;

"traffic" means to manufacture, sell, export from or import into Canada, transport or deliver, otherwise than under the authority of this Part or the regulations. R.S., c. F-27, s. 40.

ANNOTATIONS

“Restricted drug” – The drug “Psilocybin” as described in Sch. H includes the drug as found in its natural form in a mushroom. Thus an accused may be convicted of the trafficking or possession offence although he only has possession of mushrooms containing psilocybin: R. v. Dunn (1982), 1 C.C.C. (3d) 1, 30 C.R. (3d) 339, [1982] 2 S.C.R. 677 (7:0).

Ignorance that a drug has been added to Sch. H by Regulation published in the Canada Gazette is no defence to a charge contrary to s. 48(1): Molis v. The Queen (1980), 55 C.C.C. (2d) 558, [1980] 2 S.C.R. 356 (7:0).

The process, known as “fast-tracking” whereby a drug can be added to Sch. H within a very short time, did not infringe the rights of the accused under s. 7 of the Charter, even though the process was resorted to specifically to deal with the conduct of the accused who was manufacturing a “designer drug” which resembled a drug already on the Schedule. Once the drug was added to Sch. H, it was duly gazetted and it was only then that the accused was arrested: R. v. Unger (1990), 518 C.C.C. (3d) 518 (Ont. Dist. Ct.).

POSSESSION OF RESTRICTED DRUG / Offence.

47. (1) Except as authorized by this Part or the regulations, no person shall have a restricted drug in his possession.

(2) Every person who contravenes subsection (1) is guilty of an offence and liable

- (a) on summary conviction for a first offence, to a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months or to both and, for a subsequent offence, to a fine not exceeding two thousand dollars or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding one year or to both; or
- (b) on conviction on indictment, to a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three years or to both. R.S., c. F-27, s. 41.

---

TRAFFICKING IN RESTRICTED DRUG / Possession for trafficking / Offence.

48. (1) No person shall traffic in a restricted drug or any substance represented or held out by the person to be a restricted drug.

(2) No person shall have in possession any restricted drug for the purpose of trafficking.

(3) Every person who contravenes subsection (1) or (2) is guilty of an offence and liable

- (a) on summary conviction, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding eighteen months; or
- (b) on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years. R.S., c. F-27, s. 42.

ANNOTATIONS

Editor's Note: Reference may also be made to cases noted under s. 4 of the Narcotic Control Act but bearing in mind the different definition of “traffic” in s. 46 of this Act and in s. 2 of the Narcotic Control Act.

Meaning of trafficking generally – An accused, in possession of a restricted drug and a narcotic who testifies that he had them for his own use but would have offered to share with others present at the time, while properly convicted of possession of the narcotic for the purpose of trafficking in view of the wide definition of "traffic" in the Narcotic Control Act including to "give", is properly convicted only of simple possession of the restricted drug in view of the much narrower definition of the word in s. 46 of this Act. In particular the word "deliver" is not apt to describe an intention merely to share or to offer to share the restricted drug: R. v. Rogalsky (1975), 23 C.C.C. (2d) 399, [1975] 4 W.W.R. 418 (Sask. C.A.).

But compare R. v. Weselak (1972), 9 C.C.C. (2d) 193 (Ct. Mart. App. Ct.) where it was held that the accused's act of sharing the drugs with some friends fell within the meaning of "deliver" so as to constitute trafficking under this subsection.

The words "transport" and "deliver" are to be given their ordinary literal meaning and would include the conduct of an accused in merely delivering the drug back to the original owner: R. v. Pottie (1979), 46 C.C.C. (2d) 321, 31 N.S.R. (2d) 569 (C.A.).

Holding out is not limited to words and may be found in the accused's actions alone without any express words: R. v. Garfield (1974), 21 C.C.C. (2d) 449 (Ct. Mart. App. Ct.).

Use of joint funds to purchase drugs [subsec. (1)] – The purchasing with joint funds of another and the giving to the joint purchaser some of the restricted drugs does not constitute trafficking under this Act: R. v. Jimmo (1974), 16 C.C.C. (2d) 396 (2:1) (Que. C.A.). Contra: R. v. Kopach (1980), 53 C.C.C. (2d) 300, 20 A.R. 497 (C.A.) where it was held that the word "deliver" in the definition of "traffic" in s. 46 is to be given its ordinary meaning of "to hand over to another's possession or keeping; to give or distribute to the proper person" and does not require proof of some commercial activity. An accused who has purchased a large quantity of drugs with the joint funds of himself and others with the intention of splitting up the drugs amongst the contributors is in possession of the drug for the "purpose of trafficking".

On a charge of possession for the purpose of trafficking it is no defence that the accused was merely transporting drugs to his home for the use of his wife and himself drugs which had been purchased out of their joint funds in view of the inclusion of the word "transport" in the definition of "traffic" in s. 46. Although a person is not trafficking if he transports the drugs merely for his own use, the transporting to a second person – his wife – renders the accused guilty: R. v. O'Connor (1975), 23 C.C.C. (2d) 110, 29 C.R.N.S. 100 (B.C.C.A.).

Mens rea – In R. v. Kundeus, the trial Judge found that the accused, who did not testify, sold an undercover police officer a controlled drug, which upon analysis turned out to be a restricted drug. In setting aside the conviction for trafficking it was held that where the trial Judge found that the accused thought he was selling and intended to sell a controlled drug he cannot be said to have had the mens rea to traffic in a restricted drug (1974), 17 C.C.C. (2d) 345, [1974] 4 W.W.R. 228 (B.C.C.A.). On further appeal the conviction was restored, the Court holding (7:2) that proof of the sale of a restricted drug raises a rebuttable presumption of guilt and no evidence having been offered by the accused it would not be possible to find that the accused had an honest belief amounting to a non-existence of mens rea of the offence charged (1975), 24 C.C.C. (2d) 276, 32 C.R.N.S. 129 (S.C.C.).

Liability of party – Where an accused's liability on a charge of trafficking in a restricted drug depends on whether he was a party to the offence committed by the actual vendor it is misdirection to instruct the jury that the words "for the purpose of aiding" in s. 21(1)(b) of the Criminal Code are equivalent to "with the effect of aiding". What the Crown must show is that the accused's acts were for the purpose of aiding the vendor. Moreover, if the accused was acting merely on behalf of the purchaser and not for the purpose of aiding the vendor he is not guilty of trafficking since purchasing a restricted drug is not an offence: R. v. Barr (1975), 23 C.C.C. (2d) 116 (Ont. C.A.).

PROCEDURE IN PROSECUTION FOR POSSESSION FOR TRAFFICKING / Procedure on finding in respect of possession / Acquittal and conviction.

49. (1) In any prosecution for a contravention of subsection 48(2), if the accused does not plead guilty, the trial shall proceed as if the issue to be tried is whether the accused was in possession of a restricted drug contrary to subsection 47(1).

(2) If, pursuant to subsection (1), the court finds that the accused was not in possession of a restricted drug contrary to subsection 47(1), the accused shall be acquitted but, if the court finds that the accused was in possession of a restricted drug contrary to subsection 47(1), the accused shall be given an opportunity of establishing that he was not in possession of the restricted drug for the purpose of trafficking and, thereafter, the prosecutor shall be given an opportunity of adducing evidence to the contrary.

(3) If the accused establishes, pursuant to subsection (2), that he was not in possession of the restricted drug for the purpose of trafficking, the accused shall be acquitted of the offence as charged but shall be convicted of an offence under subsection 47(1) and sentenced accordingly, and if the accused fails to so establish, the accused shall be convicted of the offence as charged and sentenced accordingly. R.S., c. F-27, s. 43.

ANNOTATIONS

In light of the decision of the Supreme Court of Canada in R. v. Oakes (1986), 24 C.C.C. (3d) 321, [1986] 1 S.C.R. 103, 50 C.R. (3d) 1 (7:0) in relation to s. 8 of the Narcotic Control Act it must be considered that this section as well is of no force and effect.

SETTING OUT OR NEGATING EXCEPTION, ETC., NOT REQUIRED / Burden of proving exception, etc.

50. (1) No exception, exemption, excuse or qualification prescribed by law is required to be set out or negated, as the case may be, in an information or indictment for an offence under this Part or under section 463, 464 or 465 of the Criminal Code in respect of an offence under this Part.

(2) In any prosecution under this Part, the burden of proving that an exception, exemption, excuse or qualification prescribed by law operates in favour of the accused is on the accused, and the prosecutor is not required, except by way of rebuttal, to prove that the exception, exemption, excuse or qualification does not operate in favour of the accused, whether or not it is set out in the information or indictment. R.S., c. F-27, s. 44.

INTERPRETATION.

50.1 For the purposes of section 44.4, as that section is applicable in respect of this Part by virtue of section 51, and sections 50.2 to 51, a reference therein to an offence under section 48, 50.2 or 50.3 shall be deemed to include a reference to a conspiracy or an attempt to commit, being an accessory after the fact in relation to, or any counselling in relation to, such an offence. R.S.C. 1985, c. 42 (4th Supp.), s. 10.

POSSESSION OF PROPERTY OBTAINED BY TRAFFICKING IN RESTRICTED DRUGS / Punishment.

50.2 (1) No person shall possess any property or any proceeds of any property knowing that all or part of the property or of those proceeds was obtained or derived directly or indirectly as a result of

(a) the commission in Canada of an offence under section 48; or

- (b) an act or omission anywhere that, if it had occurred in Canada, would have constituted an offence under section 48.
- (2) Every person who contravenes subsection (1)
  - (a) is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years, where the value of the subject-matter of the offence exceeds one thousand dollars; or
  - (b) is guilty
    - (i) of an indictable offence and liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, or
    - (ii) of an offence punishable on summary conviction, where the value of the subject-matter of the offence does not exceed one thousand dollars. R.S.C. 1985, c. 42 (4th Supp.), s. 10.

LAUNDERING PROCEEDS OF TRAFFICKING IN RESTRICTED DRUGS / Punishment.

- 50.3 (1) No person shall use, transfer the possession of, send or deliver to any person or place, transport, transmit, alter, dispose of or otherwise deal with, in any manner or by any means, any property or any proceeds of any property with intent to conceal or convert that property or those proceeds and knowing that all or a part of that property or of those proceeds was obtained or derived directly or indirectly as a result of
- (a) the commission in Canada of an offence under section 48; or
  - (b) an act or omission anywhere that, if it had occurred in Canada, would have constituted an offence under section 48.
- (2) Every person who contravenes subsection (1)
- (a) is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years; or
  - (b) is guilty of an offence punishable on summary conviction. R.S.C. 1985, c. 42 (4th Supp.), s. 10.

---

APPLICATION OF CERTAIN PROVISIONS OF PART III / Modification for purpose of application / Additional regulations.

51. (1) Sections 42 to 44, 44.4 and 45 apply in respect of this Part.

- (2) For the purposes of subsection (1),
- (a) there shall be substituted for the expression “controlled drug”, wherever it appears in any of the sections referred to in that subsection, the expression “restricted drug”;
  - (b) a reference in any of those sections
    - (i) to “Schedule G” shall be deemed to be a reference to Schedule H, and
    - (ii) to “this Part” shall be deemed to be a reference to Part IV; and
  - (c) a reference in section 44.4 or in a provision of the Criminal Code mentioned therein
    - (i) to “an offence under section 39, 44.2 or 44.3” shall be deemed to be a reference to an offence under section 48, 50.2 or 50.3, and
    - (ii) to “this Part” shall be deemed to be a reference to Part IV.
- (3) In addition to the regulations provided for by subsection (1), the Governor in Council may make regulations authorizing the possession or export of restricted drugs and prescribing the circumstances and conditions under which, and the persons by whom, restricted drugs may be had in possession or exported. R.S., c. F-27, s. 45; R.S.C. 1985, c. 42 (4th Supp.), s. 11.

SCHEDULE H

(Sections 30, 46 and 51)

As amended to December 31, 1995

Lysergic acid diethylamide (LSD) or any salt thereof
N,N-Diethyltryptamine (DET) or any salt thereof
N,N-Dimethyltryptamine (DMT) or any salt thereof
4-Methyl-2,5-dimethoxyamphetamine (STP(DOM)) or any salt thereof
3,4-methylenedioxyamphetamine (MDA) or any salt thereof
N-methyl-3-piperidyl benzilate (LBJ) or any salt thereof
2,3-dimethoxyamphetamine or any salt thereof
2,4-dimethoxyamphetamine or any salt thereof
2,5-dimethoxyamphetamine or any salt thereof
2,6-dimethoxyamphetamine or any salt thereof
3,4-dimethoxyamphetamine or any salt thereof
3,5-dimethoxyamphetamine or any salt thereof
4,9-dihydro-7-methoxy-1-methyl-3H-pyrido (3,4-b) indole (Harmaline) and any salt thereof
4,9-dihydro-1-methyl-3H-pyrido (3,4-b) indol-7-ol (Harmalol) and any salt thereof
4-methoxyamphetamine or any salt thereof
3-[2-(Dimethylamino) ethyl]-4-hydroxyindole (Psilocin) or any salt thereof
3-[2-(Dimethylamino) ethyl]-4-phosphoryloxyindole (Psilocybin) or any salt thereof
2,4,5-Trimethoxyamphetamine or any salt, isomer, or salt of isomer, thereof
3,4-methylenedioxy-N-methylamphetamine or any salt thereof
N-(1-phenylcyclohexyl) ethylamine or any salt thereof
4-bromo-2, 5-dimethoxyamphetamine or any salt thereof
1-[1-(2-thienyl) cyclohexyl] piperidine and its salts
1-phenyl-N-propylcyclohexanamine or any salt thereof

- 3, 4, 5-trimethoxybenzeneethanamine (Mescaline) or any salt thereof but not including peyote (lophophora)
- 4-ethoxy-2, 5-dimethoxy- $\alpha$ -methylbenzeneethanamine or any salt, isomer or salt of isomer thereof
- 7-methoxy- $\alpha$ -methyl-1, 3-benzodioxole-5-ethanamine (MMDA) or any salt, isomer or salt of isomer thereof
- N, N, $\alpha$ -trimethyl-1, 3-benzodioxole-5-ethanamine or any salt, isomer or salt of isomer thereof
- N-ethyl- $\alpha$ -methyl-1, 3-benzodioxole-5-ethanamine or any salt, isomer or salt of isomer thereof
- 4-ethyl-2, 5-dimethoxy- $\alpha$ -methylbenzeneethanamine (DOET) or any salt, isomer or salt of isomer thereof
- 4-ethoxy- $\alpha$ -methylbenzeneethanamine or any salt, isomer or salt of isomer thereof
- 4-chloro-2, 5-dimethoxy- $\alpha$ -methylbenzeneethanamine or any salt, isomer or salt of isomer thereof
- 4,5-dihydro-4-methyl-5-phenyl-2-oxazoline (4-methylaminorex) or any salt thereof
- N-ethyl- $\alpha$ -methylbenzeneethanamine or any salt thereof
- $\alpha$ -methyl-N-propyl-1, 3-benzodioxole-5-ethanamine or any salt, isomer or salt of isomer thereof
- 1-[1-phenylmethyl]cyclohexyl]piperidine or any salt, isomer or salt of isomer thereof
- 1-[1-(4-methylphenyl)cyclohexyl]piperidine or any salt, isomer or salt of isomer thereof
- 2-methylamino-1-phenyl-1-propanone or any salt thereof
- 4-bromo-2,5-dimethoxybenzeneethanamine or any salt, isomer or salt of isomer thereof

An act to provide for the control of narcotic drugs

SHORT TITLE

SHORT TITLE.

1. This Act may be cited as the Narcotic Control Act. R.S., c. N-1, s. 1.

---

---

DEFINITIONS / "analyst" / "conveyance" / "marihuana" / "minister" / "narcotic" / "narcotic addict" / "opium poppy" / "possession" / "practitioner" / "prescription" / "traffic".

2. In this Act,

"analyst" means a person designated as an analyst under the Food and Drugs Act or under this Act;

"conveyance" includes any aircraft, vessel, motor vehicle or other conveyance of any description whatever;

"marihuana" means Cannabis sativa L.;

"Minister" means

- (a) with respect to Part I, the Minister of National Health and Welfare, and
- (b) with respect to Part II, the Minister of Justice;

"narcotic" means any substance included in the schedule or anything that contains any substance included in the schedule;

"narcotic addict" means a person who, through the use of narcotics,

- (a) has developed a desire or need to continue to take a narcotic, or
- (b) has developed a psychological or physical dependence on the effect of a narcotic;

"opium poppy" means Papaver somniferum L.;

"possession" means possession as defined in the Criminal Code;

"practitioner" means a person who is registered and entitled under the laws of a province to practise in that province the profession of medicine, dentistry or veterinary medicine;

"prescription" means, in respect of a narcotic, an authorization given by a practitioner that a stated amount of the narcotic be dispensed for the person named therein;

"traffic" means

- (a) to manufacture, sell, give, administer, transport, send, deliver or distribute, or
- (b) to offer to do anything referred to in paragraph (a) otherwise than under the authority of this Act or the regulations. R.S., c. N-1, s. 2; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 196.

ANNOTATIONS

"Marihuana" – The phrase "Cannabis Sativa L." must be given the technical or scientific meaning that it had at the time of the enactment of this provision in 1961. At that time it was understood that there was but one species of cannabis marihuana which was fully described by this phrase. Accordingly, this definition covers all cannabis marihuana and not just the species which the scientific community now describes as Cannabis Sativa L.: Perka et al. v. The Queen (1984), 14 C.C.C. (3d) 385, [1984] 2 S.C.R. 232, 42 C.R. (3d) 113 (5:0).

"Narcotic" – Item 1 of the Schedule which lists opium poppy "its preparations, derivatives, alkaloids and salts, including: . . . (3) morphine . . . and their preparations, derivatives and salts including . . . (10) Diacetylmorphine (heroin)" includes synthetic heroin, that is heroin derived from synthetically produced morphine: R. v. Rourke (1980), 54 C.C.C. (2d) 225 (B.C.C.A.).

Item 2 of the Schedule which lists "Coca (Erythroxylon), its preparations, derivatives, alkaloids and salts including: . . . (2) cocaine" includes cocaine whether or not it is proved to have been derived from the coca plant: R. v. Maskell (1981), 58 C.C.C. (2d) 408 (Alta. C.A.).

The gravamen of the offence of possession of cannabis resin is possession of cannabis and the word "resin" is surplusage. When the accused possesses any of the substances set out in item 3 of the Schedule he has committed the offence: R. v. Barrett (1980), 54 C.C.C. (2d) 75, 15 C.R. (3d) 361, [1980] 4 W.W.R. 339 (Alta. C.A.).

Part I / OFFENCES AND ENFORCEMENT

Particular Offences

POSSESSION OF NARCOTIC / Offence and punishment.

3. (1) Except as authorized by this Act or the regulations, no person shall have a narcotic in his possession.
- (2) Every person who contravenes subsection (1) is guilty of an offence and liable
  - (a) on summary conviction for a first offence, to a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months or to both and, for a subsequent offence, to a fine not exceeding two thousand dollars or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding one year or to both; or
  - (b) on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding seven years. R.S., c. N-1, s. 3; 1984, c. 40, s. 79.

ANNOTATIONS

Subsec. (1) – A minute trace of a narcotic is only an evidence of earlier possession and does not establish present possession: R. v. McBurney (1975), 24 C.C.C. (2d) 44, [1975] 5 W.W.R. 554 (B.C.C.A.) (4:1). Contra: R. v. Quigley (1954), 111 C.C.C. 81 (Alta. S.C. App. Div.). Also see R. v. Boyesen (1982), 75 Cr. App. R. 51 (H.L.), where it was held in relation to s. 5(2) of the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 (U.K.) that the test is not whether the amount is capable of being used but whether it is in possession and can be identified. Quantity is important, however, as the quantity must be sufficient for the court to find that it amounts to something as a matter of fact. But if it is visible, tangible and measurable, it is certainly something. Secondly, quantity may be relevant to the issue of knowledge. If the quantity is so minute, it may be that it cannot be proved that the accused knew it was there.

Where the evidence establishes that the accused had knowledge and control of the drug there is no requirement that the Crown also prove that the amount was usable: R. v. Brett (1986), 41 C.C.C. (3d) 190, 53 C.R. (3d) 189 (B.C.C.A.).

The principle of de minimis non curat lex does not apply to the offence under this subsection: R. v. Keizer (1990), 98 N.S.R. (2d) 266 (N.S.S.C.).

An admission by the accused that he was in possession of “hash” was some evidence that he was in possession of cannabis resin: R. v. O'Brien (1987), 41 C.C.C. (3d) 86 (Que. C.A.).

The prohibition against possession of marijuana does not infringe either ss. 15 or 7 of the Charter: R. v. Hamon (1993), 85 C.C.C. (3d) 490, 58 Q.A.C. 241, 20 C.R.R. (2d) 181 (C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused 167 N.R. 239n.

Also see cases noted under s. 4(4) of the Criminal Code, supra.

FAILURE TO DISCLOSE PREVIOUS PRESCRIPTIONS / Offence and punishment / Limitation period.

3.1 (1) No person shall, at any time, seek or obtain a narcotic or a prescription for a narcotic from a practitioner unless that person discloses to the practitioner particulars of every narcotic or prescription for a narcotic issued to that person by a different practitioner within the preceding thirty days.

- (2) Every person who contravenes subsection (1)
  - (a) is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding seven years; or
  - (b) is guilty of an offence punishable on summary conviction and liable

- (i) for a first offence, to a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, and
- (ii) for a subsequent offence, to a fine not exceeding two thousand dollars or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding one year.

(3) Summary conviction proceedings in respect of an offence under this section may be instituted at any time within but not later than one year from the time when the subject-matter of the proceedings arose. R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 197.

TRAFFICKING / Possession for purpose of trafficking / Offence and punishment.

4. (1) No person shall traffic in a narcotic or any substance represented or held out by the person to be a narcotic.

(2) No person shall have in his possession any narcotic for the purpose of trafficking.

(3) Every person who contravenes subsection (1) or (2) is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to imprisonment for life. R.S., c. N-1, s. 4.

ANNOTATIONS

Meaning of trafficking generally [subsec. (1)] – Once a person is found to have given or delivered a drug to another the offence of trafficking is proven, and it is not necessary for the Crown to prove that he so acted to promote the distribution of the drug to another: R. v. Larson (1972), 6 C.C.C. (2d) 145, 18 C.R.N.S. 149 (B.C.C.A.).

Nor is profit an element of the offence: R. v. Drysdelle (1978), 41 C.C.C. (2d) 238, 22 N.B.R. (2d) 86 (S.C. App. Div.).

The act of an accused in merely giving a narcotic to a friend to hold for him for safe-keeping constitutes the offence under this subsection: R. v. Lauze (1980), 17 C.R. (3d) 90 (Que. C.A.).

Distribution means the allocation to a number of people and accordingly cannot occur where there is only one recipient: R. v. Christiansen (1973), 13 C.C.C. (2d) 504, 23 C.R.N.S. 229 (N.B.S.C. App. Div.).

Where the transportation by the accused of the narcotic is incidental to the accused's own personal use of the narcotic as distinct from transportation as part of a transaction involving others, then the accused does not commit the offence under this subsection: R. v. Harrington and Scosky, [1964] 1 C.C.C. 189, 41 C.R. 75 sub nom. R. v. MacDonald; R. v. Harrington and Scosky (B.C.C.A.); R. v. Young (1971), 2 C.C.C. (2d) 560, 14 C.R.N.S. 372 (B.C.C.A.).

"Manufacture" in the definition of traffic in s. 2 would include the act of distilling cannabis resin from cannabis marihuana so as to give the substance a new form, quality and property and an accused performing such an operation may be convicted of the offence under this section even if the cannabis resin was to be for the accused's own use: R. v. Daniel (1982), 1 C.C.C. (3d) 101, 40 O.R. (2d) 620 (C.A.).

The term "administer" in the definition of "traffic" in s. 2 means to apply as a medicine or to give remedially rather than to merely make the narcotic available by giving a prescription: R. v. Tan (1984), 15 C.C.C. (3d) 303, 42 C.R. (3d) 252, [1985] 1 W.W.R. 377 (Sask. C.A.).

It was held in R. v. Dumais (1979), 51 C.C.C. (2d) 106 (Ont. C.A.), distinguishing R. v. Maxwell, Watson and Shaw, infra, that the use of the words "jointly traffic" did not preclude the conviction of one accused notwithstanding the acquittal of the other.

The acts of a physician in selling prescriptions for narcotics could constitute trafficking within this section either by selling or administering: R. v. Rousseau (1991), 70 C.C.C. (3d) 445, [1991] R.J.Q. 2802, 43 Q.A.C. 81 (C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused 70 C.C.C. (3d) vi.

Liability of party to trafficking offence – The civil law concept of "agency" cannot be used to make non-criminal an act which would otherwise be attended by criminal consequences. Thus an accused who is acting on behalf of a purchaser of a narcotic may nevertheless be guilty of trafficking where he does one or more acts which render him liable as a party under s. 21(1) of the Criminal Code to the offence committed by the vendor of the narcotic: Poitras v. The Queen (1973), 12 C.C.C. (2d) 337, 37 D.L.R. (3d) 411, [1974] S.C.R. 649 (4:1); R. v. Greenlaw (1981), 60 C.C.C. (2d) 178 (Ont. C.A.).

The purchaser of a narcotic does not commit the offence of trafficking by virtue of the definition of "traffic" in s. 2 and semble is not a party to the vendor's offence even though his acts may constitute abetting within the meaning of s. 21(1)(c) of the Criminal Code: R. v. Meston (1975), 28 C.C.C. (2d) 497, 34 C.R.N.S. 323 (Ont. C.A.). This case also contains a review of some of the authorities on the "agent for the purchaser" defence to a charge under this subsection.

Such a defence was successful in R. v. Schartner (1977), 38 C.C.C. (2d) 89, [1978] 1 W.W.R. 165 (B.C.C.A.) where the Court found that none of the accused's acts were done for the purpose of aiding the vendor to sell so as to render him liable as a party to the vendor's offence under s. 21(1) of the Criminal Code.

Trafficking by offer – Once the accused offered to sell a narcotic to the undercover police officer the actus reus of the offence of trafficking is complete and the requisite mens rea is found in the accused's intention to make an offer to sell the narcotic. Thus it is no defence that the accused knew the purchaser was a police officer and his intention was to "fool" the officer into thinking he would deliver the narcotic in order to cheat the officer: R. v. Sherman (1977), 36 C.C.C. (2d) 207, 39 C.R.N.S. 255 (B.C.C.A.).

Similarly the accused were properly convicted even if they only offered to sell narcotics as part of a scheme to defraud the purchaser of his money and with no intention of actually delivering the narcotics: R. v. Mancuso (1989), 51 C.C.C. (3d) 380 (Que. C.A.).

Trafficking by holding out – On a charge of trafficking in a substance held out to be a narcotic it is not material to the proof of the charge that the purchaser believed the substance was a narcotic provided it was represented or held out to be a narcotic by the accused and, therefore, the actual purchaser is not a necessary witness: R. v. Merritt (1975), 27 C.C.C. (2d) 156, 11 N.B.R. (2d) 393 (S.C. App. Div.).

Conspiracy to traffic – An accused may be convicted of a conspiracy to commit this offence where the evidence establishes an agreement between the accused and another whereby the co-conspirator would sell narcotics to the accused for the purposes of resale to other persons: R. v. Genser (1986), 27 C.C.C. (3d) 264, 39 Man. R. (2d) 203 (C.A.), affd 39 C.C.C. (3d) 576, [1987] 2 S.C.R. 685, 50 Man. R. (2d) 128 (5:0).

Possession for purpose of trafficking generally [subsec. (2)] – The gravamen of the offence under this subsection is possession plus the intent or purpose of physically making the narcotic available to others even if they are owners in common with the accused: R. v. Taylor (1974), 17 C.C.C. (2d) 36, [1974] 5 W.W.R. 40 (B.C.C.A.).

Under this section the offence requires proof of actual knowledge or wilful blindness as to the presence of the narcotics. Mere recklessness is not sufficient: R. v. Sandhu (1989), 50 C.C.C. (3d) 492, 35 O.A.C. 118, 73 C.R. (3d) 162 (C.A.).

Transporting for joint use – The doctrine of conjugal unity does not apply to prevent a possession for the purpose of trafficking conviction against a husband for transporting drugs to his wife: R. v. O'Connor (1975), 23 C.C.C. (2d) 110, 29 C.R.N.S. 100 (B.C.C.A.) (5:0).

However, it was held that the driver of a vehicle is not in possession for the purpose of trafficking where he and the joint owner of a quantity of narcotic are both in the vehicle at the time of apprehension and the narcotic is for their own use. The word "transport" in the definition of traffic in s. 2 contemplates movement of the narcotic for the purpose of promoting its distribution to another person: R. v. Binkley (1982), 69 C.C.C. (2d) 169, 16 Sask. R. 251 (C.A.); R. v. Gardiner (1987), 35 C.C.C. (3d) 461 (Ont. C.A.).

Liability of party to possession offence – An accused who assists a narcotics trafficker in concealing the narcotics in the accused's apartment so that the trafficker may avoid detection is liable as party to offence of possession for the purpose of trafficking and is not guilty merely of simple possession: R. v. Jackson (1977), 35 C.C.C. (2d) 331 (Ont. C.A.).

An accused is properly convicted as a party to this offence where, although not in possession of the narcotics, she lent the principal offender the money to purchase the narcotics on terms that required him to repay the money and give her a share of the proceeds from the resale of the narcotics: R. v. Roan (1985), 17 C.C.C. (3d) 534 (Alta. C.A.).

An accused who set up a commercial cultivation operation and assisted in bringing the crop to maturity can be convicted as a party to the offence under this subsection although he does not own nor have any interest in the disposition of the crop: R. v. Arason (1992), 78 C.C.C. (3d) 1, 13 C.R.R. (2d) 248, 37 W.A.C. 20 (B.C.C.A.).

Mistake as to nature of drug – The defence of mistaken belief as to the true identity of the drug must be honest and its reasonableness is only a factor to be considered. This belief must be innocent and accordingly this defence will fail where the evidence establishes that the accused believed that the drug he possessed for sale was mescaline rather than a narcotic: R. v. Couture (1976), 33 C.C.C. (2d) 74 (Ont. C.A.).

Proof of offence charged – The offence under this subsection is possession of a narcotic for the purpose of trafficking. Thus where the Crown particularizes the narcotic as cannabis marihuana but proves possession of cannabis resin, it is still the same offence and unless there has been irreparable prejudice the indictment may be amended to conform with the evidence: R. v. Morozuk (1986), 24 C.C.C. (3d) 257, 50 C.R. (3d) 179, [1986] 1 S.C.R. 31 (7:0). Where the offence is conspiracy, see note at R. v. Saunders (1990), 56 C.C.C. (3d) 220 (S.C.C.) under s. 587.

An indictment charging that the accused "being then and there together, did have in their possession a narcotic . . . for the purpose of trafficking" charges the accused jointly with the commission of one offence and will not support a finding of possession by each accused: R. v. Maxwell, Watson and Shaw (1978), 39 C.C.C. (2d) 439 (B.C.C.A.); not folld: R. v. Dalzell and Douglas (1979), 46 C.C.C. (2d) 193 (Alta. C.A.) where it was held that a charge that the accused "did unlawfully have in their possession a narcotic . . . for the purpose of trafficking" charged the accused jointly and severally with the offence so that even where the joint charge failed the Judge could proceed with the trial on the basis that the accused were charged severally with the offence.

In R. v. Doig (1980), 54 C.C.C. (2d) 461 (B.C.C.A.), R. v. Maxwell, Watson and Shaw, supra, was distinguished and the conviction of one of two persons jointly charged with possession of narcotics for the purpose of trafficking upheld. The accused had been jointly charged with one of his employees who had been present when a shipment of barrels later found to contain marihuana was delivered to a warehouse rented by the accused. It was open to the Court on these facts to acquit the employee and convict the accused although they were jointly charged.

A charge that the accused trafficked in a narcotic "to wit: 1/4 gram of cocaine" is not made out where the evidence is that the substance was a harmless blend of powder, even though the accused, in giving the substance to her friend, represented that the substance was cocaine: R. v. C. (N.) (1991), 64 C.C.C. (3d) 45 (Que. C.A.).

Rule precluding multiple convictions – By reason of the rule precluding multiple convictions laid down in R. v. Kienapple (1974), 15 C.C.C. (2d) 54, [1975] 1 S.C.R. 729, an accused who on a single occasion trafficked in two types of narcotics to the same person should be convicted only of one offence under this section: R. v. Voutsis (1989), 47 C.C.C. (3d) 451, 73 Sask. R. 287 (C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused 50 C.C.C. (3d) vii, 102 N.R. 400n.

The doctrine of res judicata does not bar a conviction under this subsection where the accused has previously been convicted of the offence of trafficking allegedly occurring on the same date and at the same place where following the sale of the narcotic the accused is still in possession of a quantity of the narcotic: R. v. Winsor (1976), 31 C.C.C. (2d) 228, 37 C.R.N.S. 148 (Nfld. Prov. Ct.).

Included offences – It is the language of the count, and not the evidence that discloses it, that decides whether there is a lesser and included offence therein. The offence of trafficking as statutorily described does not include the offence of possession: R. v. Shewfelt (1972), 6 C.C.C. (2d) 304, 18 C.R.N.S. 185 (B.C.C.A.); R. v. Drysdelle, supra.

A plea to the included offence of simple possession on an information charging the offence under subsec. (2) is a plea to the indictable offence of possession and the Crown is not called upon to elect whether to proceed summarily or by indictment: R. v. Wardley (1978), 43 C.C.C. (2d) 345, 11 C.R. (3d) 282 (Ont. C.A.); R. v. Fudge (1979), 49 C.C.C. (2d) 63, 26 Nfld. & P.E.I.R. 76 (Nfld. C.A.).

IMPORTING AND EXPORTING / Offence and punishment.

5. (1) Except as authorized by this Act or the regulations, no person shall import into Canada or export from Canada any narcotic.

(2) Every person who contravenes subsection (1) is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to imprisonment for life but not less than seven years. R.S., c. N-1, s. 5.

ANNOTATIONS

Meaning of “import” – The word “import” in this section means simply to bring into the country or cause to be brought into the country. The offence of importing is not a continuing one but rather is complete when the goods enter the country. On the other hand an accused need not himself have carried the goods into Canada nor been present at the port of entry and the offence may be committed in whole or in part at more than one location in Canada. Thus, for example, the offence could be tried at the place where the accused made all the arrangements for importation and at the place where the goods entered the country: Bell v. The Queen (1983), 8 C.C.C. (3d) 97, 36 C.R. (3d) 289 (S.C.C.) (5:0).

Further, the offence does not necessarily end when the vessel enters into Canadian waters and persons may properly be convicted of importing who assist in the unloading of a vessel which passed into Canadian waters many hours before: R. v. Miller et al. (1984), 12 C.C.C. (3d) 54 (B.C.C.A.).

However, once the narcotic entered a province by crossing an international boundary, the offence was complete and the further transportation of the goods into another province did not give the latter province jurisdiction to try the importing offence: Martel and Debarros v. The Queen (1986), 55 C.R. (3d) 63, 61 Nfld. & P.E.I.R. 219 (P.E.I.S.C.).

A narcotic has been imported into Canada notwithstanding that it is still resting in a customs warehouse and has not passed out of the control of customs when the accused is arrested: Re Martin and The Queen (1973), 11 C.C.C. (2d) 224, 21 C.R.N.S. 149 sub nom. R. v. Martin (Ont. H.C.J.).

The fact that the police monitored the voyage of a vessel known to be carrying narcotics and actually assisted the accused at one point when the vessel encountered bad weather did not prevent the offence under this section from being committed. Lack of consent by the police is not an element of the offence: R. v. Miller et al., supra.

Mens rea – Under this section the offence requires proof of actual knowledge or wilful blindness as to the presence of the narcotics. Mere recklessness is not sufficient: R. v. Sandhu (1989), 50 C.C.C. (3d) 492, 35 O.A.C. 118, 73 C.R. (3d) 162 (C.A.).

A belief by the accused that he was smuggling goods in violation of the Customs Act would not be sufficient mens rea to permit a conviction under this section but an accused may be convicted where he either knew the substance was a narcotic (not necessarily the particular narcotic) or was wilfully blind to that fact: R. v. Blondin (1970), 2 C.C.C. (2d) 118, [1971] 2 W.W.R. 1 (B.C.C.A.), affd 4 C.C.C. (2d) 566n, [1971] S.C.R. v.

Sentencing [Also see notes under s. 687 of Code] – The seven-year minimum prescribed by subsec. (2) is unconstitutional by reason of its violation of s. 12 of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms: Smith v. The Queen (1987), 34 C.C.C. (3d) 97, 58 C.R. (3d) 193, [1987] 1 S.C.R. 1045 (5:1).

CULTIVATION OF OPIUM POPPY OR MARIHUANA / Offence and punishment / Destruction of plant.

6. (1) No person shall cultivate opium poppy or marihuana except under the authority of and in accordance with a licence issued to the person under the regulations.

(2) Every person who contravenes subsection (1) is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding seven years.

(3) The Minister may cause to be destroyed any growing plant of opium poppy or marihuana cultivated otherwise than under authority of and in accordance with a licence issued under the regulations. R.S., c. N-1, s. 6.

ANNOTATIONS

Cultivation requires that labour and attention be bestowed upon the plants to assist them to grow: R. v. Busby (1972), 7 C.C.C. (2d) 234 (Y.T.C.A.).

Cultivating, under this section, is a continuing offence, commencing when the seeding takes place and continuing until the plants are harvested or the accused abandons the task of raising the crop. A person who undertakes the task of raising the crop to maturity does not cease to cultivate, within the meaning of this section, during periods of deliberate inactivity where the crop is left alone to grow and mature in the environment created by that person: R. v. Arnold (1990), 74 C.R. (3d) 394 (B.C.C.A.).

The word "cultivate" does not include the mere drying or curing of marihuana plants: R. v. Gauvreau (1982), 65 C.C.C. (2d) 316, 26 C.R. (3d) 272, 35 O.R. (2d) 388 (C.A.). Nor does it include acts relating to the harvest of the plants such as the cutting and drying of the plants: R. v. Couture (1994), 93 C.C.C. (3d) 540, [1994] R.J.Q. 2160 (C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused 94 C.C.C. (3d) vii.

The offence of simple possession is not included in this offence: R. v. Powell (1983), 9 C.C.C. (3d) 442, 36 C.R. (3d) 396 (B.C.C.A.).

The prohibition against the cultivation of marihuana does not infringe either ss. 15 or 7 of the Charter: R. v. Hamon (1993), 85 C.C.C. (3d) 490, 58 Q.A.C. 241, 20 C.R.R. (2d) 181 (C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused 62 Q.A.C. 139n, 167 N.R. 239n.

Prosecutions

SETTING OUT OR NEGATING EXCEPTION, ETC., NOT REQUIRED / Burden of proving exception, etc.

7. (1) No exception, exemption, excuse or qualification prescribed by law is required to be set out or negated, as the case may be, in an information or indictment for an offence under this Act or under section 463, 464 or 465 of the Criminal Code in respect of an offence under this Act.

(2) In any prosecution under this Act, the burden of proving that an exception, exemption, excuse or qualification prescribed by law operates in favour of the accused is on the accused, and the prosecutor is not required, except by way of rebuttal, to prove that the exception, exemption, excuse or qualification does not operate in favour of the accused, whether or not it is set out in the information or indictment. R.S., c. N-1, s. 7.

ANNOTATIONS

Subsec. (2) – This subsection refers to statutory exceptions, such as possession of a licence, and does not apply to a common law defence such as necessity: Perka et al. v. The Queen (1984), 14 C.C.C. (3d) 385, [1984] 2 S.C.R. 232, 42 C.R. (3d) 113 (5:0).

PROCEDURE IN PROSECUTION FOR TRAFFICKING / Idem / Conviction of possession or conviction of trafficking.

8. (1) In any prosecution for a contravention of subsection 4(2), if the accused does not plead guilty, the trial shall proceed as if it were a prosecution for an offence under section 3.

(2) After the close of the case for the prosecution pursuant to subsection (1) and after the accused has had an opportunity to make full answer and defence, the court shall make a finding as to whether or not the accused contravened subsection 3(1) and, if the court finds that the accused did not contravene subsection 3(1), the accused shall be acquitted but, if the court finds that the accused contravened subsection 3(1), the accused shall be given an opportunity of establishing that he was not in possession of the narcotic for the purpose of trafficking and, thereafter, the prosecutor shall be given an opportunity of adducing evidence to establish the contrary.

(3) After compliance with subsection (2), in the case of finding a contravention by the accused of subsection 3(1),

- (a) if the accused establishes that he was not in possession of the narcotic for the purpose of trafficking, the accused shall be acquitted of the offence as charged but shall be convicted of an offence under section 3 and sentenced accordingly; or
- (b) if the accused fails to establish that he was not in possession of the narcotic for the purpose of trafficking, the accused shall be convicted of the offence as charged and sentenced accordingly. R.S., c. N-1, s. 8.

ANNOTATIONS

It has been held that the reverse onus created by this section is an unconstitutional infringement on the guarantee to the presumption of innocence in s. 11(d) of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms and is of no force and effect: R. v. Oakes (1986), 24 C.C.C. (3d) 321, 50 C.R. (3d) 1, [1986] 1 S.C.R. 103 (7:0).

As a consequence the entire section would be of no force and effect, including the requirement for the two-part trial. See: Re Pizzuro and Casemore and The Queen (1983), 5 C.C.C. (3d) 294, 148 D.L.R. (3d) 368 (Ont. H.C.J.), affd 10 C.C.C. (3d) 277, 45 O.R. (2d) 1 (C.A.).

CERTIFICATE OF ANALYST / Requiring attendance of analyst / Notice of intention to produce certificate / Proof of service / Attendance for examination.

9. (1) Subject to this section, a certificate purporting to be signed by an analyst stating that the analyst has analyzed or examined a substance and stating the result of the analysis or examination is admissible in evidence in any prosecution for an offence referred to in subsection 7(1) and, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, is proof of the statements contained in the certificate without proof of the signature or official character of the person appearing to have signed the certificate.

(2) The party against whom a certificate of an analyst is produced pursuant to subsection (1) may, with leave of the court, require the attendance of the analyst for the purposes of cross-examination.

(3) No certificate shall be admitted in evidence pursuant to subsection (1) unless the party intending to produce it has, before the trial, given to the party against whom it is intended to be produced reasonable notice of that intention together with a copy of the certificate.

(4) For the purposes of this Act, service of any certificate referred to in subsection (1) may be proved by oral evidence given under oath by, or by the affidavit or solemn declaration of, the person claiming to have served it.

(5) Notwithstanding subsection (4), the court may require the person who appears to have signed an affidavit or solemn declaration referred to in that subsection to appear before it for examination or cross-examination in respect of the issue of proof of service. R.S., c. N-1, s. 9; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 198.

ANNOTATIONS

Proof of continuity [subsec. (1)] – A certificate stating that an analysis of a substance sent originally to a federal office in one province was conducted in another province is satisfactory for continuity under the broad provisions of this section: R. v. Welsh (1975), 24 C.C.C. (2d) 382, 31 C.R.N.S. 337 (Ont. C.A.).

The Crown is under no duty to call all persons who handled the drug exhibit envelope from the time it was sealed by the arresting officer until it reached the analyst: R. v. Oracheski (1979), 48 C.C.C. (2d) 217 (Alta. S.C. App. Div.). Folld: R. v. Degraaf (1981), 60 C.C.C. (2d) 315, 21 C.R. (3d) 238 (B.C.C.A.).

Proof of nature of substance other than by certificate under this Act – A certificate made by an analyst under the Food and Drugs Act is admissible under this Act: R. v. Van Esch (1975), 24 C.C.C. (2d) 523 (Ont. C.A.). It was also held in this case that an admission by the accused to the police that he was the owner of the “marihuana” is itself some evidence of the nature of the substance.

As well, evidence by a police officer that in his opinion the substance was marihuana because of its odour and appearance, while of little weight, is some evidence of the nature of the substance: R. v. Woodward (1975), 23 C.C.C. (2d) 508 (Ont. C.A.).

Effect of destruction of sample – The fact that the entire sample of the drug was destroyed in the Government analysis does not deprive the accused of his right to make full answer and defence nor does it amount to a denial of his rights under the Canadian Bill of Rights. Further, while the destruction of the entire sample may be a factor which could affect the weight to be accorded the analyst’s certificate, it does not render the certificate inadmissible: R. v. O’Quinn (1976), 36 C.C.C. (2d) (B.C.C.A.).

Meaning of evidence to the contrary [subsec. (1)] – “Evidence to the contrary” is any evidence which tends to put in doubt the probative value Parliament has legislatively conferred upon the statements contained in the certificate. Thus any evidence with respect to the analyst himself, his qualifications, integrity or in regard to the procedures he followed to draw his conclusions which could as a matter of law leave the trier of fact with a reasonable doubt as to the analyst’s conclusions had he testified as an expert witness in Court may constitute evidence to the contrary: Oliver et al. v. The Queen (1981), 62 C.C.C. (2d) 97, 24 C.R. (3d) 1 (S.C.C.) (9:0).

Sufficiency of analysis – In reaching his conclusion as to the identity of the substance the analyst is entitled to rely on tests performed by others and to make use of standard graphs supplied by other laboratories: R. v. Jordan (1984), 11 C.C.C. (3d) 565, 39 C.R. (3d) 50 (B.C.C.A.).

Leave to cross-examine [subsec. (2)] – A time lapse of some 18 days between the date when the substance was submitted and the date it was analyzed is not sufficient reason to grant leave under this subsection: R. v. Dannenbaum and Bevans (1973), 11 C.C.C. (2d) 299 (B.C.S.C.).

It was held in Re Klippenstein and Isherwood and The Queen (1975), 28 C.C.C. (2d) 235 (Man. Q.B.) that a trial Judge properly exercised his discretion in refusing to grant leave under this subsection despite affidavit evidence that there existed scientific research casting doubt on the analysis normally used to detect the presence of the species of cannabis proscribed by this Act.

Reasonable notice [subsec. (3)] – Where reasonable notice to the accused was proven in a manner that was not strictly admissible, the silence of the accused on that point may be taken as a tacit admission of it: R. v. Bowles (1974), 16 C.C.C. (2d) 425 (Ont. C.A.).

Even though defence counsel did not object at the time of its reception into evidence he may at the close of the Crown's case move for acquittal on the ground that there was no evidence before the court because no prior notice of the Crown's intention to use the certificate was given: R. v. Braithwaite (1972), 6 C.C.C. (2d) 257 (Alta. S.C.T.D.).

The issue of reasonable notice is to be determined before the admission of the certificate, not after it is in the evidence to then determine whether or not a case has been established against the accused: R. v. M. (1975), 25 C.C.C. (2d) 507 (Man. Q.B.).

For the Crown to avail itself of this section it must strictly comply with the provisions of notice: R. v. Henri (1972), 9 C.C.C. (2d) 52, [1972] 6 W.W.R. 368 (B.C.C.A.). Followed: R. v. Breen (1975), 30 C.C.C. (2d) 229, 12 N.B.R. (2d) 616 (S.C. App. Div.).

Since a preliminary inquiry is not a trial no notice need be given by the Crown of its intention to introduce a certificate of analysis into evidence: Re Wong and Mar and The Queen (1973), 14 C.C.C. (2d) 117, 24 C.R.N.S. 398 sub nom. R. v. Ka Chun Wong and Mar (B.C.S.C.).

However, merely tendering the certificate at the preliminary inquiry without proof of notice does not constitute notice within the meaning of this subsection for the purposes of the trial proper: R. v. De Vincentis (1982), 5 C.C.C. (3d) 562 (Que. C.A.).

A notice incorrectly referring to the wrong subsection is still reasonable especially where the accused was not prejudiced or misled by the error: R. v. Woodward (1975), 23 C.C.C. (2d) 508 (Ont. C.A.).

An inaccurate reference to the Criminal Code rather than this Act did not render the notice void nor unreasonable: R. v. Taylor (1983), 5 C.C.C. (3d) 260 (Ont. C.A.).

When the defence first raises the question of reasonableness of notice at the end of the case, the Crown may reopen its case: R. v. Marcil (1976), 31 C.C.C. (2d) 172 (Sask. C.A.).

The fact that the certificate referred to a package with a different date on it than testified to by the undercover police officer who placed it in the security envelope was not in any way relevant to the issue of whether the accused was given reasonable notice in compliance with this subsection. This discrepancy went at most to the question of whether the substance sold by the accused was the substance referred to in the certificate. In determining this latter question the Court must look at all the circumstances including the correspondence between other writings on the envelope and those contained in the certificate: Ebner v. The Queen (1979), 47 C.C.C. (2d) 293, [1979] 2 S.C.R. 996 (7:0).

Service of notice [subsec. (3)] – This subsection is not complied with by service on the accused's mother: R. v. Lewis (1972), 6 C.C.C. (2d) 516 (Ont. C.A.).

A new notice is not required where the Crown, prior to trial, withdraws the original information and lays a new information: R. v. Giesbrecht (1976), 60 C.C.C. (2d) 135 (B.C.C.A.).

Proof of service of an intention to rely on the certificate may be made by affidavit pursuant to s. 4(6) of the Criminal Code: R. v. Wood (1991), 64 C.C.C. (3d) 330, 3 O.R. (3d) 504 (Gen. Div.).

Search, Seizure and Forfeiture

ENTRY AND SEARCH.

10. A peace officer may, at any time, without a warrant enter and search any place other than a dwelling-house, and under the authority of a warrant issued under section 12, enter and search any dwelling-house in which the peace officer believes on reasonable grounds there is a narcotic by means of or in respect of which an offence under this Act has been committed. R.S., c. N-1, s. 10; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 199.

Transitional provision

Note: Section 208 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.) provides as follows:

208. Nothing in sections 190, 195, 199 and 200 of this Act shall be construed as rendering invalid or inadmissible in any proceedings any evidence obtained by the exercise of a writ of assistance prior to the coming into force of those sections.

ANNOTATIONS

To be consistent with s. 8 of the Charter, this provision is to be read as authorizing a warrantless search only where exigent circumstances render it impracticable to obtain a warrant. While the fact that the evidence sought is believed to be present on a motor vehicle or other conveyance will often create exigent circumstances, there is no blanket exception to the warrant requirement for such conveyances: R. v. Grant, [1993] 3 S.C.R. 223, 84 C.C.C. (3d) 173, 24 C.R. (4th) 1 (9:0).

The perimeter of a dwelling house is a place within the meaning of this section and thus a so-called "perimeter search" is not authorized under this section unless there are reasonable and probable grounds to believe that a narcotic is present. Where the perimeter search is made purely on the basis of suspicion then the search, which involved approaching the perimeter of the house and attempting to peer into the residence, is unreasonable and constitutes a violation of s. 8 of the Charter. There is no common law right which allows police officers to trespass on private property in order to conduct a search of this kind: R. v. Kokesch (1990), 61 C.C.C. (3d) 207, 1 C.R. (4th) 62, [1991] 1 W.W.R. 193 (S.C.C.).

An automobile is a "place" and the warrantless search of an automobile as authorized by this section and s. 42 of the Food and Drugs Act will be reasonable under s. 8 of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms where the vehicle is moving away quickly and there are reasonable grounds for believing that the vehicle contains drugs: R. v. Debot (1986), 30 C.C.C. (3d) 207, 54 C.R. (3d) 120 (Ont. C.A.), affd 52 C.C.C. (3d) 193 (S.C.C.).

Mere suspicion is not sufficient to permit a search under this section, even as simple and elementary a search as looking in the cab of a truck and moving certain items around on the seat: R. v. Nielsen (1988), 43 C.C.C. (3d) 548, [1988] 6 W.W.R. 1 (Sask. C.A.).

In an unusual case it was held that peace officers were entitled to pursue the accused's ship into international waters and search and seize the ship and arrest the accused for conspiracy to import narcotics. The ship had briefly entered Canadian waters to off-load a cargo of narcotics to another vessel which was used to in fact import the narcotics. The accused's ship had been under continuous surveillance until intercepted by the police. The conduct of the authorities complied with the international law relating to pursuit of ships onto the high seas: R. v. Sunila and Solayman (1986), 26 C.C.C. (3d) 177, 49 C.R. (3d) 272 (N.S.C.A.).

SEARCH OF PERSON AND SEIZURE.

11. A peace officer may search any person found in a place entered pursuant to section 10 and may seize and, from a place so entered, take away any narcotic found therein, any thing therein in which the peace officer reasonably suspects a narcotic is contained or concealed, or any other thing by means of or in respect of which the officer believes on reasonable grounds an offence under this Act has been committed or that may be evidence of the commission of such an offence. R.S., c. N-1, s. 10.

ANNOTATIONS

The power to search under this section depends on the officer having a reasonable belief that the person searched is in possession of a prohibited drug: R. v. Debot (1986), 30 C.C.C. (3d) 207, 54 C.R. (3d) 120 (Ont. C.A.). It should be noted that in this case the court reviewed at length the circumstances in which an officer could have the requisite reasonable grounds, particularly when based on information supplied by an informer, a superior officer and the suspect's reputation in police circles. This case also sanctioned the validity of a warrantless search as an incident of arrest although the search precedes the arrest, provided that the officer had reasonable and probable grounds to make the arrest. A further appeal by the accused to the Supreme Court of Canada was dismissed (1989), 52 C.C.C. (3d) 193 (S.C.C.) (5:0). The court agreed that the appropriate standard to establish reasonable grounds for a search is one of "reasonable probability" and in making this determination the court must have regard to the totality of the circumstances. The court also held that the suspect's criminal record and reputation could be taken into account provided that, inter alia, the reputation is related to the ostensible reasons for the search. Where the police rely on information from an informer it is not necessary for the police to confirm each detail in the informer's tip so long as the sequence of events actually observed conforms sufficiently to the anticipated pattern to remove the possibility of innocent coincidence. On the other hand, the level of verification required may be higher where the police rely on an informant whose credibility cannot be assessed or where fewer details are provided and the risk of innocent coincidence is greater. Finally, it was held that in the case of a warrantless search carried out by a police officer pursuant to orders from a superior, it is that officer who must have the requisite reasonable and probable grounds.

A conclusion that the police had reliable information that the accused was attempting to import narcotics must be based on more than the fact of a subsequent recovery of the drugs. There must be a proper inquiry into the source and reliability of the confidential information in order to determine whether, "in the totality of the circumstances", there existed reasonable and probable grounds to believe the accused was carrying the narcotic or whether there was only a suspicion. A rectal examination of the accused, based on the mere suspicion that he was carrying drugs and as an incident to an arrest for outstanding traffic fines, was a serious violation of s. 8 of the Charter and, in the circumstances of the case, required exclusion of the evidence as to the finding of the narcotics: R. v. Greffe (1990), 55 C.C.C. (3d) 161, 75 C.R. (3d) 259, [1990] 1 S.C.R. 755 (4:3).

Immediately upon detention a detainee has the right to be informed of the right to retain and instruct counsel but the police are not obligated to suspend the search incident to arrest until the detainee has the opportunity to retain counsel except in certain circumstances, as where the lawfulness of the search is dependent on the detainee's consent or the statute gives a person a right to seek review of the decision to search: R. v. Debot, supra.

This section does not give an officer any right to stop and search a person in a public place. The authority to do so must be found in the criminal law or as an incident to an arrest made upon reasonable and probable grounds: R. v. Stevens (1983), 7 C.C.C. (3d) 260, 35 C.R. (3d) 1 (N.S.S.C. App. Div.).

The word "place" includes a public street and would authorize search of a person in a public street where there is a reasonable belief that the person is in possession of a narcotic: R. v. Morrison (1983), 6 C.C.C. (3d) 256, 34 C.R. (3d) 362 (B.C. Co. Ct.), affd 15 C.C.C. (3d) 415 (B.C.C.A.).

In Collins v. The Queen (1987), 33 C.C.C. (3d) 1, 56 C.R. (3d) 193, [1987] 1 S.C.R. 265 (5:1), the court considered the lawfulness of a search under this section where the accused had been subjected to a throat hold. It was held that for the search to be lawful the Crown must establish that the officer believed on reasonable grounds that there was a narcotic in the place where the person searched was found. The nature of the belief will also determine whether the manner in which the search was carried out was reasonable. For example, if a police officer is told by a reliable source that there are persons in possession of drugs in a certain place, the officer may, depending on the circumstances and the nature and precision of the information given by that source, search persons found in that place, but without very specific information, a seizure by the throat would be unreasonable. However, if he is lawfully searching a person whom he believes on reasonable grounds to be a "drug handler", then the "throat-hold" would not be unreasonable.

WARRANT TO SEARCH DWELLING-HOUSE.

12. A justice who is satisfied by information on oath that there are reasonable grounds for believing that there is a narcotic, by means of or in respect of which an offence under this Act has been committed, in any dwelling-house may issue a warrant, under the hand of the justice, authorizing a peace officer named therein at any time to enter the dwelling-house and search for narcotics. R.S., c. N-1, s. 10.

ANNOTATIONS

A warrant may only be issued under this section where the narcotics are, at the time of the application, in the premises to be searched. A warrant may not be issued where the information before the justice is only that the narcotics are to be delivered to the premises prior to execution of the warrant: R. v. Cameron (1984), 16 C.C.C. (3d) 240 (B.C.C.A.).

There must be a belief that the narcotics are presently in the premises at the time of application for the warrant. Further, the justice has no jurisdiction to "amend" a warrant to extend the time for its execution where the warrant had expired without being executed prior to the application for the amendment. Even if the justice had power to amend the warrant he would have to be supplied with further information under oath to show that narcotics were then on the premises to be searched: R. v. Jamieson (1989), 48 C.C.C. (3d) 287, 90 N.S.R. (2d) 164 (C.A.).

It was held, considering the predecessor to this section, that the requirement that a warrant issued under this section be directed to a named police officer is an important safeguard having regard to the wider search powers under this Act and that for example the warrant can be executed at any time: R. v. Genest (1989), 45 C.C.C. (3d) 385, 91 N.R. 161 (S.C.C.). However, provided that the named officers are in control of the search then they may be assisted by unnamed officers. In fact to name, for example, all the members of a drug squad may undermine the effectiveness of the naming requirement which is to ensure that the officer or officers named in the warrant execute it personally and are responsible for the control and conduct of the search: R. v. Strachan (1988), 46 C.C.C. (3d) 479, 67 C.R. (3d) 87, [1988] 2 S.C.R. 980, [1989] 1 W.W.R. 385 (7:0).

The guarantee to protection against unreasonable search and seizure in s. 8 of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms requires that the justice be unbiased, neutral and detached and that there be no real or apprehended perception of partiality. Where, by reason of the justice's relationship with the police force seeking the warrant, a reasonable person would believe that there was a real danger of bias by reason of a perceived susceptibility of the justice to intimidation or coercion by the police then this requirement is not satisfied. In this case such perception arose from the fact that the justice was also a member of the corps of commissionaires with duties at an airport where she reported to and worked out of the R.C.M.P. offices at the airport, was in daily contact with the R.C.M.P. and was subject to the direct control of a member of that force. The R.C.M.P.

was also charged with the enforcement of this Act and a member of that force had applied for the warrant: R. v. Baylis (1988), 43 C.C.C. (3d) 514, 65 C.R. (3d) 62, 66 Sask. R. 268 (C.A.).

A warrant which has the "wrong" address on it may not be amended by the officer and the justice by simply inserting the correct address, at least if the officer is not placed under oath at the time of the amendment: Re Sieger and Avery and The Queen (1982), 65 C.C.C. (2d) 449, 27 C.R. (3d) 91 sub nom. Sieger and Avery v. Barker et al. (B.C.S.C.).

The failure to specify the place to be searched is a serious defect which not only renders the warrant invalid but the search, pursuant to such warrant, unreasonable within the meaning of s. 8 of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms: R. v. Parent (1989), 47 C.C.C. (3d) 385, 41 C.R.R. 322 (Y.T.C.A.).

The police may apply for a warrant under this section or s. 487 of the Criminal Code. Where, however, the warrant is obtained under s. 487, the police must execute it in accordance with the Criminal Code and cannot resort to the special provisions in this Act: R. v. Grant, [1993] 3 S.C.R. 223, 84 C.C.C. (3d) 173, 24 C.R. (4th) 1 (9:0).

Any factual submissions which are made orally by the police officer supplementing the written information should be made under oath and a record kept of them. The material to obtain the warrant must be current, and appear to be current, and should be sufficient to enable the justice to form an opinion using independent judgment as to whether reasonable grounds exist for believing that there is a narcotic on the premises. The police officer is not required to disclose the identity of a confidential informant: Re Dodge and The Queen (1984), 16 C.C.C. (3d) 385, 50 Nfld. & P.E.I.R. 349 (Nfld. S.C.T.D.).

The validity of a search warrant may properly be raised at trial even if no application has been made prior to trial to have the warrant set aside. In fact, it is preferable that the validity of the warrant be determined by the trial judge where the object of the attack on the warrant is to exclude evidence obtained through its execution by reason of a violation of s. 8 of the Charter, since it is the trial judge alone who has jurisdiction under s. 24(2) to exclude evidence: R. v. Zevallos (1987), 37 C.C.C. (3d) 79, 59 C.R. (3d) 153 (Ont. C.A.); R. v. Tanner (1989), 46 C.C.C. (3d) 513 (Alta. C.A.); R. v. Jamieson (1989), 48 C.C.C. (3d) 287 (N.S.C.A.). Contra: R. v. Komadowski (1986), 27 C.C.C. (3d) 319, [1986] 3 W.W.R. 657 (Man. C.A.).

Moreover, the trial judge has jurisdiction to set aside a sealing order, made by the justice at the time the warrant was issued, barring access to the information in support of the warrant: R. v. Tanner, supra.

Lack of a requirement that the seizing officer make a return to the justice of the peace does not render this provision unconstitutional: R. v. MacFarlane (1992), 76 C.C.C. (3d) 54 (P.E.I.S.C. App. Div.).

13. [Repealed. R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 200.]

Transitional provision

Note: Section 208 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.) provides as follows:

"208. Nothing in sections 190, 195, 199 and 200 of this Act shall be construed as rendering invalid or inadmissible in any proceedings any evidence obtained by the exercise of a writ of assistance prior to the coming into force of those sections."

POWERS OF PEACE OFFICER.

14. For the purpose of exercising authority pursuant to any of sections 10 to 13, a peace officer may, with such assistance as that officer deems necessary, break open any door, window, lock, fastener, floor, wall, ceiling, compartment, plumbing fixture, box, container or any other thing. R.S., c. N-1, s. 10.

ANNOTATIONS

Where there is a risk of loss or destruction of evidence so that rapid action is required or where there is a real threat of violent behaviour whether directed at the police or third parties then the police may be justified in using special procedures in executing the warrant. However, the consideration of the possibility of violence must be carefully limited and should not amount to a carte blanche for the police to ignore completely all restrictions on police behaviour. The greater the departure from the standards of behaviour required by the common law and the Charter of Rights and Freedoms, then the heavier the onus on the police to show why they thought it necessary to use force in the execution of the warrant: R. v. Genest (1989), 45 C.C.C. (3d) 385, 91 N.R. 161 (S.C.C.) (7:0).

The special search provisions in this Act are designed to be a comprehensive set of rules, replacing older common law rules relating to the execution of search warrants. Thus this section permits the officer to break open any door for the purpose of executing the search warrant and does not impose any requirement of announcement prior to entry. While s. 8 of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms imposes limits on the manner in which a search warrant is executed and may in some circumstances require that there be prior announcement, Parliament, in enacting these special entry and search provisions, was well aware of the need for unannounced entry in order to allow the police to surprise the occupants of a dwelling house whom they had reason to believe were dealing in narcotics. In each case the issue will be whether the search was carried out in a reasonable manner; whether it was necessary to resort to the statutory power to force entry. Thus in this case the police had information from a reliable informer that the premises were being used as a retail outlet for cocaine and that the front door was probably barred. In the circumstances they were entitled to force entry without prior announcement: R. v. Gimson (1990), 54 C.C.C. (3d) 253, 77 C.R. (3d) 307, 37 O.A.C. 243 (C.A.).

This section authorizes the use of force to execute the warrant and it was not unreasonable for the officers to force entry into a residence which they had reasonable grounds to believe contained a narcotic. There was no requirement that the officers delay execution until the occupants returned: R. v. Grenier (1991), 65 C.C.C. (3d) 76 (Que. C.A.).

APPLICATION FOR RESTORATION / Order of immediate restoration / Order of restoration at specified time / Where application not made or order refused.

15. (1) Where a narcotic or other thing has been seized under section 11, any person may, within two months after the date of the seizure, on prior notification being given to the Crown in the manner prescribed by the regulations, apply to a provincial court judge within whose territorial jurisdiction the seizure was made for an order of restoration under this section.

(2) Subject to section 16, where on the hearing of an application made under subsection (1) the provincial court judge is satisfied that the applicant is entitled to possession of the narcotic or other thing seized and that the thing seized is not or will not be required as evidence in any proceedings in respect of an offence under this Act, the provincial court judge shall order that the thing seized be restored forthwith to the applicant.

(3) Where on the hearing of an application made under subsection (1) the provincial court judge is satisfied that the applicant is entitled to possession of the thing seized but is not satisfied that the thing is not or will not be required as evidence in any proceedings in respect of an offence under this Act, the provincial court judge shall order that the thing seized be restored to the applicant.

(a) on the expiration of four months after the date of the seizure, if no proceedings in respect of an offence under this Act have been commenced before that time;
or

(b) on the final conclusion of any such proceedings in any other case.

(4) Where no application has been made for the return of any narcotic or other thing seized under section 11 within two months after the date of the seizure, or an application therefor has been made but, on the hearing of the application, no order of restoration is made, the thing seized shall be delivered

- (a) in the case of a narcotic, to the Minister, who may make such disposition thereof as the Minister thinks fit; and
- (b) in the case of any other thing,
  - (i) where the prosecution of the offence in respect of which the thing was seized was commenced at the instance of the government of a province and conducted by or on behalf of that government, to the Attorney General or Solicitor General of that province, and
  - (ii) in any other case, to the Minister of Supply and Services, who may dispose of the thing in accordance with the law. R.S., c. N-1, s. 10; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 203(1); 1993, c. 37, s. 25.

ANNOTATIONS

Subsec. (1) – This subsection ousts the inherent jurisdiction of a Court over its own exhibits and must be followed by a person desiring restoration of a seized item: Re Gronsksis and The Queen (1974), 21 C.C.C. (2d) 292 (Ont. Dist. Ct.). Contra: Re Graf, Grainger and Ditson and The Queen (1975), 27 C.C.C. (2d) 151 (B.C. Prov. Ct.).

Failure to comply with this subsection will not preclude the accused proceeding by civil action for recovery of his property: Smith v. The Queen (1975), 27 C.C.C. (2d) 252, 67 D.L.R. (3d) 177 (Fed. Ct. T.D.).

However, where an application for restoration has been brought under this subsection and dismissed by the judge then the doctrine of res judicata bars recovery of the money in a subsequent civil action brought by the owner. The issue of the owner's right to possession of the money has been conclusively determined in the proceedings under this Act: Aimonetti v. The Queen (1985), 19 C.C.C. (3d) 481, [1985] 5 W.W.R. 309 (Fed. C.A.).

These provisions do not apply where the original arrest and search was for a Criminal Code offence with the accused being charged with offences under this Act only after further investigation. Where the accused is acquitted of the narcotic offences and the Crown adduces no evidence that the money found was connected to narcotics, the Court should exercise its inherent jurisdiction over exhibits and order the return of the money: R. v. Newstead (1981), 59 C.C.C. (2d) 510, 21 C.R. (3d) 369 (B.C. Co. Ct.).

However, when the original seizure is pursuant to the provisions of this Act, the procedure in this section must be complied with or an application made to the Federal Court even if the owner is convicted of a Criminal Code offence: Re McIntyre and The Queen (1983), 6 C.C.C. (3d) 178, 47 N.B.R. (2d) 104 (Q.B.).

Strict adherence to this section and the regulations thereunder is necessary for jurisdiction to hear the application: Re Regina and Music Explosions Ltd. (1973), 29 C.C.C. (2d) 533 (Man. Q.B.), and Re A.-G. Can. and Rochon (1976), 31 C.C.C. (2d) 240 (Que. Sup. Ct.).

Subsec. (2) – On an application under this subsection the applicant, in order to show entitlement within the meaning of the subsection, must show on a balance of probabilities that he was in possession of the property at the time of the seizure under s. 11. It is then for the Crown to demonstrate that the applicant is not entitled to the items seized by reason of the rule of public policy that a person should not be allowed to profit from his own wrong-doing. In the context of this section that rule operates only where there is turpitude. Since this legislation is penal in nature the burden of proof on the Crown is proof beyond a reasonable doubt. This requires that there has been a prior conviction of the owner. However, the rule of public policy has been codified by s. 16(1) in the context of narcotics convictions by the requirement that the things seized were “used in any manner” in connection with a narcotics offence of which a person has been convicted. In the absence of a specific finding at the antecedent criminal proceedings under this Act of the requisite tainted convictions, the Crown may fill the evidentiary gap by proving taint on the reasonable doubt standard at the restoration hearing. Where there is no antecedent conviction and no basis for laying a narcotics related charge, proceedings should be initiated under s. 354 of the Criminal Code. The Crown may also defeat entitlement by proving that entitlement would be unlawful. In either case, however, the fact of a previous conviction is a condition precedent. Finally, where the rule of public policy legitimately applies the status of an applicant as the innocent representative of a convicted but deceased owner would not entitle the applicant to restoration. It follows, however, where the moneys were seized under s. 11 from a person who is now deceased, prior to such person's conviction for the narcotics charges which were laid against him and which have since been discontinued, then the administrator of the deceased's estate, who was innocent of any wrong-doing, is entitled to restoration of the moneys. The administrator had status to continue the application, the moneys were not required as evidence and there was sufficient evidence of the deceased's possession to meet the burden of proof of entitlement. The Crown was unable to defeat entitlement in view of the lack of the fact of a previous conviction: Fleming v. The Queen (1986), 25 C.C.C. (3d) 297, 51 C.R. (3d) 337, [1986] 1 S.C.R. 415 (7:0).

Certiorari lies at the instance of the Crown to quash an order made under this subsection not only for jurisdictional errors but errors of law on the face of the record. The improper limiting of cross-examination by Crown counsel of the accused as to the source of the funds is grounds for quashing the order: Re R. and Blaney (1979), 50 C.C.C. (2d) 395 (Ont. H.C.J.).

While the Judge may proceed either by way of affidavit or viva voce evidence, if by way of affidavit the Crown is entitled to cross-examine on the affidavits: Re Senechal and The Queen (1980), 52 C.C.C. (2d) 313, 18 C.R. (3d) 93 (Ont. H.C.J.).

FORFEITURE ON CONVICTION / Idem / Forfeiture of conveyance on application.

16. (1) Where a person has been convicted of an offence under section 3, 4 or 5, any narcotic seized under section 11 by means of or in respect of which the offence was committed, and any hypodermic needle, syringe, capping machine or other apparatus so seized that was used in any manner in connection with the offence, is forfeited to Her Majesty and shall be disposed of as the Minister directs.

(1.1) Where a person has been convicted of an offence under section 3, 4 or 5, any money seized under section 11 that was used for the purchase of the narcotic by means of or in respect of which the offence was committed is,

- (a) where the prosecution of the offence was commenced at the instance of the government of a province and conducted by or on behalf of that government, forfeited to Her Majesty in right of that province and shall be disposed of by the Attorney General or the Solicitor General of the province in accordance with the law; and
- (b) in any other case, forfeited to Her Majesty in right of Canada and shall be disposed of by the Minister of Supply and Services in accordance with the law.

(2) Where a person has been convicted of an offence under section 4 or 5, the court may, on application by counsel for the Crown, order that any conveyance seized under section 11 that has been proved to have been used in any manner in connection with the offence be forfeited

- (a) where the prosecution of the offence was commenced at the instance of the government of a province and conducted by or on behalf of that government, to Her Majesty in right of that province, and
- (b) in any other case, to Her Majesty in right of Canada, and, on the making of that order, the conveyance, except as provided in sections 17 to 19, shall, on the expiration of thirty days after the date of the forfeiture, be disposed of by the Attorney General or the Solicitor General of the province, or by the Minister of Supply and Services, as the case may be, in accordance with the law. R.S., c. N-1, s. 10; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 203(1); 1993, c. 37, s. 26.

ANNOTATIONS

Subsec. (2) – Although an order of restoration under s. 15(2) is subject to this subsection once the accused has satisfied the requirements in s. 15(2) the Judge is required to restore the property to him. The forfeiture provision of this subsection simply provides that the Court may forfeit the conveyance where the accused is convicted of an offence; it does not say that the conveyance shall have remained seized in the interim or that no order of restoration shall have been made. An order of restoration is not necessarily inconsistent with an order of forfeiture and possession by the Crown of the conveyance is not a prerequisite to an application for an order of forfeiture: Re Hicks and The Queen (1977), 36 C.C.C. (2d) 91, 38 C.R.N.S. 223 (Man. C.A.).

The Judge's refusal to make an order under this subsection forfeiting a motor vehicle is not appealable by the Crown on a sentence appeal: R. v. Pope (1980), 52 C.C.C. (2d) 538 (B.C.C.A.).

The forfeiture of an accused's vehicle after he has already been convicted and sentenced to imprisonment for a term not exceeding an offence under this Act does not offend the double jeopardy provision in s. 11(h) of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms: Re R. and Green (1983), 5 C.C.C. (3d) 95, 148 D.L.R. (3d) 767 (Ont. H.C.J.).

Section 16(2) does not apply to persons convicted of conspiracy to import or traffic in narcotics under ss. 4 or 5: R. v. Sevillano (1995), 104 C.C.C. (3d) 189, 23 O.R. (3d) 95, 82 O.A.C. 35 (C.A.).

APPLICATION BY PERSON CLAIMING INTEREST IN FORFEITED CONVEYANCE / Date of hearing / Notice to Minister or Attorney General of a province / Order by judge / Appeal.

17. (1) Where any conveyance is forfeited to Her Majesty under subsection 6(2), any person (other than a person convicted of the offence that resulted in the forfeiture or a person in whose possession the conveyance was when seized) who claims an interest therein as owner, mortgagee, lienholder or holder of any like interest may, within thirty days after the forfeiture, apply by notice in writing to a judge for an order under subsection (4).

(2) The judge to whom an application is made under subsection (1) shall fix a day, not less than thirty days after the date of filing of the application, for the hearing thereof.

(3) The applicant for an order under subsection (4) shall, at least fifteen days before the day fixed for the hearing, serve a notice of the application and of the hearing on

(a) where the prosecution of the offence was commenced at the instance of the government of a province and conducted by or on behalf of that government, the Attorney General or the Solicitor General of the province, as the case may be; and

(b) in any other case, the Minister of Supply and Services.

(4) Where, on the hearing of an application made under subsection (1), it is made to appear to the satisfaction of the judge

(a) that the applicant is innocent of any complicity in the offence that resulted in the forfeiture and of any collusion in relation to that offence with the person who was convicted thereof, and

(b) that the applicant exercised, with respect to the person permitted to obtain possession of the conveyance, all reasonable care in order to be satisfied that the conveyance was not likely to be used in connection with the commission of an unlawful act or, in the case of a mortgagee or lienholder, that the applicant exercised, with respect to the mortgagor or lien-giver, all reasonable care in order to be so satisfied, the applicant is entitled to an order declaring that the interest of the applicant is not affected by the forfeiture and declaring the nature and extent of the interest.

(5) The applicant, the Attorney General or the Solicitor General of the province or the Minister of Supply and Services, as the case may be, may appeal to the court of appeal from an order made under subsection (4) and the appeal shall be asserted, heard and decided according to the ordinary procedure governing appeals to the court of appeal from orders or judgments of a judge. R.S., c. N-1, s. 11; 1993, c. 37, s. 27.

DEFINITIONS / "court of appeal" / judge".

18. In section 17,

"court of appeal" means, in the province in which an order under section 17 is made, the court of appeal for that province as defined in the definition "court of appeal" in section 2 of the Criminal Code;

"judge" means

- (a) in the Province of Ontario, a judge of the Ontario Court (General Division),
- (b) in the Province of Quebec, a judge of the Superior Court for the district in which the conveyance, in respect of which an application for an order under section 17 is made, was seized,
- (c) [Repealed. 1992, c. 51, s. 59(1).]
- (d) in the Provinces of New Brunswick, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, a judge of the Court of Queen's Bench,
- (e) in the Provinces of Nova Scotia and British Columbia, the Yukon Territory and the Northwest Territories, a judge of the Supreme Court, and

NOTE: Paragraph (e) re-enacted 1993, c. 28, s. 78 (to come into force April 1, 1999). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

- (e) in the Provinces of Nova Scotia and British Columbia, the Yukon Territory, the Northwest Territories and Nunavut, a judge of the Supreme Court, and
- (f) in the Provinces of Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland, a judge of the Trial Division of the Supreme Court. R.S., c. N-1, s. 11; 1972, c. 17, s. 2; 1974-75-76, c. 48, s. 25; 1978-79, c. 11, s. 10; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (2nd Supp.), s. 10; 1990, c. 16, s. 18; 1990, c. 17, s. 36; 1992, c. 1, s. 98; 1992, c. 51, s. 59.

DIRECTION FOR RESTORATION OR PAYMENT.

19. The Minister of Supply and Services or the Attorney General or the Solicitor General of the province, as the case may be, shall, on application made to that Minister or to the Attorney General or the Solicitor General of the province by any person who has obtained a final order under section 17, direct that the conveyance to which the interest of the applicant relates be returned to the applicant or that an amount equal to the value of that interest, as declared in the order, be paid to the applicant. R.S., c. N-1, s. 11; 1993, c. 37, s. 28.

ANNOTATIONS

The Judge who made a forfeiture order under this section has jurisdiction to subsequently set the order aside: Re R. and Breckner et al.; Re R. and Wright et al. (1983), 6 C.C.C. (3d) 42 (B.C.C.A.).

Proceeds of Crime

POSSESSION OF PROPERTY OBTAINED BY CERTAIN OFFENCES / Punishment.

19.1 (1) No person shall possess any property or any proceeds of any property knowing that all or part of the property or of those proceeds was obtained or derived directly or indirectly as a result of

- (a) the commission in Canada of an offence under section 4, 5 or 6; or
- (b) an act or omission anywhere that, if it had occurred in Canada, would have constituted an offence under section 4, 5 or 6.

(2) Every person who contravenes subsection (1)

- (a) is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years, where the value of the subject-matter of the offence exceeds one thousand dollars; or
- (b) is guilty
  - (i) of an indictable offence and liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, or
  - (ii) of an offence punishable on summary conviction, where the value of the subject-matter of the offence does not exceed one thousand dollars. R.S.C. 1985, c. 42 (4th Supp.), s. 12.

ANNOTATIONS

In R. v. Tortone, [1993] 2 S.C.R. 973, 84 C.C.C. (3d) 15, 156 N.R. 241 the accused was charged in several counts with possession of certain specified amounts and then in a "global" count covering all of the moneys. Where the Crown had proven beyond a reasonable doubt that at least one of those transactions involved the proceeds of narcotic trafficking, it was open to the judge to convict on the global count although the judge could not identify which of the transactions particularized in the various other counts involved proceeds of narcotic trafficking.

An accused may be convicted of this offence and the offence of trafficking in narcotics although both offences arise out of the same transaction: R. v. Khouri (1995), 97 C.C.C. (3d) 223, 95 W.A.C. 32, 131 Sask. R. 32 (C.A.); R. v. Falahatchian (1995), 99 C.C.C. (3d) 420, 83 O.A.C. 55 (C.A.).

LAUNDERING PROCEEDS OF CERTAIN OFFENCES / Punishment.

19.2 (1) No person shall use, transfer the possession of, send or deliver to any person or place, transport, transmit, alter, dispose of or otherwise deal with, in any manner and by any means, any property or any proceeds of any property with intent to conceal or convert that property or those proceeds and knowing that all or a part of that property or of those proceeds was obtained or derived directly or indirectly as a result of

- (a) the commission in Canada of an offence under section 4, 5 or 6; or
- (b) an act or omission anywhere that, if it had occurred in Canada, would have constituted an offence under section 4, 5 or 6.

(2) Every person who contravenes subsection (1)

- (a) is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years; or
- (b) is guilty of an offence punishable on summary conviction. R.S.C. 1985, c. 42 (4th Supp.), s. 12.

ANNOTATIONS

Mens Rea – The Crown must show that the accused has specific knowledge that the origin of the property is an offence under ss. 4, 5, or 6 of the Act. Wilful "ignorance" or "blindness" equals actual knowledge where the accused has suspicions as to the origin and refuses to eliminate his suspicions, preferring to remain in ignorance: R. v. Hayes (1995), 104 C.C.C. (3d) 316 (Que. C.A.).

PART XII.2 OF THE CRIMINAL CODE APPLICABLE / Idem.

19.3 (1) Sections 462.3 and 462.32 to 462.5 of the Criminal Code apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, in respect of proceedings for

- (a) an offence under section 4, 5, 6, 19.1 or 19.2; or
- (b) a conspiracy or an attempt to commit, being an accessory after the fact in relation to, or any counselling in relation to, an offence referred to in paragraph (a).

(2) For the purposes of subsection (1),

- (a) a reference in section 462.37 or 462.38 or subsection 462.41(2) of the Criminal Code to an enterprise crime offence shall be deemed to be a reference to an offence mentioned in paragraph (1)(a) or (b); and
- (b) a reference, in relation to the manner in which forfeited property is to be disposed of, in subsection 462.37(1) or 462.38(2), paragraph 462.43(c) or section 462.5 of the Criminal Code, to the Attorney General shall be deemed to be a reference to
  - (i) where the prosecution of the offence in respect of which the thing was forfeited was commenced at the instance of the government of a province and conducted by or on behalf of that government, the Attorney General or Solicitor General of that province; and
  - (ii) in any other case, the Minister of Supply and Services. R.S.C. 1985, c. 42 (4th Supp.), s. 12.

REGULATIONS.

20. The Governor in Council may make regulations

- (a) providing for the issue of licences for the importation, export, sale, manufacture, production or distribution of narcotics and for the cultivation of opium poppy or marihuana;
- (b) prescribing the form, duration and terms and conditions of any licence described in paragraph (a) and the fees payable therefor, and providing for the cancellation and suspension of licences described in that paragraph;
- (c) authorizing the sale or possession of or other dealing in narcotics and prescribing the circumstances and conditions under which, and the persons by whom, narcotics may be sold, had in possession or otherwise dealt in;
- (d) requiring physicians, dentists, veterinarians, pharmacists and other persons who deal in narcotics as authorized by this Act or the regulations to keep records and make returns;
- (e) authorizing the communication of any information obtained under this Act or the regulations to provincial professional licensing authorities;
- (f) prescribing the punishment by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars or imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, or both, to be imposed on summary conviction for breach of any regulation; and
- (g) generally, for carrying out the purposes and provisions of this Act. R.S., c. N-1, s. 12.

DESIGNATION OF ANALYST.

21. The Minister may designate any person as an analyst for the purpose of this Act. R.S., c. N-1, s. 13; 1984, c. 40, s. 45.

AMENDMENT OF SCHEDULE.

22. The Governor in Council may amend the schedule by adding thereto or deleting therefrom any substance, the inclusion or exclusion of which, as the case may be, is deemed necessary by the Governor in Council in the public interest. R.S., c. N-1, s. 14.

Part II / PREVENTIVE DETENTION AND CUSTODY FOR TREATMENT

Note: Pursuant to section 28, this Part of the Act is expressed to come into force on proclamation. At the time of going to press no proclamation has yet been made.

SENTENCE OF PREVENTIVE DETENTION.

23. Where a person is convicted of an offence under section 4 or 5, the court shall, if that person

(a) has been previously convicted on at least one separate and independent occasion of an offence under section 4 or 5 of this Act or an offence under subsection 4(3) of the Opium and Narcotic Drug Act, chapter 201 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952, or

(b) has been previously sentenced to preventive detention under this section, impose a sentence of preventive detention in a penitentiary for an indeterminate period, in lieu of any other sentence that might be imposed for the offence of which that person was convicted. R.S., c. N-1, s. 15.

REMAND FOR OBSERVATION AND EXAMINATION.

24. Where any person is charged with an offence under section 3, 4 or 5, the court or any judge having jurisdiction to try the offence may, on application by counsel for the Crown, or on application by the person charged with the offence or by counsel for that person, either before or after that person is committed for trial and before any sentence that might be imposed for the offence is passed, remand that person, by order in writing, to such custody as the court directs for observation and examination for a period not exceeding seven days. R.S., c. N-1, s. 16.

CONVICTION AFTER REMAND / Sentence to custody for treatment / Appeal / Application of Criminal Code.

25. (1) Where a person who has been remanded to custody for observation and examination pursuant to section 24 is convicted of the offence in respect of which the person was remanded, the court shall, before passing sentence, consider the evidence arising out of the observation and examination, including the evidence of at least one duly qualified medical practitioner and such other evidence as may be adduced.

(2) Where the court is satisfied, on consideration of such evidence under subsection (1), that the convicted person is a narcotic addict, the court shall, notwithstanding anything in section 23, sentence that person to custody for treatment for an indeterminate period in lieu of any other sentence that might be imposed for the offence of which that person was convicted.

(3) A person who is sentenced to custody for treatment for an indeterminate period under this section may appeal to the court of appeal against the sentence on any ground of law or fact or mixed law and fact.

(4) The provisions of section 759 of the Criminal Code with respect to appeals against a sentence of detention in a penitentiary for an indeterminate period apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, to an appeal under this section. R.S., c. N-1, s. 17.

CONFINEMENT FOR TREATMENT / Application of Corrections and Conditional Release Act / Expiration of sentence.

26. (1) Where a person is sentenced to custody for treatment for an indeterminate period, the person shall be confined for treatment in an institution maintained and operated pursuant to the Corrections and Conditional Release Act.

(2) A person who is sentenced to custody for treatment for an indeterminate period is subject to the Corrections and Conditional Release Act and, for all purposes of that Act, shall be deemed, during the period of confinement of that person, to be an inmate within the meaning of that Act, and on release under certificate of the Parole Board, to be a paroled inmate within the meaning of that Act.

(3) A sentence of custody for treatment for an indeterminate period, where the person so sentenced has not, at any time before the conviction resulting in the sentence, been convicted of an offence under this Act or the Opium and Narcotic Drug Act, chapter 201 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952, expires at the end of such period, not exceeding ten years after the date of the person's release under certificate of the Parole Board, as may be fixed by the Parole Board, unless before that time the person's parole is forfeited or revoked. R.S., c. N-1, s. 18; 1992, c. 20, ss. 215, 216.

AGREEMENT WITH PROVINCE / Idem.

27. (1) Where the legislature of a province enacts legislation that is designed to provide custody for treatment for persons who, although not charged with the offence of possession of a narcotic, are narcotic addicts, the Minister may enter into an agreement with the province, subject to the approval of the Governor in Council, for the confinement and treatment of those persons in institutions maintained and operated pursuant to the Corrections and Conditional Release Act and for the release and supervision of those persons pursuant to the Corrections and Conditional Release Act.

(2) A narcotic addict who is committed to custody for treatment pursuant to an Act of the legislature of a province shall be deemed, for the purposes of the Corrections and Conditional Release Act, to have been sentenced to custody for treatment under this Act. R.S., c. N-1, s. 19; 1992, c. 20, ss. 215, 216.

ANNOTATIONS

The treatment programme for persons addicted to heroin, opium and methadone established by the British Columbia Legislature in the Heroin Treatment Act, 1978 and which provides for compulsory treatment for a period of three years including possible detention for six months or more is intra vires the province. The problem of heroin addiction is largely a local or provincial problem in British Columbia and is distinct from the illegal trade in drugs which is a matter over which Parliament has jurisdiction. The medical treatment of drug addiction is a bona fide concern of the province under its general jurisdiction with respect to public health. As this Part of the Narcotic Control Act has not been proclaimed no question of paramountcy arose: Schneider v. The Queen (1982), 68 C.C.C. (2d) 449, 139 D.L.R. (3d) 417, [1982] 6 W.W.R. 673, [1982] 2 S.C.R. 112 (9:0).

Coming into Force

COMING INTO FORCE.

28. Part II or any provision thereof shall come into force on a day or days to be fixed by proclamation of the Governor in Council.

SCHEDULE

As amended to September 30, 1993

1. Opium Poppy (Papaver somniferum) its preparations, derivatives, alkaloids and salts, including:

- (1) Opium,
- (2) Codeine (Methylmorphine),
- (3) Morphine,
- (4) Thebaine,

and their preparations, derivatives, and salts, including:

- (5) Acetorphine,
- (6) Acetyldihydrocodeine,
- (7) Benzylmorphine,
- (8) Codoxime,
- (9) Desomorphine (dihydrodeoxymorphine),
- (10) Diacetylmorphine (heroin),
- (11) Dihydrocodeine,
- (12) Dihydromorphine,
- (13) Ethylmorphine,
- (14) Etorphine,
- (15) Hydrocodone (dihydrocodeinone),
- (16) Hydromorphone (dihydromorphinone),
- (17) Hydromorphenol (dihydro-14-hydroxymorphine),
- (18) Methyldesorphine ( $\Delta^6$ -deoxy-6-methylmorphine),
- (19) Methyldihydromorphine (dihydro-6-methylmorphine),
- (20) Metopon (dihydromethylmorphinone),
- (21) Morphine-N-oxide (morphine-N-oxide),
- (22) Myrophine (benzylmorphine myristate),
- (23) Nalorphine (N-allylnormorphine),
- (24) Nicocodine (6-nicotinylcodeine),
- (25) Nicomorphine (dinicotinylmorphine),

- (26) Norcodeine,
- (27) Normorphine,
- (28) Oxycodone (dihydrohydroxycodone),
- (29) Oxymorphone (dihydrohydroxymorphine),
- (30) Pholcodine ( $\beta$ -4-morpholinoethylmorphine), and
- (31) Thebacon (acetyldihydrocodeinone),

but not including:

- (32) Apomorphine,
- (33) Cyprenorphine,
- (34) Naloxone,
- (35) Narcotine,
- (36) Papaverine, and
- (37) Poppy seed.

2. Coca (Erythroxylon), its preparations, derivatives, alkaloids and salts, including:

- (1) Coca leaves,
- (2) Cocaine, and
- (3) Ecgonine (3-hydroxy-2-tropane carboxylic acid).

3. Cannabis sativa, its preparations, derivatives and similar synthetic preparations, including:

- (1) Cannabis resin,
- (2) Cannabis (marihuana),
- (3) Cannabidiol,
- (4) Cannabinol (3-n-amyl-6,6,9-trimethyl-6-dibenzopyran-1-ol),
- (4.1) Nabilone (( $\pm$ ) - trans - 3 (1,1 - dimethylheptyl) - 6, 6a, 7, 8, 10, 10a-hexahydro-1-hydroxy-6,6-dimethyl-9h-dibenzo[b,d] pyran-9-one),
- (5) Pyrahexyl (3-n-hexyl-6,6,9-trimethyl-7,8,9,10-tetrahydro-6dibenzopyran-1-ol), and
- (6) Tetrahydrocannabinol.

but not including:

- (7) non-viable Cannabis seed.

4. Phenylpiperidines, their preparations, intermediates, derivatives and salts, including:

- (1) Allyprodine (3-allyl-1-methyl-4-phenyl-4-piperidyl propionate),
- (2) Alphameprodine ( $\alpha$ -3-ethyl-1-methyl-4-phenyl-4-piperidyl propionate),
- (3) Alphaprodine ( $\alpha$ -1,3-dimethyl-4-phenyl-4-piperidyl propionate),
- (4) Anileridine (ethyl 1-[2-(p-aminophenyl) ethyl]-4-phenylpiperidine-4-carboxylate),
- (5) Betameprodine ( $\beta$ -3-ethyl-1-methyl-4-phenyl-4-piperidyl propionate),
- (6) Betaprodine ( $\beta$ -1,3-dimethyl-4-phenyl-4-piperidyl propionate),
- (7) Benzethidine (ethyl 1-(2-benzyloxyethyl)-4-phenylpiperidine-4-carboxylate),
- (8) Diphenoxylate (ethyl 1-(3-cyano-3,3-diphenylpropyl)-4-phenylpiperidine-4-carboxylate),
- (9) Etoxeridine (ethyl 1-[2-(2-hydroxyethoxy) ethyl]-4-phenylpiperidine-4-carboxylate),
- (10) Furethidine (ethyl 1-(2-tetrahydrofurfuryloxyethyl)-4-phenylpiperidine-4-carboxylate),
- (11) Hydroxypethidine (ethyl 4-(m-hydroxyphenyl)-1-methyl-4-phenylpiperidine-4-carboxylate),
- (12) Ketobemidone (1-[4-(m-hydroxyphenyl)-1-methyl-4-piperidyl]-1-propanone),
- (13) Methylphenylisonipecotonitrile (4-cyano-1-methyl-4-phenylpiperidine),
- (14) Morpheridine (ethyl 1-(2-morpholinoethyl)-4-phenylpiperidine-4-carboxylate),
- (15) Norpethidine (ethyl 4-phenylpiperidine-4-carboxylate),

- (16) Pethidine (ethyl 1-methyl-4-phenylpiperidine-4-carboxylate),
(17) Phenoperidine (ethyl 1-(3-hydroxy-3-phenylpropyl)-4-phenylpiperidine-4-carboxylate),
(18) Piminodine (ethyl 1-[3-(phenylamino)propyl]-4-phenylpiperidine-4-carboxylate),
(19) Properidine (isopropyl 1-methyl-4-phenylpiperidine-4-carboxylate), and
(20) Trimeperidine (1,2-5-trimethyl-4-phenyl-4-piperidyl propionate),
but not including:
(21) Carbamethidine (ethyl 1-(2-carbamylethyl)-4-phenylpiperidine-4-carboxylate), and
(22) Oxpheneridine (ethyl 1-(2-hydroxy-2-phenylethyl)-4-phenylpiperidine-4-carboxylate).
5. Phenazepines, their preparations, derivatives and salts, including:
(1) Proheptazine (hexahydro-1,3-dimethyl-4-phenyl-4-azepinyl propionate),
but not including:
(2) Ethoheptazine (ethyl hexahydro-1-methyl-4-phenylazepine-4-carboxylate),
(3) Metethoheptazine (ethyl hexahydro-1,3-dimethyl-4-phenylazepine-4-carboxylate),
and
(4) Metheptazine (ethyl hexahydro-1,2-dimethyl-4-phenylazepine-4-carboxylate).
6. Amidones, their preparations, intermediates, derivatives and salts, including:
(1) Dimethylaminodiphenylbutanonitrile (4-cyano-2-dimethylamino-4,4-diphenyl butane),
(2) Dipipanone (4,4-diphenyl-6-piperidino-3-heptanone),
(3) Isomethadone (6-dimethylamino-5-methyl-4,4-diphenyl-3-hexanone),
(4) Methadone (6-dimethylamino-4,4-diphenyl-3-heptanone),
(5) Normethadone (6-dimethylamino-4,4-diphenyl-3-hexanone), and
(6) Phenadoxone (6-morpholino-4,4-diphenyl-3-heptanone).
7. Methadols, their preparations, derivatives and salts, including:
(1) Acetylmethadol (6-dimethylamino-4,4-diphenyl-3-heptanyl acetate),
(2) Alphacetylmethadol ( $\alpha$ -6-dimethylamino-4,4-diphenyl-3-heptanyl acetate),
(3) Alphamethadol ( $\alpha$ -6-dimethylamino-4,4-diphenyl-3-heptanol),
(4) Betacetylmethadol ( $\beta$ -6-dimethylamino-4,4-diphenyl-3-heptanyl acetate),
(5) Betamethadol ( $\beta$ -6-dimethylamino-4,4-diphenyl-3-heptanol),
(6) Dimepheptanol (6-dimethylamino-4,4-diphenyl-3-heptanol), and
(7) Noracymethadol ( $\alpha$ -6-methylamino-4,4-diphenyl-3-heptanyl acetate).
8. Phenalkoxams, their preparations, derivatives and salts, including:
(1) Dimenoxadol (dimethylaminoethyl 1-ethoxy-1,1-diphenylacetate),
(2) Dioxaphetylbutyrate (ethyl 2,2-diphenyl-4-morpholino butyrate), and
(3) Dextropropoxyphene ([S-(R\*,S\*)]- $\alpha$ -[2-(dimethylamino)-1methylethyl]- $\alpha$ -phenyl-benzeneethanol, propanoate ester).
9. Thiambutenes, their preparations, derivatives and salts, including:
(1) Diethylthiambutene (N,N-diethyl-1-methyl-3,3-di-2-thienylallylamine),
(2) Dimethylthiambutene (N,N,1-trimethyl-3,3-di-2-thienylallylamine), and
(3) Ethylmethylthiambutene (N-ethyl-N,1-dimethyl-3,3-di-2-thienylallylamine).
10. Moramides, their preparations, intermediates, derivatives and salts, including:
(1) Dextromoramide (d-1-(3-methyl-4-morpholino-2,2-diphenylbutyryl) pyrrolidine),
(2) Diphenylmorpholinoisovaleric acid (2-methyl-3-morpholino-1,1-diphenylpropionic acid),

- (3) Levomoramide (l-1-(3-methyl-4-morpholino-2,2-diphenylbutyryl) pyrrolidine), and
  - (4) Racemoramide (d,l-1-(3-methyl-4-morpholino-2,2-diphenylbutyryl) pyrrolidine).
11. Morphinans, their preparations, derivatives and salts, including:
- (1) Levomethorphan (l-1,2,3,9,10,10a-hexahydro-6-methoxy-11-methyl-4H-10,4a-iminoethanophenanthrene),
  - (2) Levorphanol (l-1,2,3,9,10,10a-hexahydro-11-methyl-4H-10, 4a-iminoethanophenanthren-6-ol),
  - (3) Levophenacylmorphan (l-1,2,3,9,10,10a-hexahydro-11-phenacyl-4H-10,4a-iminoethanophenanthren-6-ol),
  - (4) Norlevorphanol (l-1,2,3,9,10,10a-hexahydro-4H-10,4a-iminoethanophenanthren-6-ol),
  - (5) Phenomorphan (d,l-1,2,3,9,10,10a-hexahydro-11-phenethyl-4H-10,4a-iminoethanophenanthren-6-ol),
  - (6) Racemethorphan (d,l-1,2,3,9,10,10a-hexahydro-6-methoxy-11-methyl-4H-10,4a-iminoethanophenanthrene), and
  - (7) Racemorphan (d,l-1,2,3,9,10,10a-hexahydro-11-methyl-4H-10,4a-iminoethanophenanthren-6-ol),
- but not including:
- (8) Dextromethorphan (d-1,2,3,9,10,10a-hexahydro-6-methoxy-11-methyl-4H-10,4a-iminoethanophenanthrene),
  - (9) Dextrorphan (d-1,2,3,9,10,10a-hexahydro-11-methyl-4H-10, 4a-iminoethanophenanthren-6-ol),
  - (10) Levallorphan (l-11-allyl-1,2,3,9,10,10a-hexahydro-4H-10, 4a-iminoethanophenanthren-6-ol),
  - (11) Levargorphan (l-11-propargyl-1,2,3,9,10,10a-hexahydro-4H-10,4a-iminoethanophenanthren-6-ol),
  - (12) Butorphanol and its salts, and
  - (13) Nalbuphine (17-(cyclobutylmethyl)-4,5 $\alpha$ -epoxymorphinan-3, 6 $\alpha$ ,14-triol).
12. Benzazocines, their preparations, derivatives and salts, including:
- (1) Phenazocine (1,2,3,4,5,6-hexahydro-6,11-dimethyl-3-phenethyl-2,6-methano-3-benzazocin-8-ol),
  - (2) Metazocine (1,2,3,4,5,6-hexahydro-3,6,11-trimethyl-2,6-methano-3-benzazocin-8-ol), and
  - (3) Pentazocine (1,2,3,4,5,6-hexahydro-6,11-dimethyl-3-(3-methyl-2-butenyl)-2,6-methano-3-benzazocin-8-ol),
- but not including:
- (4) Cyclazocine (1,2,3,4,5,6-hexahydro-6-11-dimethyl-3-(cyclopropylmethyl)-2,6-methano-3-benzazocin-8-ol).
13. Ampromides, their preparations, derivatives and salts, including:
- (1) Diampromide (N-[2-(methylphenethylamino)-propyl]-propionanilide),
  - (2) Phenampromide (N-[2-(1-methyl-2-piperidyl)-ethyl]-propionanilide),
  - (3) Propiram (N-(1-methyl-2-piperidinoethyl)-N-2-pyridylpropionamide).
14. Benzimidazoles, their preparations, derivatives and salts, including:
- (1) Clonitazene (2-(p-chlorobenzyl)-1-diethylaminoethyl-5-nitrobenzimidazole), and
  - (2) Etonitazene (2-(p-ethoxybenzyl)-1-diethylaminoethyl-5-nitrobenzimidazole).
15. Phencyclidine, its salts and derivatives.

16. Fentanyl (1-phenylethyl-4-(phenylpropionylamino)-piperidine), its salts and derivatives.
17. Sufentanil (N-[4-(methoxymethyl)-1-[2-(2-thienyl) ethyl]-4piperidinyl]-N-phenylpropanamide), its salts and derivatives.
18. Tilidine (3-cyclohexene-1-carboxylic acid, 2-(dimethylamino)-1-phenylethyl ester, trans ( $\pm$ )), its preparations, derivatives and salts.
19. Carfentanil (methyl 4-[(1-oxopropyl)phenylamino]-1-(2phenylethyl)-4-piperidine-carboxylate), its salts and derivatives.
20. Alfentanil (N-[1-[2-(4-ethyl-4,5-dihydro-5-oxo-1H-tetrazol-yl)ethyl]-4-(methoxymethyl)-4-piperidinyl]-N-phenylpropanamide), its salts and derivatives.

An Act respecting young offenders

SHORT TITLE

---

SHORT TITLE.

1. This Act may be cited as the Young Offenders Act. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 1.

INTERPRETATION

DEFINITIONS / "adult" / "alternative measures" / "child" / "disposition" / "offence" / "ordinary court" / "parent" / "pre-disposition report" / "progress report" / "provincial director" / "review board" / "young person" / "youth court" / "youth court judge" / "youth worker" / Words and expressions.

2. (1) In this Act,

"adult" means a person who is neither a young person nor a child;

"alternative measures" means measures other than judicial proceedings under this Act used to deal with a young person alleged to have committed an offence;

"child" means a person who is or, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, appears to be under the age of twelve years;

“disposition” means a disposition made under section 20 or sections 28 to 32 and includes a confirmation or a variation of a disposition;

NOTE: Definition “disposition” replaced 1995, c. 39, s. 177 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

“disposition” means a disposition made under any of sections 20, 20.1 and 28 to 32, and includes a confirmation or a variation of a disposition;

“offence” means an offence created by an Act of Parliament or by any regulation, rule, order, by-law or ordinance made thereunder other than an ordinance of the Yukon Territory or the Northwest Territories;

NOTE: Definition “offence” re-enacted 1993, c. 28, s. 78 (to come into force April 1, 1999). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

“offence” means an offence created by an Act of Parliament or by any regulation, rule, order, by-law or ordinance made thereunder, other than an ordinance of the Yukon Territory or the Northwest Territories or a law made by the Legislature for Nunavut or continued by section 29 of the Nunavut Act.

“ordinary court” means the court that would, but for this Act, have jurisdiction in respect of an offence alleged to have been committed;

“parent” includes, in respect of another person, any person who is under a legal duty to provide for that other person or any person who has, in law or in fact, the custody or control of that other person, but does not include a person who has the custody or control of that other person by reason only of proceedings under this Act;

“pre-disposition report” means a report on the personal and family history and present environment of a young person made in accordance with section 14;

“progress report” means a report made in accordance with section 28 on the performance of a young person against whom a disposition has been made;

“provincial director” means a person, a group or class of persons or a body appointed or designated by or pursuant to an Act of the legislature of a province or by the Lieutenant Governor in Council of a province or his delegate to perform in that province, either generally or in a specific case, any of the duties or functions of a provincial director under this Act;

“review board” means a review board established or designated by a province for the purposes of section 30;

“young person” means a person who is or, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, appears to be twelve years of age or more, but under eighteen years of age and, where the context requires, includes any person who is charged under this Act with having committed an offence while he was a young person or is found guilty of an offence under this Act;

“youth court” means a court established or designated by or under an Act of the legislature of a province, or designated by the Governor in Council or the Lieutenant Governor in Council of a province, as a youth court for the purposes of this Act;

“youth court judge” means a person appointed to be a judge of a youth court;

“youth worker” means a person appointed or designated, whether by title of youth worker or probation officer or by any other title, by or pursuant to an Act of the legislature of a province or by the Lieutenant Governor in Council of a province or his delegate, to perform, either generally or in a specific case, in that province any of the duties or functions of a youth worker under this Act.

(2) Unless otherwise provided, words and expressions used in this Act have the same meaning as in the Criminal Code. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 2; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 1.

ANNOTATIONS

An accused who, following his 18th birthday, fails to comply with a disposition made by the youth court is no longer a young person and the offence contrary to s. 26 is properly tried in adult court: R. v. M.(R.E.) (1988), 46 C.C.C. (3d) 315 (B.C.S.C.).

Youth court judge – A duly appointed Provincial Court Judge with authority to preside over a court designated by provincial legislation as a youth court has been “appointed” to be a judge of a youth court within the meaning of this section: R. v. N (1984), 12 C.C.C. (3d) 350 (Ont. H.C.J.); R. v. L (1984), 13 C.C.C. (3d) 148 (B.C.S.C.).

The justice of the peace court, having been designated a youth court pursuant to the Territorial Court Act (Y.T.), a justice of the peace in the Yukon Territory has the power to conduct the trial of a young offender under this Act: R. v. G.(A.P.) (1990), 57 C.C.C. (3d) 496 (Y.T.C.A.).

The practice in Ontario of having offenders aged 16 and 17 years tried by provincial court judges who ordinarily sit in the criminal division rather than the family division, as is the case with offenders aged 16, does not offend s. 15 of the Charter of Rights. All the judges are qualified to sit as judges in the youth court and to hear cases involving offenders of all ages: R. v. C. (R.) (1987), 56 C.R. (3d) 185 (Ont. C.A.).

It is open to the Lieutenant-Governor in Council to designate the Provincial Court as the Youth Court, although that court is not presided over by judges appointed under s. 96 of the Constitution Act, 1867: Reference re Young Offenders Act, s. 2 (P.E.I.) (1991), 62 C.C.C. (3d) 385, 77 D.L.R. (4th) 492, 121 N.R. 81 (S.C.C.) (7:0).

And it is open to the Lieutenant Governor to designate the Court of Queen’s Bench, Family Division as a youth court and a judge of that court as a youth court judge: Reference re Young Offenders Act (P.E.I.), supra.

POWERS, DUTIES AND FUNCTIONS OF PROVINCIAL DIRECTORS.

2.1 Any power, duty or function of a provincial director under this Act may be exercised or performed by any person authorized by the provincial director to do so and, if so exercised or performed, shall be deemed to have been exercised or performed by the provincial director. R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 2.

DECLARATION OF PRINCIPLE

POLICY FOR CANADA WITH RESPECT TO YOUNG OFFENDERS / Act to be liberally construed.

3. (1) It is hereby recognized and declared that

- (a) crime prevention is essential to the long-term protection of society and requires addressing the underlying causes of crime by young persons and developing multi-disciplinary approaches to identifying and effectively responding to children and young persons at risk of committing offending behaviour in the future;
- (a.1) while young persons should not in all instances be held accountable in the same manner or suffer the same consequences for their behaviour as adults, young persons who commit offences should nonetheless bear responsibility for their contraventions;

- (b) society must, although it has the responsibility to take reasonable measures to prevent criminal conduct by young persons, be afforded the necessary protection from illegal behaviour;
  - (c) young persons who commit offences require supervision, discipline and control, but, because of their state of dependency and level of development and maturity, they also have special needs and require guidance and assistance;
  - (c.1) the protection of society, which is a primary objective of the criminal law applicable to youth, is best served by rehabilitation, wherever possible, of young persons who commit offences, and rehabilitation is best achieved by addressing the needs and circumstances of a young person that are relevant to the young person's offending behaviour;
  - (d) where it is not inconsistent with the protection of society, taking no measures or taking measures other than judicial proceedings under this Act should be considered for dealing with young persons who have committed offences;
  - (e) young persons have rights and freedoms in their own right, including those stated in the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms or in the Canadian Bill of Rights, and in particular a right to be heard in the course of, and to participate in, the processes that lead to decisions that affect them, and young persons should have special guarantees of their rights and freedoms;
  - (f) in the application of this Act, the rights and freedoms of young persons include a right to the least possible interference with freedom that is consistent with the protection of society, having regard to the needs of young persons and the interests of their families;
  - (g) young persons have the right, in every instance where they have rights or freedoms that may be affected by this Act, to be informed as to what those rights and freedoms are; and
  - (h) parents have responsibility for the care and supervision of their children, and, for that reason, young persons should be removed from parental supervision either partly or entirely only when measures that provide for continuing parental supervision are inappropriate.
- (2) This Act shall be liberally construed to the end that young persons will be dealt with in accordance with the principles set out in subsection (1). 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 3; 1995, c. 19, s. 1.

ANNOTATIONS

Neither this section nor s. 19 of the Act gives the youth court the jurisdiction to dismiss a charge, where the elements of the offence are otherwise made out, because the court is of the view that the offence is a minor one which should have been left to the discipline of the parent or guardian: R. v. T.(V.) 71 C.C.C. (3d) 32, 12 C.R. (4th) 133, [1992] 1 S.C.R. 749.

It is appropriate for a judge sentencing a young offender to take into account the conduct of the accused in the interval between the time of the offence and the disposition, including involvement in other criminal activity. In particular, subsec. (1)(c) requires the sentencing judge to consider all circumstances bearing on the special needs of the young person and his requirements for guidance and assistance. While the presumption of innocence requires that subsequent offences not be used in relation to the punitive aspects of sentencing, the emphasis on rehabilitation permits the judge to consider all of the relevant background and conduct of the young person in order to fashion an appropriate and effective disposition: R. v. P.(T.M.) (unreported, February 13, 1996, B.C.C.A.) [096/054/001-19 pp.].

ALTERNATIVE MEASURES

ALTERNATIVE MEASURES / Restriction on use / Admissions not admissible in evidence / No bar to proceedings / Laying of information, etc.

4. (1) Alternative measures may be used to deal with a young person alleged to have committed an offence instead of judicial proceedings under this Act only if

- (a) the measures are part of a program of alternative measures authorized by the Attorney General or his delegate or authorized by a person, or a person within a class of persons, designated by the Lieutenant Governor in Council of a province;
- (b) the person who is considering whether to use such measures is satisfied that they would be appropriate, having regard to the needs of the young person and the interests of society;
- (c) the young person, having been informed of the alternative measures, fully and freely consents to participate therein;
- (d) the young person has, before consenting to participate in the alternative measures, been advised of his right to be represented by counsel and been given a reasonable opportunity to consult with counsel;
- (e) the young person accepts responsibility for the act or omission that forms the basis of the offence that he is alleged to have committed;
- (f) there is, in the opinion of the Attorney General or his agent, sufficient evidence to proceed with the prosecution of the offence; and
- (g) the prosecution of the offence is not in any way barred at law.

(2) Alternative measures shall not be used to deal with a young person alleged to have committed an offence if the young person

- (a) denies his participation or involvement in the commission of the offence; or
- (b) expresses his wish to have any charge against him dealt with by the youth court.

(3) No admission, confession or statement accepting responsibility for a given act or omission made by a young person alleged to have committed an offence as a condition of his being dealt with by alternative measures shall be admissible in evidence against him in any civil or criminal proceedings.

(4) The use of alternative measures in respect of a young person alleged to have committed an offence is not a bar to proceedings against him under this Act, but

- (a) where the youth court is satisfied on a balance of probabilities that the young person has totally complied with the terms and conditions of the alternative measures, the youth court shall dismiss any charge against him; and
- (b) where the youth court is satisfied on a balance of probabilities that the young person has partially complied with the terms and conditions of the alternative measures, the youth court may dismiss any charge against him if, in the opinion of the court, the prosecution of the charge would, having regard to the circumstances, be unfair, and the youth court may consider the young person's performance with respect to the alternative measures before making a disposition under this Act.

(5) Subject to subsection (4), nothing in this section shall be construed to prevent any person from laying an information, obtaining the issue or confirmation of any process or proceeding with the prosecution of any offence in accordance with law. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 4.

ANNOTATIONS

This section is intra vires Parliament, being a matter properly within the Criminal law power in s. 91(27) of the Constitution Act, 1867: R. v. S.(S.) (1990), 57 C.C.C. (3d) 115, [1990] 2 S.C.R. 254, 77 C.R. (3d) 273 (7:0).

There is no requirement that the authorities consider alternative measures in the case of every young offender. Further the offender is not entitled to a hearing and an opportunity to participate in and be heard when the authorities are in fact considering such measures: R. v. W. (T.) (1986), 25 C.C.C. (3d) 89 (Sask. Q.B.). Contra: R. v. B. (J.) (1985), 20 C.C.C. (3d) 67 (B.C. Prov. Ct.) where it was held that the young person is entitled to notice and to be present and represented by counsel when the authorities are considering alternative measures under this section.

Properly interpreted, this section does not require the province to establish a programme of alternative measures, and failure of the Attorney General to authorize alternative measures does not violate s. 15 of the Charter: R. v. S.(S.), supra. It follows that the fact that the programme in Ontario contains different entry requirements than the programmes established in other provinces does not violate s. 15, nor s. 7 of the Charter: R. v. S.(G.), supra.

JURISDICTION

EXCLUSIVE JURISDICTION OF YOUTH COURT / Period of limitation / Proceedings continued when adult / Powers of youth court judge / Court of record.

5. (1) Notwithstanding any other Act of Parliament but subject to the National Defence Act and section 16, a youth court has exclusive jurisdiction in respect of any offence alleged to have been committed by a person while he was a young person and any such person shall be dealt with as provided in this Act.

NOTE: Subsection (1) re-enacted by 1992, c. 47, s. 81 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The unproclaimed text, printed in lightface italics reads as follows:

5. (1) Notwithstanding any other Act of Parliament but subject to the Contraventions Act and the National Defence Act and section 16, a youth court has exclusive jurisdiction in respect of any offence alleged to have been committed by a person while a young person and any such person shall be dealt with as provided in this Act.

(2) No proceedings in respect of an offence shall be commenced under this Act after the expiration of the time limit set out in any other Act of Parliament or any regulation made thereunder for the institution of proceedings in respect of that offence.

(3) Proceedings commenced under this Act against a young person may be continued, after he becomes an adult, in all respects as if he remained a young person.

(4) A youth court judge, for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this Act, is a justice and a provincial court judge and has the jurisdiction and powers of a summary conviction court under the Criminal Code.

(5) A youth court is a court of record. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 5; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 203(1); c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 3.

ANNOTATIONS

Except for certain offences the age of the offender is not an element of the offence and need not be proved as part of the prosecution's case: R. v. R and C (1985), 23 C.C.C. (3d) 11, 49 C.R. (3d) 93 (B.C.C.A.); it is, however, open to the defence to raise the issue of the youth court's jurisdiction by providing proof that the accused is not a young offender: R. v. L (1984), 17 C.C.C. (3d) 335 (Ont. Prov. Ct.).

Neither the age of the offender nor the fact that he was a "young person" need be set out in the information: R. v. C.(S.A.) (1989), 47 C.C.C. (3d) 76, 92 A.R. 237 (C.A.).

A young offender who has been released on a recognizance but who breaches that recognizance after his 18th birthday is to be tried in adult court with breach of recognizance under the Criminal Code: R. v. Merrick (1987), 37 C.C.C. (3d) 285, 51 Man. R. (2d) 14 (Q.B.).

A person who at the age of 17 years committed an offence at a time prior to 1985 when the age limit for young offenders in the province was set at under 17 years of age is to be tried as an adult: R. v. Sampson (1993), 83 C.C.C. (3d) 149, 53 W.A.C. 106 (B.C.C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused 85 C.C.C. (3d) vi.

CERTAIN PROCEEDINGS MAY BE TAKEN BEFORE JUSTICES.

6. Any proceeding that may be carried out before a justice under the Criminal Code, other than a plea, a trial or an adjudication, may be carried out before such justice in respect of an offence alleged to have been committed by a young person, and any process that may be issued by a justice under the Criminal Code may be issued by such justice in respect of an offence alleged to have been committed by a young person. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 6; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 4.

DETENTION PRIOR TO DISPOSITION

---

DESIGNATED PLACE OF TEMPORARY DETENTION / Exception / Detention separate from adults / Transfer by provincial director / Exception relating to temporary detention / Authorization of provincial authority for detention / Determination by provincial authority of place of detention.

7. (1) A young person who is

- (a) arrested and detained prior to the making of a disposition in respect of the young person under section 20, or
  - (b) detained pursuant to a warrant issued under subsection 32(6)
- shall, subject to subsection (4), be detained in a place of temporary detention designated as such by the Lieutenant Governor in Council of the appropriate province or his delegate or in a place within a class of such places so designated.

(1.1) A young person who is detained in a place of temporary detention pursuant to subsection (1) may, in the course of being transferred from that place to the court or from the court to that place, be held under the supervision and control of a peace officer.

(2) A young person referred to in subsection (1) shall be held separate and apart from any adult who is detained or held in custody unless a youth court judge or a justice is satisfied that

- (a) the young person cannot, having regard to his own safety or the safety of others, be detained in a place of detention for young persons; or
- (b) no place of detention for young persons is available within a reasonable distance.

(3) A young person who is detained in custody in accordance with subsection (1) may, during the period of detention, be transferred by the provincial director from one place of temporary detention to another.

(4) Subsections (1) and (2) do not apply in respect of any temporary restraint of a young person under the supervision and control of a peace officer after arrest, but a young person who is so restrained shall be transferred to a place of temporary detention referred to in subsection (1) as soon as is reasonably practicable, and in no case later than the first reasonable opportunity after the appearance of the young person before a youth court judge or a justice pursuant to section 503 of the Criminal Code.

(5) In any province for which the Lieutenant Governor in Council has designated a person or a group of persons whose authorization is required, either in all circumstances or in circumstances specified by the Lieutenant Governor in Council, before a young person who has been arrested may be detained in accordance with this section, no young person shall be so detained unless the authorization is obtained.

(6) In any province of which the Lieutenant Governor in Council has designated a person or a group of persons who may determine the place where a young person who has been arrested may be detained in accordance with this section, no young person may be so detained in a place other than the one so determined. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 7; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 5.

ANNOTATIONS

Subsec. (1) – Once a young person has been ordered transferred to the ordinary courts pursuant to s. 16 then any order made under this Act for the offender's temporary detention loses its force and pursuant to s. 537 of the Criminal Code the offender would be remanded to prison: Re F and The Queen (1985), 20 C.C.C. (3d) 56 (Ont. H.C.J.).

Subsec. (2) – In R. v. P., [1979] 2 W.W.R. 262, 8 R.F.L. (2d) 277 (Man. Q.B.), the Court considered the comparable provision in the Juvenile Delinquents Act, s. 13(4) which permitted the confinement of a juvenile in a gaol or lock-up where he cannot otherwise "safely be confined". The Court considered that that phrase related to all the circumstances of the intended confinement: safety of the accused himself, safety of other persons sharing that confinement, safety of persons charged with his supervision, and safety of his associates in that area of confinement.

PLACEMENT OF YOUNG PERSON IN CARE OF RESPONSIBLE PERSON / Condition of placement / Removing young person from care / Order / Effect of arrest.

7.1 (1) Where a youth court judge or a justice is satisfied that

- (a) a young person who has been arrested would, but for this subsection, be detained in custody.
  - (b) a responsible person is willing and able to take care of and exercise control over the young person, and
  - (c) the young person is willing to be placed in the care of that person
- the young person may be placed in the care of that person instead of being detained in custody.

(2) A young person shall not be placed in the care of a person under subsection (1) unless

- (a) that person undertakes in writing to take care of and to be responsible for the attendance of the young person in court when required and to comply with such other conditions as the youth court judge or justice may specify; and
  - (b) the young person undertakes in writing to comply with the arrangement and to comply with such other conditions as the youth court judge or justice may specify.
- (3) Where a young person has been placed in the care of a person under subsection (1) and
- (a) that person is no longer willing or able to take care of or exercise control over the young person, or
  - (b) it is, for any other reason, no longer appropriate that the young person be placed in the care of that person,
- the young person, the person in whose care the young person has been placed or any other person may, by application in writing to a youth court judge or a justice, apply for an order under subsection (4).

(4) Where a youth court judge or a justice is satisfied that a young person should not remain in the custody of the person in whose care he was placed under subsection (1), the youth court judge or justice shall

- (a) make an order relieving the person and the young person of the obligations undertaken pursuant to subsection (2); and
- (b) issue a warrant for the arrest of the young person.

(5) Where a young person is arrested pursuant to a warrant issued under paragraph (4)(b), the young person shall be taken before a youth court judge or justice forthwith and dealt with under section 515 of the Criminal Code. R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 5.

OFFENCE AND PUNISHMENT.

7.2 Any person who wilfully fails to comply with section 7, or with an undertaking entered into pursuant to subsection 7.1(2), is guilty of an offence punishable on summary conviction. R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 5.

APPLICATION TO YOUTH COURT / Notice to prosecutor / Notice to young person / Waiver of notice / Application for review under section 520 or 521 of Criminal Code / Idem / Interim release by youth court judge only / Review by court of appeal.

8. (1) [Repealed. R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 6.]

(2) Where an order is made under section 515 of the Criminal Code in respect of a young person by a justice who is not a youth court judge, an application may, at any time after the order is made, be made to a youth court for the release from or detention in custody of the young person, as the case may be, and the youth court shall hear the matter as an original application.

(3) An application under subsection (2) for release from custody shall not be heard unless the young person has given the prosecutor at least two clear days notice in writing of the application.

(4) An application under subsection (2) for detention in custody shall not be heard unless the prosecutor has given the young person at least two clear days notice in writing of the application.

(5) The requirement for a notice under subsection (3) or (4) may be waived by the prosecutor or by the young person or his counsel, as the case may be.

(6) An application under section 520 or 521 of the Criminal Code for a review of an order made in respect of a young person by a youth court judge who is a judge of a superior, county or district court shall be made to a judge of the court of appeal.

(7) No application may be made under section 520 or 521 of the Criminal Code for a review of an order made in respect of a young person by a justice who is not a youth court judge.

(8) Where a young person against whom proceedings have been taken under this Act is charged with an offence referred to in section 522 of the Criminal Code, a youth court judge, but no other court, judge or justice, may release the young person from custody under that section.

(9) A decision made by a youth court judge under subsection (8) may be reviewed in accordance with section 680 of the Criminal Code and that section applies, with such modifications as the circumstances require, to any decision so made. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 8; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 6.

NOTICES TO PARENTS

NOTICE TO PARENT IN CASE OF ARREST / Notice to parent in case of summons or appearance notice / Notice to relative or other adult / Notice to spouse / Notice on direction of youth court judge or justice / Contents of notice / Service of notice / Proceedings not invalid / Exception / Where a notice not served.

9. (1) Subject to subsections (3) and (4), where a young person is arrested and detained in custody pending his appearance in court, the officer in charge at the time the young person is detained shall, as soon as possible, give or cause to be given, orally or in writing, to a parent of the young person notice of the arrest stating the place of detention and the reason for the arrest.

(2) Subject to subsections (3) and (4), where a summons or an appearance notice is issued in respect of a young person, the person who issued the summons or appearance notice, or, where a young person is released on giving his promise to appear or entering into a recognizance, the officer in charge, shall, as soon as possible, give or cause to be given, in writing, to a parent of the young person notice of the summons, appearance notice, promise to appear or recognizance.

NOTE: Subsection (2.1) enacted by 1992, c. 47, s. 82(1) (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The unproclaimed text, printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

Notice to parents in case of ticket.

(2.1) Subject to subsections (3) and (4), a person who serves a ticket under the Contraventions Act on a young person, other than a ticket served for a contravention relating to parking a vehicle, shall, as soon as possible, give or cause to be given notice in writing of the ticket to a parent of the young person.

(3) Where the whereabouts of the parents of a young person

(a) who is arrested and detained in custody,

(b) in respect of whom a summons or an appearance notice is issued, or

(c) who is released on giving his promise to appear or entering into a recognizance are not known or it appears that no parent is available, a notice under this section may be given to an adult relative of the young person who is known to the young person and is likely to assist him or, if no such adult relative is available, to such other adult who is known to the young person and is likely to assist him as the person giving the notice considers appropriate.

NOTE: Subsection (3) amended by 1992, c. 47, s. 82(2) (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council) by striking out the word "or" at the end of para. (b), by adding the word "or" at the end of para. (c), and by enacting new para. (d). The unproclaimed text of para. (d), printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

(d) on whom a ticket is served under the Contraventions Act, other than a ticket served for a contravention relating to parking a vehicle.

(4) Where a young person described in paragraph (3)(a), (b) or (c) is married, a notice under this section may be given to the spouse of the young person instead of a parent.

NOTE: Subsection (4) re-enacted by 1992, c. 47, s. 82(3) (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The unproclaimed text, printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

Notice of spouse.

(4) A notice under this section may be given to the spouse of a young person described in paragraph (3)(a), (b), (c) or (d) instead of to a parent.

(5) Where doubt exists as to the person to whom a notice under this section should be given, a youth court judge or, where a youth court judge is, having regard to the circumstances, not reasonably available, a justice may give directions as to the person to whom the notice should be given, and a notice given in accordance with those directions is sufficient notice for the purposes of this section.

(6) Any notice under this section shall, in addition to any other requirements under this section, include

- (a) the name of the young person in respect of whom it is given;
- (b) the charge against the young person and the time and place of appearance; and

NOTE: Paragraph (b) re-enacted by 1992, c. 47, s. 82(4) (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The unproclaimed text, printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

(b) the charge against the young person and, except in the case of a notice of a ticket served under the Contraventions Act, the time and place of appearance; and

- (c) a statement that the young person has the right to be represented by counsel.

NOTE: Subsection (6.1) enacted by 1992, c. 47, s. 82(5) (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The unproclaimed text, printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

Notice of ticket under Contravention Act.

(6.1) A notice under subsection (2.1) shall include a copy of the ticket.

(7) Subject to subsections (9) and (10), a notice under this section given in writing may be served personally or may be sent by mail.

(8) Subject to subsections (9) and (10), failure to give notice in accordance with this section does not affect the validity of proceedings under this Act.

(9) Failure to give notice under subsection (2) in accordance with this section in any case renders invalid any subsequent proceedings under this Act relating to the case unless

- (a) a parent of the young person against whom proceedings are held attends court with the young person; or
- (b) a youth court judge or a justice before whom proceedings are held against the young person
  - (i) adjourns the proceedings and orders that the notice be given in such manner and to such persons as the judge or justice directs, or
  - (ii) dispenses with the notice where the judge or justice is of the opinion that, having regard to the circumstances, the notice may be dispensed with.

(10) Where there has been a failure to give a notice under subsection (1) in accordance with this section and none of the persons to whom such notice may be given attends court with a young person, a youth court judge or a justice before whom proceedings are held against the young person may

NOTE: All that portion preceding para. (a) re-enacted by 1992, c. 47, s. 82(6) (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The unproclaimed text, printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

Where notice is not served.

(10) Where there has been a failure to give a notice under subsection (1) or (2.1) in accordance with this section and none of the persons to whom the notice may be given attends court with the young person, a youth court judge or a justice before whom proceedings are held against the young person may

- (a) adjourn the proceedings and order that the notice be given in such manner and to such persons as he directs; or
- (b) dispense with the notice where, in his opinion, having regard to the circumstances, notice may be dispensed with. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 9; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 7; 1991, c. 43, s. 31.

ANNOTATIONS

It was held in relation to s. 10 of the Juvenile Delinquents Act which required notice to the parents of a "child" that no proof of notice was required where by the time of the hearing in a juvenile Court the accused is no longer a "child": R. v. D.L.W., 1981, 64 C.C.C. (3d) 40, 14 Man. R. (2d) 268 (Q.B.), revid on other grounds 1 C.C.C. (3d) 288w, 18 Man. R. (2d) 377 (C.A.). On the other hand s. 2 of the Juvenile Delinquents Act contained a narrow definition of a "child" as a boy or girl actually or apparently under the age of 16 years. The more expansive definition of "young person" in s. 2(1) of this Act which "where the context requires" includes any person who is charged under the Act with having committed an offence while he was a young person, may dictate a different result.

In cases where the absence of notice could render the subsequent proceedings invalid the Crown should prove service of notice at the commencement of the proceedings. It is open to the court to point out to the Crown the failure to notify the parents about the proceedings: R. v. L (1984), 17 C.C.C. (3d) 335 (Ont. Prov. Ct.).

A motorist arrested for impaired driving and taken to a police station to comply with a breathalyzer demand is not detained "pending his appearance in court" within the meaning of subsec. (1) so as to require compliance with this section, since in the normal course following the administration of the test the offender would be released either on an appearance notice or with the intention of issuing him a summons in which case subsec. (2) would apply: R. v. R.W.T., 1986, 28 C.C.C. (3d) 193, 41 M.V.R. 72 (N.S.C.A.).

ORDER REQUIRING ATTENDANCE OF PARENT

Service of order Failure to attend Appeal Warrant to arrest parent.

10. (1) Where a parent does not attend proceedings before a youth court in respect of a young person, the court may, if in its opinion the presence of the parent is necessary or in the best interest of the young person, by order in writing require the parent to attend at any stage of the proceedings.

NOTE: Subsection (1) enacted by 1992, c. 47, s. 83 to come into force by order of the Governor in Council. The unproclaimed text, printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

No order in ticket proceedings.

(1.1) Subsection (1) does not apply in proceedings commenced by filing a ticket under the Contraventions Act.

(2) A copy of any order made under subsection (1) shall be served by a peace officer or by a person designated by a youth court by delivering it personally to the parent to whom it is directed, unless the youth court authorizes service by registered mail.

(3) A parent who is ordered to attend a youth court pursuant to subsection (1) and who fails without reasonable excuse, the proof of which lies on that parent, to comply with the order

(a) is guilty of contempt of court;

(b) may be dealt with summarily by the court; and

(c) is liable to the punishment provided for in the Criminal Code for a summary conviction offence.

4 Section 10 of the Criminal Code applies where a person is convicted of contempt of court under subsection (3).

(5) If a parent who is ordered to attend a youth court pursuant to subsection (1) does not attend at the time and place named in the order or fails to remain in attendance as required and it is proved that a copy of the order was served on the parent, a youth court may issue a warrant to compel the attendance of the parent. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 10; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 8.

(6) [Repealed. R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 8(2).]

RIGHT TO COUNSEL

RIGHT TO RETAIN COUNSEL / Arresting officer to advise young person of right to counsel / Justice, youth court or review board to advise young person of right to counsel / Trial, hearing or review before youth court or review board / Appointment of counsel / Release hearing before justice / Young person may be assisted by adult / Counsel independent of parents / Statement of right to counsel.

11. (1) A young person has the right to retain and instruct counsel without delay, and to exercise that right personally, at any stage of proceedings against the young person and prior to and during any consideration of whether, instead of commencing or continuing judicial proceedings against the young person under this Act, to use alternative measures to deal with the young person.

(2) Every young person who is arrested or detained shall, forthwith on his arrest or detention, be advised by the arresting officer or the officer in charge, as the case may be, of his right to be represented by counsel and shall be given an opportunity to obtain counsel.

(3) Where a young person is not represented by counsel

(a) at a hearing at which it will be determined whether to release the young person or detain him in custody prior to disposition of his case,

(b) at a hearing held pursuant to section 16,

(c) at his trial,

(c.1) at any proceedings held pursuant to subsection 26.1 (1), 26.2(1) or 26.6(1),

(d) at a review of a disposition held before a youth court or a review board under this Act, or

(e) at a review of the level of custody pursuant to subsection 28.1(1), the justice before whom, or the youth court or review board before which, the hearing, trial or review is held shall advise the young person of his right to be represented by counsel and shall give the young person a reasonable opportunity to obtain counsel.

(4) Where a young person at his trial or at a hearing or review referred to in subsection (3) wishes to obtain counsel but is unable to do so, the youth court before which the hearing, trial or review is held or the review board before which the review is held

(a) shall, where there is a legal aid or an assistance program available in the province where the hearing, trial or review is held, refer the young person to that program for the appointment of counsel; or

(b) where no legal aid or assistance program is available or the young person is unable to obtain counsel through such program, may, and on the request of the young person shall, direct that the young person be represented by counsel.

(5) Where a direction is made under paragraph (4)(b) in respect of a young person, the Attorney General of the province in which the direction is made shall appoint counsel, or cause counsel to be appointed, to represent the young person.

(6) Where a young person at a hearing before a justice who is not a youth court judge at which it will be determined whether to release the young person or detain him in custody prior to disposition of his case wishes to obtain counsel but is unable to do so, the justice shall

- (a) where there is a legal aid or an assistance program available in the province where the hearing is held,
  - (i) refer the young person to that program for the appointment of counsel, or
  - (ii) refer the matter to a youth court to be dealt with in accordance with paragraph (4)(a) or (b); or
- (b) where no legal aid or assistance program is available or the young person is unable to obtain counsel through such program, refer the matter to a youth court to be dealt with in accordance with paragraph (4)(b).

(7) Where a young person is not represented by counsel at his trial or at a hearing or review referred to in subsection (3), the justice before whom or the youth court or review board before which the proceedings are held may, on the request of the young person, allow the young person to be assisted by an adult whom the justice, court or review board considers to be suitable.

(8) In any case where it appears to a youth court judge or a justice that the interests of a young person and his parents are in conflict or that it would be in the best interest of the young person to be represented by his own counsel, the judge or justice shall ensure that the young person is represented by counsel independent of his parents.

(9) A statement that a young person has the right to be represented by counsel shall be included in

- (a) any appearance notice or summons issued to the young person;
- (b) any warrant to arrest the young person;
- (c) any promise to appear given by the young person;
- (d) any recognizance entered into before an officer in charge by the young person;
- (e) any notice given to the young person in relation to any proceedings held pursuant to subsection 26.1 (1), 26.2(1) or 26.6(1); or
- (f) any notice of a review of a disposition given to the young person. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 11; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 9; 1992, c. 11, s. 1; 1995, c. 19, s. 2.

ANNOTATIONS

The general right given an accused by subsec. (2) of this section now must yield to the specific requirements of s. 254(2) of the Criminal Code and a young offender need not be informed of his right to counsel prior to being required to comply with a demand under s. 254(2) to supply breath samples for analysis in a roadside screening device: R. v. Frohman; R. v. O. (M.C.) (1987), 35 C.C.C. (3d) 163, 56 C.R. (3d) 130, 41 D.L.R. (4th) 474 (Ont. C.A.).

The court has no discretion to decline to direct the employment of counsel where the young person has been unable to obtain legal aid. The youth court need only be satisfied that the young person wishes to obtain counsel and has been unable to do so because legal aid is not available. An affidavit to that effect, or in the alternative a simple inquiry into those facts alone would suffice. The court has no discretion to determine whether a young person should be provided with a lawyer out of public funds. The issue of payment for those services to be determined by provincial authorities: R. v. C. (S.T.); R. v. T. (D.M.) (1993), 81 C.C.C. (3d) 407, 140 A.R. 259 (Q.B.).

The power granted by subsec. (4)(a) does not include a power to direct legal aid to provide counsel for the young person. The purpose of s. 11(4)(a) is merely to refer the young person to determine a possibility of his being represented by legal aid counsel, taking into account the normal criteria applied on such applications. It is only where no legal aid program is available or the young person is unable to obtain counsel through such program that the youth court judge, pursuant to subsec. (4)(b), may direct that the young person be represented by counsel. Where such direction is made, however, then subsec. (5) applies and the Attorney General of the province must appoint counsel or cause counsel to be appointed to represent the young person. Where an order is made, the process of giving notice of the order by forwarding it to the Attorney General should be initiated by the court: R. v. F. (S.L.) (1993), 81 C.C.C. (3d) 268, 106 Nfld. & P.E.T.R. 228 (Nfld. S.C.).

APPEARANCE

WHERE YOUNG PERSON APPEARS / Waiver / Where young person not represented by counsel / Idem / Where youth court not satisfied / Idem.

12. (1) A young person against whom an information is laid must first appear before a youth court judge or a justice, and the judge or justice shall

- (a) cause the information to be read to the young person;
- (b) where the young person is not represented by counsel, inform the young person of the right to be so represented; and
- (c) where the young person is a young person referred to in subsection 16(1.01), inform the young person that the young person will be proceeded against in ordinary court in accordance with the law ordinarily applicable to an adult charged with the offence unless an application is made to the youth court by the young person, the young person's counsel or the Attorney General or an agent of the Attorney General to have the young person proceeded against in the youth court and an order is made to that effect.

(2) A young person may waive the requirement under paragraph (1)(a) where the young person is represented by counsel.

(3) Where a young person is not represented in youth court by counsel, the youth court shall, before accepting a plea,

- (a) satisfy itself that the young person understands the charge against him; and
- (b) explain to the young person that he may plead guilty or not guilty to the charge.

(3.1) Where a young person is a young person referred to in subsection 16(1.01) and is not represented in youth court by counsel, the youth court shall satisfy itself that the young person understands

- (a) the charge against the young person;
- (b) the consequences of being proceeded against in ordinary court; and
- (c) the young person's right to apply to be proceeded against in youth court.

(4) Where the youth court is not satisfied that a young person understands the charge against him, as required under paragraph (3)(a), the court shall enter a plea of not guilty on behalf of the young person and shall proceed with the trial in accordance with subsection 19(2).

(5) Where the youth court is not satisfied that a young person understands the matters referred to in subsection (3.1), the court shall direct that the young person be represented by counsel. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 12; 1995, c. 19, s. 3.

ANNOTATIONS

The jurisdiction of the court is dependent on strict compliance with the procedure in subsec. (1)(a) and it is not sufficient that the substance of the information is stated to the young offender who at the time of the first appearance is unrepresented by counsel and only assisted by duty counsel: R. v. H (1985), 21 C.C.C. (3d) 396 (B.C.S.C.).

A waiver of the requirement under subsec. (1)(a) can be implied by conduct of counsel indicating that he was asking for an adjournment as a result of discussions with Crown counsel and the offender's parent: R. v. J. (J.T.) (No. 2) (1986), 28 C.C.C. (3d) 62 (Man. Q.B.).

MEDICAL AND PSYCHOLOGICAL REPORTS

MEDICAL OR PSYCHOLOGICAL ASSESSMENT / Purpose of assessment / Custody for assessment / Presumption against custodial remand / Report of qualified person in writing / Application to vary assessment order where circumstances change / Disclosure of report / Cross-examination / Report to be withheld where disclosure unnecessary or prejudicial / Report to be withheld where disclosure dangerous to any person / Idem / Report to be part of record / Disclosure by qualified person / Definition of "qualified person".

13. (1) A youth court may, at any stage of proceedings against a young person,
- (a) with the consent of the young person and the prosecutor, or
  - (b) on its own motion or on application of the young person or the prosecutor, where
    - (i) the court has reasonable grounds to believe that the young person may be suffering from a physical or mental illness or disorder, a psychological disorder, an emotional disturbance, a learning disability or a mental disability,
    - (ii) the young person's history indicates a pattern of repeated findings of guilt under this Act, or
    - (iii) the young person is alleged to have committed an offence involving serious personal injury,
- and the court believes a medical, psychological or psychiatric report in respect of the young person is necessary for a purpose mentioned in paragraphs (2)(a) to (f), by order require that the young person be assessed by a qualified person and require the person who conducts the examination to report the results thereof in writing to the court.

(2) A youth court may make an order under subsection (1) in respect of a young person for the purpose of

- (a) considering an application under section 16;
- (b) making or reviewing a disposition under this Act, other than a disposition made under section 672.54 or 672.58 of the Criminal Code;
- (c) considering an application under subsection 26.1(1);
- (d) setting conditions under subsection 26.2(1);
- (e) making an order under subsection 26.6(2); or
- (f) authorizing disclosure under subsection 38(1.5).

(3) Subject to subsections (3.1) and (3.3), for the purpose of an assessment under this section, a youth court may remand a young person to such custody as it directs for a period not exceeding thirty days.

(3.1) A young person shall not be remanded in custody pursuant to an order made by a youth court under subsection (1) unless

- (a) the youth court is satisfied that on the evidence custody is necessary to conduct an assessment of the young person, or that on the evidence of a qualified person detention of the young person in custody is desirable to conduct the assessment of the young person and the young person consents to custody; or
- (b) the young person is required to be detained in custody in respect of any other matter or by virtue of any provision of the Criminal Code.

(3.2) For the purposes of paragraph (3.1)(a), when the prosecutor and the young person agree, evidence of a qualified person may be received in the form of a report in writing.

(3.3) A youth court may, at any time while an order in respect of a young person made by the court under subsection (1) is in force, on cause being shown, vary the terms and conditions specified in that order in such a manner as the court considers appropriate in the circumstances.

(4) Where a youth court receives a report made in respect of a young person pursuant to subsection (1),

(a) the court shall, subject to subsection (6), cause a copy of the report to be given to

(i) the young person,

(ii) a parent of the young person, if the parent is in attendance at the proceedings against the young person,

(iii) counsel, if any, representing the young person, and

(iv) the prosecutor; and

(b) the court may cause a copy of the report to be given to a parent of the young person not in attendance at the proceedings against the young person if the parent is, in the opinion of the court, taking an active interest in the proceedings.

(5) Where a report is made in respect of a young person pursuant to subsection (1), the young person, his counsel or the adult assisting him pursuant to subsection 11(7) and the prosecutor shall, subject to subsection (6), on application to the youth court, be given an opportunity to cross-examine the person who made the report.

(6) A youth court shall withhold all or part of a report made in respect of a young person pursuant to subsection (1) from a private prosecutor, where disclosure of the report or part, in the opinion of the court, is not necessary for the prosecution of the case and might be prejudicial to the young person.

(7) A youth court shall withhold all or part of a report made in respect of a young person pursuant to subsection (1) from the young person, the young person's parents or a private prosecutor where the court is satisfied, on the basis of the report or evidence given in the absence of the young person, parents or private prosecutor by the person who made the report, that disclosure of all or part of the report would seriously impair the treatment or recovery of the young person, or would be likely to endanger the life or safety of, or result in serious psychological harm to, another person.

(8) Notwithstanding subsection (7), the youth court may release all or part of the report referred to in that subsection to the young person, the young person's parents or the private prosecutor where the interests of justice make disclosure essential in the court's opinion.

(9) A report made pursuant to subsection (1) shall form part of the record of the case in respect of which it was requested.

(10) Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, a qualified person who is of the opinion that a young person held in detention or committed to custody is likely to endanger his own life or safety or to endanger the life of, or cause bodily harm to, another person may immediately so advise any person who has the care and custody of the young person whether or not the same information is contained in a report made pursuant to subsection (1).

(11) In this section, "qualified person" means a person duly qualified by provincial law to practice medicine or psychiatry or to carry out psychological examinations or assessments, as the circumstances require, or, where no such law exists, a person who is, in the opinion of the youth court, so qualified, and includes a person or a person within a class of persons designated by the Lieutenant Governor in Council of a province or his delegate. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 13; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 10; 1991, c. 43, s. 32, 35; 1995, c. 19, s. 4.

STATEMENTS NOT ADMISSIBLE AGAINST YOUNG PERSON / Exceptions.

13.1 (1) Subject to subsection (2) where a young person is assessed pursuant to an order made under subsection 13(1), no statement or reference to a statement made by the young person during the course and for the purposes of the assessment to the person who conducts the assessment or to anyone acting under that person's direction is admissible in evidence, without the consent of the young person, in any proceeding before a court, tribunal, body or person with jurisdiction to compel the production of evidence.

(2) A statement referred to in subsection (1) is admissible in evidence for the purposes of

- (a) considering an application under section 16 in respect of the young person;
- (b) determining whether the young person is unfit to stand trial;
- (c) determining whether the balance of the mind of the young person was disturbed at the time of commission of the alleged offence, where the young person is a female person charged with an offence arising out of the death of her newly-born child;
- (d) making or reviewing a disposition in respect of the young person;
- (e) determining whether the young person was, at the time of the commission of an alleged offence, suffering from automatism or a mental disorder so as to be exempt from criminal responsibility by virtue of subsection 16(1) of the Criminal Code, if the accused puts his or her mental capacity for criminal intent into issue, or if the prosecutor raises the issue after verdict;
- (f) challenging the credibility of a young person in any proceeding where the testimony of the young person is inconsistent in a material particular with a statement referred to in subsection (1) that the young person made previously;
- (g) establishing the perjury of a young person who is charged with perjury in respect of a statement made in any proceeding;
- (h) deciding an application for an order under subsection 26.1(1);
- (i) setting the conditions under subsection 26.2(1);
- (j) conducting a review under subsection 26.6(1); or
- (k) deciding an application for a disclosure order under subsection 38(1.5). 1991, c. 43, ss. 33, 35(b); 1994, c. 26, s. 76; 1995, c. 19, s. 5.

APPLICATION OF PART XX.1 OF THE CRIMINAL CODE (MENTAL DISORDER)

SECTIONS OF CRIMINAL CODE APPLICABLE / Notice and copies to Counsel and parents / Proceedings not invalid / Exception / No hospital order assessments / Considerations of court or Review Board making a disposition / Cap applicable to young persons / Application to increase cap of unfit young person subject to transfer / Consideration of youth court for increase in cap / Prima facie case to be made every year / Designation of hospitals for young persons.

13.2 (1) Except to the extent that they are inconsistent with or excluded by this Act, section 16 and Part XX.1 of the Criminal Code, except sections 672.65 and 672.66, apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, in respect of proceedings under this Act in relation to offences alleged to have been committed by young persons.

(2) For the purposes of subsection (1), wherever in Part XX.1 of the Criminal Code a reference is made to

- (a) a copy to be sent or otherwise given to an accused or a party to the proceedings, the reference shall be read as including a reference to a copy to be sent or otherwise given to
  - (i) counsel, if any, representing the young person,
  - (ii) any parent of the young person who is in attendance at the proceedings against the young person, and
  - (iii) any parent of the young person who is, in the opinion of the youth court or Review Board, taking an active interest in the proceedings; and
- (b) notice to be given to an accused or a party to proceedings, the reference shall be read as including a reference to notice to be given to counsel, if any, representing the young person and the parents of the young person.

(3) Subject to subsection (4), failure to give a notice referred to in paragraph (2)(b) to a parent of a young person does not affect the validity of proceedings under this Act.

(4) Failure to give a notice referred to in paragraph (2)(b) to a parent of a young person in any case renders invalid any subsequent proceedings under this Act relating to the case unless

- (a) a parent of the young person attends at the court or Review Board with the young person; or
- (b) a youth court judge or Review Board before whom proceedings are held against the young person
  - (i) adjourns the proceedings and orders that the notice be given in such manner and to such persons as the judge or Review Board directs, or
  - (ii) dispenses with the notice where the youth court or Review Board is of the opinion that, having regard to the circumstances, the notice may be dispensed with.

(5) A youth court may not make an order under subsection 672.11 of the Criminal Code in respect of a young person for the purpose of assisting in the determination of an issue mentioned in paragraph 672.11(e) of that Act.

(6) Before making or reviewing a disposition in respect of a young person under Part XX.1 of the Criminal Code, a youth court or Review Board shall consider the age and special needs of the young person and any representations or submissions made by the young person's parents.

(7) Subject to subsection (9), for the purpose of applying subsection 672.64(3) of the Criminal Code to proceedings under this Act in relation to an offence alleged to have been committed by a young person, the applicable cap shall be the maximum period during which the young person would be subject to a disposition by the youth court if found guilty of the offence.

(8) Where an application is made under section 16 to proceed against a young person in ordinary court and the young person is found unfit to stand trial, the Attorney General or the agent of the Attorney General may, before the youth court makes or refuses to make an order under that section, apply to the court to increase the cap that shall apply to the young person.

(9) The youth court, after giving the Attorney General and the counsel and parents of the young person in respect of whom an application is made under subsection (8) an opportunity to be heard, shall take into consideration

- (a) the seriousness of the alleged offence and the circumstances in which it was allegedly committed,
- (b) the age, maturity, character and background of the young person and any previous findings of guilt against the young person under any Act of Parliament,
- (c) the likelihood that the young person will cause significant harm to any person if released on expiration of the cap that applies to the young person pursuant to subsection (7), and
- (d) the respective caps that would apply to the young person under this Act and under the Criminal Code, and the youth court shall, where satisfied that the application under section 16 would likely succeed if the young person were fit to stand trial, apply to the young person the cap that would apply to an adult for the same offence.

(10) For the purpose of applying subsection 672.33(1) of the Criminal Code to proceedings under this Act in relation to an offence alleged to have been committed by a young person, wherever in that subsection a reference is made to two years, there shall be substituted a reference to one year.

(11) A reference in Part XX.1 of the Criminal Code to a hospital in a province shall be construed as a reference to a hospital designated by the Minister of Health of the province for the custody, treatment or assessment of young persons; 1991, c. 43, s. 33.

PRE-DISPOSITION REPORT

PRE-DISPOSITION REPORT / Contents of report / Oral report with leave / Report to form part of record / Copies of pre-disposition report / Cross-examination / Report may be withheld from young person or private prosecutor / Report disclosed to other persons / Disclosure by the provincial director / Inadmissibility of statements.

14. (1) Where a youth court deems it advisable before making a disposition under section 20 in respect of a young person who is found guilty of an offence it may, and where a youth court is required under this Act to consider a pre-disposition report before making an order or a disposition in respect of a young person it shall, require the provincial director to cause to be prepared a pre-disposition report in respect of the young person and to submit the report to the court.

(2) A pre-disposition report made in respect of a young person shall, subject to subsection (3), be in writing and shall include

- (a) the results of an interview with
  - (i) the young person,
  - (ii) where reasonably possible, the parents of the young person and,
  - (iii) where appropriate and reasonably possible, members of the young person's extended family;
- (b) the results of an interview with the victim in the case, where applicable and where reasonably possible;
- (c) such information as is applicable to the case including, where applicable,
  - (i) the age, maturity, character, behaviour and attitude of the young person and his willingness to make amends,
  - (ii) any plans put forward by the young person to change his conduct or to participate in activities or undertake measures to improve himself,
  - (iii) the history of previous findings of delinquency under the Juvenile Delinquents Act, chapter J-3 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1970, or previous findings of guilt under this or any other Act of Parliament or any regulation made thereunder or under an Act of the legislature of a province or any regulation made thereunder or a by-law or ordinance of a municipality, the history of community or other services rendered to the young person with respect to those findings and the response of the young person to previous sentences or dispositions and to services rendered to him,

- (iv) the history of alternative measures used to deal with the young person and the response of the young person thereto,
  - (v) the availability and appropriateness of community services and facilities for young persons and the willingness of the young person to avail himself or herself of those services or facilities,
  - (vi) the relationship between the young person and the young person's parents and the degree of control and influence of the parents over the young person and, where appropriate and reasonably possible, the relationship between the young person and the young person's extended family and the degree of control and influence of the young person's extended family over the young person, and
  - (vii) the school attendance and performance record and the employment record of the young person; and
- (d) such information as the provincial director considers relevant, including any recommendation that the provincial director considers appropriate.
- (3) Where a pre-disposition report cannot reasonably be committed to writing, it may, with leave of the youth court, be submitted orally in court.
- (4) A pre-disposition report shall form part of the record of the case in respect of which it was requested.
- (5) Where a pre-disposition report made in respect of a young person is submitted to a youth court in writing, the court
- (a) shall, subject to subsection (7), cause a copy of the report to be given to
    - (i) the young person,
    - (ii) a parent of the young person, if the parent is in attendance at the proceedings against the young person,
    - (iii) counsel, if any, representing the young person, and
    - (iv) the prosecutor; and
  - (b) may cause a copy of the report to be given to a parent of the young person not in attendance at the proceedings against the young person if the parent is, in the opinion of the court, taking an active interest in the proceedings.
- (6) Where a pre-disposition report made in respect of a young person is submitted to a youth court, the young person, his counsel or the adult assisting him pursuant to subsection 11(7) and the prosecutor shall, subject to subsection (7), on application to the youth court, be given the opportunity to cross-examine the person who made the report.
- (7) Where a pre-disposition report made in respect of a young person is submitted to a youth court, the court may, where the prosecutor is a private prosecutor and disclosure of the report or any part thereof to the prosecutor might, in the opinion of the court, be prejudicial to the young person and is not, in the opinion of the court, necessary for the prosecution of the case against the young person,
- (a) withhold the report or part thereof from the prosecutor, if the report is submitted in writing; or
  - (b) exclude the prosecutor from the court during the submission of the report or part thereof, if the report is submitted orally in court.
- (8) Where a pre-disposition report made in respect of a young person is submitted to a youth court, the court
- (a) shall, on request, cause a copy or a transcript of the report to be supplied to

- (i) any court that is dealing with matters relating to the young person, and
  - (ii) any youth worker to whom the young person's case has been assigned; and
  - (b) may, on request, cause a copy or a transcript of the report, or a part thereof, to be supplied to any person not otherwise authorized under this section to receive a copy or a transcript of the report if, in the opinion of the court, the person has a valid interest in the proceedings.
- (9) A provincial director who submits a pre-disposition report made in respect of a young person to a youth court may make the report, or any part thereof, available to any person in whose custody or under whose supervision the young person is placed or to any other person who is directly assisting in the care or treatment of the young person.
- (10) No statement made by a young person in the course of the preparation of a pre-disposition report in respect of the young person is admissible in evidence against him in any civil or criminal proceedings except in proceedings under section 16 or 20 or sections 28 to 32. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 14; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 11; 1995, c. 19, s. 6.

ANNOTATIONS

Only in exceptional circumstances should the young offender be remanded in custody while the pre-disposition report is being prepared: R. v. G. (C.) (1993), 79 C.C.C. (3d) 446, 61 O.A.C. 316 (C.A.).

DISQUALIFICATION OF JUDGE

DISQUALIFICATION OF JUDGE / Exception.

15. (1) Subject to subsection (2), a youth court judge who, prior to an adjudication in respect of a young person charged with an offence, examines a pre-disposition report made in respect of the young person, or hears an application under section 16 in respect of the young person, in connection with that offence shall not in any capacity conduct or continue the trial of the young person for the offence and shall transfer the case to another judge to be dealt with according to law.
- (2) A youth court judge may, in the circumstances referred to in subsection (1), with the consent of the young person and the prosecutor, conduct or continue the trial of the young person if the judge is satisfied that he has not been predisposed by information contained in the pre-disposition report or by representations made in respect of the application under section 16. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 15.

TRANSFER

1995, c. 19, s. 7.

---

TRANSFER TO ORDINARY COURT / Trial in ordinary court for certain offences / Making of application / Where application is opposed / Where application is unopposed / Deeming / Time may be extended / Order / Onus / Considerations by youth court / Pre-disposition reports / Where young person on transfer status / Court to state reasons / No further applications for transfer / Effect of order / Idem / Jurisdiction of ordinary court limited / Review of youth court decision / Extension of time to make application / Notice of application / Inadmissibility of statement.

16. (1) Subject to subsection (1.01), at any time after an information is laid against a young person alleged to have, after attaining the age of fourteen years, committed an indictable offence other than an offence referred to in section 553 of the Criminal Code but prior to adjudication, a youth court shall, on application of the young person or the young person's counsel or the Attorney General or an agent of the Attorney General, determine, in accordance with subsection (1.1), whether the young person should be proceeded against in ordinary court.

(1.01) Every young person against whom an information is laid who is alleged to have committed

- (a) first degree murder or second degree murder within the meaning of section 231 of the Criminal Code,
- (b) an offence under section 239 of the Criminal Code (attempt to commit murder),
- (c) an offence under section 232 or 234 of the Criminal Code (manslaughter), or
- (d) an offence under section 273 of the Criminal Code (aggravated sexual assault), and who was sixteen or seventeen years of age at the time of the alleged commission of the offence shall be proceeded against in ordinary court in accordance with the law ordinarily applicable to an adult charged with the offence unless the youth court, on application by the young person, the young person's counsel or the Attorney General or an agent of the Attorney General, makes an order under subsection (1.04) or (1.05) or subparagraph (1.1)(a)(ii) that the young person should be proceeded against in youth court.

(1.02) An application to the youth court under subsection (1.01) must be made orally, in the presence of the other party to the proceedings, or in writing, with a notice served on the other party to the proceedings.

(1.03) Whether the other party to the proceedings referred to in subsection (1.02) files a notice of opposition to the application with the youth court within twenty-one days after the making of the oral application, or the service of the notice referred to in that subsection, as the case may be, the youth court shall, in accordance with subsection (1.1), determine whether the young person should be proceeded against in youth court.

(1.04) Where the other party to the proceedings referred to in subsection (1.02) files a notice of non-opposition to the application with the youth court within the time referred to in subsection (1.03), the youth court shall order that the young person be proceeded against in youth court.

(1.05) Where the other party to the proceedings referred to in subsection (1.02) does not file a notice referred to in subsection (1.03) or (1.04) within the time referred to in subsection (1.03), the youth court shall order that the young person be proceeded against in youth court.

(1.06) The time referred to in subsections (1.03) to (1.05) may be extended by mutual agreement of the parties to the proceedings by filing a notice to that effect with the youth court.

(1.1) In making the determination referred to in subsection (1) or (1.03), the youth court, after affording both parties and the parents of the young person an opportunity to be heard, shall consider the interest of society, which includes the objectives of affording protection to the public and rehabilitation of the young person, and determine whether those objectives can be reconciled by the youth being under the jurisdiction of the youth court, and

- (a) if the court is of the opinion that those objectives can be so reconciled, the court shall
  - (i) in the case of an application under subsection (1), refuse to make an order that the young person be proceeded against in ordinary court, and

- (ii) in the case of an application under subsection (1.01), order that the young person be proceeded against in youth court; or
  - (b) if the court is of the opinion that those objectives cannot be so reconciled, protection of the public shall be paramount and the court shall
    - (i) in the case of an application under subsection (1), order that the young person be proceeded against in ordinary court in accordance with the law ordinarily applicable to an adult charged with the offence, and
    - (ii) in the case of an application under subsection (1.01), refuse to make an order that the young person be proceeded against in youth court.
- (1.11) Where an application is made under subsection (1) or (1.01), the onus of satisfying the youth court of the matters referred to in subsection (1.1) rests with the applicant.
- (2) In making the determination referred to in subsection (1) or (1.03) in respect of a young person, a youth court shall take into account
- (a) the seriousness of the alleged offence and the circumstances in which it was allegedly committed;
  - (b) the age, maturity, character and background of the young person and any record or summary of previous findings of delinquency under the Juvenile Delinquents Act, chapter J-3 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1970, or previous findings of guilt under this Act or any other Act of Parliament or any regulation made thereunder;
  - (c) the adequacy of this Act, and the adequacy of the Criminal Code or any other Act of Parliament that would apply in respect of the young person if an order were made under this section to meet the circumstances of the case;
  - (d) the availability of treatment or correctional resources;
  - (e) any representations made to the court by or on behalf of the young person or by the Attorney General or his agent; and
  - (f) any other factors that the court considers relevant.
- (3) In making the determination referred to in subsection (1) or (1.03) in respect of a young person, a youth court shall consider a pre-disposition report.
- (4) Notwithstanding subsections (1) and (3), where an application is made under subsection (1) by the Attorney General or the Attorney General's agent in respect of an offence alleged to have been committed by a young person while the young person was being proceeded against in ordinary court pursuant to an order previously made under this section or serving a sentence as a result of proceedings in ordinary court, the youth court may make a further order under this section without a hearing and without considering a pre-disposition report.
- (5) Where a youth court makes an order or refuses to make an order under this section, it shall state the reasons for its decision and the reasons shall form part of the record of the proceedings in the youth court.
- (6) Where a youth court refuses to make an order under this section in respect of an alleged offence, no further application may be made under this section in respect of that offence.
- (7) Where an order is made under this section pursuant to an application under subsection (1), proceedings under this Act shall be discontinued and the young person against whom the proceedings are taken shall be taken before the ordinary court.
- (7.1) Where an order is made under this section pursuant to an application under subsection (1.01), the proceedings against the young person shall be in the youth court.

(8) Where a young person is proceeded against in ordinary court in respect of an offence by reason of

- (a) subsection (1.01), where no application is made under that subsection,
- (b) an order made under subparagraph (1.1)(b)(i), or
- (c) the refusal under subparagraph (1.1)(b)(ii) to make an order, that court has jurisdiction only in respect of that offence or an offence included therein.

(9) An order made in respect of a young person under this section or a refusal to make such an order shall, on application of the young person or the young person's counsel or the Attorney General or the Attorney General's agent made within thirty days after the decision of the youth court, be reviewed by the court of appeal, and that court may, in its discretion, confirm or reverse the decision of the youth court.

(10) The court of appeal may, at any time, extend the time within which an application under subsection (9) may be made.

(11) A person who proposes to apply for a review under subsection (9) shall give notice of the application in such manner and within such period of time as may be directed by rules of court.

(12) No statement made by a young person in the course of a hearing held under this section is admissible in evidence against the young person in any civil or criminal proceeding held subsequent to that hearing. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 16; 1992, c. 11, s. 2; 1995, c. 19, s. 8.

ANNOTATIONS

NOTE: These cases were decided prior to the amendments made by 1995, c. 19 to this section and should be read in that light.

Principles generally – While there is a burden on the party seeking the order to persuade the court that transfer to ordinary court is appropriate based on the factors set out in subsection (2), the onus should not be regarded as a heavy one. The question is whether the judge is satisfied, after weighing and balancing all the relevant considerations, that the case should be transferred to the ordinary court: R. v. M. (S.H.) (1989), 50 C.C.C. (3d) 503, [1989] 2 S.C.R. 446, 71 C.R. (3d) 257 (7:2); R. v. L. (J.E.) (1989), 50 C.C.C. (3d) 385, [1989] 2 S.C.R. 510, 71 C.R. (3d) 306 (7:2).

The court is not required to give equal weight to all the factors listed in subsection (2) and it may properly consider that the gravity and heinous nature of the alleged offences, here first degree murder, was a more important factor than some of the other factors: R. v. L. (J.E.), supra.

It was held in R. v. H. (W.) (1989), 47 C.C.C. (3d) 72, 69 E.R. (3d) 168, 31 O.A.C. 372 (C.A.), that transfer orders on charges of, inter alia, forcible confinement and sexual assault could not be upheld where they were based primarily on the need for deterrence. If deterrence referred to the need for public proceedings, then the youth court overlooked that, aside from intervention of a jury, proceedings in youth court are similar to a trial in adult court and, in particular, the youth court is open to the public and especially the press. If the reference to deterrence was to the need for a sentence reflecting general deterrence presumably this referred to imposition of a penitentiary sentence. However, in light of the age and character of the offender it was not inevitable that such a sentence would be imposed, and in fact such a sentence should be avoided if at all possible.

The fact that the young offenders are jointly charged is only a factor to be considered on an application brought by the Crown under this section. Each offender must be viewed separately and while both should be treated the same if the circumstances warrant, that does not have to be the case. Thus in this case the court, while ordering that the one offender be transferred to adult court in view of his age, maturity, background and record, refused to order the transfer of the other offender: R. v. R. (E.S.) and R. (W.J.) (1985), 49 C.R. (3d) 88 (Man. C.A.).

In R. v. M. (F.D.) (1987), 33 C.C.C. (3d) 116, 45 Man. R. (2d) 24 (C.A.) (2:1) and R. v. C. (R.M.) (1987), 33 C.C.C. (3d) 136, 45 Man. R. (2d) 38 (C.A.) (2:1) a majority of the court in each case was of the view that the possibility of a successful insanity defence was not a proper consideration on an application under this section, nor was it relevant to consider provincial legislation applicable to treatment of mentally ill prisoners. On the other hand, at least two of the justices (Twaddle J.A. and Huband J.A. dissenting) were of the view that an offender's mental illness and prospects for treatment were proper considerations.

Where the young offender facilities are not adequate to deal with older offenders who commit offences while under the age of 18 years, the preferable solution is for the provincial director to apply to transfer the offender to a provincial adult facility pursuant to s. 25.5, rather than for the youth court to transfer the offender to adult court pursuant to this section. Offenders in a provincial institution are less likely to be exposed to the pernicious influences that might come their way in a penitentiary setting: R. v. D. (G.J.) (1991), 62 C.C.C. (3d) 433, 112 A.R. 18 sub nom. R. v. C. (G.J.D.) (C.A.).

The effect of subsec. (1.1) is that if the objectives of protection of the public and rehabilitation cannot be reconciled in the youth court then public protection must be given the pre-eminent position and the charge transferred to the ordinary courts: R. v. C. (D.) (1993), 85 C.C.C. (3d) 547, 14 O.R. (3d) 705 (C.A.).

It was not a proper consideration to order a transfer because better treatment facilities existed in the penitentiary system. The finding that the transfer is not necessary in order to protect the public is determinative: R. v. L. (R.A.) (1995), 103 C.C.C. (3d) 151 (B.C.C.A.).

Procedure – While as part of the transfer hearing the Crown must establish that an offence was committed and that the accused was implicated in it, it would seem that the judge may rely on hearsay evidence, although such evidence should be treated with great caution: R. v. W (1985), 22 C.C.C. (3d) 269 (B.C.S.C.).

Except for disputed facts, the strict rules of evidence do not necessarily apply at a transfer hearing or review. Thus the youth court judge could take into account his own knowledge of the availability of a programme at a youth centre in much the same way that a trial judge can take into account similar background information at a sentence hearing: R. v. M (1985), 23 C.C.C. (3d) 538, 49 C.R. (3d) 226 (Man. C.A.).

Once the offender has been transferred to the ordinary courts he is subject to the procedures provided by the Criminal Code, including the right of the Attorney-General to prefer an indictment notwithstanding the accused's discharge following a preliminary inquiry: R. v. J. (J.T.) (1986), 27 C.C.C. (3d) 574 (Man. Q.B.).

A youth court judge who merely orders the preparation of a pre-disposition report as required by subsec. (3) does not thereby become seized with jurisdiction over the transfer application: R. v. W (1986), 28 C.C.C. (3d) 510 (B.C.C.A.).

While an application to review a transfer order or an appeal from that application is pending, the case should not proceed through a preliminary inquiry: R. v. M. (F.D.) (1987), 33 C.C.C. (3d) 116, 45 Man. R. (2d) 24 (C.A.).

Application of Charter of Rights – This section does not offend ss. 7 and 11(d) of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms: R. v. M. (L.A.) (1986), 33 C.C.C. (3d) 364 (B.C.C.A.).

Review – The powers of the court of appeal to “in its discretion, confirm or reverse the decision” of the youth court, involves evaluation, not only of whether the court below made an error of law or jurisdiction, but whether its conclusions are correct, based on the factors set out in this Act. The reviewing court may go into the merits of the application and if its review leads to the conclusion that the decision below is wrong for any of these reasons, the reviewing court in the exercise of its discretion may substitute its own view for that of the judge below. This jurisdiction is subject to the important limit that since the reviewing court has not heard the evidence, it must accept the youth court's findings of fact and defer to it in matters involving the credibility of witnesses. However, the reviewing court is not confined to asking whether the youth court judge has erred but should make an independent evaluation on the basis of the facts found by the youth court judge: R. v. M. (S.M.), supra; R. v. L. (J.E.), supra.

At least where all parties consent, the court of appeal may receive new evidence on an appeal from the dismissal of an application for review: R. v. S. (G.) (1991), 5 O.R. (3d) 97 (C.A.).

It is inevitable that in the course of the review by the Court of Appeal some factors will assume greater importance than others, depending on the nature of the case and the viewpoint of the tribunal in question. This Act does not require that all factors be given equal weight but only that each be considered: R. v. M. (S.H.), supra.

The power under subsec. (9) to review the decision under this section includes the power to quash the transfer order and remit the matter back to the youth court for a new hearing: R. v. F (1985), 20 C.C.C. (3d) 334 (Ont. H.C.J.).

In the subsequent case of R. v. S. (G.) (1991), 5 O.R. (3d) 97 (C.A.) the court seems to cast considerable doubt on the power to remit the matter back to the youth court for a rehearing. In this case, the court on consent received new evidence to supplement the record.

While these subsections give the court of appeal the right to review, confirm or reverse that decision in its discretion, the Act makes no provision for the exercise of an independent discretion by the Supreme Court of Canada. Accordingly, the usual rules governing the Supreme Court's interference with the exercise of judicial discretion by intermediate appellate courts apply and the Supreme Court will interfere only where there has been an error of law or jurisdiction in the court below: R. v. M. (S.H.), supra.

DETENTION PENDING TRIAL — YOUNG PERSON UNDER EIGHTEEN / Detention pending trial — young person over eighteen / Review / Who may make application / Notice / Statement of rights / Limit — age 20.

16.1 (1) Notwithstanding anything in this or any other Act of Parliament, where a young person who is under the age of eighteen is to be proceeded against in ordinary court by reason of

- (a) subsection 16(1.01), where no application is made under that subsection,
  - (b) an order under subparagraph 16(1.1)(b)(i), or
  - (c) the refusal under subparagraph 16(1.1)(b)(ii) to make an order,
- and the young person is to be in custody pending the proceedings in that court, the young person shall be held separate and apart from any adult who is detained or held in custody unless the youth court is satisfied, on application, that the young person, having regard to the best interests of the young person and the safety of others, cannot be detained in a place of detention for young persons.

(2) Notwithstanding anything in this or any other Act of Parliament, where a young person who is over the age of eighteen is to be proceeded against in ordinary court by reason of

- (a) subsection 16(1.01), where no application is made under that subsection,
  - (b) an order under subparagraph 16(1.1)(b)(i), or
  - (c) the refusal under subparagraph 16(1.1)(b)(ii) to make an order,
- and the young person is to be in custody pending the proceedings in that court, the young person shall be held in a place of detention for adults unless the youth court is satisfied, on application, that the young person, having regard to the best interests of the young person and the safety of others, should be detained in a place of custody for young persons.

(3) On application, the youth court shall review the placement of a young person in detention pursuant to this section and, if satisfied, having regard to the best interests of the young person and the safety of others, and after having afforded the young person, the provincial director and a representative of a provincial department responsible for adult correctional facilities an opportunity to be heard, that the young person should remain in detention where the young person is or be transferred to youth or adult detention, as the case may be, the court may so order.

(4) An application referred to in this section may be made by the young person, the young person's parents, the provincial director, the Attorney General or the Attorney General's agent

(5) Where an application referred to in this section is made, the applicant shall cause a notice of the application to be given

- (a) where the applicant is the young person or one of the young person's parents, to the provincial director and the Attorney General;
- (b) where the applicant is the Attorney General or the Attorney General's agent, to the young person, the young person's parents and the provincial director; and
- (c) where the applicant is the provincial director, to the young person, the parents of the young person and the Attorney General.

(6) A notice given under subsection (5) by the Attorney General or the provincial director shall include a statement that the young person has the opportunity to be heard and the right to be represented by counsel.

(7) Notwithstanding anything in this section, no young person shall remain in custody in a place of detention for young persons under this section after the young person attains the age of twenty years. 1992, c. 11, s. 2; 1995, c. 19, s. 9.

PLACEMENT ON CONVICTION BY ORDINARY COURT / Factors to be taken into account / Report necessary / Review / Who may make application / Notice.

16.2 (1) Notwithstanding anything in this or any other Act of Parliament, where a young person who is proceeded against in ordinary court by reason of subsection 16(1.01), where no application is made under that subsection, or by reason of an order under subparagraph 16(1.1)(b)(i) or the refusal under subparagraph 16(1.1)(b)(ii) to make an order, is convicted and sentenced to imprisonment, the court shall, after affording the young person, the parents of the young person, the Attorney General, the provincial director and representatives of the provincial and federal correctional systems an opportunity to be heard, order that the young person serve any portion of the imprisonment in

- (a) a place of custody for young persons separate and apart from any adult who is detained or held in custody;
- (b) a provincial correctional facility for adults; or
- (c) where the sentence is for two years or more, a penitentiary.

(2) In making an order under subsection (1), the court shall take into account

- (a) the safety of the young person;
- (b) the safety of the public;
- (c) the young person's accessibility to family;
- (d) the safety of other young persons if the young person were to be held in custody in a place of custody for young persons;
- (e) whether the young person would have a detrimental influence on other young persons if the young person were to be held in custody in a place of custody for young persons;

- (f) the young person's level of maturity;
  - (g) the availability and suitability of treatment, educational and other resources that would be provided to the young person in a place of custody for young persons and in a place of custody for adults;
  - (h) the young person's prior experiences and behaviour while in detention or custody;
  - (i) the recommendations of the provincial director and representatives of the provincial and federal correctional facilities; and
  - (j) any other factor the court considers relevant.
- (3) Prior to making an order under subsection (1), the court shall require that a report be prepared for the purpose of assisting the court.
- (4) On application, the court shall review the placement of a young person in detention pursuant to this section and, if satisfied that the circumstances that resulted in the initial order have changed materially, and after having afforded the young person, the provincial director and the representatives of the provincial and federal correctional systems an opportunity to be heard, the court may order that the young person be placed in
- (a) a place of custody for young persons separate and apart from any adult who is detained or held in custody;
  - (b) a provincial correctional facility for adults, or
  - (c) where the sentence is for two years or more, a penitentiary.
- (5) An application referred to in this section may be made by the young person, the young person's parents, the provincial director, a representative of the provincial and federal correctional systems and the Attorney General
- (6) Where an application referred to in this section is made, the applicant shall cause a notice of the application to be given
- (a) where the applicant is the young person or one of the young person's parents, to the provincial director, to representatives of the provincial and federal correction systems and to the Attorney General;
  - (b) where the applicant is the Attorney General or the Attorney General's agent, to the young person, the young person's parents and the provincial director and representatives of the provincial and federal correction systems; and
  - (c) where an applicant is the provincial director, to the young person, the parents of the young person, the Attorney General and representatives of the provincial and federal correction systems. 1992, c. 11, s. 2; 1995, c. 19, s. 10.

ANNOTATIONS

This section does not apply to an accused who, by the time of conviction, is 18 years of age and therefore no longer a "young person": R. v. Godlewski, [1994] 3 W.W.R. 153, 92 Man. R. (2d) 127, 61 W.A.C. 127 (C.A.).

ORDER RESTRICTING PUBLICATION OF INFORMATION PRESENTED AT TRANSFER HEARING / Offence / Definition of "newspaper".

17. (1) Where a youth court hears an application for a transfer under section 16, it shall

- (a) where the young person is not represented by counsel, or
  - (b) on application made by or on behalf of the young person or the prosecutor, where the young person is represented by counsel,
- make an order directing that any information respecting the offence presented at the hearing shall not be published in any newspaper or broadcast before such time as
- (c) an order for a transfer is refused or set aside on review and the time for all reviews against the decision has expired or all proceedings in respect of any such review have been completed; or

(d) the trial is ended, if the case is transferred to ordinary court.

(2) Every one who fails to comply with an order made pursuant to subsection (1) is guilty of an offence punishable on summary conviction.

(3) In this section, "newspaper" has the meaning set out in section 297 of the Criminal Code. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 17; 1995, c. 19, s. 11.

ANNOTATIONS

It was held in R. v. R. (T.) (No. 1) (1984), 10 C.C.C. (3d) 481 (Alta. Q.B.) that the restriction on publication of proceedings in juvenile Court contained in s. 12(3) of the Juvenile Delinquents Act also applied to the proceedings on an appeal from the making of a transfer order made under that Act. Reference should also be made to s. 38(1), infra.

It was held, considering the transfer provisions of the Juvenile Delinquents Act, that while the superior court has power to prohibit publication of the evidence heard at a transfer hearing the order should not be permanent but extend only to the expiry of the appeal period following the trial: R. v. Canadian Newspapers Co. (1984), 16 C.C.C. (3d) 495 (Man. C.A.).

TRANSFER OF JURISDICTION

TRANSFER OF JURISDICTION.

18. Notwithstanding subsections 478(1) and (3) of the Criminal Code, where a young person is charged with an offence that is alleged to have been committed in one province, he may, if the Attorney General of the province where the offence is alleged to have been committed consents, appear before a youth court of any other province and,

(a) where the young person signifies his consent to plead guilty and pleads guilty to that offence, the court shall, if it is satisfied that the facts support the charge, find the young person guilty of the offence alleged in the information; and

(b) where the young person does not signify his consent to plead guilty and does not plead guilty, or where the court is not satisfied that the facts support the charge, the young person shall, if he was detained in custody prior to his appearance, be returned to custody and dealt with according to law. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 18.

ADJUDICATION

WHERE YOUNG PERSON PLEADS GUILTY / Where young person pleads not guilty / Application for transfer to ordinary court / Election—offence of murder / Where no election made / Preliminary inquiry / Preliminary inquiry provisions of Criminal Code / Part XIX and XX of the Criminal Code.

19. (1) Where a young person pleads guilty to an offence charged against him and the youth court is satisfied that the facts support the charge, the court shall find the young person guilty of the offence.

(2) Where a young person charged with an offence pleads not guilty to the offence or pleads guilty but the youth court is not satisfied that the facts support the charge, the court shall, subject to subsection (4), proceed with the trial and shall, after considering the matter, find the young person guilty or not guilty or make an order dismissing the charge, as the case may be.

(3) The court shall not make a finding under this section in respect of a young person in respect of whom an application may be made under section 16 for an order that the young person be proceeded against in ordinary court unless it has inquired as to whether any of the parties to the proceedings wishes to make such an application, and, if any party so wishes, has given that party an opportunity to do so.

(4) Notwithstanding section 5, where a young person is charged with having committed first degree murder or second degree murder within the meaning of section 231 of the Criminal Code, the youth court, before proceeding with the trial, shall ask the young person to elect to be tried by a youth court judge alone or by a judge of a superior court of criminal jurisdiction with a jury, and where a young person elects to be tried by a judge of a superior court of criminal jurisdiction with a jury, the young person shall be dealt with as provided in this Act.

(5) Notwithstanding section 5, where an election is not made under subsection (4), the young person shall be deemed to have elected to be tried by a judge of a superior court of criminal jurisdiction with a jury and dealt with as provided for in this Act.

(5.1) Where a young person elects or is deemed to have elected to be tried by a judge of a superior court of criminal jurisdiction with a jury, the youth court shall conduct a preliminary inquiry and if, on its conclusion, the young person is ordered to stand trial, the proceedings shall be before a judge of the superior court of criminal jurisdiction with a jury.

(5.2) A preliminary inquiry referred to in subsection (5.1) shall be conducted in accordance with the provisions of Part XVIII of the Criminal Code, except to the extent that they are inconsistent with this Act.

(6) Proceedings under this Act before a judge of a superior court of criminal jurisdiction with a jury shall be conducted, with such modifications as the circumstances require, in accordance with the provisions of Parts XIX and XX of the Criminal Code, except that

- (a) the provisions of this Act respecting the protection of privacy of young persons prevail over the provisions of the Criminal Code; and
- (b) the young person is entitled to be represented in court by counsel if the young person is removed from court pursuant to subsection 650(2) of the Criminal Code. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 19; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 13; 1995, c. 19, s. 12.

ANNOTATIONS

Subsec. (1) – The requirements of this subsection are not met by the bare recital of the charge together with brief questioning of the offender as to whether he understood the charge. It would seem that this subsection requires a statement of the facts supporting the charge: R. v. K (1985), 18 C.C.C. (3d) 94 (N.S.S.C. App. Div.).

Subsec. (3) – Where the failure to comply with this subsection was inadvertent, the trial judge attempted to comply with its requirements after making the finding of guilt, and the offender suffered no prejudice, then the curative provision of s. 686(1)(b)(iv) of the Criminal Code could be applied and the finding upheld: R. v. C. (D.) (1990), 83 Nfld. & P.E.I.R. 166 (P.E.I.S.C. App. Div.).

DISPOSITIONS

DISPOSITIONS THAT MAY BE MADE / Coming into force of disposition / Duration of disposition / Combined duration of dispositions / Duration of dispositions made at different times / Custody first / Conditional supervision suspended / Disposition continues when adult / Reasons for the disposition / Limitation on punishment / Application of Part XXIII of Criminal Code / Section 787 of Criminal Code does not apply / Contents of probation order / No orders under section 161 of Criminal Code.

20. (1) Where a youth court finds a young person guilty of an offence, it shall consider any pre-disposition report required by the court, any representations made by the parties to the proceedings or their counsel or agents and by the parents of the young person and any other relevant information before the court, and the court shall then make any one of the following dispositions, other than the disposition referred to in paragraph (k.1), or any number thereof that are not inconsistent with each other, and where the offence is first degree murder or second degree murder within the meaning of section 231 of the Criminal Code, the court shall make the disposition referred to in paragraph (k.1) and may make such other disposition as the court considers appropriate:

- (a) by order direct that the young person be discharged absolutely, if the court considers it to be in the best interests of the young person and not contrary to the public interest;
- (a.1) by order direct that the young person be discharged on such conditions as the court considers appropriate;
- (b) impose on the young person a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars to be paid at such time and on such terms as the court may fix;
- (c) order the young person to pay to any other person at such time and on such terms as the court may fix an amount by way of compensation for loss of or damage to property, for loss of income or support or for special damages for personal injury arising from the commission of the offence where the value thereof is readily ascertainable, but no order shall be made for general damages;
- (d) order the young person to make restitution to any other person of any property obtained by the young person as a result of the commission of the offence within such time as the court may fix, if the property is owned by that other person or was, at the time of the offence, in his lawful possession;
- (e) if any property obtained as a result of the commission of the offence has been sold to an innocent purchaser, where restitution of the property to its owner or any other person has been made or ordered, order the young person to pay the purchaser, at such time and on such terms as the court may fix, an amount not exceeding the amount paid by the purchaser for the property;
- (f) subject to section 21, order the young person to compensate any person in kind or by way of personal services at such time and on such terms as the court may fix for any loss, damage or injury suffered by that person in respect of which an order may be made under paragraph (c) or (e);
- (g) subject to section 21, order the young person to perform a community service at such time and on such terms as the court may fix;
- (h) make any order of prohibition, seizure or forfeiture that may be imposed under any Act of Parliament or any regulation made thereunder where an accused is found guilty or convicted of that offence;

NOTE: Subsection (1)(h) replaced 1995, c. 39, s. 178 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

- (h) subject to section 20.1, make any order of prohibition, seizure or forfeiture that may be imposed under any Act of Parliament or any regulation made thereunder where an accused is found guilty or convicted of that offence;
  - (i) [Repealed. 1995, c. 19, s. 13(2).]
  - (j) place the young person on probation in accordance with section 23 for a specified period not exceeding two years;
  - (k) subject to sections 24 to 24.5, commit the young person to custody, to be served continuously or intermittently, for a specified period not exceeding
    - (i) two years from the date of committal, or
    - (ii) where the young person is found guilty of an offence for which the punishment provided by the Criminal Code or any other Act of Parliament is imprisonment for life, three years from the date of committal;
  - (k.1) order the young person to serve a disposition not to exceed
    - (i) in the case of first degree murder, ten years comprised of
      - (A) a committal to custody, to be served continuously, for a period that shall not, subject to subsection 26.1(1), exceed six years from the date of committal, and
      - (B) a placement under conditional supervision to be served in the community in accordance with section 26.2, and
    - (ii) in the case of second degree murder, seven years comprised of
      - (A) a committal to custody, to be served continuously, for a period that shall not, subject to subsection 26.1(1), exceed four years from the date of committal, and
      - (B) a placement under conditional supervision to be served in the community in accordance with section 26.2; and
  - (l) impose on the young person such other reasonable and ancillary conditions as it deems advisable and in the best interest of the young person and the public.
- (2) A disposition made under this section shall come into force on the date on which it is made or on such later date as the youth court specifies therein.
- (3) No disposition made under this section, other than an order made under paragraph (1)(h), (k) or (k.1), shall continue in force for more than two years and, where the youth court makes more than one disposition at the same time in respect of the same offence, the combined duration of the dispositions, except in respect of an order made under paragraph (1)(h), (k) or (k.1), shall not exceed two years.
- (4) Subject to subsection (4.1), where more than one disposition is made under this section in respect of a young person with respect to different offences, the continuous combined duration of those dispositions shall not exceed three years, except where one of those offences is first degree murder or second degree murder within the meaning of section 231 of the Criminal Code, in which case the continuous combined duration of those dispositions shall not exceed ten years in the case of first degree murder, or seven years in the case of second degree murder.
- (4.1) Where a disposition is made under this section in respect of an offence committed by a young person after the commencement of, but before the completion of, any dispositions made in respect of previous offences committed by the young person,
- (a) the duration of the disposition made in respect of the subsequent offence shall be determined in accordance with subsections (3) and (4);
  - (b) the disposition may be served consecutively to the dispositions made in respect of the previous offences; and
  - (c) the combined duration of all the dispositions may exceed three years, except where the offence is, or one of the previous offences was,
    - (i) first degree murder within the meaning of section 231 of the Criminal Code, in which case the continuous combined duration of the dispositions may exceed ten years, or
    - (ii) second degree murder within the meaning of section 231 of the Criminal

Code, in which case the continuous combined duration of the dispositions may exceed seven years.

(4.2) Subject to subsection (4.3), where a young person who is serving a disposition made under paragraph (1)(k.1) is ordered to custody in respect of an offence committed after the commencement of, but before the completion of, that disposition, the custody in respect of that subsequent offence shall be served before the young person is placed under conditional supervision.

(4.3) Where a young person referred to in subsection (4.2) is under conditional supervision at the time the young person is ordered to custody in respect of a subsequent offence, the conditional supervision shall be suspended until the young person is released from custody.

(5) Subject to section 741.1 of the Criminal Code, a disposition made under this section shall continue in effect in accordance with the terms thereof, after the young person against whom it is made becomes an adult.

NOTE: Subsection (5) amended by 1995, c. 22, s. 17 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council) by replacing the reference to s. 741.1 with a reference to s. 743.5.

(6) Where a youth court makes a disposition under this section, it shall state its reasons therefor in the record of the case and shall

(a) provide or cause to be provided a copy of the disposition, and

(b) on request, provide or cause to be provided a transcript or a copy of the reasons for the disposition to the young person in respect of whom the disposition was made, the young person's counsel and parents, the provincial director, where the provincial director has an interest in the disposition, the prosecutor and, in the case of a custodial disposition made under paragraph (1)(k) or (k.1), the review board, if a review board has been established or designated.

(7) No disposition shall be made in respect of a young person under this section that results in a punishment that is greater than the maximum punishment that would be applicable to an adult who has committed the same offence.

(8) Part XXIII of the Criminal Code does not apply in respect of proceedings under this Act except for subsections 735(1.1) to (1.4), 736(2) and (4), and 738(4) and sections 749, 750 and 751, which provisions apply with such modifications as the circumstances require.

NOTE: Subsection (8) re-enacted by 1995, c. 22, s. 16 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

APPLICATION OF PART XXIII OF CRIMINAL CODE.

(8) Part XXIII of the Criminal Code does not apply in respect of proceedings under this Act except for subsection 730(2) and sections 748, 748.1 and 749, which provisions apply with such modifications as the circumstances require.

NOTE: Subsection (8) re-enacted by 1995, c. 22, s. 25(b) (to come into force if 1995, c. 19, s. 13(6) comes into force before 1995, c. 22, s. 16 comes into force). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

(8) Part XXIII of the Criminal Code does not apply in respect of proceedings under this Act except for section 722, subsection 730(2) and sections 748, 748.1 and 749, which provisions apply with such modifications as the circumstances require.

(9) Section 787 of the Criminal Code does not apply in respect of proceedings under this Act.

(10) The youth court shall specify in any probation order made under paragraph (1)(j) the period for which it is to remain in force.

(11) (old provision) [Repealed. R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 14(2).]

(11) Notwithstanding paragraph (1)(h), a youth court shall not make an order of prohibition under section 161 of the Criminal Code against a young person. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 20; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 187, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 14, c. 1 (4th Supp.), s. 38; 1992, c. 11, s. 3; 1993, c. 45, s. 15; 1995, c. 19, s. 13.

ANNOTATIONS

Principles generally in making disposition – While the sentence to be imposed on both adults and young offenders must be proportional to the offence committed, the principle of proportionality will have greater significance for adults than it will in the disposition of young offenders. For the young offender, a proper disposition must take into account not only the seriousness of the crime but also all relevant factors. Intolerable conditions in the home will indicate both a special need for care and the absence of any guidance within the home. The situation in the home should neither be ignored nor made the pre-dominate factor in sentencing. The aim of the disposition must be both to protect society and at the same time to provide the young offender with the necessary guidance and assistance that he may not be receiving at home. It is also appropriate to take into account the availability of a yearly review pursuant to s. 28. Such a review is an integral part of the disposition and therefore it is appropriate to take it into account as a factor, albeit not a major one, in assessing the appropriateness of the disposition: R. v. M. (J. J.), [1993] 2 S.C.R. 421, 81 C.C.C. (3d) 487, 20 C.R. (4th) 295 (7:0). Also see R. v. I. (R.) (1985), 17 C.C.C. (3d) 523, 44 C.R. (3d) 168 (Ont. C.A.).

The court is not entitled to impose a custodial sentence out of proportion to the facts of the offence merely because of the offender's serious psychiatric problems: R. v. B. (M.) (1987), 36 C.C.C. (3d) 573 (Ont. C.A.).

It was an error to impose a sentence approaching the maximum where the circumstances of the offence, and of the accused's participation, did not warrant that kind of disposition, notwithstanding the indication in the pre-disposition report that the accused was unmanageable at home and had not responded to previous dispositions. The circumstances could not be described as the worst kind: R. v. A. (D.) (1986), 30 C.C.C. (3d) 564, 44 Man. R. (2d) 104 (C.A.).

While the protection of society is a central principle of this Act, it is one that has to be reconciled with other considerations, such as the needs of young persons and, in any event, it is not a principle which must inevitably be reflected in a severe disposition. In many cases, unless the degree of seriousness of the offence and the circumstances in which it was committed militate otherwise, it is best given effect to by a disposition which gives emphasis to the factors of individual deterrence and rehabilitation: R. v. F. (J.) (1985), 22 C.C.C. (3d) 555 (Ont. C.A.).

The principle of sentencing that the maximum sentence is reserved for the worst case is not fully applicable to dispositions under this Act in view of the narrow range of disposition available. The narrow range compresses all serious cases at the top of the range and it would be unrealistic to scale all sentences down from the maximum or to reserve the sentence only for the very worst possible cases: R. v. H. (A.) (1991), 65 C.C.C. (3d) 116 (B.C.C.A.).

The special needs of the offender cannot justify an imposition of a heavier penalty than would be imposed on an adult: R. v. N. (E.) (1990), 68 C.C.C. (3d) 574 (Que. C.A.).

General deterrence – The principle of general deterrence must be considered although it has diminished importance in determining the appropriate disposition in the case of a youthful offender. Dispositions under the Young Offender's Act can have an effective deterrent effect in view of the large number of offences committed by young offenders in groups. R. v. M. (J.F.), supra.

Types of dispositions – In view of the specific power given the court by para. (1)(g) to make a disposition of an order for community service, community service cannot be made a term of a probation order through the combined operation of para. (1)(j) and s. 23(2)(g): R. v. P. (K.R.) (1987), 40 C.C.C. (3d) 376 (B.C.C.A.).

There is no power to impose a term of custody and then suspend that disposition: R. v. D (1985), 18 C.C.C. (3d) 476 (N.S.C.A.). Similarly: R. v. G. (W.) (1985), 23 C.C.C. (3d) 93 (B.C.C.A.).

The minimum one-year imprisonment prescribed by s. 85 of the Criminal Code does not apply to sentencing of a young offender under this Act: R. v. T. (K.D.) (1986), 28 C.C.C. (3d) 110 (N.S.C.A.); R. v. H. (R.) (1992), 77 C.C.C. (3d) 198, 10 O.R. (3d) 723 (C.A.).

Subsection (2) permits the court to provide that the custodial sentence take effect at some future date, such as the summer months, so as not to interfere with the offender's schooling: R. v. T. (K.D.) (1986), 28 C.C.C. (3d) 110 (N.S.C.A.); R. v. M. (E.) (1992), 76 C.C.C. (3d) 159, 10 O.R. (3d) 481 (C.A.).

However, it is not a proper exercise of the power under subsec. (2) to postpone the date upon which the custodial portion of the disposition is to take effect in the expectation that prior to that date, if the offender had been of good behaviour, he could successfully apply for a review of that disposition: R. v. P. (J.R.) (1987), 36 C.C.C. (3d) 134, 79 N.S.R. (2d) 181 (S.C. App. Div.).

There is no jurisdiction to grant a young offender a conditional discharge: R. v. H. (S.D.) (1989), 49 C.C.C. (3d) 451, [1989] 5 W.W.R. 350, 76 Sask. R. 159 (C.A.); R. v. R. (B.) (1990), 73 O.R. (2d) 347 (C.A.).

The lack of availability of a conditional discharge does not infringe the equality guarantees in s. 15 of the Charter: R. v. G. (D.) (1990), 56 C.C.C. (3d) 147 (B.C. Co. Ct.).

Consecutive dispositions – Subsec. (4.1) does not permit a judge to make a disposition consecutive to a disposition imposed by another judge where the offender was not under such disposition at the time that he committed the offence: R. v. C. (W.J.) (1988), 42 C.C.C. (3d) 253, 83 N.S.R. (2d) 352 (C.A.). Contra: R. v. B. (D.W.) (1991), 64 C.C.C. (3d) 164, 2 O.R. (3d) 790 (Ont. C.A.) and R. v. R. (D.J.) (1992), 76 C.C.C. (3d) 88 (Man. C.A.) where it was held that subsec. (4.1) was not the exclusive provision dealing with consecutive dispositions and did not affect the court's power to make consecutive dispositions by virtue of subsec. (2).

A youth court may impose consecutive dispositions where the dispositions in issue are imposed simultaneously: R. v. M. (D.R.) (1987), 79 N.S.R. (2d) 222 (C.A.); R. v. F. (D.J.) (1988), 29 O.A.C. 92 (C.A.); R. v. G. (W.J.) (1986), 29 C.C.C. (3d) 430, 60 Nfld. & P.E.I.R. 59 (P.E.I.S.C.).

Subsection (2) gives the court power to impose a disposition which is consecutive to a sentence imposed upon the offender by an ordinary court for offences committed by the offender as an adult: R. v. F. (K.R.) (1995) 96 C.C.C. (3d) 469, [1995] 5 W.W.R. 556, 162 A.R. 378 (C.A.); V. (T.) v. Ontario (Attorney General) (1989), 51 C.C.C. (3d) 155 (Ont. H.C.J.).

The court has power to impose a consecutive disposition although the offender was not serving a disposition at the time of the conviction for the offence for which the consecutive disposition is later imposed. Although, by virtue of s. 717(4), an ordinary court could not impose a consecutive sentence on an adult in those circumstances, the imposition of the consecutive disposition does not offend subsec. (7) of this section: R. v. F. (K.R.) (1995), 96 C.C.C. (3d) 469, [1995] 5 W.W.R. 556, 162 A.R. 378 (C.A.).

Where a number of consecutive dispositions which include periods of custody have been imposed by different judges, then the custodial dispositions must be served first before any periods of probation: R. v. H. (J.) (1992), 71 C.C.C. (3d) 309 (Ont. C.A.).

The maximum duration of a detention order for treatment in a hospital is limited to two years. There is no authority for consecutive dispositions permitting a longer order where the offender has been convicted of several offences. In particular, s. 20(2) was intended to give the youth court a power to defer a disposition but does not give the court the right to impose consecutive dispositions: R. v. L. (M.) (1994), 89 C.C.C. (3d) 264, [1994] R.J.Q. 645, 61 Q.A.C. 69 (C.A.).

Length of dispositions – In view of the provisions of subsec. (3), except for orders under subsec. (1)(h) [And now subsec. (1)(k.1)], the combined duration of dispositions made at the same time in respect of the same offence cannot exceed two years where the offence is not punishable by life imprisonment. The reference to para. (1)(k) in subsec. (3) only refers to para. (1)(k)(ii) so that where the offence is punishable by life imprisonment then the combined duration of the dispositions cannot exceed three years. Thus, for a young offender convicted of theft over $1000, which is not punishable by life imprisonment, the combined duration of an order of custody and probation cannot exceed two years: R. v. C. (C.) (1990), 60 C.C.C. (3d) 418, 75 O.R. (2d) 187, 42 O.A.C. 12 (C.A.).

NOTE: Enacted 1995, c. 39, s. 179 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

MANDATORY PROHIBITION ORDER / Duration of prohibition order / Discretionary prohibition order / Duration of prohibition order / Definition of “release from imprisonment” / Reasons for the prohibition order / Reasons / Application of Criminal Code / Report.

20. 1(1) Notwithstanding subsection 20(1), where a young person is found guilty of an offence referred to in any of paragraphs 109(1)(a) to (d) of the Criminal Code, the youth court shall, in addition to making any disposition referred to in subsection 20(1), make an order prohibiting the young person from possessing any firearm, cross-bow, prohibited weapon, restricted weapon, prohibited device, ammunition, prohibited ammunition and explosive substance during the period specified in the order as determined in accordance with subsection (2).

(2) An order made under subsection (1) begins on the day on which the order is made and ends not earlier than two years after the young person’s release from custody after being found guilty of the offence or, if the young person is not then in custody or subject to custody, after the time the young person is found guilty of or discharged from the offence.

(3) Notwithstanding subsection 20(1), where a young person is found guilty of an offence referred to in paragraph 110(1)(a) or (b) of the Criminal Code, the youth court shall, in addition to making any disposition referred to in subsection 20(1), consider whether it is desirable, in the interests of the safety of the person or of any other person, to make an order prohibiting the person from possessing any firearm, cross-bow, prohibited weapon, restricted weapon, prohibited device, ammunition, prohibited ammunition or explosive substance, or all such things, and where the court decides that it is so desirable, the court shall so order.

(4) An order made under subsection (3) against a young person begins on the day on which the order is made and ends not later than two years after the young person’s release from custody or, if the young person is not then in custody or subject to custody, after the time the young person is found guilty of or discharged from the offence.

(5) In paragraph (2)(a) and subsection (4), “release from custody” means a release from custody in accordance with this Act, other than a release from custody under subsection 35(1), and includes the commencement of conditional supervision or probation.

(6) Where a youth court makes an order under this section, it shall state its reasons for making the order in the record of the case and shall

(a) provide or cause to be provided a copy of the order, and

(b) on request, provide or cause to be provided a transcript or copy of the reasons for making the order to the young person against whom the order was made, the young person's counsel and parents and the provincial director.

(7) Where the youth court does not make an order under subsection (3), or where the youth court does make such an order but does not prohibit the possession of everything referred to in that subsection, the youth court shall include in the record a statement of the youth court's reasons.

(8) Sections 113 to 117 of the Criminal Code apply in respect of any order made under this section.

(9) Before making any order referred to in section 113 of the Criminal Code in respect of a young person, the youth court may require the provincial director to cause to be prepared, and to submit to the youth court, a report on the young person.

WHERE A FINE OR OTHER PAYMENT IS ORDERED / Fine option program / Rates, crediting and other matters / Representations respecting orders under paras. 20(1)(c) to (f) / Notice of orders under paras. 20(1)(c) to (f) / Consent of person to be compensated / Order for compensation or community service / Duration of order for service / Community service order / Application for further time to complete disposition.

21. (1) The youth court shall, in imposing a fine on a young person under paragraph 20(1)(b) or in making an order against a young person under paragraph 20(1)(c) or (e), have regard to the present and future means of the young person to pay.

(2) A young person against whom a fine is imposed under paragraph 20(1)(b) may discharge the fine in whole or in part by earning credits for work performed in a program established for that purpose

(a) by the Lieutenant Governor in Council of the province in which the fine was imposed; or

(b) by the Lieutenant Governor in Council of the province in which the young person resides, where an appropriate agreement is in effect between the government of that province and the government of the province in which the fine was imposed.

(3) A program referred to in subsection (2) shall determine the rate at which credits are earned and may provide for the manner of crediting any amounts earned against the fine and any other matters necessary for or incidental to carrying out the program.

(4) In considering whether to make an order under paragraphs 20(1)(c) to (f), the youth court may consider any representations made by the person who would be compensated or to whom restitution or payment would be made.

(5) Where the youth court makes an order under paragraphs 20(1)(c) to (f), it shall cause notice of the terms of the order to be given to the person who is to be compensated or to whom restitution or payment is to be made.

(6) No order may be made under paragraph 20(1)(f) unless the youth court has secured the consent of the person to be compensated.

(7) No order may be made under paragraph 20(1)(f) or (g) unless the youth court

- (a) is satisfied that the young person against whom the order is made is a suitable candidate for such an order; and
  - (b) is satisfied that the order does not interfere with the normal hours of work or education of the young person.
- (8) No order may be made under paragraph 20(1)(f) or (g) to perform personal or community services unless such services can be completed in two hundred and forty hours or less and within twelve months of the date of the order.
- (9) No order may be made under paragraph 20(1)(g) unless
- (a) the community service to be performed is part of a program that is approved by the provincial director; or
  - (b) the youth court is satisfied that the person or organization for whom the community service is to be performed has agreed to its performance.
- (10) A youth court may, on application by or on behalf of the young person in respect of whom a disposition has been made under paragraphs 20(1)(b) to (g), allow further time for the completion of the disposition subject to any regulations made pursuant to paragraph 67(b) and to any rules made by the youth court pursuant to subsection 68(1). 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 21; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 15.

CONDITIONS THAT MUST APPEAR IN PROBATION ORDERS / Conditions that may appear in probation orders / Communication of probation order to young person and parent / Copy of probation order to parent / Endorsement of order by young person / Validity of probation order / Commencement of probation order / Notice to appear / Warrant to arrest young person.

23. (1) The following conditions shall be included in a probation order made under paragraph 20(1)(j):

- (a) that the young person bound by the probation order shall keep the peace and be of good behaviour; and
  - (b) that the young person appear before the youth court when required by the court to do so.
- (c) [Repealed. R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 16(1).]

(2) A probation order made under paragraph 20(1)(j) may include such of the following conditions as the youth court considers appropriate in the circumstances of the case:

- (a) that the young person bound by the probation order report to and be under the supervision of the provincial director or a person designated by the youth court;
- (a.1) that the young person notify the clerk of the youth court, the provincial director or the youth worker assigned to his case of any change of address or any change in his place of employment, education or training;
- (b) that the young person remain within the territorial jurisdiction of one or more courts named in the order;
- (c) that the young person make reasonable efforts to obtain and maintain suitable employment;
- (d) that the young person attend school or such other place of learning, training or recreation as is appropriate, if the court is satisfied that a suitable program is available for the young person at that place;
- (e) that the young person reside with a parent, or such other adult as the court considers appropriate, who is willing to provide for the care and maintenance of the young person;

- (f) that the young person reside in such place as the provincial director may specify; and
  - (g) that the young person comply with such other reasonable conditions set out in the order as the court considers desirable, including conditions for securing the good conduct of the young person and for preventing the commission by the young person of other offences.
- (3) Where the youth court makes a probation order under paragraph 20(1)(j), it shall
- (a) cause the order to be read by or to the young person bound by the probation order;
  - (b) explain or cause to be explained to the young person the purpose and effect of the order and ascertain that the young person understands it; and
  - (c) cause a copy of the order to be given to the young person and to a parent of the young person, if the parent is in attendance at the proceedings against the young person.
- (4) Where the youth court makes a probation order under paragraph 20(1)(j), it may cause a copy of the report to be given to a parent of the young person not in attendance at the proceedings against the young person if the parent is, in the opinion of the court, taking an active interest in the proceedings.
- (5) After a probation order has been read by or to a young person and explained to him pursuant to subsection (3), the young person shall endorse the order acknowledging that he has received a copy of the order and acknowledging the fact that it has been explained to him.
- (6) The failure of a young person to endorse a probation order pursuant to subsection (5) does not affect the validity of the order.
- (7) A probation order made under paragraph 20(1)(j) comes into force
- (a) on the date on which the order is made; or
  - (b) where the young person in respect of whom the order is made is committed to continuous custody, on the expiration of the period of custody.
- (8) A young person may be given notice to appear before the youth court pursuant to paragraph (1)(b) orally or in writing.
- (9) If a young person to whom a notice is given in writing to appear before the youth court pursuant to paragraph (1)(b) does not appear at the time and place named in the notice and it is proved that a copy of the notice was served on him, a youth court may issue a warrant to compel the appearance of the young person. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 23; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 16; c. 1 (4th Supp.), s. 39.

ANNOTATIONS

Subsec. (2) – It was held, considering the predecessor to the section, that para. (f) requires that the condition to be imposed is that the offender reside in such a place as the provincial director may specify. The judge could not provide that the offender reside in a foster home approved by his probation officer: R. v. G. (W.) (1985), 23 C.C.C. (3d) 93 (B.C.C.A.).

Where it has been made a term of probation that the offender reside where placed by a youth worker, it was open to the youth worker to delegate this decision to the offender's social worker, since the offender was already a ward of the Ministry: R. v. S. (N.) (1992), 73 C.C.C. (3d) 59 (B.C.Y.Ct.).

Subsec. (3) – The duties under para. (c) may be delegated to the clerk of the court. However, the term “proceedings” in this paragraph is not limited to the actual proceedings before the clerk when the probation order is being drawn up. The term must refer to the proceedings as a whole against the young offender, and not merely the last technical step in the preparation of the formal probation order. In order to comply with this section as a whole, the youth court must determine, prior to delegating its functions to a court official, whether a parent is entitled to receive a copy of the probation order, as a parent in attendance at the disposition proceedings surely would be, or whether the parent should be given a copy of the order in any event, since the parent, although not in attendance, is taking an active interest in the proceedings and therefore should be provided with a copy of the probation order pursuant to subsec. (4). In delegating its duties, the court must properly inform the clerk of the need, be it mandatory or discretionary, to inform a parent in accordance with subsecs. (3) and (4). Failure to provide the parent with the order as required by subsec. (3) affects the validity of the order and a charge of breach of probation must be dismissed: R. v. M. (L.A.) (1994), 92 C.C.C. (3d) 562, 73 O.A.C. 345 (C.A.).

Subsec. (7) – The court has no power to make probation orders consecutive to each other: R. v. L. (T.S.) (1988), 46 C.C.C. (3d) 126, 87 N.S.R. (2d) 240 (C.A.).

CONDITIONS FOR CUSTODY / Factors / Pre-disposition report / Report dispensed with / Reasons.

24. (1) The youth court shall not commit a young person to custody under paragraph 20(1)(k) unless the court considers a committal to custody to be necessary for the protection of society having regard to the seriousness of the offence and the circumstances in which it was committed and having regard to the needs and circumstances of the young person.

(1.1) In making a determination under subsection (1), the youth court shall take the following into account:

- (a) that an order of custody shall not be used as a substitute for appropriate child protection, health and other social measures;
- (b) that a young person who commits an offence that does not involve serious personal injury should be held accountable to the victim and to society through non-custodial dispositions whenever appropriate; and
- (c) that custody shall only be imposed when all available alternatives to custody that are reasonable in the circumstances have been considered.

(2) Subject to the subsection (3), before making an order of committal to custody, the youth court shall consider a pre-disposition report.

(3) The youth court may, with the consent of the prosecutor and the young person or his counsel, dispense with the pre-disposition report required under subsection (2) if the youth court is satisfied, having regard to the circumstances, that the report is unnecessary or that it would not be in the best interests of the young person to require one.

(4) Where the youth court makes a disposition in respect of a young person under paragraph 20(1)(k), the youth court shall state the reasons why any other disposition or dispositions under subsection 20(1), without the disposition under paragraph 20(1)(k), would not have been adequate. R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 17; 1995, c. 19, s. 15.

ANNOTATIONS

Subsec. (1) – A disposition of secure custody, as opposed to open custody, may be imposed for reasons other than merely security reasons and, in particular, may be imposed as a matter of general deterrence. The factors to be taken into account are whether or not secure custody is necessary to prevent escape, further misconduct or violence, the effect upon the rehabilitation of the offender, factors of general and specific deterrence, and expression of society's abhorrence of certain crimes: R. v. H. (S.R.) (1990), 56 C.C.C. (3d) 46, 38 O.A.C. 127 (C.A.).

Subsec. (2) – Neither the court's convenience nor concern about the young offender's disruptive influence in the small community warranted the court in proceeding to impose a custodial disposition after consideration of a brief report which did not meet the requirements of a pre-disposition report as set out in s. 14(2): R. v. I. (R.) (1985), 17 C.C.C. (3d) 523 (Ont. C.A.).

This subsection imposes a mandatory duty on the judge and his failure to comply with it renders his order of committal to custody a nullity: R. v. S. (M.S.) (1985), 23 C.C.C. (3d) 95 (Sask. C.A.).

DEFINITIONS / "open custody" / "secure custody" / Youth court to specify type of custody / Provincial director to specify level of custody / Factors.

24.1 (1) In this section and sections 24.2, 24.3, 28 and 29,

"open custody" means custody in

(a) a community residential centre, group home, child care institution, or forest or wilderness camp, or

(b) any other like place or facility designated by the Lieutenant Governor in Council of a province or his delegate as a place of open custody for the purposes of this Act, and includes a place or facility within a class of such places or facilities so designated;

"secure custody" means custody in a place or facility designated by the Lieutenant Governor in Council of a province for the secure containment or restraint of young persons, and includes a place or facility within a class of such places or facilities so designated.

(2) Subject to subsection (3), where the youth court commits a young person to custody under paragraph 20(1)(k) or (k.1) or makes an order under subsection 26.1(1) or paragraph 26.6(2)(b), it shall specify in the order whether the custody is to be open custody or secure custody.

(3) In a province in which the Lieutenant Governor in Council has designated the provincial director to determine the level of custody, the provincial director shall, where a young person is committed to custody under paragraph 20(1)(k) or (k.1) or an order is made under subsection 26.1(1) or paragraph 26.6(2)(b), specify whether the young person shall be placed in open custody or secure custody.

(4) In deciding whether a young person shall be placed in open custody or secure custody, the youth court or the provincial director shall take into account the following factors:

(a) that a young person should be placed in a level of custody involving the least degree of containment and restraint, having regard to

(i) the seriousness of the offence in respect of which the young person was committed to custody and the circumstances in which that offence was committed,

(ii) the needs and circumstances of the young person, including proximity to family, school, employment and support services,

(iii) the safety of other young persons in custody, and

(iv) the interests of society;

(b) that the level of custody should allow for the best possible match of programs to the young person's needs and behaviour, having regard to the findings of any assessment in respect of the young person;

(c) the likelihood of escape if the young person is placed in open custody; and

(d) the recommendations, if any, of the youth court or the provincial director, as the case may be. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 24; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 17; 1992, c. 11, s. 4; 1995, c. 19, s. 16.

ANNOTATIONS

Subsec. (1) – In acting under this subsection the Lieutenant Governor in Council is limited to designation of places of open custody to those kinds specified in para. (a) and (b). However, a particular cottage in a youth centre may be validly designated as a place of open custody, even if entrance to and egress from the centre itself is controlled by double-locking doors, which are electronically controlled: R. v. F (1984), 16 C.C.C. (3d) 258, [1985] 2 W.W.R. 379 sub nom. F. (C.) v. R. and Minister of Community Services and Corrections, A.-G. Man., Bock and Bakken (Man. C.A.).

However, an area of a county jail, used to incarcerate adults, may not be validly designated as a place of open custody. Nor may the same area be designated as both a place of open and secure custody: R. v. F. (L.H.) (1985), 24 C.C.C. (3d) 152 (P.E.I.S.C.).

Similarly, it was held that designation of a former county jail as a place of open and secure custody without differentiation and which lacked facilities and programmes for guidance and assistance of offenders was not properly designated as a place of open custody: R. v. B. (D.) (1986), 27 C.C.C. (3d) 468 (N.S.S.C.).

PLACE OF CUSTODY / Warrant of committal / Exception / Young person to be held separate from adults / Subsection 7(2) applies / Transfer / Transfer to open custody—youth court / No transfer to secure custody—youth court / Exception—transfer to secure custody—youth court / Transfer to secure custody—provincial director / Transfer to secure custody / provincial director / Notice / Where application for review is made / Interim custody.

24.2 (1) Subject to this section and sections 24.3 and 24.5, a young person who is committed to custody shall be placed in open custody or secure custody, as specified pursuant to subsection 24.1(2) or (3), at such place or facility as the provincial director may specify.

(2) Where a young person is committed to custody, the youth court shall issue or cause to be issued a warrant of committal.

(3) A young person who is committed to custody may, in the course of being transferred from custody to the court or from the court to custody, be held under the supervision and control of a peace officer or in such place of temporary detention referred to in subsection 7(1) as the provincial director may specify.

(4) Subject to this section and section 24.5, a young person who is committed to custody shall be held separate and apart from any adult who is detained or held in custody.

(5) Subsection 7(2) applies, with such modifications as the circumstances require, in respect of a person held in a place of temporary detention pursuant to subsection (3).

(6) A young person who is committed to custody may, during the period of custody, be transferred by the provincial director from one place or facility of open custody to another or from one place or facility of secure custody to another.

(7) No young person who is committed to secure custody pursuant to subsection 24.1(2) may be transferred to a place or facility of open custody except in accordance with sections 28 to 31.

(8) Subject to subsection (9), no young person who is committed to open custody pursuant to subsection 24.1(2) may be transferred to a place or facility of secure custody.

(9) Where a young person is placed in open custody pursuant to subsection 24.1(2), the provincial director may transfer the young person from a place or facility of open custody to a place or facility of secure custody for a period not exceeding fifteen days if

- (a) the young person escapes or attempts to escape lawful custody; or
- (b) the transfer is, in the opinion of the provincial director, necessary for the safety of the young person or the safety of others in the place or facility of open custody.

(10) The provincial director may transfer a young person from a place or facility of secure custody to a place or facility of open custody when the provincial director is satisfied that the needs of the young person and the interests of society would be better served thereby.

(11) The provincial director may transfer a young person from a place or facility of open custody to a place or facility of secure custody when the provincial director is satisfied that the needs of the young person and the interests of society would be better served thereby

- (a) having considered the factors set out in subsection 24.1(4); and
- (b) having determined that there has been a material change in circumstances since the young person was placed in open custody.

(12) The provincial director shall cause a notice in writing of the decision to transfer a young person under subsection (11) to be given to the young person and the young person's parents and set out in that notice the reasons for the transfer.

(13) Where an application for review under section 28.1 of a transfer under subsection (11) is made to a youth court,

- (a) the provincial director shall cause such notice as may be directed by rules of court applicable to the youth court or, in the absence of such direction, at least five clear days notice of the review to be given in writing to the young person and the young person's parents; and
- (b) the youth court shall forthwith, after the notice required under paragraph (a) is given, review the transfer.

(14) Where an application for review under section 28.1 of a transfer under subsection (11) is made to a youth court, the young person shall remain in a place or facility of secure custody until the review is heard by the youth court unless the provincial director directs otherwise. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 24; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 17; 1995, c. 19, s. 17.

CONSECUTIVE DISPOSITIONS OF CUSTODY / Concurrent dispositions of custody.

24.3 (1) Where a young person is committed to open custody and secure custody pursuant to subsection 24.1(2), any portions of which dispositions are to be served consecutively, the disposition of secure custody shall be served first without regard to the order in which the dispositions were imposed.

(2) Where a young person is committed to open custody and secure custody pursuant to subsection 24.1(2), any portions of which dispositions are to be served concurrently, the concurrent portions of the dispositions shall be served in secure custody. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 24; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 17; 1995, c. 19, s. 18.

COMMITTAL TO CUSTODY DEEMED CONTINUOUS / Availability of place of intermittent custody.

24.4 (1) A young person who is committed to custody under paragraph 20(1)(k) shall be deemed to be committed to continuous custody unless the youth court specifies otherwise.

(2) Before making an order of committal to intermittent custody under paragraph 20(1)(k), the youth court shall require the prosecutor to make available to the court for its consideration a report of the provincial director as to the availability of a place of custody in which an order of intermittent custody can be enforced and, where the report discloses that no such place of custody is available, the court shall not make the order. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 24; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 17.

TRANSFER TO ADULT FACILITY / Where disposition and sentence concurrent.

24.5 (1) Where a young person is committed to custody under paragraph 20(1)(k) or (k.1), the youth court may, on application of the provincial director made at any time after the young person attains the age of eighteen years, after affording the young person an opportunity to be heard, authorize the provincial director to direct that the young person serve the disposition or the remaining portion thereof in a provincial correctional facility for adults, if the court considers it to be in the best interests of the young person or in the public interest, but in that event, the provisions of this Act shall continue to apply in respect of that person.

(2) Where a young person is committed to custody under paragraph 20(1)(k) or (k.1) and is concurrently under sentence of imprisonment imposed in ordinary court, the young person may, in the discretion of the provincial director, serve the disposition and sentence, or any portion thereof, in a place of custody for young persons, in a provincial correctional facility for adults or, where the unexpired portion of the sentence is two years or more, in a penitentiary. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 24; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 17; 1992, c. 11, s. 5.

ANNOTATIONS

Where the young offender facilities are not adequate to deal with older offenders who commit offences while under the age of 18 years, the preferable solution is for the provincial director to apply under this section, rather than for the youth court to transfer the offender to adult court pursuant to s. 16. Offenders in a provincial institution are less likely to be exposed to the pernicious influences that might come their way in a penitentiary setting: R. v. D. (G.J.) (1991), 62 C.C.C. (3d) 433, 112 A.R. 18 (C.A.).

TRANSFER OF DISPOSITION / No transfer outside province before appeal completed / Transfer to a province where person is adult.

25. (1) Where a disposition has been made under paragraphs 20(1)(b) to (g) or paragraph 20(1)(j) or (l) in respect of a young person and the young person or a parent with whom the young person resides is or becomes a resident of a territorial division outside the jurisdiction of the youth court that made the disposition, whether in the same or in another province, a youth court judge in the territorial division in which the disposition was made may, on the application of the Attorney General or an agent of the Attorney General or on the application of the young person or the young person's parent with the consent of the Attorney General or an agent of the Attorney General, transfer the disposition and such portion of the record of the case as is appropriate to a youth court in the other territorial division, and all subsequent proceedings relating to the case shall thereafter be carried out and enforced by that court.

(2) No disposition may be transferred from one province to another under this section until the time for an appeal against the disposition or the finding on which the disposition was based has expired or until all proceedings in respect of any such appeal have been completed.

(3) Where an application is made under subsection (1) to transfer the disposition of a young person to a province in which the young person is an adult, a youth court judge may, with the consent of the Attorney General, transfer the disposition and the record of the case to the youth court in the province to which the transfer is sought, and the youth court to which the case is transferred shall have full jurisdiction in respect of the disposition as if that court had made the disposition, and the person shall be further dealt with in accordance with this Act. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 25; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 18; 1995, c. 19, s. 19.

INTERPROVINCIAL ARRANGEMENTS FOR PROBATION OR CUSTODY / Youth court retains jurisdiction / Waiver of jurisdiction.

25.1 (1) Where a disposition has been made under paragraphs 20(1)(j) to (k.1) in respect of a young person, the disposition in one province may be dealt with in any other province pursuant to any agreement that may have been made between those provinces.

(2) Subject to subsection (3), where a disposition made in respect of a young person is dealt with pursuant to this section in a province other than that in which the disposition was made, the youth court of the province in which the disposition was made shall, for all purposes of this Act, retain exclusive jurisdiction over the young person as if the disposition were dealt with within that province, and any warrant or process issued in respect of the young person may be executed or served in any place in Canada outside the province where the disposition was made as if it were executed or served in that province.

(3) Where a disposition made in respect of a young person is dealt with pursuant to this section in a province other than that in which the disposition was made, the youth court of the province in which the disposition was made may, with the consent in writing of the Attorney General of that province or his delegate and the young person, waive its jurisdiction, for the purpose of any proceeding under this Act, to the youth court of the province in which the disposition is dealt with, in which case the youth court in the province in which the disposition is so dealt with shall have full jurisdiction in respect of the disposition as if that court had made the disposition. R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 19; 1992, c. 11 s. 6; 1995, c. 19, s. 20.

FAILURE TO COMPLY WITH DISPOSITION.

26. A person who is subject to a disposition made under paragraphs 20(1)(b) to (g) or paragraph 20(1)(j) or (l) and who wilfully fails or refuses to comply with that order is guilty of an offence punishable on summary conviction. R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 19.

ANNOTATIONS

An accused who, following his 18th birthday, fails to comply with a disposition made by the youth court is no longer a young person as defined by s. 2 and is properly tried for this offence in adult court: R. v. M. (R.E.) (1988), 46 C.C.C. (3d) 315 (B.C.S.C.).

Further, the disposition provisions of this Act do not apply to such an accused and he is to be sentenced in accordance with the sentencing provisions of the Criminal Code: R. v. Ellsworth (1991), 68 C.C.C. (3d) 246 (Nfld. S.C.).

CONTINUATION OF CUSTODY / Idem / Factors / Youth court to order appearance of young person / Report / Written or oral report / Provisions apply / Notice of hearing / Statement of right to counsel / Service of notice / Where notice not given / Reasons / Review provisions apply / Where application denied.

26.1 (1) Where a young person is held in custody pursuant to a disposition made under paragraph 20(1)(k.1) and an application is made to the youth court by the Attorney General, or the Attorney General's agent, within a reasonable time prior to the expiration of the period of custody, the provincial director of the province in which the young person is held in custody shall cause the young person to be brought before the youth court and the youth court may, after affording both parties and the parents of the young person an opportunity to be heard and if it is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds to believe that the young person is likely to commit an offence causing the death of or serious harm to another person prior to the expiration of the disposition the young person is then serving, order that the young person remain in custody for a period not exceeding the remainder of the disposition.

(1.1) Where the hearing for an application under subsection (1) cannot be completed before the expiration of the period of custody, the court may order that the young person remain in custody pending the determination of the application if the court is satisfied that the application was made in a reasonable time, having regard to all the circumstances, and that there are compelling reasons for keeping the young person in custody.

(2) For the purpose of determining an application under subsection (1), the youth court shall take into consideration any factor that is relevant to the case of the young person including, without limiting the generality of the foregoing,

- (a) evidence of a pattern of persistent violent behaviour and, in particular,
  - (i) the number of offences committed by the young person that caused physical or psychological harm to any other person,
  - (ii) the young person's difficulties in controlling violent impulses to the point of endangering the safety of any other person,
  - (iii) the use of weapons in the commission of any offence,
  - (iv) explicit threats of violence,
  - (v) behaviour of a brutal nature associated with the commission of any offence, and
  - (vi) a substantial degree of indifference on the part of the young person as to the reasonably foreseeable consequences, to other persons, of the young person's behaviour;
- (b) psychiatric or psychological evidence that a physical or mental illness or disorder of the young person is of such a nature that the young person is likely to commit prior to the expiration of the disposition the young person is then serving, an offence causing the death of or serious harm to another person;
- (c) reliable information that satisfies the youth court that the young person is planning to commit, prior to the expiration of the disposition the young person is then serving, an offence causing the death of or serious harm to another person; and
- (d) the availability of supervision programs in the community that would offer adequate protection to the public from the risk that the young person might otherwise present until the expiration of the disposition the young person is then serving.

(3) Where a provincial director fails to cause a young person to be brought before the youth court under subsection (1), the youth court shall order the provincial director to cause the young person to be brought before the youth court forthwith.

(4) For the purpose of determining an application under subsection (1), the youth court shall require the provincial director to cause to be prepared, and to submit to the youth court, a report setting out any information of which the provincial director is aware with respect to the factors referred to in subsection (2) that may be of assistance to the court.

(5) A report referred to in subsection (4) shall be in writing unless it cannot reasonably be committed to writing, in which case it may, with leave of the youth court, be submitted orally in court.

(6) Subsections 14(4) to (10) apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, in respect of a report referred to in subsection (4).

(7) Where an application is made under subsection (1) in respect of a young person, the Attorney General or the Attorney General's agent shall cause such notice as may be directed by rules of court applicable to the youth court or, in the absence of such direction, at least five clear days notice of the hearing to be given in writing to the young person and the young person's parents and the provincial director.

(8) Any notice given to a parent under subsection (7) shall include a statement that the young person has the right to be represented by counsel.

(9) A notice under subsection (7) may be served personally or may be sent by registered mail.

(10) Where notice under subsection (7) is not given in accordance with this section, the youth court may

- (a) adjourn the hearing and order that the notice be given in such manner and to such person as it directs; or
- (b) dispense with the giving of the notice where, in the opinion of the youth court, having regard to the circumstances, the giving of the notice may be dispensed with.

(11) Where a youth court makes an order under subsection (1), it shall state its reasons for the order in the record of the case and shall

- (a) provide or cause to be provided a copy of the order, and
- (b) on request, provide or cause to be provided a transcript or copy of the reasons for the order to the young person in respect of whom the order was made, the counsel and parents of the young person, the Attorney General or the Attorney General's agent, the provincial director and the review board, if any has been established or designated.

(12) Subsections 16(9) to (11) apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, in respect of an order made, or the refusal to make an order, under subsection (1).

(13) Where an application under subsection (1) is denied, the court may, with the consent of the young person, the Attorney General and the provincial director, proceed as though the young person had been brought before the court as required under subsection 26.2(1). 1992, c. 11, s. 7.

CONDITIONAL SUPERVISION / Conditions to be included in order / Other conditions / Temporary conditions / Conditions to be set at first opportunity / Report / Provisions apply / Idem.

26.2 (1) The provincial director of the province in which a young person is held in custody pursuant to a disposition made under paragraph 20(1)(k.1) or, where applicable, an order made under subsection 26.1 (1), shall cause the young person to be brought before the youth court at least one month prior to the expiration of the period of custody and the court shall, after affording the young person an opportunity to be heard, by order, set the conditions of the young person's conditional supervision.

(2) In setting conditions for the purposes of subsection (1), the youth court shall include in the order the following conditions, namely, that the young person

- (a) keep the peace and be of good behaviour;
- (b) appear before the youth court when required by the court to do so;
- (c) report to the provincial director immediately on release, and thereafter under the supervision of the provincial director or a person designated by the youth court;

- (d) inform the provincial director immediately on being arrested or questioned by the police;
- (e) report to the police, or any named individual, as instructed by the provincial director;
- (f) advise the provincial director of the young person's address of residence on release and after release report immediately to the clerk of the youth court or the provincial director any change
  - (i) in that address,
  - (ii) in the young person's normal occupation, including employment, vocational or educational training and volunteer work,
  - (iii) in the young person's family or financial situation, and
  - (iv) that may reasonably be expected to affect the young person's ability to comply with the conditions of the order;
- (g) not own, possess or have the control of any weapon, as defined in section 2 of the Criminal Code, except as authorized by the order; and

NOTE: Subsection (2)(g) replaced 1995, c. 39, s. 180 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

- (g) not own, possess or have the control of any weapon, ammunition, prohibited ammunition, prohibited device or explosive substance, except as authorized by the order; and
- (h) comply with such reasonable instructions as the provincial director considers necessary in respect of any condition of the conditional supervision in order to prevent a breach of that condition or to protect society.

3) In setting conditions for the purposes of subsection (1), the youth court may include in the order the following conditions, namely, that the young person

- (a) on release, travel directly to the young person's place of residence, or to such other place as is noted in the order;
- (b) make reasonable efforts to obtain and maintain suitable employment;
- (c) attend school or such other place of learning, training or recreation as is appropriate, if the court is satisfied that a suitable program is available for the young person at such a place;
- (d) reside with a parent, or such other adult as the court considers appropriate, who is willing to provide for the care and maintenance of the young person;
- (e) reside in such place as the provincial director may specify;
- (f) remain within the territorial jurisdiction of one or more courts named in the order; and
- (g) comply with such other reasonable conditions set out in the order as the court considers desirable, including conditions for securing the good conduct of the young person and for preventing the commission by the young person of other offences.

4) Where a provincial director is required under subsection (1) to cause a young person to be brought before the youth court but cannot do so for reasons beyond the young person's control, the provincial director shall so advise the youth court and the court shall, by order, set such temporary conditions for the young person's conditional supervision as are appropriate in the circumstances.

5) Where an order is made under subsection (4), the provincial director shall bring the young person before the youth court as soon thereafter as the circumstances permit and the court shall then set the conditions of the young person's conditional supervision.

6) For the purpose of setting conditions under this section, the youth court shall require the provincial director to cause to be prepared, and to submit to the youth court, a report setting out any information that may be of assistance to the court.

(7) Subsections 26.1(3) and (5) to (10) apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, in respect of any proceedings held pursuant to subsection (1).

(8) Subsections 16(9) to (11) and 23(3) to (9) apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, in respect of an order made under subsection (1). 1992, c. 11, s. 7.

SUSPENSION OF CONDITIONAL SUPERVISION.

26.3 Where the provincial director has reasonable grounds to believe that a young person has breached or is about to breach a condition of an order made under subsection 26.2(1), the provincial director may, in writing,

- (a) suspend the conditional supervision; and
- (b) order that the young person be remanded to such place of custody as the provincial director considers appropriate until a review is conducted under section 26.5 and, if applicable, section 26.6. 1992, c. 11, s. 7.

APPREHENSION / Warrants / Peace officer may arrest / Requirement to bring before provincial director / Release or remand in custody.

26.4 (1) Where the conditional supervision of a young person is suspended under section 26.3, the provincial director may issue a warrant in writing, authorizing the apprehension of the young person and, until the young person is apprehended, the young person is deemed not to be continuing to serve the disposition the young person is then serving.

(2) A warrant issued under subsection (1) shall be executed by any peace officer to whom it is given at any place in Canada and has the same force and effect in all parts of Canada as if it had been originally issued or subsequently endorsed by a provincial court judge or other lawful authority having jurisdiction in the place where it is executed.

(3) Where a peace officer believes on reasonable grounds that a warrant issued under subsection (1) is in force in respect of a young person, the peace officer may arrest the young person without the warrant at any place in Canada.

(4) Where a young person is arrested pursuant to subsection (3) and detained, the peace officer making the arrest shall cause the young person to be brought before the provincial director or a person designated by the provincial director

- (a) where the provincial director or the designated person is available within a period of twenty-four hours after the young person is arrested, without unreasonable delay and in any event within that period; and
- (b) where the provincial director or the designated person is not available within the period referred to in paragraph (a), as soon as possible.

(5) Where a young person is brought, pursuant to subsection (4), before the provincial director or a person designated by the provincial director, the provincial director or the designated person

- (a) if not satisfied that there are reasonable grounds to believe that the young person is the young person in respect of whom the warrant referred to in subsection (1) was issued, shall release the young person; or
- (b) if satisfied that there are reasonable grounds to believe that the young person is the young person in respect of whom the warrant referred to in subsection (1) was issued, may remand the young person in custody to await execution of the warrant, but if no warrant for the young person's arrest is executed within period of six days after the time the young person is remanded in such custody, the person in whose custody the young person then is shall release the young person. 1992, c. 11, s. 7.

REVIEW BY PROVINCIAL DIRECTOR.

26.5 Forthwith after the remand to custody of a young person whose conditional supervision has been suspended under section 26.3, or forthwith after being informed of the arrest of such a young person, the provincial director shall review the case and, within forty-eight hours, cancel the suspension of the conditional supervision or refer the case to the youth court for a review under section 26.6. 1992, c. 11, s. 7.

REVIEW BY YOUTH COURT / Order / Reasons / Provisions apply / Idem.

26.6 (1) Where the case of a young person is referred to the youth court under section 26.5, the provincial director shall, as soon as is practicable, cause the young person to be brought before the youth court, and the youth court shall, after affording the young person an opportunity to be heard,

- (a) if the court is not satisfied on reasonable grounds that the young person has breached or was about to breach a condition of the conditional supervision, cancel the suspension of the conditional supervision; or
  - (b) if the court is satisfied on reasonable grounds that the young person has breached or was about to breach a condition of the conditional supervision, review the decision of the provincial director to suspend the conditional supervision and make an order under subsection (2).
- (2) On completion of a review under subsection (1), the youth court shall order
- (a) the cancellation of the suspension of the conditional supervision, and where the court does so, the court may vary the conditions of the conditional supervision or impose new conditions; or
  - (b) the continuation of the suspension of the conditional supervision for such period of time, not to exceed the remainder of the disposition the young person is then serving, as the court considers appropriate, and where the court does so, the court shall order that the young person remain in custody.

(3) Where a youth court makes an order under subsection (2), it shall state its reasons for the order in the record of the case and shall

- (a) provide or cause to be provided a copy of the order, and
- (b) on request, provide or cause to be provided a transcript or copy of the reasons for the order to the young person in respect of whom the order was made, the counsel and parents of the young person, the Attorney General or the Attorney General's agent, the provincial director and the review board, if any has been established or designated.

(4) Subsections 26.1(3) and (5) to (10) and 26.2(6) apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, in respect of a review under this section.

(5) Subsections 16(9) to (11) apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, in respect of an order made under subsection (2). 1992, c. 11, s. 7.

APPEALS

APPEALS FOR INDICTABLE OFFENCES / Appeals for summary conviction offences / Appeals where offences are tried jointly / Deemed election / Where the youth court is a superior court / Where the youth court is a county or district court / Appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada / No appeal from disposition on review.

27. (1) An appeal lies under this Act in respect of an indictable offence or an offence that the Attorney General or his agent elects to proceed with as an indictable offence in accordance with Part XXI of the Criminal Code, which Part applies with such modifications as the circumstances requires.

(1.1) An appeal lies under this Act in respect of an offence punishable on summary conviction or an offence that the Attorney General or his agent elects to proceed with as an offence punishable on summary conviction in accordance with Part XXVII of the Criminal Code, which Part applies with such modifications as the circumstances require.

(1.2) An appeal involving one or more indictable offences and one or more summary conviction offences that are tried jointly or in respect of which dispositions are jointly made lies under this Act in accordance with Part XXI of the Criminal Code, which applies with such modifications as the circumstances require.

(2) For the purpose of appeals under this Act, where no election is made in respect of an offence that may be prosecuted by indictment or proceeded with by way of summary conviction, the Attorney General or his agent shall be deemed to have elected to proceed with the offence as an offence punishable on summary conviction.

(3) In any province where the youth court is a superior court, an appeal under subsection (1.1) shall be made to the court of appeal of the province.

(4) In any province where the youth court is a county or district court, an appeal under subsection (1.1) shall be made to the superior court of the province.

(5) No appeal lies pursuant to subsection (1) from a judgment of the court of appeal in respect of a finding of guilt or an order dismissing an information to the Supreme Court of Canada unless leave to appeal is granted by the Supreme Court of Canada within twenty-one days after the judgment of the court of appeal is pronounced or within such extended time as the Supreme Court of Canada or a judge thereof may, for special reasons, allow.

(6) No appeal lies from a disposition under sections 28 to 32. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 27; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 20; 1995, c. 19, s. 21.

ANNOTATIONS

In view of subsec. (5), no appeal lies as of right to the Supreme Court of Canada in matters governed by the Young Offenders Act. Thus, even if there is a dissent in law in the court of appeal, leave to appeal must be obtained: R. v. C. (T.L.), [1994] 2 S.C.R. 1012, 92 C.C.C. (3d) 444, 32 C.R. (4th) 243.

REVIEW OF DISPOSITIONS

AUTOMATIC REVIEW OF DISPOSITION INVOLVING CUSTODY / Idem / Optional review of disposition involving custody / Grounds for review under subsection (3) / No review where appeal pending / Youth court may order appearance of young person for review / Progress report / Additional information in progress report / Written or oral report / Provisions of subsections 14(4) to (10) to apply / Notice of review from provincial director / Notice of review from person requesting it / Statement of right to counsel / Service of notice / Notice may be waived / Where notice not given / Decision of the youth court after review.

28. (1) Where a young person is committed to custody pursuant to a disposition made in respect of an offence for a period exceeding one year, the provincial director of the province in which the young person is held in custody shall cause the young person to be brought before the youth court forthwith at the end of one year from the date of the most recent disposition made in respect of the offence, and the youth court shall review the disposition.

(2) Where a young person is committed to custody pursuant to dispositions made in respect of more than one offence for a total period exceeding one year, the provincial director of the province in which the young person is held in custody shall cause the young person to be brought before the youth court forthwith at the end of one year from the date of the earliest disposition made, and the youth court shall review the dispositions.

(3) Where a young person is committed to custody pursuant to a disposition made under subsection 20(1) in respect of an offence, the provincial director may, on the provincial director's own initiative, and shall, on the request of the young person, the young person's parent or the Attorney General or an agent of the Attorney General, on any of the grounds set out in subsection (4), cause the young person to be brought before a youth court

(a) where the committal to custody is for a period not exceeding one year, once at any time after the expiration of the greater of

(i) thirty days after the date of the disposition made under subsection 20(1) in respect of the offence, and

(ii) one third of the period of the disposition made under subsection 20(1) in respect of the offence, and

(b) where the committal to custody is for a period exceeding one year, at any time after six months after the date of the most recent disposition made in respect of the offence, or, with leave of a youth court judge, at any other time, and where a youth court is satisfied that there are grounds for the review under subsection (4), the court shall review the disposition.

(4) A disposition made in respect of a young person may be reviewed under subsection (3)

(a) on the ground that the young person has made sufficient progress to justify a change in disposition;

(b) on the ground that the circumstances that led to the committal to custody have changed materially;

(c) on the ground that new services or programs are available that were not available at the time of the disposition; or

(c.1) on the ground that the opportunities for rehabilitation are now greater in the community; or

(d) on such other grounds as the youth court considers appropriate.

(5) No review of a disposition in respect of which an appeal has been taken shall be made under this section until all proceedings in respect of any such appeal have been completed.

(6) Where a provincial director is required under subsections (1) to (3) to cause a young person to be brought before the youth court and fails to do so, the youth court may, on application made by the young person, his parent or the Attorney General or his agent, or on its own motion, order the provincial director to cause the young person to be brought before the youth court.

(7) The youth court shall, before reviewing under this section a disposition made in respect of a young person, require the provincial director to cause to be prepared, and to submit to the youth court, a progress report on the performance of the young person since the disposition took effect.

(8) A person preparing a progress report in respect of a young person may include in the report such information relating to the personal and family history and present environment of the young person as he considers advisable.

(9) A progress report shall be in writing unless it cannot reasonably be committed to writing, in which case it may, with leave of the youth court, be submitted orally in court.

(10) The provisions of subsections 14(4) to (10) apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, in respect of progress reports.

(11) Where a disposition made in respect of a young person is to be reviewed under subsection (1) or (2), the provincial director shall cause such notice as may be directed by rules of court applicable to the youth court or, in the absence of such direction, at least five clear days notice of the review to be given in writing to the young person, his parents and the Attorney General or his agent.

(12) Where a review of a disposition made in respect of a young person is requested under subsection (3), the person requesting the review shall cause such notice as may be directed by rules of court applicable to the youth court or, in the absence of such direction, at least five clear days notice of the review to be given in writing to the young person, his parents and the Attorney General or his agent.

(13) Any notice given to a parent under subsection (11) or (12) shall include a statement that the young person whose disposition is to be reviewed has the right to be represented by counsel.

(14) A notice under subsection (11) or (12) may be served personally or may be sent by registered mail.

(15) Any of the persons entitled to notice under subsection (11) or (12) may waive the right to such notice.

(16) Where notice under subsection (11) or (12) is not given in accordance with this section, the youth court may

- (a) adjourn the proceedings and order that the notice be given in such manner and to such person as it directs; or
- (b) dispense with the notice where, in the opinion of the court, having regard to the circumstances, notice may be dispensed with.

(17) Where a youth court reviews under this section a disposition made in respect of a young person, it may, after affording the young person, his parent, the Attorney General or his agent and the provincial director an opportunity to be heard, having regard to the needs of the young person and the interests of society,

- (a) confirm the disposition;
- (b) where the young person is in secure custody pursuant to subsection 24.1(2), by order direct that the young person be placed in open custody; or
- (c) release the young person from custody and place the young person
  - (i) on probation in accordance with section 23 for a period not exceeding the remainder of the period for which the young person was committed to custody, or
  - (ii) under conditional supervision in accordance with the procedure set out in section 26.2, with such modifications as the circumstances require, for a period not exceeding the remainder of the disposition the young person is then serving. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 28; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 21; 1992, c. 11, s. 8; 1995, c. 19, s. 22.

(18) [Repealed. R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 21(3).]

ANNOTATIONS

Except, semble, where failure to change the venue of the review under this section would result in inconvenience so great as to result in a denial of justice, the review must take place in the judicial district where the original order of committal was made: R. v. W. (C.) (1985), 21 C.C.C. (3d) 365 (Ont. Prov. Ct.).

Subsection (5), which limits the application of this section where an appeal has been taken, does not apply where the appeal is only as to the finding of guilt: R. v. B. (L.C.) (1991), 65 C.C.C. (3d) 574 (Ont. Ct. (Prov. Div.)).

APPLICATION TO COURT FOR REVIEW OF LEVEL OF CUSTODY / Report / Provisions apply / Decision of the youth court / Decision is final.

28.1 (1) Where a young person is placed in secure custody pursuant to subsection 24.1(3) or transferred to secure custody pursuant to subsection 24.2(11), the youth court shall review the level of custody if an application therefor is made by the young person or the young person's parent.

(2) The youth court shall, before conducting a review under this section, require the provincial director to cause to be prepared, and to submit to the youth court, a report setting out the reasons for the placement or transfer.

(3) The provisions of subsections 14(4) to (10) apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, in respect of the report referred to in subsection (2), and the provisions of subsections 28(11) to (16) apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, to every review under this section.

(4) Where the youth court conducts a review under this section, it may, after affording the young person, the young person's parents and the provincial director an opportunity to be heard, confirm or alter the level of custody, having regard to the needs of the young person and the interests of society.

(5) A decision of the youth court on a review under this section in respect of any particular placement or transfer is, subject to any subsequent order made pursuant to a review under section 28 or 29, final. 1995, c. 19, s. 23.

RECOMMENDATION OF PROVINCIAL DIRECTOR FOR TRANSFER TO OPEN CUSTODY OR FOR PROBATION / Contents of notice / Application to court for review of recommendation / Subsections 28(5), (7) to (10) and (12) to (17) apply / Where no application for review made under subsection (2) / Conditions in probation order / Notice where no direction made / Provincial director may request review / Where the provincial director requests a review.

29. (1) Where a young person is held in custody pursuant to a disposition, the provincial director may, if he is satisfied that the needs of the young person and the interests of society would be better served thereby, cause notice in writing to be given to the young person, his parent and the Attorney General or his agent that he recommends that the young person

- (a) be transferred from a place or facility of secure custody to a place or facility of open custody, where the young person is held in a place or facility or secure custody pursuant to subsection 24.1(2), or
  - (b) be released from custody and placed on probation or, where the young person is in custody pursuant to a disposition made under paragraph 20(1)(k.1), placed under conditional supervision,
- and give a copy of the notice to the youth court.

(1.1) The provincial director shall include in any notice given under subsection (1) the reasons for the recommendation and

- (a) in the case of a recommendation that the young person be placed on probation, the conditions that the provincial director would recommend be attached to a probation order; and
- (b) in the case of a recommendation that the young person be placed under conditional supervision, the conditions that the provincial director would recommend be set pursuant to section 26.2.

(2) Where notice of a recommendation is made under subsection (1) with respect to a disposition made in respect of a young person, the youth court shall, if an application for review is made by the young person, his parent or the Attorney General or his agent within ten days after service of the notice, forthwith review the disposition.

(3) Subject to subsection (4), subsections 28(5), (7) to (10) and (12) to (17) apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, in respect of reviews made under this section and any notice required under subsection 28(12) shall be given to the provincial director.

(4) A youth court that receives a notice under subsection (1) shall, if no application for a review is made under subsection (2),

- (a) in the case of a recommendation that a young person be transferred from a place or facility of secure custody to a place or facility of open custody, order that the young person be so transferred;
- (b) in the case of a recommendation that a young person be released from custody and placed on probation, release the young person and place him on probation in accordance with section 23;
- (b.1) in the case of a recommendation that a young person be released from custody and placed under conditional supervision, release the young person and place the young person under conditional supervision in accordance with section 26.2, having regard to the recommendations of the provincial director; or
- (c) where the court deems it advisable, make no direction under this subsection; and, for greater certainty, an order or direction under this subsection may be made without a hearing.

(4.1) Where the youth court places a young person on probation pursuant to paragraph (4)(b), the court shall include in the probation order such conditions referred to in section 23 as it considers advisable, having regard to the recommendations of the provincial director.

(4.2) Where a youth court, pursuant to paragraph (4)(c), makes no direction under subsection (4), it shall forthwith cause a notice of its decision to be given to the provincial director.

(4.3) Where the provincial director is given a notice under subsection (4.2), he may request a review under this section.

(5) Where the provincial director requests a review pursuant to subsection (4.3),

- (a) the provincial director shall cause such notice as may be directed by rules of court applicable to the youth court or, in the absence of such direction, at least five clear days notice of the review to be given in writing to the young person, his parents and the Attorney General or his agent; and
- (b) the youth court shall forthwith, after the notice required under paragraph (a) is given, review the disposition. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 29; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 22; c. 1 (4th Supp.), s. 40; 1992, c. 11, s. 9; 1995, c. 19, s. 24.

REVIEW BOARD / Other duties of review board / Notice under section 29 / Notice of decision of review board / Decision of review board to take effect where no review / Decision respecting release from custody and probation / Decision respecting release from custody and conditional supervision.

30. (1) Where a review board is established or designated by a province for the purposes of this section, that board shall, subject to this section, carry out in that province the duties and functions of a youth court under sections 28 and 29 other than releasing a young person from custody and placing the young person on probation or under conditional supervision.

(2) Subject to this Act, a review board may carry out any duties or functions that are assigned to it by the province that established or designated it.

(3) Where a review board is established or designated by a province for the purposes of this section, the provincial director shall at the same time as any notice is given under subsection 29(1) cause a copy of the notice to be given to the review board.

(4) A review board shall cause notice of any decision made by it in respect of a young person pursuant to section 28 or 29 to be given forthwith in writing to the young person, his parents, the Attorney General or his agent and the provincial director, and a copy of the notice to be given to the youth court.

(5) Subject to subsection (6), any decision of a review board under this section shall take effect ten days after the decision is made unless an application for review is made under section 31.

(6) Where a review board decides that a young person should be released from custody and placed on probation, it shall so recommend to the youth court and, if no application for a review of the decision is made under section 31, the youth court shall forthwith on the expiration of the ten day period referred to in subsection (5) release the young person from custody and place him on probation in accordance with section 23, and shall include in the probation order such conditions referred to in that section as the court considers advisable having regard to the recommendations of the review board.

(7) Where a review board decides that a young person should be released from custody and placed under conditional supervision, it shall so recommend to the youth court and, if no application for a review of the decision is made under section 31, the youth court shall forthwith, on the expiration of the ten day period referred to in subsection (5), release the young person from custody and place the young person under conditional supervision in accordance with section 26.2, and shall include in the order under that section such conditions as the court considers advisable, having regard to the recommendations of the review board. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 30; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 23; 1992, c. 11, s. 10.

REVIEW BY YOUTH COURT / Subsections 28(5), (7) to (10) and (12) to (18) apply.

31. (1) Where the review board reviews a disposition under section 30, the youth court shall, on the application of the young person in respect of whom the review was made, his parents, the Attorney General or his agent or the provincial director, made within ten days after the decision of the review board is made, forthwith review the decision.

(2) Subsections 28(5), (7) to (10) and (12) to (17) apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, in respect of reviews made under this section and any notice required under subsection 28(12) shall be given to the provincial director. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 31; R.S.C. 1985, c. 1 (4th Supp.), s. 41.

REVIEW OF DISPOSITIONS NOT INVOLVING CUSTODY / Grounds for review / Progress report / Subsections 28(8) to (10) apply / Subsections 28(5) and (12) to (16) apply / Compelling appearance of young person / Decision of the youth court after review / New disposition not to be more onerous / Exception.

32. (1) Where a youth court has made a disposition in respect of a young person, other than or in addition to a disposition under paragraph 20(1)(k), and other than a disposition under paragraph 20(1)(k.1), the youth court shall, on the application of the young person, the young person's parents, the Attorney General or the Attorney General's agent or the provincial director, made at any time after six months from the date of the disposition or, with leave of a youth court judge, at any earlier time, review the disposition if the court is satisfied that there are grounds for a review under subsection (2).

NOTE: Subsection (1) replaced 1995, c. 39, s. 181 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

REVIEW OF OTHER DISPOSITIONS.

32. (1) Where a youth court has made a disposition in respect of a young person, other than a disposition under paragraph 20(1)(k) or (k.1) or section 20.1, the youth court shall, on the application of the young person, the young person's parents, the Attorney General or the Attorney General's agent or the provincial director, made at any time after six months from the date of the disposition or, with leave of a youth court judge, at any earlier time, review the disposition if the court is satisfied that there are grounds for a review under subsection (2).

(2) A review of a disposition may be made under this section

- (a) on the ground that the circumstances that led to the disposition have changed materially;
- (b) on the ground that the young person in respect of whom the review is to be made is unable to comply with or is experiencing serious difficulty in complying with the terms of the disposition;
- (c) on the ground that the terms of the disposition are adversely affecting the opportunities available to the young person to obtain services, education or employment; or
- (d) on such other grounds as the youth court considers appropriate.

(3) The youth court may, before reviewing under this section a disposition made in respect of a young person, require the provincial director to cause to be prepared, and to submit to the youth court, a progress report on the performance of the young person since the disposition took effect.

(4) Subsections 28(8) to (10) apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, in respect of any progress report required under subsection (3).

(5) Subsections 28(5) and (12) to (16) apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, in respect of reviews made under this section and any notice required under subsection 28(12) shall be given to the provincial director.

(6) The youth court may, by summons or warrant, compel a young person in respect of whom a review is to be made under this section to appear before the youth court for the purposes of the review.

(7) Where a youth court reviews under this section a disposition made in respect of a young person, it may, after affording the young person, his parent, the Attorney General or his agent and the provincial director an opportunity to be heard,

- (a) confirm the disposition;
- (b) terminate the disposition and discharge the young person from any further obligation of the disposition; or

- (c) vary the disposition or make such new disposition listed in section 20, other than a committal to custody, for such period of time, not exceeding the remainder of the period of the earlier disposition, as the court deems appropriate in the circumstances of the case.
- (8) Subject to subsection (9), where a disposition made in respect of a young person is reviewed under this section, no disposition made under subsection (7) shall, without the consent of the young person, be more onerous than the remaining portion of the disposition reviewed.
- (9) A youth court may under this section extend the time within which a disposition made under paragraphs 20(1)(b) to (g) is to be complied with by a young person where the court is satisfied that the young person requires more time to comply with the disposition, but in no case shall the extension be for a period of time that expires more than twelve months after the date the disposition would otherwise have expired. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 32; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 24; 1992, c. 11, s. 11.

Transitional provision

NOTE: R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 50 provides as follows:

50. Any proceedings commenced under section 33 of the Young Offenders Act before the coming into force of section 24 of this Act shall be continued and completed as if this Act had not been enacted.

---

NOTE: Enacted 1995, c. 39, s. 182 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

REVIEW OF ORDER MADE UNDER S. 20.1 / Grounds / Decision of review / New order not to be more onerous / Application of provisions.

33. (1) A youth court or other court may, on application, review an order made under section 20.1 at any time after the circumstances set out in subsection 45(1) are realized in respect of any record in relation to the offence that resulted in the order being made.

(2) In conducting a review under this section, the youth court or other court shall take into account

- (a) the nature and circumstances of the offence in respect of which the order was made; and
- (b) the safety of the young person and of other persons.

(3) Where a youth court or other court conducts a review under this section, it may, after affording the young person, one of the young person's parents, the Attorney General or an agent of the Attorney General and the provincial director an opportunity to be heard,

- (a) confirm the order;
- (b) revoke the order; or
- (c) vary the order as it considers appropriate in the circumstances of the case.

(4) No variation of an order made under paragraph (3)(c) may be more onerous than the order being reviewed.

(5) Subsections 32(3) to (5) apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, in respect of a review under this section.

SECTIONS 20 to 26 APPLY TO DISPOSITIONS ON REVIEW / Orders are dispositions.

34. (1) Subject to sections 28 to 32, subsections 20(2) to (8) and sections 21 to 25.1 apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, in respect of dispositions made under sections 28 to 32.

(2) Orders under subsections 26.1(1) and 26.2(1) and paragraph 26.6(2)(b) are deemed to be dispositions for the purposes of section 28. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 34; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 25; 1992, c. 11, s. 12.

TEMPORARY RELEASE FROM CUSTODY

---

TEMPORARY ABSENCE OR DAY RELEASE / Limitation / Revocation of authorization for release / Arrest and return to custody / Prohibition.

35. (1) The provincial director of a province may, subject to any terms or conditions that he considers desirable, authorize a young person committed to custody in the province pursuant to a disposition made under this Act

- (a) to be temporarily released for a period not exceeding fifteen days where, in his opinion, it is necessary or desirable that the young person be absent, with or without escort, for medical, compassionate or humanitarian reasons or for the purpose of rehabilitating the young person or re-integrating him into the community; or
- (b) to be released from custody on such days and during such hours as he specifies in order that the young person may
  - (i) attend school or any other educational or training institution,
  - (ii) obtain or continue employment or perform domestic or other duties required by the young person's family,
  - (iii) participate in a program specified by him that, in his opinion, will enable the young person to better carry out his employment or improve his education or training, or
  - (iv) attend on out-patient treatment program or other program that provides services that are suitable to addressing the young person's needs.

(2) A young person who is released from custody pursuant to subsection (1) shall be released only for such periods of time as are necessary to attain the purpose for which the young person is released.

(3) The provincial director of a province may, at any time, revoke an authorization made under subsection (1).

(4) Where the provincial director revokes an authorization for a young person to be released from custody under subsection (3) or where a young person fails to comply with any term or condition of release from custody under this section, the young person may be arrested without warrant and returned to custody.

(5) A young person who has been committed to custody under this Act shall not be released from custody before the expiration of the period of his custody except in accordance with subsection (1) unless the release is ordered under sections 28 to 31 or otherwise according to law by a court of competent jurisdiction. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 35; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 26; c. 1 (4th Supp.), s. 42; 1995, c. 19, s. 25.

EFFECT OF TERMINATION OF DISPOSITION

EFFECT OF ABSOLUTE DISCHARGE OR TERMINATION OF DISPOSITIONS /

Disqualifications removed / Applications for employment / Punishment / Finding of guilt not a previous conviction.

36. (1) Subject to section 12 of the Canada Evidence Act, where a young person is found guilty of an offence, and

- (a) a youth court directs under paragraph 20(1)(a) that the young person be discharged absolutely, or
- (b) all the dispositions made under this Act in respect of the offence, and all terms of those dispositions, have ceased to have effect,

NOTE: Subsection (1)(b) replaced 1995, c. 39, s. 183(1) (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

- (b) all the dispositions made under subsection 20(1) in respect of the offence have ceased to have effect,

NOTE: Subsection (1)(b) replaced 1995, c. 39, s. 189(a) (to come into force when 1995, c. 39, s. 179 comes into force). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

- (b) all the dispositions made under subsection 20(1) in respect of the offence, and all terms of those dispositions, have ceased to have effect, the young person shall be deemed not to have been found guilty or convicted of the offence except that,

- (c) the young person may plead autrefois convict in respect of any subsequent charge relating to the offence,
- (d) a youth court may consider the finding of guilt in considering an application for a transfer to ordinary court under section 16,
- (e) any court or justice may consider the finding of guilt in considering an application for judicial interim release or in considering what dispositions to make or sentence to impose for any offence, and
- (f) the National Parole Board or any provincial parole board may consider the finding of guilt in considering an application for parole or pardon.

(2) For greater certainty and without restricting the generality of subsection (1), an absolute discharge under paragraph 20(1)(a) or the termination of all dispositions in respect of an offence for which a young person is found guilty removes any disqualification in respect of the offence to which the young person is subject pursuant to any Act of Parliament by reason of a conviction.

(3) No application form for or relating to

- (a) employment in any department, as defined in section 2 of the Financial Administration Act,
- (b) employment by any Crown corporation as defined in section 83 of the Financial Administration Act,
- (c) enrolment in the Canadian Forces, or
- (d) employment on or in connection with the operation of any work, undertaking or business that is within the legislative authority of Parliament, shall contain any question that by its terms requires the applicant to disclose that he has been charged with or found guilty of an offence in respect of which he has, under this Act, been discharged absolutely or has completed all the dispositions.

NOTE: Subsection (3) amended 1995, c. 39, s. 183(2) by replacing the portion after para. (d) (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

shall contain any question that by its terms requires the applicant to disclose that the applicant has been charged with or found guilty of an offence in respect of which the applicant has, under this Act, been discharged absolutely or has completed all the dispositions made under subsection 20(1).

(4) Any person who uses or authorizes the use of an application form in contravention of subsection (3) is guilty of an offence punishable on summary conviction.

(5) A finding of guilt under this Act is not a previous conviction for the purposes of any offence under any Act of Parliament for which a greater punishment is prescribed by reason of previous convictions. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 36; 1984, c. 31, s. 14; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 27; 1995, c. 19, s. 26.

ANNOTATIONS

It was held in R. v. Morris (1978), 43 C.C.C. (2d) 129, 91 D.L.R. (3d) 161, [1979] 1 S.C.R. 405 (5:4), that delinquencies under the Juvenile Delinquents Act for acts which if committed by an adult would have been punishable under the Criminal Code, can be the subject of cross-examination under s. 12 of the Canada Evidence Act. On the other hand, it has been held that a discharge under s. 736 of the Criminal Code is not a "conviction" for the purposes of s. 12: R. v. Danson (1982), 66 C.C.C. (2d) 369, 35 O.R. (2d) 777 (C.A.). Thus, the effect of the proviso in subsec. (1) is unclear. Reference should also be made to s. 45(4), infra.

YOUTH WORKERS

DUTIES OF YOUTH WORKER.

37. The duties and functions of a youth worker in respect of a young person whose case has been assigned to him by the provincial director include

- (a) where the young person is bound by a probation order that requires him to be under supervision, supervising the young person in complying with the conditions of the probation order or in carrying out any other disposition made together with it;
- (a.1) where the young person is placed under conditional supervision pursuant to an order made under section 26.2, supervising the young person in complying with the conditions of the order;
- (b) where the young person is found guilty of any offence, giving such assistance to him as he considers appropriate up to the time the young person is discharged or the disposition of his case terminates;
- (c) attending court when he considers it advisable or when required by the youth court to be present;
- (d) preparing, at the request of the provincial director, a pre-disposition report or a progress report; and
- (e) performing such other duties and functions as the provincial director requires. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 37; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 28; 1992, c. 11, s. 13.

PROTECTION OF PRIVACY OF YOUNG PERSONS

IDENTITY NOT TO BE PUBLISHED / Limitation / Preparation of reports / No subsequent disclosure / Schools and others / No subsequent disclosure / Information to be kept separate / Ex parte application for leave to publish / Order ceases to have effect / Application for leave to publish / Disclosure with court order / Opportunity to be heard / Ex parte application / Time limit / Contravention / Provincial court judge has absolute jurisdiction on indictment.

38. (1) Subject to this section, no person shall publish by any means any report

- (a) of an offence committed or alleged to have been committed by a young person, unless an order has been made under section 16 with respect thereto, or
- (b) of a hearing, adjudication, disposition or appeal concerning a young person who committed or is alleged to have committed an offence in which the name of the young person, a child or a young person who is a victim of the offence or a child or a young person who appeared as a witness in connection with the offence, or in which any information serving to identify such young person or child, is disclosed.

(1.1) Subsection (1) does not apply in respect of the disclosure of information in the course of the administration of justice where it is not the purpose of the disclosure to make the information known in the community.

NOTE: Subsection (1.1) replaced 1995, c. 39, s. 184 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:
Limitation.

(1.1) Subsection (1) does not apply in respect of the disclosure of information in the course of the administration of justice including, for greater certainty, the disclosure of information for the purposes of the Firearms Act and Part III of the Criminal Code, where it is not the purpose of the disclosure to make the information known in the community.

(1.11) Subsection (1) does not apply in respect of the disclosure of information by the provincial director or a youth worker where the disclosure is necessary for procuring information that relates to the preparation of any report required by this Act.

(1.12) No person to whom information is disclosed pursuant to subsection (1.11) shall disclose that information to any other person unless the disclosure is necessary for the purpose of preparing the report for which the information was disclosed.

(1.13) Subsection (1) does not apply in respect of the disclosure of information to any professional or other person engaged in the supervision or care of a young person, including the representative of any school board or school or any other educational or training institution, by the provincial director, a youth worker, a peace officer or any other person engaged in the provision of services to young persons where the disclosure is necessary

- (a) to ensure compliance by the young person with an authorization pursuant to section 35 or an order of any court concerning bail, probation or conditional supervision; or
- (b) to ensure the safety of staff, students or other persons, as the case may be.

(1.14) No person to whom information is disclosed pursuant to subsection (1.13) shall disclose that information to any other person unless the disclosure is necessary for a purpose referred to in that subsection.

(1.15) Any person to whom information is disclosed pursuant to subsections (1.13) and (1.14) shall

- (a) keep the information separate from any other record of the young person to whom the information relates;
- (b) subject to subsection (1.14), ensure that no other person has access to the information; and

- (c) destroy the information when the information is no longer required for the purpose for which it was disclosed.
- (1.2) A youth court judge shall, on the ex parte application of a peace officer, make an order permitting any person to publish a report described in subsection (1) that contains the name of a young person, or information serving to identify a young person, who has committed or is alleged to have committed an indictable offence, if the judge is satisfied that
  - (a) there is reason to believe that the young person is dangerous to others; and
  - (b) publication of the report is necessary to assist in apprehending the young person.
- (1.3) An order made under subsection (1.2) shall cease to have effect two days after it is made.
- (1.4) The youth court may, on the application of any person referred to in subsection (1), make an order permitting any person to publish a report in which the name of that person, or information serving to identify that person, would be disclosed, if the court is satisfied that the publication of the report would not be contrary to the best interests of that person.
- (1.5) The youth court may, on the application of the provincial director, the Attorney General or an agent of the Attorney General or a peace officer, make an order permitting the applicant to disclose to such person or persons as are specified by the court such information about a young person as is specified if the court is satisfied that the disclosure is necessary, having regard to the following:
  - (a) the young person has been found guilty of an offence involving serious personal injury;
  - (b) the young person poses a risk of serious harm to persons; and
  - (c) the disclosure of the information is relevant to the avoidance of that risk.
- (1.6) Subject to subsection (1.7), before making an order under subsection (1.5), the youth court shall afford the young person, the young person's parents, the Attorney General or an agent of the Attorney General an opportunity to be heard.
- (1.7) An application under subsection (1.5) may be made ex parte by the Attorney General or an agent of the Attorney General where the youth court is satisfied that reasonable efforts have been made to locate the young person and that those efforts have not been successful.
- (1.8) No information may be disclosed pursuant to subsection (1.5) after the record to which the information relates ceases to be available for inspection under subsection 45(1).
- (2) Every one who contravenes subsection (1), (1.12), (1.14) or (1.15)
  - (a) is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years; or
  - (b) is guilty of an offence punishable on summary conviction.
- (3) Where an accused is charged with an offence under paragraph (2)(a), a provincial court judge has absolute jurisdiction to try the case and his jurisdiction does not depend on the consent of the accused. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 38; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 29; 1995, c. 19, s. 27.

ANNOTATIONS

Subsec. (1) – This subsection is not an unconstitutional infringement of the guarantee of freedom of expression in s. 2(b) of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms: R. v. Southam Inc. (1984), 16 C.C.C. (3d) 262, 42 C.R. (3d) 336, 14 D.L.R. (4th) 683 (Ont. H.C.J.),

  - (d) the youth worker to whom the young person's case has been assigned.
- (3) The youth court, after it has found a young person guilty of an offence, or the youth court or the review board, during a review of a disposition under sections 28 to 32, may, in its discretion, exclude from the court or from a hearing of the review board, as the case may be, any person other than
- (a) the young person or his counsel,
  - (b) the provincial director or his agent,
  - (c) the youth worker to whom the young person's case has been assigned, and
  - (d) the Attorney General or his agent,

when any information is being presented to the court or the review board the knowledge of which might, in the opinion of the court or review board, be seriously injurious or seriously prejudicial to the young person.

(4) The exception set out in paragraph (3)(a) is subject to subsection 13(6) of this Act and section 650 of the Criminal Code. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 39; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 30.

ANNOTATIONS

This section is not an unconstitutional infringement on the right of access to the Courts as included in the guarantee to freedom of expression in s. 2(b) of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms: R. v. Southam Inc. (1984), 16 C.C.C. (3d) 262, 48 O.R. (2d) 678 (H.C.J.), affd 53 O.R. (2d) 663 (C.A.).

MAINTENANCE AND USE OF RECORDS

Records that may be Kept

---

YOUTH COURT, REVIEW BOARD AND OTHER COURTS / Exception.

40. (1) A youth court, review board or any court dealing with matters arising out of proceedings under this Act may keep a record of any case arising under this Act that comes before it.

(2) For greater certainty, this section does not apply in respect of proceedings held in ordinary court pursuant to an order under section 16. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 40; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 31.

NOTE: Subsections (3) and (4) enacted 1995, c. 39, s. 185 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

Records of offences that result in order under s. 20.1 / Disclosure.

(3) Notwithstanding anything in this Act, where a young person is found guilty of an offence that results in an order under section 20.1 being made against the young person, the youth court may keep a record of the conviction and the order until the expiration of the order.

(4) Any record that is kept under subsection (3) may be disclosed only to establish the existence of the order in any offence involving a breach of the order.

RECORDS IN CENTRAL REPOSITORY / Police force may provide record / Police force shall provide record.

41. (1) A record of any offence that a young person has been charged with having committed may, where the offence is an offence in respect of which an adult may be subjected to any measurement, process or operation referred to in the Identification of Criminals Act, be kept in such central repository as the Commissioner of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police may, from time to time, designate for the purpose of keeping criminal history files or records on offenders or keeping records for the identification of offenders.

(2) Where a young person is charged with having committed an offence referred to in subsection (1), the police force responsible for the investigation of the offence may provide a record of the offence, including the original or a copy of any fingerprints, palmprints or photographs and any other measurement, process or operation referred to in the Identification of Criminals Act taken of, or applied in respect of, the young person by or on behalf of the police force, for inclusion in any central repository designated pursuant to subsection (1).

(3) Where a young person is found guilty of an offence referred to in subsection (1), the police force responsible for the investigation of the offence shall provide a record of the offence, including the original or a copy of any fingerprints, palmprints or photographs and any other measurement, process or operation referred to in the Identification of Criminals Act taken of, or applied in respect of, the young person by or on behalf of the police force, for inclusion in any central repository designated pursuant to subsection (1). 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 41; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 31; 1995, c. 19, s. 28.

POLICE RECORDS.

42. A record relating to any offence alleged to have been committed by a young person, including the original or a copy of any fingerprints or photographs of the young person, may be kept by any police force responsible for, or participating in, the investigation of the offence. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 42; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 31.

---

GOVERNMENT RECORDS / Private records.

43. (1) A department or agency of any government in Canada may keep records containing information obtained by the department or agency

- (a) for the purposes of an investigation of an offence alleged to have been committed by a young person;
- (b) for use in proceedings against a young person under this Act;
- (c) for the purpose of administering a disposition;
- (d) for the purpose of considering whether, instead of commencing or continuing judicial proceedings under this Act against a young person, to use alternative measures to deal with the young person; or
- (e) as a result of the use of alternative measures to deal with a young person.

(2) Any person or organization may keep records containing information obtained by the person or organization

- (a) as a result of the use of alternative measures to deal with a young person alleged to have committed an offence; or
- (b) for the purpose of administering or participating in the administration of a disposition. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 43; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 32.

(3) [Repealed. R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 32(2).]

(4) [Repealed. R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 32(2).]

Fingerprints and Photographs

---

IDENTIFICATION OF CRIMINALS ACT APPLIES / Limitation.

44. (1) Subject to this section, the Identification of Criminals Act applies in respect of young persons.

(2) No fingerprints, palmprints or photograph or any other measurement, process or operation referred to in the Identification of Criminals Act shall be taken of, or applied in respect of, a young person who is charged with having committed an offence except in the circumstances in which an adult may, under that Act, be subjected to the measurements, processes and operations referred to in that Act. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 44; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 33; 1995, c. 19, s. 29.

(3) [Repealed. R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 33.]

(4) [Repealed. R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 33.]

(5) [Repealed. R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 33.]

ANNOTATIONS

A 13-year-old child charged under this Act with a Crown option offence is charged with an indictable offence for the purposes of s. 2 of the Identification of Criminals Act, notwithstanding that by reason of his age the child cannot be tried in the ordinary courts: R. v. H. (M.) (1984), 14 C.C.C. (3d) 210, [1984] 5 W.W.R. 722 (Alta. Q.B.).

The requirement that a young offender attend for fingerprinting is not a breach of ss. 7, 8 or 9 of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. Further, this section on its face does not authorize cruel and unusual punishment in violation of s. 12 of the Charter. However, it may be that in a rare case it could be shown that the effect of the fingerprinting process would bring it with s. 12: R. v. M. (H.) (No. 2) (1984), 17 C.C.C. (3d) 443, [1985] 2 W.W.R. 444, sub nom. Lunney v. M.H. (Alta. Q.B.), affd 21 C.C.C. (3d) 384n, 21 D.L.R. (4th) 767n (Alta. C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. granted C.C.C. and D.L.R. loc. cit. Also, now see R. v. Beare; R. v. Higgins (1988), 45 C.C.C. (3d) 57, [1989] 1 W.W.R. 97 (S.C.C.) noted under Criminal Code s. 509, supra.

Disclosure of Records

RECORDS MADE AVAILABLE / Exception / Records of forensic DNA analysis of bodily substances / Introduction into evidence / Disclosures for research or statistical purposes / Record made available to victim / Disclosure of information and copies of records.

44.1 (1) Subject to subsections (2) and (2.1), any record that is kept pursuant to section 40 shall, and any record that is kept pursuant to sections 41 to 43 may, on request, be made available for inspection to

- (a) the young person to whom the record relates;
- (b) counsel acting on behalf of the young person, or any representative of that counsel;
- (c) the Attorney General or his agent;
- (d) a parent of the young person or any adult assisting the young person pursuant to subsection 11(7), during the course of any proceedings relating to the offence or alleged offence to which the record relates or during the term of any disposition made in respect of the offence;
- (e) any judge, court or review board, for any purpose relating to proceedings relating to the young person under this Act or to proceedings in ordinary court in respect of offences committed or alleged to have been committed by the young person, whether as a young person or an adult;
- (f) any peace officer,
  - (i) for the purpose of investigating any offence that the young person is suspected on reasonable grounds of having committed, or in respect of which the young person has been arrested or charged, whether as a young person or an adult;
  - (ii) for any purpose related to the administration of the case to which the record relates during the course of proceedings against the young person or the term of any disposition;
  - (iii) for the purpose of investigating any offence that another person is suspected on reasonable grounds of having committed against the young person while the young person is, or was, serving a disposition, or
  - (iv) for any other law enforcement purpose;
- (g) any member of a department or agency of a government in Canada, or any agent thereof, that is
  - (i) engaged in the administration of alternative measures in respect of the young person,
  - (ii) preparing a report in respect of the young person pursuant to this Act or for the purpose of assisting a court in sentencing the young person after he becomes an adult or is transferred to ordinary court pursuant to section 16,
  - (iii) engaged in the supervision or care of the young person, whether as a young person or an adult, or in the administration of a disposition or a sentence in respect of the young person, whether as a young person or an adult, or

- (iv) considering an application for parole or pardon made by the young person after he becomes an adult;
- (h) any person, or person within a class of persons, designated by the Governor in Council, or the Lieutenant Governor in Council of a province, for a purpose and to the extent specified by the Governor in Council or the Lieutenant Governor in Council, as the case may be;
- (i) any person, for the purpose of determining whether to grant security clearances required by the Government of Canada or the government of a province or a municipality for purposes of employment or the performance of services;

NOTE: Subsection (1)(i.1) enacted 1995, c. 39, s. 186 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

- (i.1) any person for the purposes of the Firearms Act;
- (j) any employee or agent of the Government of Canada, for statistical purposes pursuant to the Statistics Act; and
- (k) any other person who is deemed, or any person within a class of persons that is deemed, by a youth court judge to have a valid interest in the record, to the extent directed by the judge, if the judge is satisfied that the disclosure is
  - (i) desirable in the public interest for research or statistical purposes, or
  - (ii) desirable in the interest of the proper administration of justice.

(2) Where a youth court has withheld the whole or a part of a report from any person pursuant to subsection 13(6) or 14(7), the report or part thereof shall not be made available to that person for inspection under subsection (1).

(2.1) Notwithstanding subsections (1) and (5), any record that is kept pursuant to any of sections 40 to 43 and that is a record of the results of forensic DNA analysis of a bodily substance taken from a young person in execution of a warrant issued under section 487.05 of the Criminal Code may be made available for inspection under this section only under paragraph (1)(a), (b), (c), (d), (e), (f), (h) or subparagraph (1)(k)(ii).

(3) Nothing in paragraph (1)(e) authorizes the introduction into evidence of any part of a record that would not otherwise be admissible in evidence.

(4) Where a record is made available for inspection to any person under paragraph (1)(j) or subparagraph (1)(k)(i), that person may subsequently disclose information contained in the record, but may not disclose the information in any form that would reasonably be expected to identify the young person to whom it relates.

(5) Any record that is kept pursuant to sections 40 to 43 may, on request, be made available for inspection to the victim of the offence to which the record relates.

(6) Any person to whom a record is required or authorized to be made available for inspection under this section may be given any information contained in the record and may be given a copy of any part of the record. R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 34; 1992, c. 1, s. 143; 1995, c. 19, s. 30; 1995, c. 27, s. 2.

ANNOTATIONS

Subsec. (1) – The victim of an offence, committed by the offender, and her insurers have a valid interest within the meaning of para. (k) to warrant making of the order disclosing the record of the case so as to permit them to commence civil proceedings against the young offender. Further, for that purpose the identity of the offender may be disclosed in the documents of the civil case: Smith v. Clerk of Youth Court (1986), 31 C.C.C. (3d) 27, 57 O.R. (2d) 524 (Unified Fam. Ct.).

The media is a class of persons with a valid interest in a youth court record for the purposes of subsec. (1)(k) when that record is a tape recording or transcript of the proceeding in open court. Since such a record is kept pursuant to s. 40 it must be made available to the media: R. v. S. (R.D.) (1995), 98 C.C.C. (3d) 235, 142 N.S.R. (2d) 321 (S.C.).

DISCLOSURE BY PEACE OFFICER DURING INVESTIGATION / Disclosure to insurance company.

44.2 (1) A peace officer may disclose to any person any information in a record kept pursuant to section 42 that it is necessary to disclose in the conduct of the investigation of an offence.

(2) A peace officer may disclose to an insurance company information in any record that is kept pursuant to section 42 for the purpose of investigating any claim arising out of an offence committed or alleged to have been committed by the young person to whom the record relates. R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 34.

Non-Disclosure and Destruction of Records

---

NON-DISCLOSURE / Destruction of record / Transfer of records relating to serious offences / Transfer of fingerprints / Meaning of "destroy".

45. (1) Subject to sections 45.01, 45.1 and 45.2, records kept pursuant to sections 40 to 43 may not be made available for inspection under section 44.1 or 44.2 in the following circumstances:

- (a) where the young person to whom the record relates is charged with the offence to which the record relates and is acquitted otherwise than by reason of a verdict of not criminally responsible on account of mental disorder, on the expiration of two months after the expiration of the time allowed for the taking of an appeal or, where an appeal is taken, on the expiration of three months after all proceedings in respect of the appeal have been completed;
- (b) where the charge against the young person is dismissed for any reason other than acquittal or withdrawn, on the expiration of one year after the dismissal or withdrawal;
- (c) where the charge against the young person is stayed, with no proceedings being taken against the young person for a period of one year, on the expiration of the one year;
- (d) where alternative measures are used to deal with the young person, on the expiration of two years after the young person consents to participate in the alternative measures in accordance with paragraph 4(1)(c);
- (d.1) where the young person is found guilty of the offence and the disposition is an absolute discharge, on the expiration of one year after the young person is found guilty;
- (d.2) where the young person is found guilty of the offence and the disposition is a conditional discharge, on the expiration of three years after the young person is found guilty;
- (e) subject to paragraph (g), where the young person is found guilty of the offence and it is a summary conviction offence, on the expiration of three years after all dispositions made in respect of that offence;
- (f) subject to paragraph (g), where the young person is found guilty of the offence and it is an indictable offence, on the expiration of five years after all dispositions made in respect of that offence; and
- (g) where, before the expiration of the period referred to in paragraph (e) or (f), the young person is, as a young person, found guilty of
  - (i) a subsequent summary conviction offence, on the expiration of three years after all dispositions made in respect of that offence have been completed, and

- (ii) a subsequent indictable offence, five years after all dispositions made in respect of that offence have been completed.

Transitional provision

NOTE: 1995, c. 19, s. 31(4) provides as follows:

(4) Paragraphs 45(1)(d.1) to (e) of the Act, as enacted by subsection (2), apply in respect of a record relating to a finding of guilt made before the coming into force of that subsection only if the person to whom the record relates applies, after the coming into force of that subsection, to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police to have those paragraphs apply.

(2) Subject to subsections (2.1) and (2.2) when the circumstances set out in subsection (1) are realized in respect of any record kept pursuant to section 41, the record shall be destroyed forthwith.

(2.1) Where a special records repository has been established pursuant to subsection 45.02(1), all records in the central repository referred to in subsection 41(1) that relate to a conviction for first degree murder or second degree murder within the meaning of section 231 of the Criminal Code or an offence referred to in the schedule shall, when the circumstances set out in subsection (1) are realized in respect of the records, be transferred to that special records repository.

NOTE: Subsection (2.1) replaced 1995, c. 39, s. 189(b) (to come into force when 1995, c. 39, s. 185 comes into force). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

Transfer of records relating to serious offences.

(2.1) Where a special records repository has been established pursuant to subsection 45.02(1), all records in the central repository referred to in subsection 41(1) that relate to

- (a) a conviction for first degree murder or second degree murder within the meaning of section 231 of the Criminal Code,*
- (b) an offence referred to in the schedule, or*
- (c) an order made under section 20.1,* shall, when the circumstances set out in subsection (1) are realized in respect of the records, be transferred to that special records repository.

(2.2) Where a special fingerprints repository has been established pursuant to subsection 45.03(1), all fingerprints and any information necessary to identify the person to whom the fingerprints belong that are in the central repository referred to in subsection 41(1) shall, when the circumstances set out in subsection (1) are realized in respect of the records, be transferred to that special fingerprints repository.

(2.3) For the purposes of subsection (2), “destroy”, in respect of a record, means

- (a) to shred, burn or otherwise physically destroy the record, in the case of a record other than a record in electronic form; and
- (b) to delete, write over or otherwise render the record inaccessible, in the case of a record in electronic form.

(3) Any record kept pursuant to sections 40 to 43 may, in the discretion of the person or body keeping the record, be destroyed at any time before or after the circumstances set out in subsection (1) are realized in respect of that record.

(4) A young person shall be deemed not to have committed any offence to which a record kept pursuant to sections 40 to 43 relates when the circumstances set out in paragraphs (1)(d), (e) or (f) are realized in respect of that record.

(5) For the purposes of paragraphs (1)(e) and (f), where no election is made in respect of an offence that may be prosecuted by indictment or proceeded with by way of summary conviction, the Attorney General or his agent shall be deemed to have elected to proceed with the offence as an offence punishable on summary conviction.

NOTE: Subsection (5.1) enacted 1995, c. 39, s. 187 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

Orders made under s. 20.1 not included.

(5.1) For the purposes of this Act, orders made under section 20.1 shall not be taken into account in determining any time period referred to in subsection (1).

(6) This section applies, with such modifications as the circumstances require, in respect of records relating to the offence of delinquency under the Juvenile Delinquents Act, chapter J-3 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1970, as it read immediately prior to April 2, 1984. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 45; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 35; 1991, c. 43, s. 34; 1995, c. 19, s. 31.

Transitional provision

NOTE: R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 51 provides as follows:

51. No person is guilty of an offence by reason only of a failure to comply with subsection 45(1), (2) or (4) of the Young Offenders Act as it read immediately prior to the coming into force of section 34 of this Act.

Retention of Records

1995, c. 19, s. 32.

RETENTION OF RECORDS.

45.01 (1) Where, before the expiration of the period referred to in paragraph 45(1)(e) or (f) or subparagraph 45(1)(g)(i) or (ii), the young person is found guilty of a subsequent offence as an adult, records kept pursuant to sections 40 to 43 shall be available for inspection under section 44.1 or 44.2 and the provisions applicable to criminal records of adults shall apply. 1995, c. 19, s. 32.

---

Special Records Repository

1995, c. 19, s. 32.

---

SPECIAL RECORDS REPOSITORY / Records relating to murder / Records relating to other serious offences / Disclosure.

45.02 (1) The Commissioner of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police may establish a special records repository for records transferred pursuant to subsection 45(2.1).

(2) A record that relates to a conviction for the offence of first degree murder or second degree murder within the meaning of section 231 of the Criminal Code or an offence referred to in any of paragraphs 16(1.01)(b) to (d) may be kept indefinitely in the special records repository.

(3) A record that relates to a conviction for an offence referred to in the schedule shall be kept in the special records repository for a period of five years and shall be destroyed forthwith at the expiration of that five year period, unless the young person to whom the record relates is subsequently found guilty of any offence referred to in the schedule, in which case the record shall be dealt with as the record of an adult.

(4) A record kept in the special records repository shall be made available for inspection to the following persons at the following times or in the following circumstances:

- (a) at any time, to the young person to whom the record relates and to counsel acting on behalf of the young person, or any representative of that counsel;
- (b) where the young person has subsequently been charged with the commission of first degree murder or second degree murder within the meaning of section 231 of the Criminal Code or an offence referred to in the schedule, to any peace officer for the purpose of investigating any offence that the young person is suspected of having committed, or in respect of which the young person has been arrested or charged, whether as a young person or as an adult;
- (c) where the young person has subsequently been convicted of an offence referred to in the schedule,
  - (i) to the Attorney General or an agent of the Attorney General,
  - (ii) to a parent of the young person or any adult assisting the young person,
  - (iii) to any judge, court or review board, for any purpose relating to proceedings relating to the young person under this Act or to proceedings in ordinary court in respect of offences committed or alleged to have been committed by the young person, whether as a young person or as an adult, or
  - (iv) to any member of a department or agency of a government in Canada, or any agent thereof, that is
    - (A) engaged in the administration of alternative measures in respect of the young person,
    - (B) preparing a report in respect of the young person pursuant to this Act or for the purpose of assisting a court in sentencing the young person after the young person becomes an adult or is transferred to ordinary court pursuant to section 16,
    - (C) engaged in the supervision or care of the young person, whether as a young person or as an adult, or in the administration of a disposition or a sentence in respect of the young person, whether as a young person or as an adult, or
    - (D) considering an application for parole or pardon made by the young person after the young person becomes an adult;

NOTE: Subsection (4)(c.1) and (c.2) enacted 1995, c. 39, s. 189(d) (to come into force when 1995, c. 39, s. 185 comes into force). The text, which is not yet in force and therefore printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

- (c.1) to establish the existence of the order in any offence involving a breach of the order;
- (c.2) for the purposes of the Firearms Act;
- (d) at any time, to any employee or agent of the Government of Canada, for statistical purposes pursuant to the Statistics Act; or
- (e) at any time, to any other person who is deemed, or any person within a class of persons that is deemed, by a youth court judge to have a valid interest in the record, to the extent directed by the judge, if the judge is satisfied that the disclosure is desirable in the public interest for research or statistical purposes. 1995, c. 19, s. 32.

Special Fingerprints Repository

1995, c. 19, s. 32.

SPECIAL FINGERPRINTS REPOSITORY / Disclosure for identification purposes / Destruction.

45.03 (1) The Commissioner of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police may establish a special fingerprints repository for fingerprints and any related information transferred pursuant to subsection 45(2.2).

(2) Fingerprints and any related information may be kept in the special fingerprints repository for a period of five years following the date of their receipt and, during that time, the name, date of birth and last known address of the young person to whom the fingerprints belong may be disclosed for identification purposes if a fingerprint identified as that of the young person is found during the investigation of a crime or during an attempt to identify a deceased person or a person suffering from amnesia:

(3) Fingerprints and any related information in the special fingerprints repository shall be destroyed five years after the date of their receipt in the repository. 1995, c. 19, s. 32.

NOTE: Subsection (3.1) enacted 1995, c. 39, s. 189(c) (to come into force when 1995, c. 39, s. 185 comes into force). The text, which is not yet in force and therefor printed in lightface italics, reads as follows:

Records of orders made under s. 20.1.

(3.1) A record that relates to an order made under section 20.1 shall be kept in the special records repository until the expiration of the order and shall be destroyed forthwith at that time.

---

Disclosure in Special Circumstances

1995, c. 19, s. 33.

WHERE RECORDS MAY BE MADE AVAILABLE / Records / Notice / Where notice not required / Use of record.

45.1 (1) Subject to subsection (1.1), a youth court judge may, on application by any person, order that any record to which subsection 45(1) applies, or any part thereof, be made available for inspection to that person or a copy of the record or part thereof be given to that person, if a youth court judge is satisfied that

- (a) that person has a valid and substantial interest in the record or part thereof;
- (b) it is necessary for the record, part thereof or copy thereof to be made available in the interest of the proper administration of justice; and
- (c) disclosure of the record or part thereof or information is not prohibited under any other Act of Parliament or the legislature of a province.

(1.1) Subsection (1) applies in respect of any record relating to a particular young person or to any record relating to a class of young persons where the identity of young persons in the class at the time of the making of the application referred to in that subsection cannot reasonably be ascertained and the disclosure of the record is necessary for the purpose of investigating any offence that a person is suspected on reasonable grounds of having committed against a young person while the young person is, or was, serving a disposition.

(2) Subject to subsection (2.1), an application under subsection (1) in respect of a record shall not be heard unless the person who makes the application has given the young person to whom the record relates and the person or body that has possession of the record at least five days notice in writing of the application and the young person and the person or body that has possession has had a reasonable opportunity to be heard.

(2.1) A youth court judge may waive the requirement in subsection (2) to give notice to a young person where the youth court is of the opinion that

- (a) to insist on the giving of the notice would frustrate the application; or

(b) reasonable efforts have not been successful in finding the young person.

(3) In any order under subsection (1), the youth court judge shall set out the purposes for which the record may be used. R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 35; 1995, c. 19, s. 34.

ANNOTATIONS

The accused was entitled to an order under this section for disclosure of the youth record of an alleged accomplice who was a witness for the Crown, even though the witness had entered the non-disclosure period as set out in s. 45: R. v. Strain (1994), 91 C.C.C. (3d) 568, 25 C.R.R. (2d) 180 (Ont. Ct. (Gen. Div.)).

RECORDS IN THE CUSTODY, ETC., OF ARCHIVISTS.

45.2 Where records originally kept pursuant to section 40, 42 or 43 are under the custody or control of the National Archivist of Canada or the archivist for any province, that person may disclose any information contained in the records to any other person if

- (a) the Attorney General or his agent is satisfied that the disclosure is desirable in the public interest for research or statistical purposes; and
- (b) the person to whom the information is disclosed undertakes not to disclose the information in any form that could reasonably be expected to identify the young person to whom it relates. R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 35, c. 1 (3rd Supp.), s. 12(5).

Offence

PROHIBITION AGAINST DISCLOSURE / Exception for employees / Prohibition against use / Exception for employees / Offence / Absolute jurisdiction of provincial court judge.

46. (1) Except as authorized or required by this Act, no record kept pursuant to sections 40 to 43 may be made available for inspection, and no copy, print or negative thereof or information contained therein may be given, to any person where to do so would serve to identify the young person to whom it relates as a young person dealt with under this Act.

(2) No person who is employed in keeping or maintaining records referred to in subsection (1) is restricted from doing anything prohibited under subsection (1) with respect to any other person so employed.

(3) Subject to section 45.1, no record kept pursuant to sections 40 to 43, and no copy, print or negative thereof, may be used for any purpose that would serve to identify the young person to whom the record relates as a young person dealt with under this Act after the circumstances set out in subsection 45(1) are realized in respect of that record.

(4) Any person who fails to comply with this section or subsection 45(2)

- (a) is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years; or
- (b) is guilty of an offence punishable on summary conviction.

(5) The jurisdiction of a provincial court judge to try an accused is absolute and does not depend on the consent of the accused where the accused is charged with an offence under paragraph (4)(a). 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 46; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 36.

CONTEMPT OF COURT

CONTEMPT AGAINST YOUTH COURT / Exclusive jurisdiction of youth court / Concurrent jurisdiction of youth court / Dispositions / Section 708 of Criminal Code applies in respect of adults / Appeals.

47. (1) Every youth court has the same power, jurisdiction and authority to deal with and impose punishment for contempt against the court as may be exercised by the superior court of criminal jurisdiction of the province in which the court is situated.

(2) The youth court has exclusive jurisdiction in respect of every contempt of court committed by a young person against the youth court whether or not committed in the face of the court and every contempt of court committed by a young person against any other court otherwise than in the face of that court.

(3) The youth court has jurisdiction in respect of every contempt of court committed by a young person against any other court in the face of that court and every contempt of court committed by an adult against the youth court in the face of the youth court, but nothing in this subsection affects the power, jurisdiction or authority of any other court to deal with or impose punishment for contempt of court.

(4) Where a youth court or any other court finds a young person guilty of contempt of court, it may make any one of the dispositions set out in section 20, or any number thereof that are not inconsistent with each other, but no other disposition or sentence.

(5) Section 708 of the Criminal Code applies in respect of proceedings under this section in youth court against adults, with such modifications as the circumstances require.

(6) A finding of guilt under this section for contempt of court or a disposition or sentence made in respect thereof may be appealed as if the finding were a conviction or the disposition or sentence were a sentence in a prosecution by indictment in ordinary court. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 47.

ANNOTATIONS

It is permissible to grant youth courts the power to determine contempt of court. Subsec. (2) is unconstitutional, however, to the extent that it purports to oust the jurisdiction of superior courts to punish for contempt by granting youth courts exclusive jurisdiction with respect to such proceedings for young persons. It is for the superior courts to elect to hold contempt proceedings against a youth or to defer to the youth court: MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. v. Simpson (1995), 103 C.C.C. (3d) 225, [1996] 2 W.W.R. 1, 130 D.L.R. (4th) 385 (S.C.C.).

FORFEITURE OF RECOGNIZANCES

---

APPLICATIONS FOR FORFEITURE OF RECOGNIZANCES.

48. Applications for the forfeiture of recognizances of young persons shall be made to the youth court. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 48.

---

PROCEEDINGS IN CASE OF DEFAULT / Order for forfeiture of recognizance / Judgment debtors of the Crown / Order may be filed / Where a deposit has been made / Subsections 770(2) and (4) of Criminal Code do not apply / Sections 772 and 773 of Criminal Code apply.

49. (1) Where a recognizance binding a young person has been endorsed with a certificate pursuant to subsection 770(1) of the Criminal Code, a youth court judge shall,

- (a) on the request of the Attorney General or his agent, fix a time and place for the hearing of an application for the forfeiture of the recognizance; and
- (b) after fixing a time and place for the hearing, cause to be sent by registered mail, not less than ten days before the time so fixed, to each principal and surety named in the recognizance, directed to him at his latest known address, a notice requiring him to appear at the time and place fixed by the judge to show cause why the recognizance should not be forfeited.

(2) Where subsection (1) is complied with, the youth court judge may, after giving the parties an opportunity to be heard, in his discretion grant or refuse the application and make any order with respect to the forfeiture of the recognizance that he considers proper.

(3) Where, pursuant to subsection (2), a youth court judge orders forfeiture of a recognizance, the principal and his sureties become judgment debtors of the Crown, each in the amount that the judge orders him to pay.

(4) An order made under subsection (2) may be filed with the clerk of the superior court or, in the province of Quebec, the prothonotary and, where an order is filed, the clerk or the prothonotary shall issue a writ of fieri facias in Form 34 set out in the Criminal Code and deliver it to the sheriff of each of the territorial divisions in which any of the principal and his sureties resides, carries on business or has property.

(5) Where a deposit has been made by a person against whom an order for forfeiture of a recognizance has been made, no writ of fieri facias shall issue, but the amount of the deposit shall be transferred by the person who has custody of it to the person who is entitled by law to receive it.

(6) Subsections 770(2) and (4) of the Criminal Code do not apply in respect of proceedings under this Act.

(7) Sections 772 and 773 of the Criminal Code apply in respect of writs of fieri facias issued pursuant to this section as if they were issued pursuant to section 771 of the Criminal Code. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 49.

INTERFERENCE WITH DISPOSITIONS

INDUCING A YOUNG PERSON, ETC. / Absolute jurisdiction of provincial court judge.

50. (1) Every one who

- (a) induces or assists a young person to leave unlawfully a place of custody or other place in which the young person has been placed pursuant to a disposition,
- (b) unlawfully removes a young person from a place referred to in paragraph (a),
- (c) knowingly harbours or conceals a young person who has unlawfully left a place referred to in paragraph (a),
- (d) wilfully induces or assists a young person to breach or disobey a term or condition of a disposition, or
- (e) wilfully prevents or interferes with the performance by a young person of a term or condition of a disposition is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or is guilty of an offence punishable on summary conviction.

(2) The jurisdiction of a provincial court judge to try an adult accused of an indictable offence under this section is absolute and does not depend on the consent of the accused. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 50; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 37.

APPLICATION OF THE CRIMINAL CODE

---

APPLICATION OF Criminal Code.

51. Except to the extent that they are inconsistent with or excluded by this Act, all the provisions of the Criminal Code apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, in respect of offences alleged to have been committed by young persons. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 51.

PROCEDURE

---

PART XXVII AND SUMMARY CONVICTION TRIAL PROVISIONS OF CRIMINAL CODE TO APPLY / Indictable offences / Attendance of young person / Limitation period / Costs.

52. (1) Subject to this section and except to the extent that they are inconsistent with this Act,

- (a) the provisions of Part XXVII of the Criminal Code, and
- (b) any other provisions of the Criminal Code that apply in respect of summary conviction offences and relate to trial proceedings apply to proceedings under this Act

- (c) in respect of a summary conviction offence, and
- (d) in respect of an indictable offence as if it were defined in the enactment creating it as a summary conviction offence.

(2) For greater certainty and notwithstanding subsection (1) or any other provision of this Act, an indictable offence committed by a young person is, for the purposes of this Act or any other Act, an indictable offence.

(3) Section 650 of the Criminal Code applies in respect of proceedings under this Act, whether the proceedings relate to an indictable offence or an offence punishable on summary conviction.

(4) In proceedings under this Act, subsection 786(2) of the Criminal Code does not apply in respect of an indictable offence.

(5) Section 809 of the Criminal Code does not apply in respect of proceedings under this Act. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 52.

ANNOTATIONS

Where the Crown fails to make its election as to mode of proceeding with respect to a Crown option offence, the offence is to be treated as a summary conviction offence for the purposes of penalty and appeal: R. v. W. (W.W.) (1985), 20 C.C.C. (3d) 214, [1985] 5 W.W.R. 147 (Man. C.A.).

The lack of availability of a preliminary inquiry for an offence tried in youth court does not offend the equality rights under s. 1(b) of the Canadian Bill of Rights, although an adult charged with the same offence could elect to have a preliminary inquiry: R. v. G. (K.) (1986), 31 C.C.C. (3d) 81, [1987] 1 W.W.R. 457 (Alta. C.A.).

Although the effect of this provision is to deprive an offender tried in youth court of a jury trial, there is no infringement of ss. 11(f) or 15 of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms notwithstanding an adult tried in the ordinary courts for the same offence could elect trial by jury: R. v. L. (R.) (1986), 26 C.C.C. (3d) 417, 52 C.R. (3d) 209 (Ont. C.A.).

The Charter of Rights guarantee in s. 11(f) to a jury trial has no application to proceedings under this Act. Further, an offender's complaint that he was denied his equality rights, as guaranteed by s. 15 of the Charter, by reason of denial of a jury trial is premature where the offender has brought no application under s. 16 to have the case tried in the ordinary courts where he could elect trial by judge and jury: R. v. B. (S.) (1989), 50 C.C.C. (3d) 34, 72 C.R. (3d) 117, [1989] 5 W.W.R. 621 (C.A.).

The Crown may appeal against a disposition on the basis that a period of open custody ought to have been secure custody. It is not limited to appealing simply against the length of the period of custody: R. v. H. (S.R.) (1990), 56 C.C.C. (3d) 46, 38 O.A.C. 127 (Ont. C.A.).

COUNTS CHARGED IN INFORMATION.

53. Indictable offences and offences punishable on summary conviction may under this Act be charged in the same information and tried jointly. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 53.

ANNOTATIONS

There is nothing precluding inclusion in a single information, counts charging a Criminal Code indictable offence and a summary conviction provincial offence: R. v. S (1986), 26 C.C.C. (3d) 30 (Alta. Q.B.).

ISSUE OF SUBPOENA / Service of subpoena.

54. (1) Where a person is required to attend to give evidence before a youth court, the subpoena directed to that person may be issued by a youth court judge, whether or not the person whose attendance is required is within the same province as the youth court.

(2) A subpoena issued by a youth court and directed to a person who is not within the same province as the youth court shall be served personally on the person to whom it is directed. 1980-81-82-83, c./110, s. 54.

WARRANT.

55. A warrant that is issued out of a youth court may be executed anywhere in Canada. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 55.

EVIDENCE

GENERAL LAW ON ADMISSIBILITY OF STATEMENTS TO APPLY / When statements are admissible / Exception in certain cases for oral statements / Waiver of right to consult / Statements given under duress are inadmissible / Misrepresentation of age / Parent, etc. not a person in authority.

56. (1) Subject to this section, the law relating to the admissibility of statements made by persons accused of committing offences applies in respect of young persons.

(2) No oral or written statement given by a young person to a peace officer or to any other person who is, in law, a person in authority on the arrest or detention of the young person or in circumstances where the peace officer or other person has rea- sonable grounds for believing that the young person has committed an offence is admissible against the young person unless

- (a) the statement was voluntary;
- (b) the person to whom the statement was given has, before the statement was made, clearly explained to the young person, in language appropriate to his age and understanding, that
  - (i) the young person is under no obligation to give a statement,
  - (ii) any statement given by him may be used as evidence in proceedings against him,
  - (iii) the young person has the right to consult counsel and a parent or other person in accordance with paragraph (c), and
  - (iv) any statement made by the young person is required to be made in the presence of counsel and any other person consulted in accordance with paragraph (c), if any, unless the young person desires otherwise;
- (c) the young person has, before the statement was made, been given a reasonable opportunity to consult
  - (i) with counsel, and
  - (ii) a parent, or in the absence of a parent, an adult relative, or in the absence of a parent and an adult relative, any other appropriate adult chosen by the young person; and
- (d) where the young person consults any person pursuant to paragraph (c), the young person has been given a reasonable opportunity to make the statement in the presence of that person.

(3) The requirements set out in paragraphs (2)(b), (c) and (d) do not apply in respect of oral statements where they are made spontaneously by the young person to a peace officer or other person in authority before that person has had a reasonable opportunity to comply with those requirements.

(4) A young person may waive the rights under paragraph (2)(c) or (d) but any such waiver shall be videotaped or be in writing, and where it is in writing it shall contain a statement signed by the young person that the young person has been apprised of the right being waived.

(5) A youth court judge may rule inadmissible in any proceedings under this Act a statement given by the young person in respect of whom the proceedings are taken if the young person satisfies the judge that the statement was given under duress imposed by any person who is not, in law, a person in authority.

(5.1) A youth court judge may in any proceedings under this Act rule admissible any statement or waiver by a young person where, at the time of the making of the statement or waiver,

- (a) the young person held himself or herself to be eighteen years of age or older;
- (b) the person to whom the statement or waiver was made conducted reasonable inquiries as to the age of the young person and had reasonable grounds for believing that the young person was eighteen years of age or older; and
- (c) in all other circumstances the statement or waiver would otherwise be admissible.

(6) For the purpose of this section, an adult consulted pursuant to paragraph 56(2)(c) shall, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, be deemed not to be a person in authority. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 56; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 38.

ANNOTATIONS

Application of provision – While para. (2)(b) would appear to lay down certain rigorous standards for admission of statements of young people, the Courts have always given special consideration to confessions by juveniles. It may be that this extensive case law is still relevant in view of subsec. (1) and para (2)(a). In fact, many of the guidelines set out in that case law are now a matter of law under para. (2)(b). See: R. v. Jacques (1958), 29 C.R. 249 (Que. S.W.C.); R. v. Wilson (1970), 1 C.C.C. (2d) 14, 11 C.R.N.S. 11, 74 W.W.R. 207 (B.C.C.A.); R. v. M. (D.) and P. (J.) (1980), 58 C.C.C. (2d) 373 (Ont. Prov. Ct.). However, one aspect of the caution which is not included in para. (2)(b) is the requirement of warning the young person, if over age 14, of the possibility of a transfer to adult Court. Formerly, this was considered an important aspect on the question of voluntariness of the statement where it was tendered in adult Court following a transfer order: R. v. Yensen (1961), 130 C.C.C. 353, 29 D.L.R. (2d) 314, [1961] O.R. 703 (H.C.J.). More recently this has also been held to be an important consideration even where the statement was only adduced in juvenile Court: R. v. A (1975), 23 C.C.C. (2d) 537, [1975] 5 W.W.R. 425 (Alta. S.C.T.D.); R. v. M. (D.) and P. (J.), supra.

In view of the amendment to s. 11 making it clear that the young offender can personally exercise the right to retain and instruct counsel, he can also waive such right without intervention of a parent or guardian: R. v. M. (C.J.) (1986), 29 C.C.C. (3d) 569 (Man. Q.B.).

The special conditions prescribed by subsec. (2) do not apply to the taking of a statement from an accused who is 18 years or older, although the investigation relates to an offence committed by the accused when he was 16 years of age: R. v. Z. (D.A.) (1992), 76 C.C.C. (3d) 97, [1992] 2 S.C.R. 1025, 16 C.R. (4th) 133 (S.C.C.). [Also now see subsec. (5.1).]

There is no requirement under this section that the offender be advised of the possibility that the offender may be raised to adult court. The presence or absence of such a warning is merely an aspect of determining whether or not the statement was voluntary and if the offender waives his right to consult counsel without being aware of the possibility, where it exists, of being raised to adult court, then the waiver will be invalid: R. v. I. (L.R.), [1993] 4 S.C.R. 504, 86 C.C.C. (3d) 289, 26 C.R. (4th) 119.

Compliance with subsec. (2) – Subsection (2) has not been complied with where, although the officer has read to the offender a form setting out his choices under that subsection, there has been no clear explanation to the offender, and the offender, who had a profound learning disability, did not know what to do nor appreciate the consequences of the choices he was making. The duty under this subsection is different than the obligation imposed on a police officer under s. 10(b) of the Charter of Rights in the case of an adult where it has been held that, absent special circumstances, there is no duty to probe into the suspect's degree of understanding of his right to counsel: R. v. M. (M.A.) (1986), 32 C.C.C. (3d) 566 (B.C.C.A.).

This section is to protect all young people and thus the requirements of this section must be complied with no matter how street-smart or worldly-wise the young person may appear. Where the statutory pre-conditions have not been complied with then the statement is inadmissible, although the offender's trial is subsequently transferred to adult court. With respect to the requirements in subsec. (2)(b)(iii) and (iv), although the offender has been advised of his right to consult with an adult relative or counsel and has availed himself of that opportunity, if the police intend to continue the questioning, they must again advise him of his right to counsel and his right to have either an adult relative or counsel present: R. v. J. (J.T.) (1990), 59 C.C.C. (3d) 1, [1990] 2 S.C.R. 3, 79 C.R. (3d) 219, (6:1).

In R. v. J. (J.T.), supra, the court found that subsec. (2)(b)(iii) and (iv) had not been complied with in respect of the taking of statements of the offender at the police station. The Crown, however, sought to tender gestures and verbal responses that the offender subsequently made at the scene of the offence. The verbal responses, however, were clearly inadmissible as there had been no compliance with subsec. (2) and it was not possible to separate the gestures from the verbal statement. The gestures and verbal responses were all an integral part of the final statement given in response to continued police questioning and were also inadmissible.

To be consistent with s. 10(b) of the Charter and s. 11 of this Act, this section must be interpreted so that a parent is not an alternative to counsel unless the right to counsel is waived. Moreover, there cannot be a valid waiver if the offender is not aware of the consequences of waiving his right. The phenomenal difference in potential consequences faced by a young person in youth court as opposed to adult court mandates that young person be aware of the possibility, where it exists, that he will be elevated to adult court, and the potential result of this in terms of stigma and penalty: R. v. I. (L.R.), supra. [Note: Amendments to subsec. (2), as a result of S.C. 1995, c. 19, would now appear to clearly conform with the holding in this case.]

Spontaneous statement [subsec. (3)] – Even if a statement is made spontaneously by virtue of para. (2)(c), and notwithstanding subsec. (3), it is not admissible if a reasonable opportunity to consult an adult has not been given to the young person, the person in authority to whom the statement was made having had a reasonable opportunity to give the young person the opportunity to do so. Thus, in this case, the officers had a reasonable opportunity when the mother of the offender was present at the police station. For, while the offender's mother was asked if she would like to see her son but declined, there was no evidence that the offender was asked at that time if he would like to see his mother. A young person is entitled to the advice of a parent before he is even questioned by the police if the opportunity for him to have the benefit of that advice is reasonably available, as it was in this case: R. v. W. (B.C.) (1986), 27 C.C.C. (3d) 481, 52 C.R. (3d) 201, [1986] 4 W.W.R. 521 (Man. C.A.).

A statement is not spontaneous within the meaning of subsec. (3) where it is clear that the offender was a suspect at the time, had been questioned at length and the statement is made in response to an allegation by the police that he had lied: R. v. J. (J.T.), supra.

Waiver [subsec. (4)] – The validity of the form of waiver will have to be considered in relation to the circumstances of the particular case. However, a waiver which informed the offender that he was not obliged to say anything, but that anything he did say may be given in evidence sufficiently complied with para. (2)(b)(ii) where the offender was found to be mature and “street wise”: R. v. G (1985), 20 C.C.C. (3d) 289 (B.C.C.A.).

To be valid, a waiver under subsec. (4) must not only be in writing but also made with full comprehension of what is being waived and the consequences of doing so: R. v. W. (B.C.), supra.

TESTIMONY OF A PARENT / Evidence of age by certificate or record / Other evidence / When age may be inferred.

57. (1) In any proceedings under this Act, the testimony of a parent as to the age of a person of whom he is a parent is admissible as evidence of the age of that person.

(2) In any proceedings under this Act,

- (a) a birth or baptismal certificate or a copy thereof purporting to be certified under the hand of the person in whose custody those records are held is evidence of the age of the person named in the certificate or copy; and
- (b) an entry or record of an incorporated society that has had the control or care of the person alleged to have committed the offence in respect of which the proceedings are taken at or about the time the person came to Canada is evidence of the age of that person, if the entry or record was made before the time when the offence is alleged to have been committed.

(3) In the absence, before the youth court, of any certificate, copy, entry or record mentioned in subsection (2), or in corroboration of any such certificate, copy, entry or record, the youth court may receive and act on any other information relating to age that it considers reliable.

(4) In any proceedings under this Act, the youth court may draw inferences as to the age of a person from the person's appearance or from statements made by the person in direct examination or cross-examination. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 57.

ADMISSIONS / Other party may adduce evidence.

58. (1) A party to any proceedings under this Act may admit any relevant fact or matter for the purpose of dispensing with proof thereof, including any fact or matter the admissibility of which depends on a ruling of law or of mixed law and fact.

(2) Nothing in this section precludes a party to a proceeding from adducing evidence to prove a fact or matter admitted by another party. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 58.

MATERIAL EVIDENCE.

59. Any evidence material to proceedings under this Act that would not but for this section be admissible in evidence may, with the consent of the parties to the proceedings and where the young person is represented by counsel, be given in such proceedings. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 59.

EVIDENCE OF A CHILD OR YOUNG PERSON.

60. In any proceedings under this Act where the evidence of a child or a young person is taken, it shall be taken only after the youth court judge or the justice, as the case may be, has

(a) in all cases, if the witness is a child, and

(b) where he deems it necessary, if the witness is a young person, instructed the child or young person as to the duty of the witness to speak the truth and the consequences of failing to do so. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 60; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.) s. 39.

(2) [Repealed. R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 39(2).]

(3) [Repealed. R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 39(2).]

ANNOTATIONS

Compliance with this section is mandatory where it applies and requires the judge to instruct the child on the duty to tell the truth, not merely ask the child whether she understands that duty: R. v. B. (M.) (1986), 1 W.C.B. (2d) 96 (Sask. C.A.).

61. [Repealed. R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 40.]

PROOF OF SERVICE / Proof of signature and official character unnecessary.

62. (1) For the purposes of this Act, service of any document may be proved by oral evidence given under oath by, or by the affidavit or statutory declaration of, the person claiming to have personally served it or sent it by mail.

(2) Where proof of service of any document is offered by affidavit or statutory declaration, it is not necessary to prove the signature or official character of the person making or taking the affidavit or declaration, if the official character of that person appears on the face thereof. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 62.

SEAL NOT REQUIRED.

63. It is not necessary to the validity of any information, summons, warrant, minute, disposition, conviction, order or other process or document laid, issued, filed or entered in any proceedings under this Act that any seal be attached or affixed thereto. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 63.

SUBSTITUTION OF JUDGES

POWERS OF SUBSTITUTE YOUTH COURT JUDGE / Transcript of evidence already given.

64. (1) A youth court judge who acts in the place of another youth court judge pursuant to subsection 669.2(1) of the Criminal Code shall,

- (a) if an adjudication has been made, proceed with the disposition of the case or make the order that, in the circumstances, is authorized by law; or
- (b) if no adjudication has been made, recommence the trial as if no evidence had been taken.

(2) Where a youth court judge recommences a trial under paragraph (1)(b), he may, if the parties consent, admit into evidence a transcript of any evidence already given in the case. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 64; R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp.), s. 187.

FUNCTIONS OF CLERKS OF COURTS

POWERS OF CLERKS.

65. In addition to any powers conferred on a clerk of a court by the Criminal Code, a clerk of the youth court may exercise such powers as are ordinarily exercised by a clerk of a court, and, in particular, may

- (a) administer oaths or affirmations in all matters relating to the business of the youth court; and
- (b) in the absence of a youth court judge, exercise all the powers of a youth court judge relating to adjournment. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 65.

FORMS, REGULATIONS AND RULES OF COURT

FORMS / Where forms not prescribed.

66. (1) The forms prescribed under section 67, varied to suit the case, or forms to the like effect, are valid and sufficient in the circumstances for which they are provided.

(2) In any case for which forms are not prescribed under section 67, the forms set out in Part XXVIII of the Criminal Code, with such modifications as the circumstances require, or other appropriate forms, may be used. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 66; R.S.C. 1985, c. 1 (4th Supp.), s. 43.

REGULATIONS.

67. The Governor in Council may make regulations

- (a) prescribing forms that may be used for the purposes of this Act;
- (b) establishing uniform rules of court for youth courts across Canada, including rules regulating the practice and procedure to be followed by youth courts; and
- (c) generally for carrying out the purposes and provisions of this Act. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 67; R.S.C. 1985, c. 24 (2nd Supp.), s. 41.

YOUTH COURT MAY MAKE RULES / Rules of court / Publication of rules.

68. (1) Every youth court for a province may, at any time with the concurrence of a majority of the judges thereof present at a meeting held for the purpose and subject to the approval of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, establish rules of court not inconsistent with this or any other Act of Parliament or with any regulations made pursuant to section 67 regulating proceedings within the jurisdiction of the youth court.

(2) Rules under subsection (1) may be made

- (a) generally to regulate the duties of the officers of the youth court and any other matter considered expedient to attain the ends of justice and carry into effect the provisions of this Act;
- (b) subject to any regulations made under paragraph 67(b), to regulate the practice and procedure in the youth court; and
- (c) to prescribe forms to be used in the youth court where not otherwise provided for by or pursuant to this Act.

(3) Rules of court that are made under the authority of this section shall be published in the appropriate provincial gazette. 1980-81-82-83, c. 110, s. 68.

CANADIAN CHARTER OF RIGHTS AND FREEDOMS

Being Part I of the Constitution Act, 1982

Enacted by the Canada Act 1982 (U.K.) c. 11; proclaimed in force April 17, 1982

Amended by the Constitution Amendment Proclamation, 1983, SI/84-102, effective June 21, 1984

Amended by the Constitution Amendment, 1993 (New Brunswick), SI/93-54, Can. Gaz., Part II, April 7, 1993, effective March 12, 1993

Whereas Canada is founded upon principles that recognize the supremacy of God and the rule of law:

---

Guarantee of Rights and Freedoms

RIGHTS AND FREEDOMS IN CANADA.

1. The Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms guarantees the rights and freedoms set out in it subject only to such reasonable limits prescribed by law as can be demonstrably justified in a free and democratic society.

ANNOTATIONS

Interpretation – In seeking to justify legislation within the meaning of this section it is not open to the government to rely on a purpose which is outside its legislative jurisdiction. Thus, in the case of the Lords Day Act, R.S.C. 1970, Chapter L-13, Parliament's jurisdiction to enact this legislation depended on its characterization as legislation directed to the preservation of the sanctity of the Christian Sabbath and was therefore a matter within the criminal law power. It was then not open to the government to attempt to justify the legislation under this section against an attack based on the guarantee of freedom of religion in s. 2(a), on the basis that the legislation's true purpose was a secular one: R. v. Big M Drug Mart Ltd. (1985), 18 C.C.C. (3d) 385, [1985] 1 S.C.R. 295, 18 D.L.R. (4th) 321.

This section has two functions. It constitutionally guarantees the rights and freedoms set out in the following provisions and states explicitly the exclusive justificatory criteria against which limitations on those rights and freedoms must be measured. Accordingly, any inquiry under this section is premised on an understanding that the impugned limit violates the constitutional rights and freedoms which are part of the supreme law of Canada. To establish that a limit is justified under this section two central criteria must be satisfied. First, the objective which the measures responsible for a limit on a Charter right or freedom are designed to serve must be of sufficient importance to warrant overriding a constitutionally protected right or freedom, and secondly, the party invoking this section must show that the means chosen are reasonable and demonstrably justified. The first criterion requires at a minimum that an objective relate to concerns which are pressing and substantial in a free and democratic society. The second requirement involves a form of proportionality test and while the nature of this test will vary, depending on the circumstances, in each case the courts will be required to balance the interests of society with those of the individual and of groups. There are three important components of the proportionality test. First, the measures adopted must be carefully designed to achieve the objective in question. The measures must not be arbitrary, unfair or based on irrational considerations but rather must be rationally connected to the objective. Second, the means, even if rationally connected to the objective, should impair as little as possible the right or freedom in question, and finally, there must be a proportionality between the effects of the measures which are responsible for limiting the Charter right or freedom and the objective which has been identified as of sufficient importance. The more severe the deleterious effects of a measure, the more important the objective must be if the measure is to be reasonable and demonstrably justified in a free and democratic society: R. v. Oakes (1986), 24 C.C.C. (3d) 321, [1986] 1 S.C.R. 103, 50 C.R. (3d) 1.

A reasonable limit within the meaning of this section is one which it was reasonable for the legislature to impose. Courts are not called upon to substitute judicial opinions for legislative ones as to the place at which to draw a precise line. It is open to the legislature to restrict its legislative reforms to sectors in which there appear to be particularly urgent concerns or to constituencies that seem especially needy. Further, legislative choices regarding alternative forms of business regulation do not generally impinge on the values and provisions of the Charter, and the resultant legislation need not be tuned with great precision in order to withstand judicial scrutiny: R. v. Edwards Books & Art Ltd.; R. v. Nortown Foods Ltd (1986), 30 C.C.C. (3d) 385, [1986] 2 S.C.R. 713, 55 C.R. (3d) 193.

The various sections of the Charter must not be read in isolation from each other. The Charter protects a complex of interacting values, each more or less fundamental to the free and democratic society that is Canada. Each section must be interpreted in light of the value structure sought to be protected by the Charter as a whole and in light of a content of the other specific rights and freedoms which it embodies: R. v. Lyons (1987), 37 C.C.C. (3d) 1, [1987] 2 S.C.R. 309, 61 C.R. (3d) 1.

Legislation may meet the requirement under this section of having been enacted to meet a pressing and substantial objective, notwithstanding the legislation is not confined to protecting the most clearly vulnerable group. In enacting protective legislation, the legislature is required only to exercise a reasonable judgment in specifying the vulnerable group. Whether the means chosen impair the right or freedom in question as little as possible will depend on the government objective and on the means available to achieve it. In matching means to ends and asking whether rights or freedoms are impaired as little as possible, a legislature mediating between the claims of competing groups will be forced to strike a balance without the benefit of absolute certainty concerning how the balance is best struck. The choice of means, like the choice of ends, frequently will require an assessment of conflicting scientific evidence and differing justified demands on scarce resources. As courts review the results of the legislature's deliberations, particularly with respect to the protection of vulnerable groups, they must be mindful of the legislature's representative function. Less certainty may be possible when the government is mediating between different groups than when the government itself is the antagonist of the individual whose right has been infringed. The court will not, in the name of minimal impairment, take a restrictive approach to social science evidence and require legislatures to choose the least ambitious means to protect vulnerable groups. There must, nevertheless, be a sound evidentiary basis for the government's conclusions: Irwin Toy Ltd. v. Quebec (Attorney General), [1989] 1 S.C.R. 927, 58 D.L.R. (4th) 577, 24 Q.A.C. 2.

Prescribed by law – Limitations on rights cannot be left to the unfettered discretion of administrative bodies: Reference re: Education Act of Ontario and Minority Language Education Rights (1984), 10 D.L.R. (4th) 491, 47 O.R. (2d) 1, 11 C.R.R. 17, 27 M.P.L.R. 1 (C.A.).

The term "law" in this section includes common law as well as statute law: R. v. Canadian Newspapers Company Ltd. (1984), 16 C.C.C. (3d) 495, 31 Man. R. (2d) 187, 13 C.R.R. 43 (C.A.).

A limit will be prescribed by law within the meaning of this section if it is expressly provided for by statute or regulation, or results by necessary implication from the terms of a statute or regulation or from its operating requirements. The limit may also result from the application of a common law rule: R. v. Therens (1985), 18 C.C.C. (3d) 481, [1985] 1 S.C.R. 613, 45 C.R. (3d) 97.

The test to be applied to determine whether a statute is prescribed by law is whether the law provides an intelligible standard according to which the judiciary must do its work. In determining whether a law does prescribe an intelligible standard, consideration must be given to the manner in which the provision has been judicially interpreted: R. v. Butler (1992), 70 C.C.C. (3d) 129, 11 C.R. (4th) 137, [1992] 1 S.C.R. 452.

Burden of proof – The onus of proving that a limit on a right or freedom guaranteed by the Charter is reasonable and demonstrably justified in a free and democratic society rests upon the party seeking to uphold the limitation. While the standard of proof under this section is the civil standard, this test must be applied rigorously and where evidence is required in order to prove the constituent elements of a s. 1 inquiry, and this will generally be the case, it should be cogent and persuasive and made clear to the court the consequences of imposing or not imposing a limit. The court will also need to know what alternative measures for implementing the objective were available to the legislators when they made their decisions. It may be however that there will be cases where certain elements of the analysis under this section are obvious or self-evident: R. v. Oakes, supra.

Evidence – It is open to the Court of Appeal to receive evidence in the form of statistical and other statements of social and economic facts, which are the kind of evidence of which the court may take judicial notice in considering the application of this section, notwithstanding that the evidence had not been adduced by the Crown and the courts below. Provided that the other party is given notice of the materials and given an opportunity to reply, the court should take judicial notice of relevant matters of social and economic facts, whether or not they have been available to the trial judge. In this case, the court also noted that it may soon be that judicial notice can be taken of the special problem posed by the drinking driver without materials being adduced before the court: R. v. Bonin (1989), 47 C.C.C. (3d) 230, 11 M.V.R. (2d) 31 (B.C.C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused 50 C.C.C. (3d) vi, 102 N.R. 400n.

Where the basis for legislation is not obvious, the government must, in order to meet its burden under this section, bring forward cogent and persuasive evidence demonstrating that the provisions in issue are justified. In showing that the legislation pursues a pressing and substantial objective, it is not open to the government to assert post facto a purpose which did not animate the legislation in the first place. However, in proving that the original objective remains pressing and substantial, the government can and should draw upon the best evidence currently available. Studies subsequent to the enactment of the legislation can be used for the purpose, as well as for the purpose of establishing that the measure is proportional to its objective: Irwin Toy Ltd. v. Quebec Attorney General, supra.

Fundamental Freedoms

FUNDAMENTAL FREEDOMS.

2. Everyone has the following fundamental freedoms:

- (a) freedom of conscience and religion;
- (b) freedom of thought, belief, opinion and expression, including freedom of the press and other media of communication;
- (c) freedom of peaceful assembly; and
- (d) freedom of association.

ANNOTATIONS

Section 2(a): Freedom of religion – The essence of the concept of freedom of religion is the right to entertain such religious beliefs as a person chooses, the right to declare religious beliefs openly and without fear of hindrance or reprisal and the right to manifest religious belief by worship and practice or by teaching and dissemination. The freedom guaranteed by s. 2(a) also includes protection against governmental coercion in matters of conscience and religion. Coercion includes not only such blatant forms of compulsion as direct commands to act or refrain from acting on pain of sanction, but also indirect forms of control which determine or limit alternative courses of conduct subject to such limitations as are necessary to protect public safety, order, health or morals or the fundamental rights and freedoms of others, no one is to be forced to act in a way contrary to his belief or his conscience. Whatever else freedom of conscience and religion may mean, it means at the very least that the government may not coerce individuals to affirm a specific religious belief or to manifest a specific religious practice for a sectarian purpose. The Charter protects not only the right to hold and manifest beliefs, but also the right to express and manifest religious non-belief and to refuse to participate in religious practice: R. v. Big M Drug Mart Ltd. (1985), 18 C.C.C. (3d) 385, [1985] 1 S.C.R. 295, 18 D.L.R. (4th) 321.

Legislation with a secular inspiration does not abridge the freedom from conformity to religious dogma merely because statutory provisions coincide with the tenets of a religion: Edwards Books & Art Ltd. v. The Queen; R. v. Nortown Foods Ltd. (1986), 30 C.C.C. (3d) 385, [1986] 2 S.C.R. 713, 55 C.R. (3d) 193.

Not every effect of legislation on religious beliefs or practices is offensive to the guarantee provided by s. 2(a). That paragraph does not require that the legislature refrain from imposing any burdens on the practice of religion. Legislative or administrative action whose effect on religion is trivial or insubstantial is not a breach of freedom of religion: Jones v. The Queen (1986), 28 C.C.C. (3d) 513, [1986] 2 S.C.R. 284, 31 D.L.R. (4th) 569.

Religious communications are not prima facie privileged. However, in a particular case, the court could exclude evidence where the communication between the accused and a religious adviser met the so-called “Wigmore” criteria: (1) the communication must originate in a confidence that it will not be disclosed; (2) this element of confidentiality must be essential to the full and satisfactory maintenance of the relation between the parties; (3) the relation must be one which in the opinion of the community ought to be sedulously fostered; (4) the injury that would inure to the relation by the disclosure of the communication must be greater than the benefit thereby gained for the correct disposal of the litigation. However, the fact that the communication was not made to an ordained priest or minister or that it did not constitute a formal confession, will not bar the possibility of the communication being excluded: R. v. Gruenke, [1991] 3 S.C.R. 263, 67 C.C.C. (3d) 289, [1991] 6 W.W.R. 673.

Section 2(b): Freedom of expression / Interpretation – Section 2(b) protects all forms of expression, whether oral, written, pictorial, sculpture, music, dance or film. The freedom of expression referred to, moreover, extends to those engaged in expression for profit and those who wish to express the ideas of others, and to the recipients as well as to the originators of communication: Re Ontario Film and Video Appreciation Society and Ontario Board of Censors (1983), 34 C.R. (3d) 73, 147 D.L.R. (3d) 58, 41 O.R. (2d) 583 (Div. Ct.), affd 38 C.R. (3d) 271, 5 D.L.R. (4th) 766n, 45 O.R. (2d) 80n, 7 C.R.R. 129 (C.A.). Similarly: R. v. Videoflicks Ltd. (1984), 15 C.C.C. (3d) 353, 14 D.L.R. (4th) 10, 48 O.R. (2d) 395 (C.A.) affd on other grounds 30 C.C.C. (3d) 385, [1986] 2 S.C.R. 713, 35 D.L.R. (4th) 1, sub nom. R. v. Edwards Books & Art Ltd.

Where government action is challenged under s. 2(b), the first step which the court must take is to ascertain whether the activity which the person challenging the government action wishes to pursue may properly be characterized as falling within freedom of expression. Where an activity conveys or attempts to convey a meaning, it has expressive content and prima facie falls within the scope of the guarantee. Freedom of expression was entrenched in the Charter to ensure that everyone can manifest thoughts, opinions, beliefs and indeed all expressions of the heart and mind however unpopular, distasteful or contrary to the mainstream. Human activity cannot therefore be excluded from the scope of guaranteed free expression on the basis of the content or meaning being conveyed. Once it is determined that the activity in issue comes within the scope of freedom of expression, the next step is to determine whether the purpose or effect of the government action is to restrict freedom of expression. If the government has aimed to control attempts to convey a meaning either by directly restricting the content of expression or by restricting a form of expression tied to content, its purpose trenches upon the guarantee. Where however it aims only to control the physical consequences of particular conduct, its purpose does not trench upon the guarantee. Even if the government's purpose is not to control or restrict attempts to convey a meaning, the court must still decide whether the effect of a government action is to restrict free expression. The burden is on the person challenging government action to demonstrate the existence of such an effect, and to show that the activity in issue promotes at least one of the principles and values underlying the freedom. Those principles and values are: that seeking and attaining the truth is an inherently good activity; that participation in social and political decision-making is to be fostered and encouraged; and that diversity in forms of individual self-fulfillment and human flourishing ought to be cultivated in an essentially tolerant and welcoming environment, not only for the sake of those who convey a meaning, but also for the sake of those to whom it is conveyed: Irwin Toy Ltd. v. Quebec (Attorney General) (1989), [1989] 1 S.C.R. 927, 58 D.L.R. (4th) 577, 24 Q.A.C. 2.

There is no sound basis on which commercial expression can be excluded from the protection of s. 2(b). The guarantee in this paragraph is intended to protect both listeners as well as speakers, and is not confined to political expression. Over and above its intrinsic value as expression, commercial expression plays a significant role in enabling individuals to form economic choices, an important aspect of individual self-fulfillment and personal autonomy: Ford v. Quebec (Attorney General) (1988), [1988] 2 S.C.R. 712, 54 D.L.R. (4th) 577, 19 Q.A.C. 69, sub nom. Chaussure Brown's Inc. v. Quebec (Attorney General).

Freedom of expression as guaranteed by s. 2(b) includes the freedom to express oneself in the language of one's choice. Language is so intimately related to the form and content of expression that there cannot be true freedom of expression by means of language if one is prohibited from using the language of one's choice: Ford v. Quebec (Attorney General), supra.

Activities cannot be excluded from the scope of the guarantee in this paragraph on the basis of the content or meaning conveyed and, thus, the prohibition on communication for the purpose of prostitution or of obtaining the services of a prostitute is a violation of this paragraph. However, eradication of the various forms of social nuisance arising from the public display of the sale of sex is an objective of sufficient importance to warrant a limitation of the freedom of expression and the means chosen by Parliament in s. 212(1)(c) of the Criminal Code is a proportional response and, thus, a reasonable limit within the meaning of s. 1: Reference re ss. 193 and 195.1(1)(c) of the Criminal Code (1990), 56 C.C.C. (3d) 65, [1990] 1 S.C.R. 1123, [1990] 4 W.W.R. 481 (4:2).

The term "expression" embraces all content of expression irrespective of the particular meaning or message sought to be conveyed and no matter how invidious and obnoxious the message. While the court has held that expression which is communicated in a physically violent form may not be protected, communications such as hate propaganda cannot be considered as violence nor as analogous to violence so as to fall outside the protection of this subsection. Moreover, even threats of violence fall within the protection of this subsection and their suppression must be justified under s. 1. Further, it would be inappropriate to attenuate the freedom of expression guarantee by attempting to balance it against other protected rights and freedoms such as those in ss. 15 and 27 dealing with equality and multiculturalism. The preferable course is to weigh the various contextual values and factors in the s. 1 analysis: R. v. Keegstra (1990), 61 C.C.C. (3d) 1, [1991] 2 W.W.R. 1, 77 Alta. L.R. (2d) 193 (S.C.C.) (4:3).

This paragraph does not import any new or additional requirements for the issuance of search warrants at media premises. However, this paragraph does provide a backdrop against which the reasonableness of such a search may be evaluated and there must be a careful consideration as to whether the warrant should issue and also the conditions which might be imposed. Ordinarily, the information to obtain the warrant should disclose whether there are alternative sources from which the information may reasonably be obtained and if there is an alternative source, that it has been investigated and all reasonable efforts to obtain the information have been exhausted. If a search will impede the media from fulfilling its functions of news gatherer and news disseminator, then a warrant should only be issued where a compelling state interest is demonstrated. The fact that the information sought has already been disseminated, in whole or in part, to the public by the media will ordinarily favour the granting of the warrant: C.B.C. v. New Brunswick (Attorney General) (1991), 67 C.C.C. (3d) 544, 85 D.L.R. (4th) 57, 130 N.R. 362 (S.C.C.) (6:1); C.B.C. v. Lessard (1991), 67 C.C.C. (3d) 517, 130 N.R. 321 (S.C.C.) (6:1).

Access to Judicial Proceedings – While public accessibility to the courts is not explicitly guaranteed by the Charter, such access, having regard to its historical origin and necessary purpose, is an integral and implicit part of the guarantee to everyone of freedom of opinion and expression including freedom of the press. The rule of openness in courts fosters the necessary public confidence in the integrity of the court system and an understanding of the administration of justice: Re Southam Inc. and The Queen (No. 1) (1983), 3 C.C.C. (3d) 515, 146 D.L.R. (3d) 408, 41 O.R. (2d) 113 (C.A.).

Restrictions on picketing – In any form of picketing there is at least some element of expression. The union is making a statement to the general public that it is involved in a dispute, that it is seeking to impose its will on the object of picketing and that it solicits the assistance of the public in honouring picket lines. While action on the part of the picketers will always accompany the expression, picketing is therefore entitled to protection under this paragraph unless it is accompanied by a form of action, such as threats of violence, disruption of property, assault or other clearly unlawful conduct, that alters the nature of the whole transaction and removes it from Charter protection. Picketing intended to bring about economic pressure and induce a breach of contract nonetheless comes within s. 2(b). It is however necessary in the general social interest that picketing be regulated and sometimes limited. However, by virtue of s. 32, the Charter only applies to the legislative, executive and administrative branches of government. It will apply to them whenever their action is invoked in public or private litigation, and whether their action relies on statutory authority or on the authority or justification of a rule of the common law. The Charter will apply to the common law, however, only in so far as it is the basis of some government action alleged to infringe a guaranteed right or freedom. A court order such as an injunction sought to restrict picketing is not an element of government intervention sufficient to invoke the Charter, for otherwise the Charter would apply to all private litigation. The Charter will therefore not apply in an action by one private party relying on the common law of inducing breach of contract to obtain an injunction restraining secondary picketing by another private party: Retail, Wholesale & Department Union, Local 580 v. Dolphin Delivery Ltd., [1986] 2 S.C.R. 573, 33 D.L.R. (4th) 174, [1987] 1 W.W.R. 577.

Freedom of the Press – Even assuming that s. 2(b) enshrines the right to gather news, the witness in this case had not demonstrated that compelling journalists to testify before bodies such as the Labour Relations Board would detrimentally affect journalists' ability to gather information. Accordingly the witness had failed to demonstrate any breach of her right under this section: Moyss v. Alberta (Labour Relations Board), [1989] 1 S.C.R. 1572, 60 D.L.R. (4th) 1, [1989] 4 W.W.R. 596.

While the communications media may have no general privilege immunizing them from having to disclose on discovery or at trial the identity of their sources, the special position of the press, including the guarantee of a free press conferred by s. 2(b) requires that in each instance the interest in a free press be weighed and balanced against the party's right to disclosure: Citizen (The) v. Coates (1986), 29 D.L.R. (4th) 523, 11 C.P.C. (2d) 96 (N.S.C.A.).

Freedom of the press is not absolute save for s. 1 limitations: it is circumscribed by the rights of others, inherent in the concept of a democratic freedom. The reconciliation of freedom of the press and the right of the individual to a fair trial does not infringe either right. The press will be free to publish the information after the case has been tried. The accused can have a fair trial only if the trial is not debated publicly, before a verdict is rendered. To the extent that freedom of expression is hindered by the law of contempt, the hindrance is a corollary of the competing right of an accused person to a fair trial. The requirement that the press await the outcome of a trial before publishing information prejudicial to the accused does not infringe the freedom of expression guaranteed by the Charter: Attorney General for Manitoba v. Groupe Quebecor Inc. (1987), 37 C.C.C. (3d) 421, 59 C.R. (3d) 1, 45 D.L.R. (4th) 80 (Man. C.A.).

A newspaper article concerning accused facing trials is protected by s. 2(b), notwithstanding that the publication of the article offends the sub judice rule. However the offence of criminal contempt sub judice constitutes a reasonable limit within the meaning of s. 1. While freedom of expression including freedom of the press and other media of communication are vital in a democratic society, the accused also have a right to a fair trial as guaranteed by s. 11(d): R. v. Robinson-Blackmore Printing & Publishing Co. Ltd. (1989), 47 C.C.C. (3d) 366, 73 Nfld. & P.E.I.R. 46 (Nfld. S.C.).

Section 2(c): Freedom of assembly – The courts should require that the Crown show a compelling reason why basic rights of an individual to do what is lawful should be curtailed. Thus, a condition of release pending trial that the accused not attend at a demonstration or demonstrate or in any way cause a disturbance within half a mile of a particular factory should not have been imposed upon the accused following his release on bail pending trial on a charge of obstructing police. The rights of an accused cannot be restricted on a speculative concern of danger: R. v. Collins (1982), 31 C.R. (3d) 283 (Ont. Co. Ct.).

Section 2(d): Freedom of association – The right to strike does not come within the freedom of association as guaranteed by s. 2(d). The purpose of freedom of association is to guarantee that activities and goals may be pursued in common. What s. 2(d) protects is the exercise in association of such rights as have Charter protection when exercised by the individual, together with the freedom to associate for the purpose of activities which are lawful when performed alone: Reference re Public Service Employees Relations Act, Labour Relations Act and Police Officers Collective Bargaining Act, [1987] 1 S.C.R. 313, 38 D.L.R. (4th) 161, [1987] 3 W.W.R. 577.

The target of s. 212(1)(c) of the Criminal Code, which prohibits communication in public for the purpose of prostitution, is expressive conduct of a commercial nature and does not attack conduct of an associational nature. Further, the mere fact that an impugned legislative provision limits the possibility of commercial activities or agreements is not sufficient to show a prima facie interference with this paragraph. The constitutionality of the provisions was therefore to be determined on the basis of s. 2(b) rather than this paragraph. The court, having found that s. 212(1)(c) is a reasonable limit on the s. 2(b) guarantee, held that provision was valid: R. v. Skinner (1990), 56 C.C.C. (3d) 1 (S.C.C.) (4:2).

Democratic Rights

DEMOCRATIC RIGHTS OF CITIZENS.

3. Every citizen of Canada has the right to vote in an election of members of the House of Commons or of a legislative assembly and to be qualified for membership therein.

ANNOTATIONS

Since proclamation of the Charter, the courts have had to consider whether limitations on the rights of inmates to vote in provincial and federal elections infringe this section and if so, whether they constitute reasonable limits within the meaning of s. 1. In Re Maltby and Attorney General of Saskatchewan (1982), 2 C.C.C. (3d) 153, 143 D.L.R. (3d) 649, 20 Sask. R. 366 (Q.B.) [appeal dismissed as moot appeal 13 C.C.C. (3d) 308, 10 D.L.R. (4th) 745 (C.A.)] it was held that prison inmates on remand were entitled to a declaration that they were entitled to vote in provincial elections. Under the provincial legislation such inmates are not disqualified from voting but have been prevented from exercising their right to vote by reason of an administrative practice within the prison. In Badger v. Attorney General of Manitoba (1986), 27 C.C.C. (3d) 158, 51 C.R. (3d) 163, 30 D.L.R. (4th) 108 (Man. Q.B.) [appeal to the Court of Appeal 29 C.C.C. (3d) 92, 32 D.L.R. (4th) 310, 39 Man. R. (2d) 230, dismissed due to shortness of time until election] it was held that a provision of the Provincial Elections Act disqualifying from voting in a provincial election persons who are in jails, prisons or places of detention serving a sentence infringes this section and cannot be saved by s. 1. However, in view of the uncertain state of the law, the government was not seriously remiss in failing to reconcile the provincial law with the Charter. The applicants had asserted their right to vote belatedly and therefore, while entitled to a declaration that the provision of the Elections Act was invalid, it would not be appropriate or just to order that the prisoners' names be placed on the voters list or that any other steps be taken to enable convicted prisoners to participate in the impending election. In Grondin v. Ontario (Attorney General) (1988), 65 O.R. (2d) 427 (H.C.J.) it was held that a provision of the Election Act (Ont.) disqualifying from voting in a provincial election every person who is an inmate in a penal or correctional institution infringes this section and cannot be justified under s. 1.

A provision of the Election Act (B.C.), which denies to any person who has been convicted of treason or an indictable offence the right to vote in a provincial election unless he has been pardoned or has served the sentence imposed for the offence, is inconsistent with s. 3 and of no force and effect to the extent that it prohibits from voting persons serving a term of probation: Re Reynolds and Attorney General of British Columbia (1982), 143 D.L.R. (3d) 365, [1983] 2 W.W.R. 413 (B.C.S.C.); affd 40 C.R. (3d) 393, 11 D.L.R. (4th) 380, [1984] 5 W.W.R. 270 (C.A.).

Section 51(e) of the Canada Elections Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. E-2, which disqualifies from voting in a federal election every person undergoing punishment as an inmate in any penal institution for the commission of any offence violates this section and is not a reasonable limit. The provision is therefore of no force and effect: Belczowski v. Canada (1992), 12 C.R. (4th) 219, 90 D.L.R. (4th) 330, 50 F.T.R. 240n (C.A.); Sauvé v. Canada (Attorney-General) (1992), 89 D.L.R. (4th) 644, 7 O.R. (3d) 481 (C.A.). Contra: Badger v. Canada (Attorney-General) (1988), 55 D.L.R. (4th) 177 (Man. C.A.); Re Jolivet and Barker and the Queen (1983), 1 D.L.R. (4th) 604, 7 C.C.C. (3d) 431 (B.C.S.C.).

MAXIMUM DURATION OF LEGISLATIVE BODIES / Continuation in special circumstances.

4. (1) No House of Commons and no legislative assembly shall continue for longer than five years from the date fixed for the return of the writs at a general election of its members.

(2) In time of real or apprehended war, invasion or insurrection, a House of Commons may be continued by Parliament and a legislative assembly may be continued by the legislature beyond five years if such continuation is not opposed by the votes of more than one-third of the members of the House of Commons or the legislative assembly, as the case may be.

ANNUAL SITTING OF LEGISLATIVE BODIES.

5. There shall be a sitting of Parliament and of each legislature at least once every twelve months.

Mobility Rights

MOBILITY OF CITIZENS / Rights to move and gain livelihood / Limitation / Affirmative action programs.

6. (1) Every citizen of Canada has the right to enter, remain in and leave Canada.

(2) Every citizen of Canada and every person who has the status of a permanent resident of Canada has the right

- (a) to move to and take up residence in any province; and
- (b) to pursue the gaining of a livelihood in any province.

(3) The rights specified in subsection (2) are subject to

- (a) any laws or practices of general application in force in a province other than those that discriminate among persons primarily on the basis of province of present or previous residence; and
- (b) any laws providing for reasonable residency requirements as a qualification for the receipt of publicly provided social services.

(4) Subsections (2) and (3) do not preclude any law, program or activity that has as its object the amelioration in a province of conditions of individuals in that province who are socially or economically disadvantaged if the rate of employment in that province is below the rate of employment in Canada.

ANNOTATIONS

Interpretation – Subsection (2)(b) does not create a separate and distinct right to work divorced from the mobility provisions in which it is found. The rights in paragraphs (a) and (b) both relate to movement into another province, either to take up residence or to work without establishing residence: Law Society of Upper Canada v. Skapinker (1984), 11 C.C.C. (3d) 481, [1984] 1 S.C.R. 357, 9 D.L.R. (4th) 161.

Section 6 extends to citizens and permanent residents alike the right inherent in citizenship, to reside wherever one wishes in the country and to pursue the gaining of a livelihood without regard for provincial boundaries. Like other individual rights guaranteed by the Charter, it must be interpreted generously to achieve its purpose: to protect the right of citizens and permanent residents to move about the country, to reside where they wish and to pursue their livelihood without regard to provincial boundaries. While the provinces may regulate these rights, they may not do so, subject to the exceptions in this section and s. 1, in terms of provincial boundaries. Section 6(2)(b) guarantees not simply the right to pursue a livelihood, but the right to pursue the livelihood of choice to the extent and subject to the same conditions as residents. The right to pursue the livelihood of choice must remain a viable right and cannot be rendered practically ineffective and illusory by provincial regulation. The right to pursue the gaining of a livelihood in the province does not depend on physical movement of the individual to the province. A person can pursue a living in a province without being there personally. This section guarantees the right to offer one's services anywhere in Canada regardless of one's place of residence: Black v. Law Society of Alberta, [1989] 1 S.C.R. 591, 58 D.L.R. (4th) 317, [1989] 4 W.W.R. 1.

Extradition – While extradition infringes s. 6, the infringement lies at the outer edges of the core values sought to be protected by this provision and extradition constitutes a reasonable limit within the meaning of s. 1. Even where the accused were Canadian citizens and the acts for which their extradition was sought were committed in Canada, their extradition on drug trafficking and importing charges was valid. The extradition of the accused was rationally connected with the objectives sought to be obtained. It would not be appropriate to consider the propriety of extradition on a case by case basis. A general exception from extradition for Canadian citizen who could be charged in Canada would interfere unduly with the objectives of the system of extradition. Moreover, the fact that the Attorney General has a discretion to determine whether a Canadian should be prosecuted in Canada or abroad does not mean that extradition is not a reasonable limit. The authorities must give due weight to the constitutional right of a citizen to remain in Canada and they must in good faith direct their minds to whether prosecution would be equally effective in Canada, given the existing domestic laws in international arrangements. They have an obligation flowing from this section to assure themselves that prosecution in Canada is not a realistic option and if, in a particular case, it was established that the discretion was exercised for improper or arbitrary motives a remedy would lie: United States of America v. Cotroni (1989), 48 C.C.C. (3d) 193, [1989] 1 S.C.R. 1469, 23 Q.A.C. 182.

Legal Rights

LIFE, LIBERTY AND SECURITY OF PERSON.

---

7. Everyone has the right to life, liberty and security of the person and the right not to be deprived thereof except in accordance with the principles of fundamental justice.

ANNOTATIONS

Interpretation – The phrase “principles of fundamental justice” does not describe a protected right itself but rather qualifies the protected right not to be deprived of life, liberty and security of the person. The meaning of the principles of fundamental justice was to be determined having regard to the purpose of the section and its context in the Charter. Thus ss. 8 to 14 of the Charter address specific deprivations of the right to life, liberty and security of the person in breach of the principles of fundamental justice, and as such, violations of this section. They are designed to protect, in a specific manner and setting, the right to life, liberty and security of the person. The term “fundamental justice” was not synonymous merely with natural justice. The principles of fundamental justice are to be found in the basic tenets and principles not only of our judicial process, but also of the other components of the legal system. While many of the principles of fundamental justice are procedural in nature, they are not limited solely to procedural guarantees. Whether any given principle might be said to be a principle of fundamental justice within the meaning of this section will rest upon an analysis of the nature, sources, rationale and essential role of that principle within the judicial process and in the legal system as it evolves: Reference re Section 94(2) of the Motor Vehicle Act (1985), 23 C.C.C. (3d) 289, [1985] 2 S.C.R. 486, 48 C.R. (3d) 289.

It was not open to a witness, the former manager of a bank in the Bahamas, to allege an infringement of his rights under s. 7 because he was required to testify in Canada about affairs in the Bahamas, in possible violation of Bahamian legislation. Any infringement of the witness's liberty or security did not result from the operation of Canadian law but solely from the operation of Bahamian law in the Bahamas: Spencer v. The Queen (1985), 21 C.C.C. (3d) 385, [1985] 2 S.C.R. 278, 21 D.L.R. (4th) 756.

Section 7 does not apply retrospectively and thus an accused charged with an offence allegedly committed prior to the proclamation of the Charter cannot argue that the provision violated his rights as guaranteed by this section because in effect it imposed absolute liability in the circumstances where he was liable to imprisonment: R. v. Stevens (1988), 41 C.C.C. (3d) 193, [1988] 1 S.C.R. 1153, 64 C.R. (3d) 297.

There was no retrospective application of s. 7 in a case where the accused alleged a continuing violation of her liberty interest which was not in accordance with the principles of fundamental justice because of an error made at her pre-Charter trial convicting her of murder, which error affected her period of parole ineligibility. While her claim required the courts to consider pre-Charter history to the extent it explained or contributed to what was alleged to be a current Charter violation, in the circumstances of the case, the court was not being asked to apply s. 7 retrospectively. The crucial issue was to identify the event alleged to be in contravention of s. 7 and the point in time which the event depriving the accused of her liberty occurred. In this case it was the current application of the condition of the accused's sentence that she not be eligible for parole for 25 years which infringed her residual liberty interest: R. v. Gamble (1988), 45 C.C.C. (3d) 204, [1988] 2 S.C.R. 595, 66 C.R. (3d) 193.

A corporation cannot avail itself of the protection afforded by this section. A corporation cannot be deprived of life or security of the person. Nor, having regard to the exclusion from this section of a guarantee of a right to property, can the section be regarded as encompassing the economic rights of a corporation so as to protect a corporation against deprivations of economic liberty: Irwin Toy Ltd. v. Quebec (Attorney General), [1989] 1 S.C.R. 927, 58 D.L.R. (4th) 577, 24 Q.A.C. 2. [However see notes under s. 52 as to circumstances in which a corporation may allege a violation of this section or other fundamental freedoms when charged with an offence.]

In the criminal context, where a person's liberty is at stake, it is imperative that persons be capable of knowing in advance, with a high degree of certainty, what conduct is prohibited and what is not and, thus, vagueness should be recognized as contrary to the principles of fundamental justice. However, the void for vagueness doctrine is not to be applied to the bare words of the statute, but rather to the provision as interpreted and applied in judicial decisions. In addition, the fact that a particular term is open to varying interpretations by the courts is not fatal. The question is whether the impugned term can be or has been given sensible meaning by the courts: Reference re ss. 193 and 195.1(1)(c) of the Criminal Code (1990), 56 C.C.C. (3d) 65, [1990] 1 S.C.R. 1123, [1990] 4 W.W.R. 481 (4:2).

The doctrine of vagueness is a principle of fundamental justice under this section and is also part of the s. 1 analysis in that a law may be so vague as to not meet the requirement of "prescribed by law". Vagueness as a principle of fundamental justice is based on the requirements of fair notice to the citizen and limitation on law enforcement discretion. The concept of fair notice includes a formal aspect, that is acquaintance with the actual text of a statute, and a substantive content, that is an understanding that certain conduct is the subject of legal restrictions. The concept of a limitation on law enforcement discretion is based on the principle that a law must not be so devoid of precision in its content that a conviction will automatically flow from the decision to prosecute. Legal rules reach the point of certainty only in particular cases where the law is determined by a competent authority. In the meanwhile, conduct is guided by approximation. Legal dispositions, therefore, delineate a risk zone, and cannot hope to do more, unless they are directed at individual instances. A provision is unconstitutionally vague, therefore, where it does not provide an adequate basis for legal debate, that is for reaching a conclusion as to its meaning by reasoned analysis applying legal criteria. It does not sufficiently delineate any area of risk, and thus can provide neither fair notice to the citizen nor a limitation of enforcement discretion. The courts must, however, be wary of using the doctrine of vagueness to prevent or impede state action and furtherance of valid social objectives, by requiring the law to achieve a degree of precision to which the subject matter does not lend itself: R. v. Nova Scotia Pharmaceutical Society, [1992] 2 S.C.R. 606, 74 C.C.C. (3d) 289, 15 C.R. (4th) 1.

Vagueness must not be considered in the abstract but must be assessed within the larger interpretative context developed through an analysis of considerations such as the purpose, subject matter and nature of the impugned provision, societal values, related legislative provisions, and prior judicial interpretations of the provision. Only after a court has exhausted its interpretative role will it then be in a position to determine whether the provision affords sufficient guidance for legal debate. While it is open to an accused to argue that a statute is unconstitutionally vague even where its conduct clearly falls within the core of the prohibition, reasonable hypotheticals have no place in the vagueness analysis. It would seem, however, that reasonable hypotheticals may be used in an analysis of whether a provision is unconstitutionally overboard: R. v. Canadian Pacific Ltd., [1995] 2 S.C.R. 1028, 99 C.C.C. (3d) 97, 41 C.R. (4th) 147.

This section does not protect economic rights per se and thus provisions of the Highway Traffic Act (Man.), allowing for the seizure of a vehicle driven by a person who was disqualified or prohibited from driving, did not violate this section: R. v. Werhun, [1991] 2 W.W.R. 344 (Man. C.A.).

A non-citizen does not have an unqualified right to enter or remain in Canada and it is open to Parliament to prescribe conditions for them to enter or remain. The removal of a non-citizen who has deliberately violated an essential condition by reason of his conviction for a serious criminal offence does not result in a denial of fundamental justice. Further, the procedure followed by the Security Intelligence Review Committee which was determining whether there were grounds to believe the person was involved in organized crime, in providing the person with a summary of police evidence but barring him from being present while the evidence itself was presented, was in accordance with the principles of fundamental justice. The scope of principles of fundamental justice will vary with the context and the interests at stake: Chiarelli v. Canada (Minister of Employment and Immigration) (1992), 72 C.C.C. (3d) 214, [1992] 1 S.C.R. 711, 90 D.L.R. (4th) 289 (S.C.C.).

Self-incrimination – A statutory compulsion to testify engages the witness' liberty interest under this section. However, the liberty interest is affected in accordance with the principles of fundamental justice, since not only is the witness protected from use of his testimony in subsequent proceedings (except for perjury or the giving of contradictory evidence) by virtue of s. 13 of the Charter, but derivative evidence which could not have been obtained, or the significance of which could not have been appreciated, but for the testimony of the witness ought generally to be excluded under this section at the witness' subsequent trial, since its admission would tend to affect the fairness of the trial: R. v. S. (R.J.), [1995] 1 S.C.R. 451, 96 C.C.C. (3d) 1, 36 C.R. (4th) 1.

Although separately charged as an accused, a witness appearing in another person's criminal trial will ordinarily be compellable in that trial, unless it is established that the predominant purpose in compelling the testimony is incrimination of the witness. A similar test should be applied where the evidence is sought at a preliminary inquiry: R. v. Primeau, [1995] 2 S.C.R. 60, 97 C.C.C. (3d) 1, 38 C.R. (4th) 189. Similar considerations apply where the witness is a suspect in the same offence but has not yet been charged: R. v. Jobin, [1995] 2 S.C.R. 78, 97 C.C.C. (3d) 97, 97 W.A.C. 23.

In addition to use immunity guaranteed by s. 13 and limited derivative use immunity guaranteed by this section, in some circumstances the witness cannot be compelled to testify. The test to be applied in determining whether or not the witness can be compelled to testify is whether the predominant purpose for seeking the evidence is to obtain incriminating evidence against the person compelled to testify or rather some legitimate public purpose. In the context of a criminal or quasi-criminal prosecution, to qualify as a valid public purpose the compelled testimony must be for the purpose of obtaining evidence in furtherance of that prosecution. If it is established that the predominant purpose is not to obtain relevant evidence for the purpose of the instant proceeding, but rather to incriminate the witness, the party seeking to compel the witness must justify the potential prejudice to the right of the witness against self-incrimination. If it is shown that the only prejudice is the possible subsequent derivative use of the testimony, then the compulsion to testify will occasion no prejudice since the witness will be protected against such use. If, however, the witness can show any other significant prejudice that may arise from the testimony such that his right to a fair trial will be jeopardized, the witness should not be compellable: British Columbia Securities Commission v. Branch, [1995] 2 S.C.R. 3, 97 C.C.C. (3d) 505, 38 C.R. (4th) 133.

The right to remain silent is protected as a principle of fundamental justice and is broader than the common law confession rule and the rule against self-incrimination. The measure of the right to silence resides in the notion that a person whose liberty is placed in jeopardy by the criminal process cannot be required to give evidence against himself, but rather has the right to choose whether to speak or to remain silent. Once it is established that a detained suspect subjectively possesses an operating mind, then the issue is whether the conduct of the authorities, considered on an objective basis, effectively and unfairly deprived the suspect of the right to choose whether to speak to the authorities. Thus, when the police use subterfuge to interrogate an accused after he has advised them that he does not wish to speak to them, they are improperly eliciting information that they are unable to obtain by respecting his constitutional right to silence. However, in the absence of eliciting behaviour on the part of the police, there is no violation of the accused's right. The right as well only applies to a detainee and does not affect the use of undercover police officers prior to detention: R. v. Hebert (1990), 57 C.C.C. (3d) 1, [1990] 2 S.C.R. 151, 77 C.R. (3d) 145, [1990] 5 W.W.R. 1.

Questioning of a suspect who was not under arrest, although he has indicated that on the basis of legal advice he does not wish to make a statement, does not violate the right to silence as guaranteed by this section: R. v. Hicks (1990), 54 C.C.C. (3d) 575, 73 C.R. (3d) 204, [1990] 1 S.C.R. 120 (7:0), affg 42 C.C.C. (3d) 394, 64 C.R. (3d) 68, 8 M.V.R. (2d) 191 (Ont. C.A.).

The right to silence may be violated not only by the conduct of an undercover police officer, but by any agent of the state such as a prisoner acting as a police informer. In determining who is an agent of the state, the test to be applied is whether the exchange or contact between the accused and the informer would have taken place, in the form and manner in which it did take place, but for the intervention of the state or its agents. If the informer was an agent of the state, there will be a violation of this section if the agent elicited the information. Evidence has been elicited if there is a causal link between the conduct of the state agent and the making of the statement by the accused. This in turn requires consideration of two sets of factors, namely, factors relating to the nature of the exchange between the accused and the agent and factors concerning the nature of the relationship between the agent and the accused: R. v. Broyles (1991), 68 C.C.C. (3d) 308, [1992] 1 W.W.R. 289, 84 Alta. L.R. (2d) 1 (S.C.C.) (7:0).

Failure to advise an accused of his right to remain silent is not a violation of this section of the Charter: R. v. Van Den Meerssche (1989), 53 C.C.C. (3d) 449, 74 C.R. (3d) 161 (B.C.C.A.).

The accused has the right to remain silent at the investigation stage as well as at the trial. This right to silence would, however, be a snare and a delusion if it were open to the Crown to nevertheless put in evidence that the accused remained silent in the face of a question which suggested his guilt. Unless the Crown can establish a real relevance and a proper basis for their admission, neither the questions by investigating officers nor evidence as to the ensuing silence of the accused should be admitted at trial: R. v. Chambers (1990), 59 C.C.C. (3d) 321, [1990] 2 S.C.R. 1293, 80 C.R. (3d) 235.

An accused who testifies against a co-accused must accept that his credibility can be fully attacked by the latter. The accused who has incriminated a co-accused by his testimony cannot therefore rely on the right to silence to deprive the accused who is implicated by his testimony of the right to challenge that testimony by a full attack on the credibility of the former including reference to his pre-trial silence. He cannot, however, go further and ask the trier of fact to consider the evidence of the testifying accused's silence as positive evidence of guilt on which the Crown can rely to convict. The accused implicated by the evidence of the co-accused has the right to attack the credibility of the co-accused by reference to the testifying accused's failure to disclose the evidence to the investigating authorities. The jury must, however, be instructed that the evidence could be used as one factor in determining whether the evidence of the co-accused is to be believed: R. v. Crawford, [1995] 1 S.C.R. 858, 96 C.C.C. (3d) 481, 37 C.R. (4th) 197.

There is no principle of fundamental justice that requires a trial judge to direct a jury that they are not entitled to draw an adverse inference from the failure of the accused to testify at his trial. Section 4(6) of the Canada Evidence Act, in preventing comment by the trial judge on the failure of the accused to testify, does not infringe s. 7 of the Charter: R. v. Boss (1988), 46 C.C.C. (3d) 523, 68 C.R. (3d) 123, 30 O.A.C. 184.

An aspect of the common law confession rule requires that the accused have an operating mind. The operating mind test includes a limited mental component which requires that the accused has sufficient cognitive capacity to understand what he is saying and what is said. This includes the ability to understand a caution that the evidence can be used against the accused. The same standard applies with respect to the right of silence as guaranteed by this section in determining whether a mentally ill accused has the mental capacity to make an active choice: R. v. Whittle, [1994] 2 S.C.R. 914, 92 C.C.C. (3d) 11, 32 C.R. (4th) 1.

The general principle against self-incrimination, as applied in the regulatory context, did not require the accused to be granted immunity against Crown use of statutorily compelled reports. In this case, reports which were statutorily compelled pursuant to the Fisheries Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. F-14 were held to be admissible in relation to charges under the Fisheries Act. The two fundamental purposes behind the principle against self-incrimination are to protect against unreliable confessions and to protect against the abuse of power by the state. Neither of these two rationales was threatened in the circumstances of this case. Little expectation of privacy attached to the documents, since they were produced precisely to be read and relied upon by state officials. Furthermore, the documents were not "compelled" as when an individual decides to participate in a regulated industry, the obligation to submit reports was not an obligation imposed through the denial of free and informed consent: R. v. Fitzpatrick, [1995] 4 S.C.R. 154, 102 C.C.C. (3d) 144, 43 C.R. (4th) 343.

Right to counsel – While the Constitution has not expressly constitutionalized the right of an indigent accused to be provided with counsel, in cases not falling within the provincial legal aid plans, ss. 7 and 11(d) of the Charter require funded counsel to be provided if the accused wishes counsel, but cannot pay a lawyer, and representation of the accused by counsel is essential to a fair trial. Where a trial judge is confronted with a case where legal aid has been refused to an indigent accused in circumstances where representation by counsel is essential, then the judge may stay proceedings until the necessary funding of counsel is available. An accused, however, who has the means to pay the costs of her defence but refuses to retain counsel may properly be considered to have chosen to defend herself and there would be no breach of the Charter if the trial proceeded without counsel being appointed: R. v. Rowbotham (1988), 41 C.C.C. (3d) 1, 63 C.R. (3d) 113, 35 C.R.R. 207 (Ont. C.A.).

The duty on a trial judge to ensure that an accused has a fair hearing will generally cast upon the judge an obligation to point out to the accused that he would be at a distinct disadvantage in proceeding without the assistance of competent counsel and that the accused is entitled to have such counsel. Where the accused expressly desires counsel, it is clear that unless the accused has deliberately failed to retain counsel or has discharged counsel with the intent of delaying the process of the court, the trial judge should afford the accused an opportunity to retain counsel either at his expense or through the services of Legal Aid: R. v. McKibbin (1988), 45 C.C.C. (3d) 334, 31 O.A.C. 10 (C.A.).

The placing of limits on the number of hours of preparation for which counsel retained through the provincial legal aid plan will be paid does not infringe the accused's right to counsel. There is no constitutional right to require provision of unlimited funding for defence of a case, even a murder case: R. v. Munroe (1990), 57 C.C.C. (3d) 421, 97 N.S.R. (2d) 361 (S.C.), affd 59 C.C.C. (3d) 446, 98 N.S.R. (2d) 174 (C.A.).

Delay in taking proceedings – The principles of fundamental justice are not limited to the right to a fair hearing in accordance with the principles of natural justice. Rather, there is a residual discretion in a trial court judge to stay proceedings where compelling an accused to stand trial would violate those fundamental principles of justice which underlie the community sense of fair play and decency, and to prevent the abuse of the court's process through oppressive or vexatious proceedings. It is a power, however, of special application which can only be exercised in the clearest of cases. Thus, specifically with respect to an allegation of delay in the institution of the proceedings, absent any finding that the delay was for the ulterior purpose of depriving an accused of the opportunity of making full answer and defence, delay in itself, even delay resulting in the impairment of the ability to make full answer and defence is not a basis for a stay of proceedings. The courts cannot undertake the supervision of the operation or the efficiency of the police department, and to compel the police or the Crown to institute proceedings before they have reason to believe they will be able to establish the accused's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, could have a deleterious effect upon the rights of the accused and upon the ability of society to protect itself. However, a distinction is to be drawn between the situation in which the institution of the proceedings is valid and the only issue is delay prejudicial to the accused and that in which the executive acts in leading to the institution of the proceedings is offensive to the principles upon which the administration of justice is conducted by the courts: R. v. Young (1984), 13 C.C.C. (3d) 1, 46 O.R. (2d) 520 (C.A.).

Delay in charging and prosecuting an accused for sexual offences cannot in and of itself justify staying of proceedings as an abuse of process either at common law or under this section or s. 11(d). Fairness of a trial is not automatically undermined by even a lengthy pre-charge delay. The court cannot assess the fairness of a particular trial without considering the particular circumstances of the case: R. v. L. (W.K.) (1991), 64 C.C.C. (3d) 321, [1991] 4 W.W.R. 385, 6 C.R. (4th) 1 (S.C.C.).

While s. 11(b) does not apply to appellate delay, this section will provide a remedy when delay of appellate proceedings affects the fairness of the trial. The appellate court is the appropriate forum to determine whether there has been a violation: R. v. Potvin, [1993] 2 S.C.R. 880, 83 C.C.C. (3d) 97, 23 C.R. (4th) 10.

Mens rea – The imposition of absolute liability in penal law offends the principles of fundamental justice and therefore a law enacting an absolute liability offence will violate s. 7 if and to the extent that it has the potential of depriving of life, liberty or security of the person. Imprisonment, including probation, deprives persons of their liberty. An offence has that potential as of the moment it is open to the judge to impose imprisonment and there is no need that imprisonment be made mandatory. A combination of imprisonment and of absolute liability violates s. 7 and can only be salvaged if the authorities demonstrate under s. 1 that such deprivation of liberty and breach of those principles of fundamental justice is a reasonable limit: Reference re: Section 94(2) of the Motor Vehicle Act (1985), 23 C.C.C. (3d) 289, [1985] 2 S.C.R. 486, 48 C.R. (3d) 289.

Depending upon the provisions of the particular section and the context, the constitutional requirement of mens rea may be satisfied by a subjective or objective standard and in appropriate circumstances negligence can be an acceptable basis for liability: R. v. Hundal, [1993] 1 S.C.R. 867, 79 C.C.C. (3d) 97, 19 C.R. (4th) 169.

There is no principle of fundamental justice which requires an absolute symmetry between the elements of the actus reus and mens rea. Thus, there is no requirement that there be proof of mens rea in relation to the consequences element of the actus reus, such as death in a case of manslaughter: R. v. Creighton, [1993] 3 S.C.R. 3, 83 C.C.C. (3d) 346, 23 C.R. (4th) 189 (S.C.C.).

The development of the doctrine of mens rea for criminal offences reflects the conviction that a person should not be punished unless that person knew that he was committing the prohibited act or would have known that he was committing the prohibited act if he had given to his conduct and to the circumstances that degree of attention which the law requires and which he was capable of giving. Thus, this section prohibits the existence of offences that are punishable by imprisonment and that do not allow the accused as a minimum a due diligence defence. Former s. 146(1) of the Criminal Code, by removing the defence of mistake of fact as to the age of the complainant on a charge of unlawful intercourse with a girl under the age of 14 years, infringed this section and was not a reasonable limit. The argument in favour of absolute liability is premised primarily on arguments of deterrence. Where, however, a criminal offence allows for a potential penalty of life imprisonment, as did former s. 146(1), it is not good enough to rely on intuition and speculation about the potential deterrent effect of an absolute liability offence. There must be concrete and persuasive evidence to support the argument: R. v. Nguyen (1990), 59 C.C.C. (3d) 161, [1990] 6 W.W.R. 289 (S.C.C.) (5:2).

In R. v. Vaillancourt (1987), 39 C.C.C. (3d) 118, [1987] 2 S.C.R. 636, 47 D.L.R. (4th) 399, the court was required to consider what degree of mens rea is required as a matter of fundamental justice for an offence such as murder. Lamer J., speaking for himself and Dickson C.J.C. and Wilson J., was of the view that there are certain crimes where, because of the special nature of the stigma attached to a conviction therefor or the available penalty, the principles of fundamental justice require a mens rea reflecting the particular nature of the crime.

In the subsequent case of R. v. Martineau (1990), 58 C.C.C. (3d) 353, [1990] 2 S.C.R. 633, 79 C.R. (3d) 129 (5:2), a majority of the court has now adopted the view that, in view of the stigma and punishment attaching to a conviction for murder, the principles of fundamental justice require a mens rea reflecting the particular nature of the crime which, for murder, cannot be anything less than subjective foresight of death. Thus, the constructive murder provisions in ss. 230 and 229(c) are unconstitutional, since they violated the principle that punishment must be proportionate to the moral blameworthiness of the offender.

It is not a principle of fundamental justice that the guilt for principal offenders and parties must always be the same. Within many offences, there are varying degrees of guilt and it remains the function of the sentencing process to adjust the punishment for each individual offender accordingly. There are, however, a few offences, such as murder and attempted murder, for which this section requires a minimum degree of mens rea. In the case of those offences, the constitutionally required minimum applies to both principles and parties: R. v. Logan (1990), 58 C.C.C. (3d) 391, 73 D.L.R. (4th) 40, [1990] 2 S.C.R. 711.

The possibility of conviction for the offence of assault causing bodily harm without any intent that bodily harm result from the assault does not contravene s. 7, notwithstanding that all that is required to be proved is a causal link between the act and the resulting bodily harm. The special stigma attached to the offence of murder and the mental element which essentially distinguishes murder from manslaughter do not apply to the offence of assault causing bodily harm: R. v. Brooks (1988), 41 C.C.C. (3d) 157, 64 C.R. (3d) 322, 24 B.C.L.R. (2d) 226 (C.A.).

Even where imprisonment is available as a penalty for breach of a regulatory statute, negligence is a sufficient level of fault to comport with constitutional standards, provided that the defendant is able to defend the charge by proof of due diligence: R. v. Wholesale Travel Group Inc. (1991), 67 C.C.C. (3d) 193, 84 D.L.R. (4th) 161, 4 O.R. (3d) 799n (S.C.C.).

Criminal procedure – Absent impropriety, the court has no general jurisdiction at common law or under the Charter to halt a prosecution and review the merits of the exercise by the Attorney General of his authority to prefer an indictment under s. 577 of the Criminal Code. Further, the Attorney General is not required to afford an accused a hearing before he decides whether or not to exercise his jurisdiction under that section: Re Balderstone and The Queen (1983), 8 C.C.C. (3d) 532, 4 D.L.R. (4th) 162, [1983] 6 W.W.R. 438 (Man. C.A.); R. v. Stolar (1983), 4 C.C.C. (3d) 333, 32 C.R. (3d) 342, 20 Man. R. (2d) 132 (C.A.).

The constitutional standard which a criminal trial must satisfy under s. 7 is the standard encompassed by the concept of the principles of fundamental justice, and in particular the statutory right to a preliminary inquiry has not been elevated to a constitutional right. The preferring of a direct indictment may however, in combination with the failure of the Crown to make adequate disclosure, result in the accused being unable to make full answer and defence at his trial thereby contravening s. 7 and enabling the trial judge to fashion a remedy under s. 24(1): Re R. and Arviv (1985), 19 C.C.C. (3d) 395, 45 C.R. (3d) 354, 20 D.L.R. (4th) 422 (C.A.).

Section 7 gives the court broad powers to promote the proper administration of criminal justice by ordering disclosure and by discovery of material and objects for the purpose of independent testing. Section 7 is not limited to the notion of procedural fairness in court and encompasses the whole process, including discovery and disclosure: R. v. Bourget (1987), 35 C.C.C. (3d) 371, 56 C.R. (3d) 97, 41 D.L.R. (4th) 756 (Sask. C.A.).

Double jeopardy – Section 7 constitutionalizes a protection against double jeopardy wider than the specific protection in s. 11(h). Thus, notwithstanding the common law limitations on the ability to challenge the discretion of a trial judge to declare a mistrial, the propriety of such a decision would be subject to scrutiny under the Charter where a second trial, after the improper termination of the first trial, would contravene the principles of fundamental justice: R. v. D.(T.C.) (1987), 38 C.C.C. (3d) 434, 61 C.R. (3d) 168 (Ont. C.A.).

Abuse of process – A trial court has the power to stay proceedings to prevent the abuse of a court's process through oppressive or vexatious proceedings where compelling an accused to stand trial would violate those principles of fundamental justice which underlie the community sense of fair play and decency: R. v. Jewitt (1985), 21 C.C.C. (3d) 7, [1985] 2 S.C.R. 128, 20 D.L.R. (4th) 651.

Investigative tests – While the common law is not determinative in assessing whether particular practice violates the principles of fundamental justice, it is one of the major repositories of basic tenets of the Canadian legal system and thus of the principles of fundamental justice. It was the common law experience that custodial fingerprinting was not fundamentally unfair and legislation such as found in the Criminal Code and the Investigation of Criminals Act permitting compulsory fingerprinting does not violate s. 7. Further the legislation is not subject to attack because it gives a police officer a discretion whether or not to require the accused to attend for fingerprinting. Discretion in fact is an essential feature of a fair criminal justice system: R. v. Beare (1988), 45 C.C.C. (3d) 57, [1988] 2 S.C.R. 387, 55 D.L.R. (4th) 41.

Evidentiary rules – A trial court has a residual discretion to relax in favour of the accused a strict rule of evidence where it is necessary to prevent a miscarriage of justice and where the danger against which an exclusionary rule aimed to safeguard does not exist: R. v. Williams (1985), 18 C.C.C. (3d) 356, 44 C.R. (3d) 351, 50 O.R. (2d) 321 (C.A.). Similarly R. v. Rowbotham, supra, and semble R. v. Corbett (1988), 41 C.C.C. (3d) 385, [1988] 1 S.C.R. 670, 64 C.R. (3d) 1.

It has never been a tenet of fundamental justice that a person has the right to confront any witness before the trier of fact. While it is a basic principle of fundamental justice that the accused has had a full opportunity to cross-examine the witness when previous testimony was taken, if the transcript of such testimony is to be introduced as evidence at a criminal trial for the purpose of convicting the accused, a provision such as s. 715 of the Criminal Code, which provides for the admission of evidence taken at the preliminary inquiry where the witness is not available, at trial does not offend s. 7. An accused would however have a constitutional right to have the evidence of prior testimony, obtained in the absence of full opportunity to cross-examine the witness, excluded: R. v. Potvin (1989), 47 C.C.C. (3d) 289, [1989] 1 S.C.R. 525, 68 C.R. (3d) 193.

A law, which prevents the trier of fact from getting at the truth by excluding relevant evidence in the absence of a clear ground of policy or law justifying the exclusion, runs afoul of our fundamental conceptions of justice and what constitutes a fair trial. The fundamental tenet of our system, that the innocent not be convicted, implies that, before a judge may exclude evidence which is relevant to a defence, the potential prejudice to the trial process must substantially outweigh the value of the evidence: R. v. Seaboyer (1991), 66 C.C.C. (3d) 321, 83 D.L.R. (4th) 193, 4 O.R. (3d) 383 (S.C.C.) (7:2).

Jury availability and selection procedure – The jury selection procedure prescribed by the Criminal Code, although giving the Crown 48 standasides and giving the accused only a limited number of peremptory challenges and requiring the accused to declare first whether or not he challenges a prospective jury, does not infringe, s. 7 or s. 11(d). While the process in and of itself appears to be unfair and could possibly lead to unfairness, the jury selection process is just one step in the trial and the course of the trial is governed and affected by a large number of rules. It is only an individual rule that is so unfair that it will result in an unfair trial which will be struck down: R. v. Stoddart (1987), 37 C.C.C. (3d) 351, 59 C.R. (3d) 134 (Ont. C.A.).

The decision of a trial judge to stay proceedings against an RCMP officer charged with an offence because of certain remarks made by the Premier in the National Assembly was premature. It was only at the stage when the jury was to be selected that it would be possible to determine whether the accused could be tried by an impartial jury. There is an initial presumption that a juror will perform his duties in accordance with his oath. In an extreme case such as this, pretrial publicity should lead to challenge for cause at the trial but it will not be assumed that a person subjected to such publicity will necessarily be biased: R. v. Vermette (1988), 41 C.C.C. (3d) 523, [1988] 1 S.C.R. 985, 64 C.R. (3d) 82.

There is no principle of fundamental justice that requires the right to a jury trial in all cases: R. v. B.(S.) (1989), 50 C.C.C. (3d) 34, 72 C.R. (3d) 117, [1989] 5 W.W.R. 621 (Sask. C.A.).

Sentence proceedings – The conduct of a trial in general including the applications of the rule of evidence in a given case must not result in the trial being unfair because the accused has been denied a full opportunity to prepare his case and to challenge and answer the Crown's case. If a rule of statutory or common law were framed in such a way that it would be per se a violation of the right to a fair trial, then the statute would be declared inoperative were the common law declared to be otherwise. However, the common law rule which permits a relaxation of the hearsay rule in sentence proceedings is not a violation of s. 7: R. v. Albright (1987), 37 C.C.C. (3d) 105, [1987] 2 S.C.R. 303, 60 C.R. (3d) 97.

It is a fundamental rule of law that an accused must be tried and punished under the law in force at the time the offence is committed. Thus it was held in R. v. Gamble (1988), 45 C.C.C. (3d) 204, [1988] 2 S.C.R. 595, 66 C.R. (3d) 193, that s. 7 was violated where the accused, prior to proclamation of the Charter, had been convicted and sentenced for first degree murder although the provision in force at the time of commission of her offence was either murder punishable by death or murder punishable by life imprisonment. This represented a significant distinction since it was likely that the accused would only have been convicted of murder punishable by life imprisonment which would have required the judge to fix her parole eligibility date at a period between 10 and 20 years, whereas the conviction for first degree murder carried an automatic minimum period of parole ineligibility of 25 years.

It is not a violation of fundamental justice for Parliament to identify those offenders who in the interests of protecting the public ought to be sentenced according to considerations which are entirely reactive. Thus the imposition of a sentence of indeterminate detention as authorized by Part XXIV of the Criminal Code is in accordance with the fundamental purpose of the criminal laws generally and of sentencing in particular, namely, the protection of society. Further, the procedure by which a person is found to be a dangerous offender does not offend s. 7. The principles of fundamental justice do not require that the determination of whether or not the accused is a dangerous offender be made by a jury. Neither the standard proof required for successful application nor the fact that the provisions require the use of psychiatric evidence infringe s. 7. Finally, the failure of the Crown to give the accused notice prior to his election and plea that it was intending to bring an application under Part XXIV did not offend his rights under s. 7. It may be however that in certain circumstances a plea of guilty could be set aside because the court was satisfied the accused did not fully understand the nature of the charge or the potential consequences of a guilty plea: R. v. Lyons (1987), 37 C.C.C. (3d) 1, 61 C.R. (3d) 1, [1987] 2 S.C.R. 309.

While a sentencing scheme must exhibit a proportionality to the seriousness of the offence, it must also take into account other factors that are of significance to the societal interest in punishing wrongdoers. The provisions of the Criminal Code which provide for a minimum sentence of life imprisonment without eligibility for parole for certain types of murders, in particular murder while committing an offence such as kidnapping or sexual assault, clearly demonstrate a proportionality between the moral turpitude of the offender and the seriousness of the offence and are in accord with the objectives of a rational system of sentencing: R. v. Luxton (1990), 58 C.C.C. (3d) 449, [1990] 6 W.W.R. 137, 76 Alta. L.R. (2d) 43 (S.C.C.) (7:0); R. v. Arkel, [1990] 2 S.C.R. 695, 59 C.C.C. (3d) 65, 79 C.R. (3d) 207 (7:0).

Prison procedure – The standard of procedure required to satisfy s. 7 is not necessarily the most sophisticated, elaborate or perfect procedure imaginable but only a procedure that is fundamentally just. What this may require will vary with the particular situation. An unbiased tribunal, knowledge by the person whose life, liberty and security is in jeopardy of the case to be answered, a fair opportunity to answer and a decision reached on the basis of the material in support of the case and the answer made to it are features of such a procedure. In this context any right a person may have to the assistance of counsel arises from the requirement to afford the person an opportunity to adequately present his case. There is however no absolute right in an inmate to be represented by counsel in a disciplinary court. Whether or not an inmate has such right will depend on the circumstances of the particular case, including its nature, its gravity, its complexity, and the capacity of the inmate to understand the case and present his defence: Re Howard and Presiding Officer of Inmate Disciplinary Court of Stony Mountain Institution (1985), 19 C.C.C. (3d) 195, [1984] 2 F.C. 642, 45 C.R. (3d) 242.

Extradition and fugitive offender proceeding – The admission of affidavit evidence and depositions at an extradition hearing of an accused fugitive as permitted by the Expropriation Act and Treaty does not offend s. 7, notwithstanding the fugitive is not given an opportunity to cross-examine on the affidavits or depositions. The importance of cross-examination varies with the nature of the proceedings and the purpose of an extradition hearing is not to determine guilt or innocence but is merely an inquiry to determine whether there is sufficient evidence to warrant sending the fugitive to the demanding state for trial. The trial and full determination of the fugitive's rights is to take place in the courts of the demanding state and it is a basic assumption of extradition proceedings that the fugitive will receive a fair and just trial in the demanding state: Re United States of America and Smith (1984), 10 C.C.C. (3d) 540, 38 C.R. (3d) 228, 7 D.L.R. (4th) 12 (C.A.); Re Decter and United States of America (1983), 5 C.C.C. (3d) 364, 148 D.L.R. (3d) 496 (N.S.S.C.), affd 5 C.C.C. (3d) 381n, 148 D.L.R. (3d) 512n (N.S.C.A.).

While the surrender of a fugitive to a foreign country is subject to Charter scrutiny, notwithstanding that such surrender involves primarily the exercise of executive discretion, in some circumstances the manner in which the foreign state will deal with the fugitive may be such that will violate the principles of fundamental justice to surrender an accused. However, there is nothing unjust to surrendering to a foreign country a person accused of having committed a crime there for trial in the ordinary way in accordance with the system for the administration of justice prevailing in that country simply because that system is substantially different from Canada's with different checks and balances. Thus it was held in Schmidt v. The Queen (1987), 33 C.C.C. (3d) 193, [1987] 1 S.C.R. 500, 58 C.R. (3d) 1, that surrendering the fugitive for trial on state charges, notwithstanding her acquittal on similar federal charges, did not offend fundamental justice. While repeated attempts by the same prosecutorial authorities to prosecute a person for the same offence may in certain circumstances amount to harassment sufficiently oppressive that to surrender such a person would violate the principles of fundamental justice, the court should intervene only in compelling situations and this was not one of those cases.

Even a substantial delay between the time when the demanding state was informed of the presence of the accused in Canada and the request for extradition would not constitute a violation of fundamental justice. To arrive at the conclusion that the surrender of a fugitive would violate the principles of fundamental justice it would be necessary to establish that the fugitive would face a situation that is simply unacceptable. As well, while the courts undoubtedly have the right to review the decision of the executive by virtue of the court's responsibility to uphold the Constitution in extradition matters, this role must be exercised with caution bearing in mind that the discretion to surrender a fugitive to the demanding state is primarily that of the executive. Canada's external obligations are involved and the executive obviously has primary responsibility in this area: Argentina (Republic) v. Mellino (1987), 33 C.C.C. (3d) 334, [1987] 1 S.C.R. 536, 40 D.L.R. (4th) 74; United States of America v. Allard and Charette (1987), 33 C.C.C. (3d) 501, [1987] 1 S.C.R., 40 D.L.R. (4th) 102.

The test of whether the extradition action offends this section on account of the penalty which may be imposed in the requesting state, is whether the imposition of the penalty by the foreign state shocks the Canadian conscience. Returning to the United States where they faced the death penalty, fugitives convicted of, or alleged to have committed, murders which were brutal and shocking does not meet this test. Accordingly, the Minister was not required to seek assurances from the requesting state that the death penalty would not be imposed as a condition for return of the fugitive: Kindler v. Canada (Minister of Justice) (1991), 67 C.C.C. (3d) 1, 84 D.L.R. (4th) 438 (S.C.C.) (4:3); Reference re: Ng Extradition (Can.) (1991), 67 C.C.C. (3d) 61, 84 D.L.R. (4th) 498 (S.C.C.) (4:3).

Defences – In R. v. Morgentaler, Smoling and Scott (1988), 37 C.C.C. (3d) 449, [1988] 1 S.C.R. 30, 62 C.R. (3d) 1, the court was required to consider the therapeutic abortion provisions in s. 287 of the Criminal Code. Dickson C.J.C. and Lamer J. were of the view that state interference with bodily integrity and serious state-imposed psychological stress at the least in a criminal law context constitutes a breach of security of the person. They held that the breach of the principles of fundamental justice came about by the fact that the requirements of s. 287(4) permitting an abortion where it was approved by hospital committee while seemingly neutral on their face, resulted in abortions being absolutely unavailable in many areas and hospitals, and does not provide a clear legal standard to be applied by the therapeutic abortion committee in reaching its decision as to when to grant a certificate. One of the basic tenets of a criminal justice system is that when Parliament creates a defence to a criminal charge the defence should not be illusory or so difficult to attain as to be practically illusory. While Parliament must be given room to design an appropriate administrative and procedural structure for bringing into operation a particular defence to criminal liability, if that structure is too manifestly unfair, having regard to the decisions it is called upon to make, as to violate the principles of fundamental justice then the structure must be struck down. Beetz and Estey JJ. were of the view that the procedural requirements of s. 287, by significantly delaying a pregnant woman's access to medical treatment, result in additional dangers to her health and thereby deprive her of her rights to security of the person and do so in a manner which does not accord with the principles of fundamental justice. Finally Wilson J. held that the legislative scheme set up in s. 287 not only violates the pregnant woman's rights to security of the person but also the right to liberty as guaranteed by s. 7.

This section does not require that a defence such as drunkenness be available for all offences. Thus, it was open to Parliament in creating the offence of impaired driving to preclude drunkenness as a defence. The mental element of voluntary intoxication is a sufficiently guilty mind: R. v. Penno (1990), 59 C.C.C. (3d) 344, [1990] 2 S.C.R. 865, 80 C.R. (3d) 97.

The principles of fundamental justice contemplate an accusatorial and adversarial system of criminal justice which is founded on respect for the autonomy and dignity of the person. These principles require that an accused, who is fit to stand trial, have the right to control his own defence. Any common law limit on this right which infringes the life, liberty or security of the person, must be the least intrusive rule which will attain the objectives which are of sufficient importance to override this section of the Charter: R. v. Swain (1991), 63 C.C.C. (3d) 481, 5 C.R. (4th) 253, 125 N.R. 1 (S.C.C.).

SEARCH OR SEIZURE.

8. Everyone has the right to be secure against unreasonable search or seizure.

ANNOTATIONS

Interpretation generally – The purpose of this section is to act as a limitation on whatever powers of search and seizure the federal or provincial governments already and otherwise possess. It does not itself confer any power even of reasonable search and seizure on these governments. Accordingly, an assessment of the constitutionality of a search and seizure, or of a statute authorizing the search or seizure, must focus on its reasonable or unreasonable impact on the subject of the search or seizure, and not simply on its rationality in furtherance of a valid government objective. This section guarantees a broad and general right to be secure from unreasonable search and seizure beyond mere protection of property. Its protections go at least as far as protecting an individual's reasonable expectations of privacy. Thus an assessment must be made as to whether in a particular situation the public's interest in being left alone by government must give way to the government's interest in intruding on the individual's privacy in order to advance its goals, notably those of law enforcement. The purpose in this section of protecting individuals from unjustified state intrusions upon their privacy requires a means of preventing unjustified searches before they happen, not simply of determining, after the fact, whether they ought to have occurred in the first place. This can only be accomplished by a system of prior authorization, not one of subsequent validation. Accordingly, where it is feasible to obtain prior authorization such authorization is a pre-condition for a valid search and seizure. Accordingly, there is a presumption of unreasonableness where the search has taken place without a warrant which the party seeking to justify the warrantless search must rebut: Hunter v. Southam Inc. (1984), 14 C.C.C. (3d) 97, [1984] 2 S.C.R. 145, 11 D.L.R. (4th) 641.

Since the purpose of the requirement of prior authorization is to provide an opportunity, before the event, for the conflicting interests of the state and the individual to be assessed, so that the individual's right of privacy will be breached only where the appropriate standard has been met and the interests of the state are demonstrably superior, it is necessary for the person authorizing the search to be able to assess the evidence as to whether that standard has been met in an entirely neutral and impartial manner and, while this person need not be a judge, he must at a minimum be capable of acting judicially. Further, ordinarily where on the one hand the state interest is law enforcement rather than, for example, state security, and on the other hand the individual's interest is not one which threatens his bodily integrity, then the standard which must be met before a search should be authorized is the establishment upon oath of reasonable and probable grounds to believe that an offence has been committed and that there is evidence to be found at the place of the search: Hunter v. Southam Inc., supra.

The exercise of a judicial discretion in the decision to grant or withhold authorization for a search warrant is a fundamental aspect of the scheme of prior authorization which is an indispensable requirement for compliance with this section. The decision to grant or withhold a warrant requires a balancing of the interests of the individual and the state and a section of the Income Tax Act which removed that discretion by requiring the judge to issue the warrant if the statutory prerequisites were met was unconstitutional: Baron v. Canada (1993), 78 C.C.C. (3d) 510, 18 C.R. (4th) 374, 93 D.T.C. 5018 (S.C.C.).

A demand by a police officer that a motorist who he has stopped surrender his driver's licence and insurance card for inspection, as required by provincial legislation, does not offend s. 8 because such procedure is not a search, there being no intrusion on a reasonable expectation of privacy. There is no intrusion on a reasonable expectation of privacy where a person is required to produce his licence, or permit, or other documentary evidence of a status, or compliance with some legal requirement that is a lawful condition of the exercise of a right or privilege: R. v. Hufsky (1988), 40 C.C.C. (3d) 398, [1988] 1 S.C.R. 621, 63 C.R. (3d) 14.

In considering the nature of the right to be secure against unreasonable search and seizure, the following principles apply: (1) a claim for relief under s. 24(2) of the Charter could only be made by the person whose Charter rights have been infringed; (2) like all Charter rights, s. 8 is a personal right which protects people and not places; (3) the right to challenge the legality of a search depends upon the accused establishing that his personal rights to privacy have been violated; (4) as a general rule, two distinct inquiries must be made in relation to this section: first, has the accused a reasonable expectation of privacy and secondly, if so, was the search by the police conducted reasonably; (5) a reasonable expectation of privacy is to be determined on the basis of the totality of circumstances; (6) the factors to be considered in assessing the totality of the circumstances may include presence at the time of the search, possession or control of the property or place searched, ownership of the property or place, historical use of the property or item, ability to regulate access to the place, existence of a subjective expectation of privacy, and objective reasonableness of the expectation; and (7) if an accused established a reasonable expectation of privacy, the inquiry must proceed to the second stage to determine whether the search was conducted in a reasonable manner. In this particular case, the accused did not have a reasonable expectation of privacy in his girlfriend's apartment: R. v. Edwards (1996), 104 C.C.C. (3d) 136, 26 O.R. (3d) 736n, 192 N.R. 81.

For constitutional protection to be extended to commercial records relating to the accused, the information seized must be of a personal and confidential nature. This section protects a biographical core of personal information which individuals in a free and democratic society would wish to maintain and control from dissemination to the state. This would include information which tends to reveal intimate details of the lifestyle and personal choices of the individual. Records kept by the utilities commission of electricity consumption at the accused's residence would not fall within the category of protected information: R. v. Plant, [1993] 3 S.C.R. 281, 84 C.C.C. (3d) 203, 24 C.R. (4th) 47.

The power to make copies of documents, under provincial legislation, authorizes a seizure within the meaning of this section. The power is analogous to that of requiring documents to be produced which the court has previously characterised as a seizure. Other inspection powers, such as the power to examine the work environment and inspect documents are properly characterized as a search. The purpose of this section is to protect the individual's reasonable expectation of privacy from unjustified state intrusion. Despite its less invasive nature, inspection is unquestionably an intrusion. The powers of inspection were, however, reasonable even though the inspector need not have had a warrant nor need the inspection have been based upon reasonable and probable grounds. The Federal and Provincial legislatures have, in many statutes, included powers of inspection. Those statutes deal with various areas such as health, safety, the environment, taxation, and labour. Inspection, especially if it is done without notice, is a practical means of encouraging observance of statutory standards. The underlying purpose of inspection is to ensure that the regulatory statute is being complied with. The exercise of powers of inspection does not carry with it the stigma normally associated with criminal investigation. It may be that, in the course of inspection, violations of the statute will be uncovered, but this possibility does not alter the underlying purpose behind the exercise of the powers of inspection. The same is true even when the enforcement is prompted by a complaint: Comité paritaire de l'industrie de la chemise v. Potash; Comité paritaire de l'industrie de la chemise v. Sélection Milton, [1994] 2 S.C.R. 406, 115 D.L.R. (4th) 702, 61 Q.A.C. 241, sub nom. R. v. Potash, R. v. Sélection Milton.

In Thomson Newspapers Ltd. v. Canada (Director of Investigation and Research, and Restrictive Trade Practices Commission) (1990), 54 C.C.C. (3d) 417, 76 C.R. (3d) 129, [1990] 1 S.C.R. 425 the court divided on whether or not compelled production of documents pursuant to s. 17 of the former Combines Investigation Act constituted a seizure within the meaning of s. 8 and if so, whether or not such seizure was unreasonable. La Forest and L'Heureux-Dubé JJ. held that, while compelled production of documents may constitute a seizure within the meaning of s. 8, the seizure contemplated by s. 17 of the Combines Investigation Act is reasonable and there is no requirement that the stringent standards of reasonableness articulated in Hunter v. Southam Inc., supra, apply in light of the limited scope of the s. 17 power to order production of documents and the limited privacy interests with respect to these documents. Sopinka J., in his concurring judgment, held that an order under s. 17 requiring production of documents does not constitute a seizure within the meaning of s. 8 of the Charter. Lamer and Wilson JJ. dissenting were of the view that s. 17 did violate the right to be secure against unreasonable seizure as guaranteed by s. 8. They were of the view that the compulsory production of documents in a criminal or quasi-criminal law context falls within the definition of seizure and the seizure was unreasonable because it did not meet the test of reasonableness set out in Hunter v. Southam Inc.

In R. v. McKinlay Transport Ltd. (1990), 55 C.C.C. (3d) 530, 76 C.R. (3d) 283, [1990] 1 S.C.R. 627 all members of the court held that the provisions in the Income Tax Act (Canada) providing that the authorities may make a demand for information and the production of documents did not violate s. 8. Lamer and Wilson JJ. held that, while the demand constitutes a seizure, it is not an unreasonable one. The standard of review of what is "reasonable" in a given context must be flexible and a distinction drawn between seizures in the criminal or quasi-criminal context to which the criteria set out in Hunter v. Southam Inc., supra, must apply, and seizures in the administrative or regulatory context to which a lesser standard may apply depending upon the legislative scheme under review. It was evident that in the case of demands under the Income Tax Act the Hunter criteria were ill-suited to determine whether or not a seizure was unreasonable. La Forest and L'Heureux-Dubé JJ., for the reasons they gave in Thomson, supra, held that the demand under the Income Tax Act although it may be a seizure is not unreasonable. Sopinka J., for the reasons he gave in Thomson, held that the demand does not constitute a seizure within the meaning of s. 8.

While the accused bears the burden of persuading the court that her Charter rights or freedoms have been infringed or denied, once the accused has demonstrated that a search was a warrantless one, the Crown has the burden of showing that the search was, on a balance of probabilities, reasonable. A search will be reasonable if it is authorized by law, if the law itself is reasonable and if the manner in which the search was carried out is reasonable: R. v. Collins (1987), 33 C.C.C. (3d) 1, [1987] 1 S.C.R. 265, 56 C.R. (3d) 193.

Where the Crown seeks to show that a warrantless search was reasonable because the officer making the search believed on reasonable grounds that the accused was in possession of narcotics, then evidence as to the officer's belief and the reasonable grounds for that belief are admissible even where those reasonable grounds are based on information received from third parties. The hearsay rule has no application in those circumstances, the evidence not being adduced for its truth but to establish the officer's belief and grounds for belief: R. v. Collins, supra.

A so-called "perimeter search", in which the police officer trespassed onto the accused's property and attempted to peer into the windows in an effort to confirm suspicions that the accused was cultivating marijuana in his residence, is a search within the meaning of this section. While in Hunter v. Southam Inc., supra, the court adopted the view that this section, like the Fourth Amendment to the United States Constitution "protects people, not places", this was not intended to inhibit the reasonableness of the expectation of privacy of the individual with respect to his activities on private property. The point was, rather, that the reasonableness of a citizen's expectation of privacy cannot be confined to those situations which involve the enjoyment of property. A warrantless perimeter search, done merely upon suspicion, is not authorized by the search provisions of the Narcotic Control Act and constitutes a violation of this section of the Charter: R. v. Kokesch (1990), 61 C.C.C. (3d) 207, 1 C.R. (4th) 62, [1991] 1 W.W.R. 193 (S.C.C.).

A "knock-on" investigation, in which the police attended at the suspect's door in the hope that, when the suspect opened the door, they would smell marijuana, is a search within the meaning of this section. The occupier of a residential dwelling is deemed to grant the public permission to approach the door and knock. However, the implied invitation to knock extends no further than is required to permit convenient communication with the occupant of the dwelling, and only those activities that are reasonably associated with this purpose are authorized by the implied license to knock. Individuals in the position of the accused have a reasonable expectation of privacy in the approach to their home that is waived for the purpose of facilitating communication with the public. Where members of the public, including police, exceed the terms of this waiver and approach the door for some unauthorized purpose, they exceed the implied invitation and approach the door as intruders: R. v. Evans (1996), 104 C.C.C. (3d) 23, 131 D.L.R. (4th) 654, 191 N.R. 327 (S.C.C.).

A warrantless entry into a dwelling-house, even in exigent circumstances to prevent the destruction of contraband, constitutes a violation of this section although the police merely entered to secure the premises and did not actually commence the search for the narcotics until an officer arrived with the search warrant: R. v. Silveira, [1995] 2 S.C.R. 297, 97 C.C.C. (3d) 450, 38 C.R. (4th) 330.

Reasonable grounds for search – The appropriate standard of proof which must be met in order to establish reasonable grounds for a search is one of reasonable probability rather than proof beyond a reasonable doubt or prima facie case. The police officer who must have the reasonable and probable grounds for believing for example that a suspect is in possession of a controlled drug, is the one who decides that the suspect should be searched. If another officer conducts the search, then he is entitled to assume that the officer who ordered the search had reasonable and probable grounds for doing so. In determining whether the standard of reasonableness has been met, the court must consider the totality of the circumstances. In weighing evidence relied on by the police to justify a warrantless search, the court must consider whether the information predicting the commission of a criminal offence was compelling; where that information was based on an informer's tip, whether that source was credible; and whether the information was corroborated by a police investigation prior to making the decision to conduct the search. Weaknesses in one of these three areas may to some extent be compensated by strengths in the other two. Police are also entitled to take into account the accused's past record and reputation provided that the reputation is related to the ostensible reasons for the search. If the reputation of the suspect was based on hearsay rather than police familiarity with the suspect, its veracity cannot be assumed. It is not necessary for the police to confirm each detail in an informer's tip so long as the sequence of events actually observed conforms sufficiently to the anticipated pattern to remove the possibility of innocent coincidence. On the other hand, the level of verification required may be higher where the police rely on an informer whose credibility cannot be assessed or where fewer details are provided and the risk of innocent coincidence is greater: R. v. Debot (1989), 52 C.C.C. (3d) 193, 54 C.R. (3d) 120 (S.C.C.).

In considering the validity of a search warrant, facts obtained as a result of an unreasonable search must be excised. The court must then determine whether the warrant would have been issued without the improperly obtained facts: R. v. Grant, [1993] 3 S.C.R. 223, 84 C.C.C. (3d) 173, 24 C.R. (4th) 1 (9:0).

Relationship between sections 8 and 10(b) – Police proceeding to conduct a search are not always obliged to suspend the search and give a person the opportunity to retain and instruct counsel. When the police are conducting a body search, since it is impossible to search without detaining the individual, s. 10(b) applies. Therefore, immediately upon detention the detainee has the right to be informed of his right to retain and instruct counsel. However, the police are not obligated to suspend the search incident to arrest until the detainee has had the opportunity to retain counsel, except for example where the lawfulness of the search is dependent on the detainee's consent or where a statute gives a person a right to seek review of the decision to search. However, denial of a right to counsel will rarely be a factor when determining the reasonableness of a search within the meaning of s. 8. It is only in exceptional circumstances as where the lawfulness of the search is dependent upon the consent of the detainee or the statute gives a person a right to seek review of the decision to search that the denial of right to counsel will trigger a violation of s. 8 of the Charter. While the search, to be reasonable must be carried out in a reasonable manner, the manner in which the search is conducted relates to the physical way in which it is carried out and should not be inclusive of restrictions of other rights that already receive the benefit of protection from the Charter, such as right to counsel under s. 10(b): R. v. Debot, supra.

Once the police have the situation clearly under control in the course of execution of a search warrant then they are required to afford an occupant of the premises who has been arrested an opportunity to exercise his rights under s. 10(b) of the Charter: R. v. Strachan (1988), 46 C.C.C. (3d) 479, [1988] 2 S.C.R. 980, 67 C.R. (3d) 87.

Seizure of blood samples – The seizure of a blood sample from the accused without his consent and without lawful authority is an unreasonable seizure within the meaning of s. 8 although the sample was taken by a physician. The blood sample was not required for medical purposes and was taken at the direction of the police: R. v. Pohoretsky (1987), 33 C.C.C. (3d) 398, [1987] 1 S.C.R. 945, 39 D.L.R. (4th) 699.

Further, the taking of a blood sample by a police officer from a physician was unreasonable within the meaning of this section, where the sample was taken by the physician without the accused's consent and was turned over to the police without a warrant and not pursuant to any other law. Although the sample had originally been taken by the physician for medical purposes it was no longer required for those purposes. The fact was however that at the time the physician gave the vial of blood to the police he had in his possession the accused's blood subject to a duty to respect the accused's privacy and this was sufficient to qualify the officer's receiving of a vial of blood without the consent of the accused as being a seizure within the meaning of this section. The Crown having adduced no evidence that the seizure was lawful and there being no urgency or any other reason justifying a warrantless seizure, the seizure was unreasonable: R. v. Dyment (1988), 45 C.C.C. (3d) 244, [1988] 2 S.C.R. 417, 66 C.R. (3d) 348.

The obtaining of confidential information as to the results of a blood alcohol test from the accused's physician, without the accused's consent and without a search warrant, was analogous to a search or seizure and violated this section. The accused, who in fact had refused to consent to the taking of a blood sample by the hospital or the police (the sample was taken when he was unconscious), had a reasonable expectation that specific medical information would be kept confidential: R. v. Dersch, [1993] 3 S.C.R. 768, 85 C.C.C. (3d) 1, 25 C.R. (4th) 88 (9:0).

When a bodily fluid sample ends up being used by the police in a criminal prosecution, even when the sample was initially extracted for medical purposes in the absence of the police, the court must focus on the actions of the police in determining whether or not there has been a violation of this section. Thus, even where a sample was initially properly seized by a coroner pursuant to presumed valid provincial legislation, this does not preclude a finding that the police may also have seized the sample or that the subsequent appropriation of the evidence for use in a criminal prosecution may make the seizure unreasonable. The taking of a bodily fluid sample need not be directly from the person whose rights are affected, or even from the medical staff who extracted the sample, in order to constitute a seizure sufficient to invoke the protection of this section: R. v. Colarusso, [1994] 1 S.C.R. 20, 87 C.C.C. (3d) 193, 26 C.R. (4th) 289. In this case, the court went on to hold that a seizure by the coroner would be reasonable and not caught by this section only so long as the evidence is being used by the coroner for valid non-criminal purposes. When the evidence, or the information derived from the evidence, is appropriated by the criminal law enforcement arm of the state for use against the person from whom it was seized, the seizure will become unreasonable and will run afoul of this section.

Border searches – The reasonableness of border searches must be treated differently from searches occurring in other circumstances. The degree of personal privacy reasonably expected at customs is lower than most situations. People do not expect to be able to cross international borders free from scrutiny. Routine questioning by customs officers, search of luggage, frisk or pat searches and the requirement to remove in private such articles of clothing as will permit investigation of suspicious bodily bulges as permitted by provisions of the Customs Act are not unreasonable. However, a search is not conducted in a reasonable manner where the accused was not informed of the right to counsel at the time that she was detained for a strip search. Had the accused been informed of the right to counsel she might have had the benefit of legal advice including explanation that the decision to search may be reviewed by a magistrate or chief officer of the court: R. v. Simmons (1988), 45 C.C.C. (3d) 296, [1988] 2 S.C.R. 495, 66 C.R. (3d) 297.

A conclusion that the police had reliable information that the accused was attempting to import narcotics must be based on more than the fact of a subsequent recovery of the drugs. There must be a proper inquiry into the source and reliability of the confidential information in order to determine whether, "in the totality of the circumstances", there existed reasonable and probable grounds to believe that the accused was carrying the narcotic or whether there was only a suspicion. A rectal examination of the accused, based on the mere suspicion that he was carrying drugs and as an incident to an arrest for outstanding traffic fines, was a serious violation of this section: R. v. Greffe (1990), 55 C.C.C. (3d) 161, 75 C.R. (3d) 257, [1990] 1 S.C.R. 755 (4:3).

Waiver – The standard for the waiver of a person's rights under s. 8 is the same as that accorded the statutory procedural guarantees as laid down in Korponey v. Canada (Attorney General) (1982), 65 C.C.C. (2d) 65, [1985] 1 S.C.R. 41, 26 C.R. (3d) 343. The onus is on the Crown, relying upon such a waiver, to establish that the person had full knowledge of his right to be secure against an unreasonable search and that he had full knowledge of the effect the waiver would have on that right: R. v. Nielsen (1988), 43 C.C.C. (3d) 548, [1988] 6 W.W.R. 1, 66 Sask. R. 293 (C.A.).

Consent search – In order for a waiver of the right to be secure against unreasonable seizure to be effective, the person purporting to consent must be possessed of the requisite informational foundation for a true relinquishment of the right. A right to choose requires not only the volition to prefer one option over another, but also sufficient available information to make the preference meaningful. Thus, where the police relied upon the accused's consent to the taking of a blood sample for use in a sexual assault investigation, it was necessary that the consent form make clear the scope of the investigation, i.e. that the blood was sought in relation to two assaults, not just the one upon which the accused had been arrested: R. v. Borden, [1994] 3 S.C.R. 145, 92 C.C.C. (3d) 404, 33 C.R. (4th) 147. Also see R. v. Wills (1992), 70 C.C.C. (3d) 529, 12 C.R. (4th) 58, 7 O.R. (3d) 337 (C.A.).

The fact that guests are aware that cleaning staff will enter their rooms at least daily cannot remove the reasonable expectation of privacy that hotel guests have, at least with respect to objects which are not left in plain view nor stored in areas which do not require daily maintenance. Thus it was held that the consent given by hotel management to police officers to enter the accused's room and which led to the invasion of their privacy by agents of the state was not, in the circumstances, an acceptable substitute for the absence of prior judicial authorization. The warrantless and surreptitious search of a hotel room, upon mere suspicion of criminal activities, when the registered guests are absent and have left a 'Do Not Disturb' sign on the door, constitutes an impermissible intrusion by the state on a legitimate and reasonable expectation of privacy and therefore, constitutes a violation of this section. The police officers' mistaken belief that the management of the hotel had a sufficient possessory or other interest in the room to authorize police entry in the absence and without the consent of the guests, could not render the search valid: R. v. Mercer; R. v. Kenny (1992), 70 C.C.C. (3d) 180, 7 O.R. (3d) 9 (C.A.).

Vehicle searches – A warrantless search of a vehicle, which may move quickly, may be reasonable where there are reasonable grounds for believing that the vehicle contains contraband: R. v. McComber (1988), 44 C.C.C. (3d) 241, 66 C.R. (3d) 142, 9 M.V.R. (2d) 97 (Ont. C.A.).

There is no "automobile exception" permitting warrantless search of an automobile because such vehicles are readily moveable. The power to search a vehicle without warrant must be found either in statute or at common law, as, for example, a search incident to a valid arrest: R. v. Klimchuk (1991), 67 C.C.C. (3d) 385 (B.C.C.A.).

In R. v. Mellenthin (1992), 76 C.C.C. (3d) 481, [1992] 3 S.C.R. 615, 16 C.R. (4th) 273 it was held that the accused's rights under this section were violated when, after he was stopped at a police check stop, the accused was questioned by the officer about the contents of a bag in the car and as a result the accused produced the bag which was found to contain narcotics. When he questioned the accused, the officer did not have any suspicion that the accused was in possession of contraband. The check stop is justified as a means of detecting impaired drivers or dangerous vehicles but not as a means to conduct an unfounded general inquisition or an unreasonable search. In the circumstances, it could be assumed that the accused felt compelled to respond to the police questions and it was not shown that any search was as a result of an informed consent.

Abandonment – There is no reasonable expectation of privacy in relation to information that may be obtained from trash which has been abandoned by a householder to the municipal garbage disposal system and thus, the warrantless seizure of the garbage did not violate this section: R. v. Krist (1995), 100 C.C.C. (3d) 58, 42 C.R. (4th) 159, 103 W.A.C. 133 (B.C.C.A.).

Warrantless search of office – A warrantless search of a person's office requires justification in order to meet the constitutional standard of reasonableness secured by this section, and statutory provisions authorizing such reasonable searches are subject to challenge. Justification for a warrantless search may be found in the existence of circumstances which make it impracticable to obtain a warrant, but where no such circumstances exist and when the obtaining of a warrant would not impede effective law enforcement, the warrantless search of an office at a fixed location, except as an incident of a lawful arrest, cannot be justified and does not meet the constitutional standard of reasonableness proscribed by this section: R. v. Rao, supra.

Customers of securities-brokers have a reasonable expectation of privacy with respect to the documents in the hands of the broker. Thus, if a police officer attends at the office of a broker and enlists his cooperation without executing a search warrant then the accused, who had accounts with the broker who accommodated the police, have been subjected to a violation of their rights under s. 8 of the Charter: R. v. Donaldson (1990), 58 C.C.C. (3d) 294, 48 B.C.L.R. (2d) 273 (C.A.).

Search incident to arrest – Police officers have power to search an accused as an incident to a lawful arrest and to seize anything in his possession or immediate surroundings to guarantee the safety of the police and the accused, prevent the accused's escape or provide evidence against him. The existence of reasonable and probable grounds to believe that the accused is in possession of weapons or evidence is not a prerequisite to the existence of the power to search, provided however that the search is for a valid objective and not unrelated to the objectives of the proper administration of justice. Further, the search must not be conducted in an abusive fashion and the use of physical or psychological constraints should be proportionate to the objective sought and the other circumstances of the situation: Cloutier v. Langlois, [1990] 1 S.C.R. 158, 53 C.C.C. (3d) 257, 74 C.R. (3d) 316.

A seizure from an accused may properly be made pursuant to the common law power to search as an incident of arrest even where the seizure is made many hours after initial arrest but at a time when the accused is still in detention: R. v. Miller (1987), 38 C.C.C. (3d) 252, 62 O.R. (2d) 97 (C.A.).

Electronic surveillance – As a general proposition surreptitious electronic surveillance of an individual by an agency of the state constitutes an unreasonable search or seizure under s. 8. There is no logical reason to distinguish third party electronic surveillance where neither of the participants consent, and surveillance where one of the parties consents. The rationale for regulating the power of the state to record communications that their originator expects will not be intercepted by anyone other than the person intended by the originator to receive them has nothing to do with protecting individuals from the threat that the person to whom they talk will divulge communications that are meant to be private. Rather, the regulation of electronic surveillance protects against the more insidious danger inherent in allowing the state in its unfettered discretion to record and transmit our words. It is unacceptable in a free society that agents of the state be free to use this technology at their sole discretion: R. v. Duarte (1990), 53 C.C.C. (3d) 1, 65 D.L.R. (4th) 240, [1990] 1 S.C.R. 30, 71 O.R. (2d) 575n.

This section did not apply, however, where the interception was made by Bell Canada on its own in an attempt to identify the person who was using its services to make obscene and harassing telephone calls to its subscribers. In those circumstances, Bell Canada was not an agent of the state: R. v. Fegan (1993), 80 C.C.C. (3d) 356, 21 C.R. (4th) 65, 13 O.R. (3d) 88 (C.A.).

The requirement in Part VI of the Criminal Code that before an authorization to intercept private communications may be granted, a judge must be satisfied that other investigative methods would fail or have little likelihood of success and that the granting of the authorization is in the best interests of the administration of justice, meets the high standards which this section imposes as a prerequisite to electronic surveillance. In par-particular the requirement that the authorization could only be granted where it is in the best interests of the administration of justice imports as a minimum requirement that the issuing judge must be satisfied that there are reasonable and probable grounds to believe that an offence has been, or is being, committed and that the authorization sought will afford evidence of that offence: R. v. Duarte, supra.

Surreptitious video surveillance by agents of the state, where the target of the surveillance has a reasonable expectation of privacy, can constitute a search and seizure within the meaning of s. 8. The test to be applied, in determining whether the person had a reasonable expectation of privacy and was thus entitled to the protection of this section, is whether the person whose privacy was intruded upon could legitimately claim that, in the circumstances, it should not have been open to the agents of the state to act as they did without prior judicial authorization. In assessing the constitutionality of a search, the court is not to be influenced by the fact that the target was in fact carrying on illegal activities. Rather, the question is to be framed in broad and neutral terms. Thus, in the case of video surveillance of a hotel room, the issue was whether, in a society such as ours, persons who retire to a hotel room and close the door behind them have a reasonable expectation of privacy. An accused, carrying on illegal gambling in a hotel room to which persons, including strangers in his community who had been invited, nevertheless had a reasonable expectation of privacy and video surveillance of his activities violated s. 8: R. v. Wong (1990), 60 C.C.C. (3d) 460, 1 C.R. (4th) 1 (S.C.C.).

Both the installation in the accused's car and subsequent monitoring by the police of an electronic "beeper" which was capable of locating the car constitute searches for the purpose of this section: R. v. Wise (1992), 70 C.C.C. (3d) 193, 11 C.R. (4th) 253, [1992] 1 S.C.R. 527.

DETENTION OR IMPRISONMENT.

9. Everyone has the right not to be arbitrarily detained or imprisoned.

ANNOTATIONS

The random stopping of a motorist for the purpose of spot check procedures, to check the driver's licence and proof of insurance and to observe the motorist's condition or sobriety, results in a detention within the meaning of this section. There is no reason to give detention under this section a different meaning than as determined for the purpose of s. 10 in R. v. Therens (1985), 18 C.C.C. (3d) 481, [1985] 1 S.C.R. 613, 45 C.R. (3d) 97 [noted under s. 10]. By the random stop for the purposes of the spot check procedure the officer assumes control over the movement of the motorist by a demand or direction that may have significant legal consequences. Further, detention resulting from a random stop for the purposes of a spot check procedure is arbitrary within the meaning of this section where the provincial legislation empowers the police officer to require the driver of any motor vehicle to stop, but on its face leaves the choice of the drivers to be stopped to the discretion of the officer. A discretion is arbitrary if there are no criteria, express or implied, which govern its exercise. However, the right not to be arbitrarily detained as guaranteed by s. 9 is subject to reasonable limits prescribed by law that are demonstrably justified in a free and democratic society within the meaning of s. 1 and such a reasonable limit could be found in provincial motor vehicle legislation such as s. 189a(1) of the Highway Traffic Act, R.S.O. 1980, c. 198: R. v. Hufsky (1988), 40 C.C.C. (3d) 398, [1988] 1 S.C.R. 621, 63 C.R. (3d) 14.

Routine check/random stopping of a motorist, as authorized by provincial legislation, violates this section, the officer having assumed control over the movement of the motorist by a demand or direction, even where the detention involved only traffic offences rather than violations of the Criminal Code. These offences, however, carried maximum penalties including fine and/or imprisonment. The detention was arbitrary, since the decision as to whether the stop should be made lay in the absolute discretion of the police officers. Such violation can, however, be justified as a reasonable limit to meet the pressing and substantial concern for safety on the highways. The stop must, however, be for legal reasons, to check the driver's licence and insurance, the sobriety of the driver and the mechanical fitness of the vehicle. Once stopped, the only questions which may justifiably be asked are those related to driving offences. Any further, more intrusive procedures could only be undertaken based upon reasonable and probable grounds: R. v. Ladouceur (1990), 56 C.C.C. (3d) 22, [1990] 1 S.C.R. 1257, 108 N.R. 171.

Stopping of a motorist, as authorized by provincial legislation on grounds which are reasonable and can be clearly expressed, is not random and thus not a violation of this section: R. v. Wilson (1990), 56 C.C.C. (3d) 142, [1990] 1 S.C.R. 1291, 108 N.R. 207.

In the absence of statutory authority to stop a vehicle, the stopping and detention of the occupants for the purpose of determining whether they were involved in criminal activity can only be justified if the detaining officer has some articulable cause for the detention. There must be a constellation of objectively discernible facts which give the detaining officer reasonable cause to suspect that the detainee is implicated in the activity under investigation. A "hunch" based entirely on intuition gained by experience cannot suffice: R. v. Simpson (1993), 79 C.C.C. (3d) 482, 20 C.R. (4th) 1, 43 M.V.R. (2d) 1 (Ont. C.A.).

A provision of the provincial Highway Traffic Act which authorizes a police officer in the lawful execution of his duty to require a motorist to stop his vehicle and produce his licence can be resorted to, even where the officer is not acting to enforce the Act, provided the officer is in the lawful execution of his duties. The provision is a reasonable limit on the rights guaranteed by this section: R. v. Duncanson (1991), 12 C.R. (4th) 86, 30 M.V.R. (2d) 17, 93 Sask. R. 193 (C.A.), affd on other grounds 12 C.R. (4th) 98, [1992] 1 S.C.R. 836, 97 Sask. R. 96n.

It is not every unlawful arrest that necessarily falls within the words "arbitrarily detained" within the meaning of s. 9. Whether or not the unlawful arrest will constitute an arbitrary detention depends on the particular facts of the case and the view taken by the court with respect to the extent of the departure from the standard of reasonable and probable grounds and the honesty of and the basis for the belief in the existence of reasonable and probable grounds on the part of the officer: R. v. Duguay, Murphy and Sevigny (1985), 18 C.C.C. (3d) 289, 18 D.L.R. (4th) 32, 45 C.R. (3d) 148 (C.A.), affd on other grounds 46 C.C.C. (3d) 1, [1989] 1 S.C.R. 93, 67 C.R. (3d) 252.

Assuming that the right to attack a sentence under s. 9 is not foreclosed by the fact that it is legislatively prescribed and that the statutory procedures have been judicially complied with, it could not be said that imprisonment resulting from the successful invocation of an application under the Criminal Code to have an accused declared a dangerous offender could be considered arbitrary. The legislation narrowly defines the class of offenders with respect to whom it may properly be invoked and prescribes quite specifically the conditions under which an offender may be designated as dangerous. The lack of uniformity in the treatment of dangerous offenders that arises by virtue of prosecutorial discretion to make an application to have an accused declared a dangerous offender does not constitute unconstitutional arbitrariness. In fact, the absence of discretion could render arbitrary the law's application: R. v. Lyons (1987), 37 C.C.C. (3d) 1, [1987] 2 S.C.R. 309, 61 C.R. (3d) 1.

The provisions of the Criminal Code which provide for a minimum sentence of life imprisonment without eligibility for parole for certain types of murders, in particular murder while committing an offence such as kidnapping, do not demonstrate arbitrariness on the part of Parliament so as to violate this section. The sentence is statutorily authorized, applies to a narrowly defined class of offenders and prescribes, quite specifically, the conditions under which the offender is liable to be convicted of this offence: R. v. Luxton (1990), 58 C.C.C. (3d) 449, [1990] 6 W.W.R. 137, 76 Alta. L.R. (2d) 43 (S.C.C.) (7:0).

An arrest which is lawfully made, having been made on the basis of reasonable and probable grounds as authorized by s. 495 of the Criminal Code, does not become unlawful simply because the police intend to continue their investigation after the arrest. Moreover, in this case the accused's detention for some 18 hours before a formal charge was laid until a lineup could be held did not violate either the Criminal Code or s. 9. The delay was necessary to assemble the witnesses in order to hold the lineup and immediately after the accused was positively identified he was taken before a justice as required by the Criminal Code: R. v. Storrey (1990), 53 C.C.C. (3d) 316, [1990] 1 S.C.R. 241.

In R. v. Storrey, supra, the court also considered what constitutes reasonable and probable grounds so as to constitute a proper arrest without warrant. The requirement of reasonable grounds requires that an arresting officer must subjectively have reasonable and probable grounds on which to base the arrest. These grounds must in addition be justifiable from an objective point of view. That is, a reasonable person placed in the position the officer, must be able to conclude that there were indeed reasonable and probable grounds for the arrest. On the other hand, the police need not demonstrate anything more than reasonable and probable grounds and specifically are not required to establish a prima facie case for conviction before making the arrest.

ARREST OR DETENTION.

10. Everyone has the right on arrest or detention

- (a) to be informed promptly of the reasons therefor;
- (b) to retain and instruct counsel without delay and to be informed of that right; and
- (c) to have the validity of the detention determined by way of habeas corpus and to be released if the detention is not lawful.

ANNOTATIONS

Meaning of detention – In its use of the word detention this section is directed to a restraint of liberty other than arrest in which a person may reasonably require the assistance of counsel but may be prevented or impeded from retaining and instructing counsel without delay except for the constitutional guarantee. In addition to the case of deprivation of liberty by physical constraint there is a detention within the meaning of s. 10 when a peace officer or other agent of the state assumes control over the movement of a person by a demand or direction which may have significant legal consequence and which prevents or impedes access to counsel. While there must be some form of compulsion or coercion to constitute an interference with liberty or freedom of action which amounts to a detention within the meaning of this section, there need not be physical compulsion. Detention may be effected without the application or threat of application of physical restraint if the person concerned submits or acquiesces in the deprivation of liberty and reasonably believes the choice to do otherwise does not exist: R. v. Therens (1985), 18 C.C.C. (3d) 481, [1985] 1 S.C.R. 613, 45 C.R. (3d) 97.

A motorist required to comply with the demand that he provide samples for analysis in a roadside screening device as required pursuant to former s. 234.1 of the Criminal Code is detained within the meaning of s. 10. The necessary element of compulsion or coercion that constituted detention may arise from criminal liability for refusal to comply with a demand or direction, or from a reasonable belief that one does not have a choice as to whether or not to comply. Nevertheless, the motorist is not entitled to retain and instruct counsel and to be informed of that right since the provisions of s. 234.1 constitute a reasonable limit within the meaning of s. 1: R. v. Thomsen (1988), 40 C.C.C. (3d) 411, [1988] 1 S.C.R. 640, 63 C.R. (3d) 1.

Similarly, a motorist directed to pull over to the side of the road by a police officer and required to undertake certain co-ordination tests to determine whether or not his ability to drive was impaired is detained within the meaning of s. 10. However, provincial legislation authorizing such stops will constitute a reasonable limit within the meaning of s. 1: R. v. Saunders (1988), 41 C.C.C. (3d) 532, 63 C.R. (3d) 37, 4 M.V.R. (2d) 199

(Ont. C.A.); R. v. Bonin (1989), 47 C.C.C. (3d) 30 (B.C.C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused 50 C.C.C. (3d) vi, 102 N.R. 400n. Where however there is no such legislation there is no limit prescribed by law which would justify infringement of a motorist's rights under s. 10(b) where he is detained while performing sobriety tests: R. v. Gallant (1989), 48 C.C.C. (3d) 329, 70 C.R. (3d) 139, 95 A.R. 101 (C.A.).

A person attempting to enter Canada who is required to submit to a strip or skin search pursuant to the provisions of the Customs Act is detained within the meaning of this section. There are three distinct types of border search. The first is the routine questioning which every traveller undergoes at a port of entry accompanied in some cases by a search of baggage and perhaps a pat or frisk of outer clothing. A person subjected to this type of search could not be said to be detained. The second type of border search, a strip or skin search conducted in a private room after a secondary examination and with the permission of a customs officer in authority does result in detention. The third and most highly intrusive type of search is a body cavity search in which customs officers have recourse to medical doctors, x-rays and other highly invasive techniques. A person subjected to these latter two kinds of searches is clearly subject to external restraint and a customs officer having assumed control over the accused's movements by demands which have significant legal consequences has detained the accused: R. v. Simmons (1988), 45 C.C.C. (3d) 296, [1988] 2 S.C.R. 495, 66 C.R. (3d) 297.

Similarly an accused was detained within the meaning of s. 10 when he was ushered into an interview room by customs officers who suspected that he was carrying narcotics. The accused had been ordered into an interview room where he was questioned and then required to empty his pockets on the table, place his hands against the wall and spread his feet apart: R. v. Jacoy (1988), 45 C.C.C. (3d) 46, [1988] 2 S.C.R. 548, 66 C.R. (3d) 336.

In determining whether a person who subsequently is an accused was detained at the time he was questioned at a police station by the police, the following factors are relevant: (1) The precise language used by the police officer in requesting the person to come to the police station and whether the person was given a choice or expressed a preference that the interview be conducted in the police station rather than at his home; (2) Whether the accused was escorted to the police station by a police officer or came himself in response to a police request; (3) Whether the accused left at the conclusion of the interview or whether he was arrested; (4) The stage of the investigation, that is, whether the questioning was part of the general investigation of a crime or whether the police had already decided that a crime had been committed and that the accused was the perpetrator or was involved in its commission and the questioning was conducted for the purpose of obtaining an incriminating statement; (5) Whether the police had reasonable and probable grounds to believe the accused had committed the offence; (6) The nature of the questions, whether they were questions of a general nature designed to obtain information or whether the accused was confronted with evidence pointing to his guilt; (7) The subjective belief by an accused that he was detained, although relevant, is not decisive because the issue is whether he reasonably believed that he was detained. Personal circumstances relating to the accused such as low intelligence, emotional disturbance, youth and lack of sophistication are circumstances to be considered in determining whether he had a subjective belief that he was detained. This list is not intended to be exhaustive and the absence of any one factor is not determinative in a particular case: R. v. Moran (1987), 36 C.C.C. (3d) 225 (Ont. C.A.); R. v. Voss (1989), 50 C.C.C. (3d) 58, 71 C.R. (3d) 178, 33 O.A.C. 190 (C.A.).

The accused who, given the choice of whether to attend at the police station or be interviewed at home, agreed to go to the station for the interview and was not detained: R. v. Hawkins, [1993] 2 S.C.R. 157, 79 C.C.C. (3d) 576, 20 C.R. (4th) 55.

Right to be informed of reason for detention [s. 10(a)] – In considering whether or not there has been a breach of this paragraph, it is the substance of what the detainee can reasonably be supposed to have understood, rather than the formalism of the precise words used, which must govern. The question is whether what the detainee was told, viewed reasonably in all the circumstances of the case, was sufficient to permit him to make a reasonable decision to decline to submit to arrest, or alternatively, to decide whether or not to exercise his right to consult counsel: R. v. Evans, [1991] 1 S.C.R. 869, 63 C.C.C. (3d) 289, 4 C.R. (4th) 144.

Right to counsel – Section 10(b) imposes at least two duties on the police in addition to the duty to inform detainees of their rights. The first is that the police must give the accused or detained person who so wishes a reasonable opportunity to exercise the right to retain and instruct counsel without delay. The police must also refrain from attempting to elicit evidence from the detainee until he has had a reasonable opportunity to retain and instruct counsel: R. v. Manninen (1987), 34 C.C.C. (3d) 385, [1987] 1 S.C.R. 1233, 58 C.R. (3d) 97; R. v. Ross (1989), 46 C.C.C. (3d) 129, [1989] 1 S.C.R. 3, 67 C.R. (3d) 209.

The accused must be reasonably diligent in attempting to obtain counsel if he wishes to do so. If the accused is not diligent in this regard then the correlative duties imposed upon the police to refrain from questioning the accused are suspended: R. v. Tremblay (1987), 37 C.C.C. (3d) 565, [1987] 2 S.C.R. 435, 60 C.R. (3d) 59.

Section 10(b) must be considered in light of s. 10(a) requiring the police to advise an individual who is arrested or detained of the reasons for such arrest or detention. The individual can only exercise her s. 10(b) right in a meaningful way if she knows the extent of her jeopardy. Thus, where the accused is originally arrested for attempted murder, when she was later informed that the victim had died and that she was under arrest for first degree murder she should have been informed of her right to counsel and given a reasonable opportunity to again exercise her rights under s. 10(b): R. v. Black (1989), 50 C.C.C. (3d) 1, [1989] 2 S.C.R. 138, 70 C.R. (3d) 97.

While the accused, in order to meaningfully exercise the right to counsel, must possess knowledge of the extent of his jeopardy, it is not necessary that the accused be given full information. Rather, what is required is that the accused understand generally the jeopardy in which he finds himself and appreciate the consequences of deciding for or against counsel. The trial judge must be satisfied that, in all the circumstances revealed by the evidence, the accused generally understood the sort of jeopardy he faced when he made the decision to dispense with counsel. The accused need not be aware of the precise charge faced, nor need the accused be made aware of all the factual details of the case. What is required is that he be possessed of sufficient information to allow making an informed and appropriate decision as to whether to speak to a lawyer or not. The emphasis must be on the reality of the total situation as it impacts on the understanding of the accused, rather than on the technical detail of what the accused may or may not have been told: R. v. Smith (1991), 63 C.C.C. (3d) 313, 4 C.R. (4th) 125, [1991] 1 S.C.R. 714.

In order to comply with s. 10(b), the police must restate the accused's right to counsel when there is a fundamental and discrete change in the purpose of the investigation, one involving a different and unrelated offence or a significantly more serious offence than that contemplated at the time of the original warning: R. v. Evans, supra.

As part of the information component of s. 10(b) detainees must be informed as a matter of routine of the existence and availability of the applicable systems of duty counsel and legal aid in the jurisdiction, in order to give the detainee a full understanding of the right to retain and instruct counsel. Imposing this additional duty is consistent with one of the main purposes underlying the s. 10(b) right which is to facilitate contact with counsel. It may well be that imposing this additional duty on the police will have an effect on what constitutes reasonable diligence in the exercise of the right to counsel. However, in light of the imposition of this additional duty on the police as part of the information component of s. 10(b) a transition period is appropriate. A period of 30 days from the date of release of the judgment [February 1, 1990] would be appropriate: R. v.

Brydges (1990), 53 C.C.C. (3d) 330, [1990] 1 S.C.R. 190, [1990] 2 W.W.R. 220, 103 N.R. 282.

The detainee is entitled under the information component of para. (b) to be advised of whatever system for free and immediate, preliminary legal advice exists in the jurisdiction at the time of detention and how such advice can be accessed: R. v. Pozniak, [1994] 3 S.C.R. 310, 92 C.C.C. (3d) 472, 33 C.R. (4th) 49. While situations may occasionally arise in which the police officer's duty to make a reasonable effort to inform the detainee of his rights will be satisfied even if certain elements of the standard caution are omitted. This will only be the case if the detainee explicitly waives his rights to receive the standard caution and if the circumstances reveal a reasonable basis for believing that the detainee in fact knows and has adverted to his rights, and is aware of the means by which these rights can be exercised. The fact that a detainee merely indicates that he knows his rights will not by itself provide a reasonable basis for believing that the detainee in fact understands their full extent or the means by which they can be implemented: R. v. Bartle, [1994] 3 S.C.R. 173, 92 C.C.C. (3d) 289, 33 C.R. (4th) 1.

The duties imposed on the police to refrain from attempting to elicit evidence from the detainee are suspended when the detainee is not reasonably diligent in the exercise of his rights. This limit on the rights of the detainee is essential because it would otherwise be possible for the accused to delay needlessly and with impunity an investigation and even in certain cases to allow for an essential piece of evidence to be destroyed or rendered impossible to obtain. In this case the accused, after being taken back to the police station, refused to attempt to try to contact his lawyer believing that it would be useless to do so having regard to the time of day. It could not be said however that it would have been impossible for the accused to contact his lawyer when he was initially arrested or when he was at the police station and given an opportunity to do so. The case would be different if the accused had in fact tried to contact his lawyer but failed in the attempt. However, his decision to not even try to contact his lawyer was fatal and prevented him from establishing that he was reasonably diligent in the exercise of his rights. The burden of proving that it was impossible for him to communicate with his lawyer when the police offered him the opportunity to do so was on the accused. The fact that the accused subsequently during questioning reiterated his intention to speak to his lawyer before saying anything with respect to the charge did not change the legal situation. A detainee who has had a reasonable opportunity to communicate with his counsel but who was not diligent in the exercise of the right cannot in the absence of exceptional circumstances subsequently require the police to suspend one more time the investigation or the questioning: R. v. Smith (1989), 50 C.C.C. (3d) 308, [1989] 2 S.C.R. 368, 71 C.R. (3d) 129.

Paragraph (b) prohibits the police from belittling an accused's lawyer with the express goal or effect of undermining the accused's confidence in a relationship with defence counsel. The accused's rights were also violated when the police pressured the accused into accepting a "plea bargain" without the accused first having the opportunity to consult with his lawyer. This paragraph mandates the Crown or police, when offering a plea bargain, to tender that offer either to accused's counsel or to the accused while in the presence of counsel, unless the accused has expressly waived the right to counsel: R. v. Burlingham, [1995] 2 S.C.R. 206, 97 C.C.C. (3d) 385, 38 C.R. (4th) 265.

Paragraph (b) does not create a constitutional obligation on governments to ensure that free and immediate preliminary legal advice is available to all detainees: R. v. Matheson, [1994] 3 S.C.R. 328, 92 C.C.C. (3d) 434, 33 C.R. (4th) 136. Nevertheless, where a detainee has indicated a desire to exercise his right to counsel, the state is required to provide him with a reasonable opportunity to do so. During this period, state agents must refrain from eliciting incriminating evidence from the detainee until he has had a reasonable opportunity to reach counsel. The police are obliged to "hold off" from attempting to elicit criminatory evidence from the detainee until he has had a reasonable opportunity to reach counsel. What constitutes a reasonable opportunity will depend on all of the circumstances. Those circumstances will include the availability of duty counsel services in the jurisdiction where the detention takes place. The non-existence of such services will also affect the determination of what, under the circumstances, is a reasonable opportunity to consult counsel. The absence of duty counsel in a jurisdiction extends the period in which a detainee will have been found to have been duly diligent in exercising his right to counsel. The reasonable opportunity might extend to when the local legal aid office opens, when a private lawyer willing to provide free summary advice can be reached, or when the detainee is brought before a justice of the peace for bail purposes. While during this time detainees would continue to be deprived of their freedom, any deprivation of liberty in the circumstances would be minimal and in accordance with the principles of fundamental justice under s. 7 of the Charter. Further, in circumstances where the detainee has asserted his right to counsel and has been reasonably diligent in exercising it, yet has been unable to reach a lawyer because duty counsel is unavailable at the time of detention, courts must ensure that the Charter-protected right to counsel is not too easily waived. Thus, an additional information obligation on police will be triggered once a detainee, who has previously asserted the right to counsel, indicates that he has changed his mind and no longer wants legal advice. At this point, the police will be required to tell the detainee of his right to a reasonable opportunity to contact the lawyer and of the obligation on the part of the police during this time not to take any statements or require the detainee to participate in any potentially incriminating process until he has had that reasonable opportunity. Once the detainee has asserted the right to counsel, there must be clear indication that he has changed his mind and the burden of establishing an unequivocal waiver will be on the Crown. The waiver must be free and voluntary and it must not be the product of direct or indirect compulsion: R. v. Prosper, [1994] 3 S.C.R. 236, 92 C.C.C. (3d) 353, 33 C.R. (4th) 85.

The detainee has the right to consult in private: R. v. Dempsey (1987), 77 N.S.R. (2d) 284, 46 M.V.R. 179 (C.A.); R. v. McKane (1987), 35 C.C.C. (3d) 481, 58 C.R. (3d) 130, 49 M.V.R. 1 (Ont. C.A.); R. v. LePage (1986), 32 C.C.C. (3d) 171, 54 C.R. (3d) 371, 44 M.V.R. 167 (N.S.C.A.); R. v. Playford (1987), 40 C.C.C. (3d) 142, 61 C.R. (3d) 101, 63 O.R. (2d) 289 (C.A.); R. v. Standish (1988), 41 C.C.C. (3d) 340, 24 B.C.L.R. (2d) 323, 5 M.V.R. (2d) 239 (C.A.); R. v. Young (1987), 38 C.C.C. (3d) 452, 81 N.B.R. (2d) 233, 6 M.V.R. (2d) 295 (C.A.). //

The duty on the police to inform the detainee of his right to counsel includes the duty to explain the right in a manner which the detainee can understand. In most cases, one can infer from the circumstances that the accused understands what he has been told and, in such cases, the police are required to go no further in explaining the right. Where, however, there is a positive indication that the accused does not understand his right to counsel, the police cannot rely on their mechanical recitation of the right to the accused; they must take steps to facilitate that understanding: R. v. Evans, supra.

Absent proof of circumstances indicating that the accused did not understand his right to retain counsel when he was informed of it, the onus is on him to prove that he asked for the right but it was denied or he was denied any opportunity to even ask for it: R. v. Baig (1987), 37 C.C.C. (3d) 181, [1987] 2 S.C.R. 537, 45 D.L.R. (4th) 106; R. v. Anderson (1984), 10 C.C.C. (3d) 417, 39 C.R. (3d) 193, 45 O.R. (2d) 225 (C.A.).

In its terms this section appears to focus on the rights of an accused to retain and instruct counsel at the time of the initial arrest and detention. It does not give an accused the right to be informed of his right to counsel and to be given an opportunity to instruct counsel whenever he has a critical encounter (either knowingly or unknowingly) with the police or other authorities. The words "upon arrest or detention" indicate a point in time not a continuum. They do not deal with a continuing right to be instructed before every occasion on which the police obtain a statement from the accused: R. v. Logan (1988), 46 C.C.C. (3d) 354, 67 O.R. (2d) 87 (C.A.), affd on other grounds (1990), 58 C.C.C. (3d) 391 (S.C.C.).

As a detainee can only exercise his s. 10(b) rights in a meaningful way if he knows the extent of his jeopardy, there must be a close factual connection or linkage relating the warning to the detention and the reasons therefore. However, the fact that the accused is informed of his right to counsel before the actual detention is not determinative. Section 10(b) refers to a factual connection between the detention and the right to a warning rather than a mere coincidence in time. Where the accused was informed at the outset of an interview, prior to his detention, of his right to counsel and his right to remain silent and informed that the police were investigating a hit and run accident, s. 10(b) was complied with although the accused was only actually detained a short time later when given a breathalyzer demand. The situation that arose with the breathalyzer demand was directly connected to the investigation. The demand itself, together with the fact that the accused was advised of the criminal consequences of a refusal to comply, would normally trigger the consideration of the accused whether or not to instruct counsel. The demand arose directly and immediately out of the inquiries; it was part of a single incident in which the accused was made fully aware of his rights: R. v. Schmautz (1990), 53 C.C.C. (3d) 556, [1990] 1 S.C.R. 398.

In exercising the right to counsel or waiving the right, a mentally ill accused must possess the limited cognitive capacity required for fitness to stand trial. This requires that the accused be capable of communicating with counsel to instruct counsel, and understand the function of counsel and that he can dispense with counsel even if this is not in the accused's best interests. It is not necessary that the accused possess analytical ability, nor need the Crown, in order to prove a valid waiver, satisfy a separate awareness of consequences test: R. v. Whittle, [1994] 2 S.C.R. 914, 92 C.C.C. (3d) 11, 32 C.R. (4th) 1.

Right to habeas corpus [s. 10(c)] – While s. 10(c) guarantees the right to challenge the validity of an inmate's detention in proceedings by way of habeas corpus, it has not changed the procedure with respect to the writ of habeas corpus and thus the judge has jurisdiction to proceed in the absence of the inmate. However, if some arguable issue or prima facie case is suggested then the writ should issue commanding the jailer to bring the prisoner before the court and to prove the lawfulness of the detention: R. v. Olson (1987), 38 C.C.C. (3d) 534, 62 O.R. (2d) 321 (C.A.), affd 47 C.C.C. (3d) 491, [1989] 1 S.C.R. 296, 68 O.R. 256n.

PROCEEDINGS IN CRIMINAL AND PENAL MATTERS

11. Any person charged with an offence has the right

- (a) to be informed without unreasonable delay of the specific offence;
- (b) to be tried within a reasonable time;
- (c) not to be compelled to be a witness in proceedings against that person in respect of the offence;
- (d) to be presumed innocent until proven guilty according to law in a fair and public hearing by an independent and impartial tribunal;
- (e) not to be denied reasonable bail without just cause;
- (f) except in the case of an offence under military law tried before a military tribunal, to the benefit of trial by jury where the maximum punishment for the offence is imprisonment for five years or a more severe punishment;
- (g) not to be found guilty on account of any act or omission unless, at the time of the act or omission, it constituted an offence under Canadian or international law or was criminal according to the general principles of law recognized by the community of nations;
- (h) if finally acquitted of the offence, not to be tried for it again and, if finally found guilty and punished for the offence, not to be tried or punished for it again; and
- (i) if found guilty of the offence and if the punishment for the offence has been varied between the time of commission and the time of sentencing, to the benefit of the lesser punishment.

ANNOTATIONS

“Charged with an offence” – This section is limited to criminal or quasi-criminal proceedings or proceedings giving rise to penal consequences. The matter will fall within this section either because, by its very nature, it is a criminal proceeding or because a conviction in respect of the offence may lead to a true penal consequence. The first category of offences are those which involve a matter of public nature, intended to promote public order within a public sphere of activity. Those matters are to be distinguished from private, domestic or disciplinary matters which are regulatory, protective or corrective and which are primarily intended to maintain discipline, professional integrity and professional standards or to regulate conduct within a limited private sphere of activity. Thus all prosecutions for criminal offences under the Criminal Code or for quasi-criminal offences under provincial legislation are automatically subject to this section. However, even a private, domestic or disciplinary matter can fall within this section if it involves the imposition of true penal consequences, namely, imprisonment or a fine which by its magnitude would appear to be imposed for the purpose of redressing the wrong done to society at large rather than to the maintenance of internal discipline within the limited sphere: R. v. Wigglesworth (1987), 37 C.C.C. (3d) 385, [1987] 2 S.C.R. 541, 60 C.R. (3d) 193.

Section 11(a) – The making of an ex parte injunction on the court’s own motion restraining picketing of courthouses in the course of a legal strike cannot be said to infringe s. 11(a) on the ground that no notice was given to the picketers and they were not afforded an opportunity to be heard. There can be no violation of this paragraph where no person is charged with a specific offence and there is therefore no one to notify of any offence: B.C.G.E.U. v. British Columbia (Attorney General) (1988), 44 C.C.C. (3d) 289, [1988] 2 S.C.R. 214, 53 D.L.R. (4th) 1.

The right to be informed of the specific offence within the meaning of s. 11(a) means the right to be informed of the substantive offence and the acts or conduct which allegedly form the basis of the charge. It does not give an accused charged with a hybrid offence the right to be informed of how the Crown will exercise its discretion with respect to the manner of prosecution: Re Warren and The Queen (1983), 35 C.R. (3d) 173, 6 C.R.R. 82 (Ont. H.C.J.).

This paragraph enshrines the rights contained in s. 581(3) of the Criminal Code which establishes the minimum requirements of a valid count in an indictment. It was intended to protect the right of an accused to be reasonably informed of the transaction alleged against him, thus giving him the possibility of a full defence and fair trial: R. v. Lucas (1983), 6 C.C.C. (3d) 147, 150 D.L.R. (3d) 118, 21 M.V.R. 293 (C.A.).

The purpose of this paragraph is to confirm the right of an accused to be informed of the substantive offence and the acts or conduct which allegedly formed the basis of that charge as is now required by s. 581 of the Criminal Code. It is not a right to be charged within a reasonable time of the Crown having knowledge of the offence: R. v. Cancor Software Corp. (1990), 58 C.C.C. (3d) 53, 79 C.R. (3d) 22, 74 O.R. (2d) 65, (C.A.).

Unreasonable delay [s. 11(b)] – A person is only charged with an offence within the meaning of s. 11 when an information is sworn against him alleging an offence or where a direct indictment is laid against him when no information is sworn. Accordingly, the reckoning of time in considering whether a person has been accorded a trial within a reasonable time within the meaning of s. 11(b) will commence with the information or indictment, where no information has been laid, and will continue until the completion of the trial. Pre-information delay is not a factor. This does not mean that delays which occur at the pre-charge stage are immune from scrutiny under the law. The Criminal Code itself in ss. 650(3) and 802(1) protects the right of the accused to make full answer and defence should he be prejudiced by pre-charge delay and other provisions of the Criminal Code provide for the prompt swearing of an information. As well the doctrine of abuse of process may be invoked in an appropriate case. In addition, given the broad wording of s. 7 it is not necessary to distort the words of s. 11(b) in order to guard against a pre-charge delay: R. v. Kalanj (1989), 48 C.C.C. (3d) 459, [1989] 1 S.C.R. 1594, 70 C.R. (3d) 260.

Although the primary aim of s. 11(b) is the protection of the individual's rights and the provision of fundamental justice for the accused, none the less, there is a community or societal interest implicit in s. 11(b). The four factors to be considered in determining whether there has been an unreasonable delay are: (1) the length of the delay; (2) explanation for the delay; (3) waiver; and (4) prejudice to the accused. As regards the length of the delay, while this is not a threshold requirement, it is a factor to be balanced along with others. The longer the delay, the more difficult it should be for a court to excuse it and very lengthy delays may be such that they cannot be justified for any reason. In considering the explanation for the delay, the court will consider those delays attributable to the Crown, including systemic or institutional delays and those delays attributable to the accused. Delay attributable to the Crown will comprise all of the potential factors causing delay which flow from the nature of the case, the conduct of the Crown, including officers of the state, and the inherent time requirements of the case. The delay attributable to the actions of the Crown or its officers will weigh in favour of the accused. Systemic or institutional limitations will often be the most difficult to assess. The court must pay due deference to political decisions respecting the allocation of funds for courtrooms and Crown Attorneys which must be balanced against the duty on the state to provide other services such as health care and highways. The right guaranteed by s. 11(b), however, is of such fundamental importance to both the individual and the community that the lack of institutional resources cannot be employed to justify a continuing unreasonable postponement of trials. In considering the question of how long a delay is too long, the court will compare the questioned jurisdiction to the standard maintained by the best comparable jurisdiction in the country. The comparison need not be too precise or exact. Rather, it should look to the appropriate ranges of delay to determine what is a reasonable limit. In all cases, it will be incumbent upon the Crown to show that the institutional delay in question is justifiable. In considering delay attributable to the accused, it must be borne in mind that the right to be tried within a reasonable time is an aspect of fundamental justice protected by s. 7 of the Charter and thus, any inquiry into the conduct of the accused should in no way absolve the Crown from its responsibility to bring the accused to trial. None the less there is a societal interest in preventing an accused from using the guarantee as a means of escaping trial. The inquiry into the actions of the accused will be restricted, however, to discovering those situations where the accused's acts either directly caused the delay or the acts of the accused are shown to be a deliberate and calculated tactic employed to delay the trial. Delay caused by factors beyond the control of the accused or a situation where the accused did nothing to prevent a delay caused by the Crown must be distinguished. The burden of proving that the direct acts of the accused caused the delay must fall upon the Crown, except in those cases where the effects of the accused's actions are so clear and readily apparent that the intent of the accused to cause the delay is the inference that must be drawn from the record of his actions. As regards the factor of waiver, it is now well established that any waiver of a Charter right must be clear and unequivocal. The accused is not required to assert explicitly his right to trial within a reasonable time and his failure to assert the right does not give the Crown license to proceed with an unfair trial. Failure to assert the right would be insufficient in itself to impugn the motives of the accused. Rather, there must be something in the conduct of the accused that is sufficient to give rise to an inference that the accused has understood that he had a guarantee under s. 11(b), understood its nature and waived the right provided by that guarantee. Silence or lack of objection cannot constitute a lawful waiver. On the other hand, it may well be that the setting of trial dates and the agreement to those dates by counsel for the accused may be sufficient to constitute waiver. As regards prejudice to the accused, it should be inferred that a very long and unreasonable delay has prejudiced the accused. It will, however, be open to the Crown to attempt to demonstrate that the accused has not been prejudiced. In addition, it will be open to an accused who has suffered some additional form of prejudice to adduce evidence of prejudice on his own initiative, in order to strengthen his position in seeking a remedy under s. 24(1). With respect to transitional periods, whatever the length of the transitional period necessitated by the passage of the Charter, that transitional period has long since passed. That is not to say that consideration of the transitional period should always be precluded in the future. The consideration of a transitional period might well be required by change in conditions in a particular district: R. v. Askov (1990), 59 C.C.C. (3d) 449, [1990] 2 S.C.R. 1199, 79 C.R. (3d) 273.

In determining whether the right of the accused has been denied, no mere administrative formula can be applied but rather there must be a judicial determination balancing the interests which the section is designed to protect against factors which either inevitably lead to delay or are otherwise the cause of delay. The first factor is the length of the delay and requires the court to examine the period from the charge to the end of the trial. Pre-charge delay may, in certain circumstances, have an influence on the overall determination as to whether post-charge delay is unreasonable but of itself is not counted in determining the length of the delay. If the length of the delay is unexceptional, no inquiry is warranted and no explanation for the delay is called for unless the accused is able to raise the issue of reasonableness of the period by reference to other factors such as prejudice. If the length of delay warrants an inquiry into the reasons for the delay, then the court will first consider whether the accused has waived, in whole or in part, her right to complain of the delay. However, any waiver must be clear and unequivocal, with full knowledge of the rights that the procedure was enacted to protect and of the affect that waiver will have on those rights. If the application by the accused is not resolved by reason of principles of waiver, the court will then have to consider other explanations for the delay. This includes consideration of the inherent time requirements which inevitably lead to delay. Thus, the more complex the trial, the more time will be needed to prepare for trial and for the trial to be conducted once it begins. As well, there are inherent requirements which are common to almost all cases. This includes activities such as retention of counsel, bail hearings, police and administrative paperwork, disclosure and similar activities. Another inherent delay that must be taken into account is whether the case proceeds through a preliminary inquiry. The actions of the accused must also be considered as must the actions of the Crown. Another factor is the limits on institutional resources. This period starts to run when the parties are ready for trial but the system cannot accommodate them. While account must be taken of the fact that the state does not have unlimited funds, the court cannot simply accede to the government's allocation of resources and tailor the period of permissible delay accordingly. There is a point in time at which the court will no longer tolerate delay based on the plea of inadequate resources. This period of time may be referred to as an administrative guideline, but is not a limitation period nor is it a fixed ceiling on delay. Rapidly changing conditions within a particular jurisdiction may place a sudden and temporary strain on resources and this must be taken into account in applying the guideline. The application of a guideline will also be influenced by the presence or absence of prejudice. It is appropriate for the court to suggest a period of institutional delay of between eight to ten months as a guide to provincial courts. As regards institutional delay after committal for trial, the range should be an additional six to eight months. There may, as well, be other reasons for delay as for example, actions by the trial judge. The final factor to be considered is prejudice to the accused. In any particular case, prejudice may be inferred simply from the length of the delay. The longer the delay, the more likely that such an inference will be drawn. On the other hand, in circumstances in which prejudice is not inferred and is not otherwise proved, the basis for an enforcement of the accused's right is seriously undermined. The purpose of s. 11(b) is to expedite trials and minimize prejudice and not to avoid trials on the merits. Action or non-action by the accused which is inconsistent with a desire for a timely trial is something that the court must consider. Apart, however, from inferred prejudice, either party may rely on evidence to show prejudice or to dispel such a finding. Conduct of the accused falling short of waiver may be relied upon to negative prejudice: R. v. Morin (1992), 71 C.C.C. (3d) 1, 12 C.R. (4th) 1, [1992] 1 S.C.R. 771 (7:0).

A corporate accused charged with a provincial regulatory offence has the right to be tried within a reasonable time. However, in considering the factor of prejudice to the accused, there is no presumption of prejudice in the case of a corporate offender and a corporate accused must be able to establish that its fair trial interest has been irremediably prejudiced: R. v. CIP Inc. (1992), 71 C.C.C. (3d) 129, 12 C.R. (4th) 237, [1992] 1 S.C.R. 843.

The decision in R. v. Askov, supra, did not enact a judicially developed limitation period to be mechanically applied whenever there has been a period of systemic delay. In every case, the court is required to weigh the four factors of length of delay, explanation for the delay, waiver and prejudice to the accused: R. v. Bennett (1991), 64 C.C.C. (3d) 449, 3 O.R. (3d) 193, 6 C.R. (4th) 22, 46 O.A.C. 99 (C.A.).

A longer period of delay will be reasonable in a complex case which requires the commitment of substantial preparation time, court time and support services. In considering whether the state has allocated sufficient resources to the preparation of the case, some deference should be given to decisions made by the police in the investigation and it must be recognized that complex cases will often require longer than normal preparation time, greater expenditure of Crown and other resources and the longer use of courtrooms: R. v. Atkinson (1991), 68 C.C.C. (3d) 109, 5 O.R. (3d) 301, 50 O.A.C. 48 (C.A.).

Agreement by an accused to a future court date will in most circumstances give rise to an inference that the accused waives his right to subsequently allege that an unreasonable delay has occurred. However, in this case it was held that the actions of defence counsel on behalf of the accused rebutted any possible inference that he waived his s. 11(b) rights. When the case had to be adjourned at the request of the Crown in order to convenience the investigating officer defence counsel wrote to Crown counsel indicating his concern and making it clear that he was not waiving his s. 11(b) rights. The accused had demonstrated that he neither caused nor acquiesced in the postponement of the preliminary inquiry: R. v. Smith (1989), 52 C.C.C. (3d) 97, [1989] 2 S.C.R. 1120, 73 C.R. (3d) 1.

While there may be cases where an agreement to a date constitutes nothing more than an agreement to the inevitable, in the absence of any evidence that this is so, counsel's consent to a trial date can give rise to an inference of waiver: R. v. Heikel (1992), 72 C.C.C. (3d) 481, 125 A.R. 298 (C.A.).

In R. v. Smith, supra, it was also held that it was open to an accused to bring an application in the superior court alleging a violation of s. 11(b) several months prior to the date scheduled for the commencement of his preliminary inquiry. The accused's application was anticipatory in the sense that it was brought before the commencement of the preliminary inquiry. However, in the circumstances of the case and since the date for the preliminary inquiry was fixed and could not, at the behest of the accused, be moved up, the superior court judge properly considered the accused's application on the basis that the time had already elapsed. This was also an appropriate case for the superior court to exercise its jurisdiction, notwithstanding the preference for alleged violations of s. 11(b) being heard by the trial court. The preliminary inquiry was not scheduled to begin for several months and the provincial court judge would not have jurisdiction to consider an alleged infringement of s. 11(b) since he was not a court of competent jurisdiction.

Acquiescence by the accused to a delay that is requested by the judge in whose hands the fate of a motion for directed verdict lies must be assessed differently than acquiescence to those delays and proceedings that are made at the request of the Crown. In this case a substantial delay while the trial judge considered an application for a directed verdict was held to have resulted in an unreasonable delay within the meaning of s. 11(b) and in requiring a stay of proceedings. This was also an appropriate case for bringing an application to the superior court as the trial court was implicated in the delay: Rahey v. The Queen (1987), 33 C.C.C. (3d) 289, [1987] 1 S.C.R. 588, 57 C.R. (3d) 289.

An evidentiary hearing to inquire into the Crown's explanation for delay is not justified by merely pointing out that the discretion of the Crown could have been exercised differently and that this could have entailed different consequences to one or more of the accused. To warrant a hearing, there must be some basis for suspecting the Crown's choice of conduct. The accused bears the burden of making a tenable allegation of bad faith on the part of the Crown, which allegation can be supported by the record before the court or by some offer of proof: R. v. Durette (1992), 72 C.C.C. (3d) 421, 54 O.A.C. 81 (C.A.).

While the right to trial within a reasonable time is an individual right, the court cannot ignore the practicalities of what is involved in the prosecution of a conspiracy case and thus an accused's right under this paragraph is not infringed simply because the arranging of a joint trial involving several accused may involve greater delay. To suggest severance as a simple solution ignores the real cost to the Crown and the public from separate trials: R. v. Koruz; R. Schiewe (1992), 72 C.C.C. (3d) 353, 125 A.R. 161 (C.A.).

While charges against young offenders should be proceeded with promptly, this is only one factor to be considered. Further, the time required for an application for transfer to adult court and appeals relating thereto is part of the inherent time requirements of a case under the Young Offenders Act. The application for transfer must, however, be made within a reasonable time and pursued meritoriously and in good faith: R. v. D. (S.), [1992] 2 S.C.R. 161, 72 C.C.C. (3d) 575n, 14 C.R. (4th) 223.

The failure to apply at trial for a stay of proceedings on the ground of a violation of the right to trial within a reasonable time as guaranteed by s. 11(b) will normally amount to a waiver depriving the accused of the right to raise the matter for the first time on appeal: R. v. Rabba (1991), 64 C.C.C. (3d) 445, 3 O.R. (3d) 238, 46 O.A.C. 120 (C.A.).

The right to trial within a reasonable time does not apply to appellate delay. This is the case whether the accused or the Crown is the appellant and whether the appeal by the Crown is from an acquittal or a stay of proceedings: R. v. Potvin, [1993] 2 S.C.R. 880, 83 C.C.C. (3d) 97, 23 C.R. (4th) 10.

Non-compellability of accused [s. 11(c)] – A corporation cannot be said to be a witness within the meaning of s. 11(c) and is therefore not entitled to claim its protection when an officer of the corporation is compelled to testify against it: R. v. Amway Corp., [1989] 1 S.C.R. 21, 68 C.R. (3d) 97, [1989] 1 C.T.C. 255.

Neither s. 11(c) nor (d) requires that a trial judge specifically instruct jurors that no adverse inference can be drawn from the failure of the accused to testify: R. v. Boss (1988), 46 C.C.C. (3d) 523, 68 C.R. (3d) 123, 30 O.A.C. 184 (C.A.).

Comment by counsel for the co-accused that the accused did not testify does not violate s. 11(c): R. v. Naglik (1991), 65 C.C.C. (3d) 272, 3 O.R. (3d) 385, 46 O.A.C. 81 (C.A.).

A person sued for contempt of court in a civil action cannot be compelled to testify against himself: Vidéotron Ltée v. Industries Microlect Produits Électriques Inc. (1990), 56 C.C.C. (3d) 436, 69 D.L.R. (4th) 519, [1990] R.J.Q. 703 (C.A.).

Compelling a witness to testify against an accused does not violate para. (c), notwithstanding the witness is himself accused in a separate indictment of a related offence: Re Crooks and the Queen (1982), 2 C.C.C. (3d) 57, 143 D.L.R. (3d) 601, 39 O.R. (2d) 193 (H.C.J.), affd loc. cit. (C.A.).

However, in R. v. Zurlo (1990), 57 C.C.C. (3d) 407, 78 C.R. (3d) 167 (Que. C.A.) the court queried whether, in light of recent decisions of the Supreme Court of Canada, such as Thomson Newspapers Ltd. v. Canada (Director of Investigation and Research, Restrictive Trade Practices Commission) (1990), 54 C.C.C. (3d) 417, 67 D.L.R. (4th) 161, [1990] 1 S.C.R. 425, a witness could now be compelled to testify at the preliminary inquiry of an accused charged in a separate information with the same offence as the witness, in view of the guarantees in ss. 7, 11 and 13 against self incrimination.

Presumption of innocence [s. 11(d)] – At a minimum the right to be presumed innocent as guaranteed by s. 11(d) requires that the accused must be proven guilty beyond a reasonable doubt and that it is the state which must bear the burden of proof. The additional requirement in s. 11(d) that proof of guilt be “according to law in a fair and public hearing by an independent and impartial tribunal” requires that criminal prosecutions be carried out in accordance with lawful procedures and fairness. A statutory provision which requires an accused to disprove on a balance of probability the existence of a presumed fact, which is an important element of the offence in question violates s. 11(d): R. v. Oakes (1986), 24 C.C.C. (3d) 321, [1986] 1 S.C.R. 103, 50 C.R. (3d) 1.

Any uncertainty as to whether reversal of the burden of proof of a defence, as opposed to an element of the offence, infringes the presumption of innocence appears to have been resolved as a result of two decisions in the Supreme Court of Canada: R. v. Whyte (1988), 42 C.C.C. (3d) 97, [1988] 2 S.C.R. 3, 64 C.R. (3d) 123 and R. v. Keegstra (1990), 61 C.C.C. (3d) 1, [1991] 2 W.W.R. 1, 77 Alta. L.R. (2d) 193 (S.C.C.). The combined effect of those two cases is that the distinction between elements of the offence and other aspects of the charge is irrelevant. The real concern is not whether the accused must disprove an element or prove an excuse, but that the accused may be convicted while a reasonable doubt exists. When that possibility exists then the presumption of innocence is infringed. Thus, in the latter case, it was held that s. 319(3)(a) of the Criminal Code, which requires the accused to prove as a defence to the charge of wilfully promoting hatred that the statements were true, infringes s. 11(d). The issue then must be whether the provision can be justified under s. 1. In Keegstra, the court held that the reverse onus was a reasonable limit. The objective behind the reverse onus was found to be closely connected with the purpose of the offence itself and if the defence were too easily used, the pressing and substantial objective of Parliament in preventing the harm from hate literature would suffer unduly. It was open to Parliament to use the reverse onus provision to strike a balance between the legitimate concerns of preventing the damage caused by hate literature and the importance of truth in freedom of expression values.

The presumption of innocence is infringed whenever the accused is liable to be convicted, despite the existence of a reasonable doubt and thus only if proof of the basic fact contained in a presumption leads inexorably to proof of the presumed fact will a statutory presumption not infringe this paragraph: R. v. Downey (1992), 72 C.C.C. (3d) 1, 13 C.R. (4th) 129, [1992] 2 S.C.R. 10.

There is no general requirement that, for a reverse onus provision to pass the rational connection part of the s. 1 analysis, that provision be internally rational in the sense that there is a logical connection between the presumed fact and the fact substituted by the presumption. However, the lack of rational connection is a factor to be considered in applying the third stage of the test in R. v. Oakes, supra, namely the proportionality requirement: R. v. Laba, [1994] 3 S.C.R. 965, 94 C.C.C. (3d) 385, 34 C.R. (4th) 360.

In a proper case, rather than strike down a reverse onus provision entirely, it was open to the court to read the section down so as to merely place an evidentiary burden on the accused: R. v. Laba, supra.

Shifting the burden to the defendant charged with a regulatory offence to prove on a balance of probabilities that he acted with due diligence is a reasonable limit on the guarantee to the presumption of innocence: R. v. Wholesale Travel Group Inc. (1991), 67 C.C.C. (3d) 193, 84 D.L.R. (4th) 161 (S.C.C.).

The presumption of innocence applies at all stages of the criminal process and is a factor to be considered in considering whether the accused should be released on bail pending trial: R. v. Lamothe (1990), 58 C.C.C. (3d) 530, 77 C.R. (3d) 236 (Que. C.A.).

Right to fair hearing [s. 11(d)] – The right to a fair hearing does not require that the accused have a full opportunity to cross-examine every witness before the trier of fact. An accused would have a constitutional right to have evidence of prior testimony otherwise admissible under s. 715 of the Criminal Code excluded when it is obtained in the absence of a full opportunity to cross-examine the witness at the prior proceeding. The fact that the accused bears the burden of showing that he did not have an adequate opportunity to cross-examine does not infringe the presumption of innocence as guaranteed by s. 11(d): R. v. Potvin (1989), 47 C.C.C. (3d) 289, [1989] 1 S.C.R. 525, 68 C.R. (3d) 193.

In considering whether any particular rule of criminal procedure infringes the right to a fair hearing, that rule must be considered in the context of the entire process. Thus while the jury selection procedure prescribed by the Criminal Code may in and of itself appear to be unfair or could possibly lead to unfairness, the jury selection process is just one step in the trial and the course of the trial is governed and affected by a large number of rules. It is only an individual rule that is so unfair that it will result in an unfair trial that will be struck down: R. v. Stoddart (1987), 37 C.C.C. (3d) 351, 59 C.R. (3d) 134 (Ont. C.A.).

While the Charter does not in express terms guarantee the accused a right to counsel at trial, such right can be inferred from the provisions of s. 11(d) and s. 7. The duty on a trial judge to ensure that an accused has a fair hearing will generally cast upon the judge an obligation to point out to the accused that he would be at a distinct disadvantage of proceeding without the assistance of competent counsel and that the accused is entitled to have such counsel: R. v. McKibbin (1988), 45 C.C.C. (3d) 334, 31 O.A.C. 10 (C.A.).

In R. v. Vermette (1988), 41 C.C.C. (3d) 523, [1988] 1 S.C.R. 985, 64 C.R. (3d) 82, it was held that a decision by a superior court judge staying proceedings against an accused because of pre-trial publicity following statements by the premier in the National Assembly was premature. It was only at the stage when the jury is to be selected that it would be possible to determine whether the accused could be tried by an impartial jury. There is an initial presumption that a juror will perform his duties in accordance with his oath. In an extreme case pretrial publicity would lead to challenge for cause at the trial but it was not to be assumed that a person subjected to such publicity will necessarily be biased against the accused. Reckless remarks of politicians cannot frustrate the whole judicial process.

This paragraph does not require that a defence such as drunkenness be available for all offences. Thus, it was open to Parliament, in creating the offence of impaired driving, to preclude drunkenness as a defence. The accused's voluntary intoxication provides the guilty mind fundamental to the offence and unavailability of the drunkenness defence does not violate the right to make full answer and defence: R. v. Penno (1990), 59 C.C.C. (3d) 344, [1990] 2 S.C.R. 865, 80 C.R. (3d) 97.

Trial by independent tribunal [s. 11(d)] – Generally speaking, where the alleged contemptuous language or actions are insulting and insolent it is preferable that any contempt proceedings be taken before a judge other than the judge to whom the remarks were addressed: R. v. Martin (1985), 19 C.C.C. (3d) 248, 15 C.R.R. 231 (Ont. C.A.).

Judicial independence involves both individual and institutional relationships. The individual independence of a judge is reflected in such matters as security of tenure, and the institutional independence of the court or tribunal over which he presides is reflected in its institutional or administrative relationship to the executive and legislative branches of government. The test for independence for the purposes of s. 11(d) is whether the tribunal may reasonably be perceived as independent. Both independence and impartiality are fundamental not only to the capacity to do justice in a particular case but also to individual and public confidence in the administration of justice. It is important that a tribunal should be perceived as independent and that the test for independence should include that perception. The perception must however be a perception of whether the tribunal enjoys the essential objective conditions or guarantees of judicial independence, not a perception of how it will in fact act, regardless of whether it enjoys such conditions or guarantees. The standard of judicial independence must necessarily be a standard that reflects what is common to, or at the heart of, various approaches to the essential conditions of judicial independence in Canada and need not be a standard of uniform provisions such as the standard embodied in the Constitution Act 1867 for superior court

To meet the requirements of independence, a tribunal must meet three essential conditions, namely: security of tenure, financial security and institutional independence with respect to matters of administration that relate directly to the exercise of the tribunal's judicial function. With respect to this latter, it is unacceptable that an external force be in a position to interfere in matters which are directly and immediately relevant to the adjudicative function. The accused, in challenging the independence of the tribunal for the purposes of this section, need not prove an actual lack of independence. Rather, the test is whether an informed and reasonable person would perceive the tribunal as independent. The independence of a tribunal is to be determined on the basis of the objective status of that tribunal. This objective status is revealed by an examination of the legislative provisions governing the tribunal's constitutional proceedings, irrespective of the actual good faith of the adjudicator. Practice or tradition is not sufficient to support a finding of independence where the status of the tribunal itself does not support such a finding. While the Charter contemplates a separate system of military law, the system of General Court Martial in force at the time of the accused's trial infringed the principle of independence as guaranteed by this section and, in the absence of exceptional circumstances, could not be upheld as a reasonable limit. Recent amendments to the applicable legislation would, however, probably meet the requirements of this section: R. v. Généreux (1992), 70 C.C.C. (3d) 1 (S.C.C.).

Trial by standing court martial violates the guarantee in this paragraph, at least where the offence is alleged to have been committed in Canada and in the absence of an emergency: R. v. Ingebrigtsen (1990), 61 C.C.C. (3d) 541, 76 D.L.R. (4th) 481, 114 N.R. 381 (C.M.A.C.).

Judicial independence is not related solely to independence from government and includes independence from the parties to the litigation. Judicial independence is a safeguard for judicial impartiality. However, this provision does not prohibit the use of part-time judges who are also practicing lawyers where there are sufficient safeguards in place to ensure institutional impartiality. This provision guarantees that part-time judges will not engage in activities which are incompatible with their duties as a judge: R. v. Lippé (1991), 64 C.C.C. (3d) 513, [1991] 2 S.C.R. 114, 5 C.R.R. (2d) 31.

Reasonable bail [s. 11(e)] – There is just cause to deny bail if two factors are present. The denial of bail must occur only in a narrow set of circumstances, and the denial of bail must be necessary to promote the proper functioning of the bail system and must not be undertaken for any purpose extraneous to the bail system: R. v. Morales (1992), 77 C.C.C. (3d) 91 (S.C.C.); R. v. Pearson (1992), 77 C.C.C. (3d) 124 (S.C.C.).

It was held in Re Global Communications Ltd. and Attorney General of Canada (1984), 10 C.C.C. (3d) 97, 5 D.L.R. (4th) 634, 38 C.R. (3d) 209, 44 O.R. (2d) 609 (C.A.) that the provisions respecting bail pending trial under the Criminal Code should be applied to bail pending extradition. It could not be that under the Charter there are now two different standards by which reasonable bail, and thus what may constitute just cause for its denial, are to be judged.

Right to trial by jury [s. 11(f)] – The intent of s. 11(f) is to guarantee an accused benefit of a jury trial where a jury trial is in fact, from the accused's perspective, a benefit but not to impose it on the accused when it is not. Implicit in this interpretation is the accused's right to waive a jury trial. Moreover, the accused has the right to waive the right to a jury trial notwithstanding that there may be a substantial public interest in a jury trial. In the case of individual constitutional rights an accused cannot be compelled to take advantage of rights intended for his benefit even if such rights may have a public interest aspect. An accused is entitled to weigh the benefit of the s. 11(f) right if it is in his interest to do so. However, waiver of a constitutional right such as s. 11(f) would not create a corresponding right to a trial by judge alone where there is no statutory framework for such trial. There is nothing in s. 11(f) to give the accused a constitutional right to elect their mode of trial or a constitutional right to be tried by judge alone so as to make s. 11(f) inconsistent with a provision of the Criminal Code mandating a jury trial: R. v. Turpin (1989), 48 C.C.C. (3d) 8, [1989] 1 S.C.R. 1296, 69 C.R. (3d) 97.

A provision of the Criminal Code taking away the accused's right to a jury trial where he has failed to appear for court violates s. 11(f). It could not be said that by failing to attend court the accused was thereby waiving his right to a jury trial. While the right to a jury trial is a right capable of being waived the standard necessary to achieve such waiver is high. The waiver must be clear and unequivocal and the accused must be fully aware of the consequences of such waiver. Simply failing to show up for one's trial does not amount to an intentional repudiation of the right to a jury trial. However, the Criminal Code provision was a reasonable limit within the meaning of s. 1 and therefore valid: R. v. Lee (1989), 52 C.C.C. (3d) 289, 73 C.R. (3d) 257, [1990] 1 W.W.R. 289 (S.C.C.).

In R. v. Ruston (1991), 63 C.C.C. (3d) 419 (Man. C.A.) it was held that, to avoid a conflict with this paragraph, s. 561(1) of the Criminal Code must be interpreted so as to give the accused the right to re-elect trial by judge and jury within 15 days of learning of a substantial change in the Crown's case, even though the provision, read literally, requires the consent of the Crown to any re-election which is beyond 15 days following the completion of the preliminary inquiry.

In P.P.G. Industries (Canada) Ltd. v. Canada (Attorney General) (1983), 3 C.C.C. (3d) 97, 146 D.L.R. (3d) 261, 42 B.C.L.R. 334 (C.A.) it was held that a provision of the former Combines Investigation Act removing the right of a corporation to a jury trial did not infringe s. 11(f). That decision appears to have been proved in R. v. Amway Corp. supra.

The requirement in the Criminal Code that an application to have an accused found to be a dangerous offender is to be tried by a judge alone does not infringe s. 11(f). The process by which an offender may be designated dangerous is simply part of the sentencing process and does not constitute the charging of an offence. The phrase "any person charged with an offence" in the opening words of s. 11 must be given a constant meaning that harmonizes with the various paragraphs of the section. It would be quite inappropriate to conclude that a convicted person is charged with an offence when confronted with a dangerous offender application: R. v. Lyons (1987), 37 C.C.C. (3d) 1, [1987] 2 S.C.R. 309, 61 C.R. (3d) 1.

The "defence" of entrapment is an aspect of the abuse of process doctrine and is to be determined by the trial judge and not the jury. This procedure does not infringe s. 11(f) because the guilt or innocence of the accused is not in issue at the time the entrapment claim is to be decided. It is only if the jury finds that an accused committed the offence that the trial judge must then consider whether or not to enter a stay of proceedings on the basis of entrapment: R. v. Mack (1988), 44 C.C.C. (3d) 513, 67 C.R. (3d) 1, [1989] 1 W.W.R. 577 (S.C.C.).

The right to a jury trial as guaranteed by this paragraph is not the right as envisaged at common law or at the time of Confederation, namely a jury composed of 12 men. Thus, s. 644(2) of the Criminal Code, which permits the trial judge to discharge up to two jurors, does not violate this paragraph: R. v. Genest (1990), 61 C.C.C. (3d) 251, [1990] R.J.Q. 2387 (C.A.).

Double jeopardy [section 11(h)] – Section 11(h) is directed at preventing the state from making repeated attempts to convict an individual. It forbids the prosecution of an accused twice for the same offence. In order for it to be operative however there must be two proceedings or trials for the same offence. In R. v. Shubley (1990), 52 C.C.C. (3d) 481, 74 C.R. (3d) 1, 65 D.L.R. (4th) 193 (S.C.C.), it was held that there was no violation of s. 11(h) where the accused was charged with assault although he had previously been subject to prison disciplinary proceedings for the same act. The prison disciplinary proceedings to which the accused was subjected were neither by their very nature criminal proceedings or proceedings involving the imposition of true penal consequences and therefore the accused had not been previously found guilty or punished for an offence within the meaning of s. 11(h).

An offence comes within the purview of s. 11(h) if either the proceedings are, by their very nature, criminal proceedings or if the punishment invoked involves the imposition of true penal consequences. However, even where the two proceedings involve an offence within the meaning of this section it still must be determined whether or not the accused is being tried and punished for the same offence. In this case the accused RCMP officer had been convicted of a major service offence under the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Act as a result of an alleged assault of a prisoner in his custody. The penalty for such an offence is imprisonment for up to one year and it therefore was an offence involving a true penal consequence thus attracting the application of s. 11. However, the accused was not being tried and punished for the same offence when he was charged with assault in the criminal courts. The offences were quite different. One was an internal disciplinary matter. The accused had been found guilty of a major service offence and therefore accounted to his profession. The other offence is the criminal offence of assault. The accused must now account to society at large for his conduct. He cannot complain as a member of a special group of individuals subject to private internal discipline, that he ought not to account to society for his wrongdoing. His conduct has a double aspect as a member of the RCMP and as a member of the public at large. The two offences were two different matters totally separate one from the other and were alternative one to the other. While there was only one act of assault there were two distinct delicts, causes or matters which would sustain separate convictions: R. v. Wigglesworth (1987), 37 C.C.C. (3d) 385, [1987] 2 S.C.R. 541, 45 D.L.R. (4th) 235.

Similarly the accused, a former RCMP officer could not rely on s. 11(h) on the basis of acquittals in the United States of charges arising out of disclosure of confidential information gained when he was involved in a joint investigation with United States officials. The U.S. charges and the Canadian charges, also based on the disclosure, were different because they were based on duties of a different nature. The accused's conduct had a double aspect: first, wrongdoing as a Canadian official with a special duty to the Canadian public and second, wrongdoing as an American official temporarily subject to American law. The accused must now account for his conduct to the Canadian public: R. v. Van Rassel (1990), 53 C.C.C. (3d) 353 (S.C.C.).

Section 11(h) does not preclude the Crown's right to appeal against an acquittal in indictable matters on a question of law alone as provided in the Criminal Code. The word "finally" in this paragraph must be construed to mean after the appellate procedures have been completed: R. v. Morgentaler, Smoling and Scott (1988), 37 C.C.C. (3d) 449, [1988] 1 S.C.R. 30, 62 C.R. (3d) 1.

However, a provision of the Summary Convictions Act (Quebec) giving the Crown a right of appeal by way of trial de novo without the requirement of allegation of any error on the part of the trial judge does offend s. 11(h) and is of no force and effect. The appeal authorized by the Act does not depend on the party appealing having any ground of appeal, it being sufficient if he thinks himself aggrieved by the decision of the trial judge. The hearing takes the form of a trial, the prosecution being entitled to adduce evidence whether or not it was adduced at the first trial. While an accused has not been finally acquitted within the meaning of s. 11(h) until all appeals provided for by law have been exhausted, where the appeal is based on an error by the trial judge, since in such a case there is no real acquittal if the decision rendered was as a result of an error, an appeal by way of de novo is merely a new trial disguised as an appeal. This is precisely the type of abuse that s. 11(h) was sought to prevent. Further, the accused is entitled to rely on s. 11(h) although the original trial took place prior to proclamation of the Charter: Corporation Professionnelle des Médecins du Québec v. Thibault (1988), 42 C.C.C. (3d) 1, [1988] 1 S.C.R. 1033, 63 C.R. (3d) 273.

This section has no application to extradition proceedings. The right protected by s. 11(h) is the right of a person charged with an offence not to be tried for the offence again if he has already been finally acquitted of the offence. An extradition, however, is not a trial, but simply a hearing similar to a preliminary hearing to determine whether there is sufficient evidence to an alleged extradition crime to warrant the government under its treaty obligations to surrender a fugitive to the demanding state for trial in that state. It may be however that some of the interests protected by s. 11 are protected under other Charter provisions such as s. 7: Schmidt v. The Queen (1987), 33 C.C.C. (3d) 193, [1987] 1 S.C.R. 500, 58 C.R. (3d) 1.

Benefit of lesser punishment [s. 11(i)]—The guarantee in this paragraph does not apply to a change in punishment after imposition of sentence but while appellate proceedings are pending: R. v. Luke (1994), 87 C.C.C. (3d) 121, 28 C.R. (4th) 93, 17 O.R. (3d) 51 (C.A.), leave to appeal to S.C.C. refused 92 C.C.C. (3d) vi, 23 C.R.R. (2d) 384n. However, under s. 44(e) of the Interpretation Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. I-21, an accused is entitled to the benefit of lesser penalty or punishment as a result of amendments which are proclaimed in force following sentence but before the appeal has been decided by the court of appeal: R. v. Dunn, [1995] 1 S.C.R. 226, 95 C.C.C. (3d) 289, 35 C.R. (4th) 247.

TREATMENT OR PUNISHMENT.

12. Everyone has the right not to be subjected to any cruel and unusual treatment or punishment.

ANNOTATIONS

The criterion which must be applied in order to determine whether a punishment is cruel and unusual is whether the punishment prescribed is so excessive as to outrage standards of decency. The effect of the punishment must not be grossly disproportionate to what would be appropriate. The section is aimed at punishments that are more than merely excessive and are grossly disproportionate. The determination of whether the punishment is necessary to achieve a valid penal purpose, whether it is founded on recognized sentencing principles, and whether there exist valid alternatives to the punishment imposed are all guidelines which without being determinative in themselves help to assess whether the punishment is grossly disproportionate: Smith v. The Queen (1987), 34 C.C.C. (3d) 97, [1987] 1 S.C.R. 1045, 58 C.R. (3d) 193.

The imposition of indeterminate detention in a penitentiary following a finding under the Criminal Code that the accused is a dangerous offender does not violate this section. This section is concerned with the relation between the effects of and reasons for punishment. The effects of the punishment are to be balanced against the particular circumstances of the offence, the characteristics of the offender and the particular purposes sought to be accomplished in sentencing that person in the manner challenged. If in light of those considerations the punishment is found to be grossly disproportionate, a remedy must be afforded to the accused in the absence of justification under s. 1. However, the dangerous offender provisions apply only to persons convicted of serious personal injury offences, and before the accused can be found to be a dangerous offender it must be established to the satisfaction of the court that the offence for which the accused has been convicted is not an isolated occurrence but part of a pattern of behaviour which has involved violence, aggressive or brutal conduct or failure to control sexual impulses. As well, it must be established that the pattern is very likely to continue. Even then the court has a discretion not to designate the offender as dangerous or to impose an indeterminate sentence. The legislation therefore meets the highest standard of rationality and proportionality that society could reasonably expect of Parliament. Finally, while if the sentence imposed was indeterminate simpliciter it could result in sentences grossly disproportionate to what individual offenders deserved, the availability of parole saves the legislation from being successfully challenged under s. 12 as it ensures that incarceration is imposed for only as long as the circumstances of the individual case require: Lyons v. The Queen (1987), 37 C.C.C. (3d) 1, [1987] 2 S.C.R. 309, 61 C.R. (3d) 1.

However, an indeterminate sentence, which may have been appropriate when it was imposed, may lead to a violation of this section. It is only by a careful consideration and application of the criteria set out in s. 16(1)(a) of the Parole Act that the indeterminate sentence can be made to fit the circumstances of the individual offender and not violate his rights under this section. If it is clear on the face of the record that the Parole Board has misapplied or disregarded those criteria over a period of years with the result that an offender remains incarcerated far beyond the time that he should have been properly paroled, resulting in a length of incarceration which is grossly disproportionate to the circumstances of the offence, then the board's decision may violate s. 12: Steele v. Mountain Institution (1990), 60 C.C.C. (3d) 1, 80 C.R. (3d) 257, [1990] 6 W.W.R. 673 (S.C.C.).

Confinement of an inmate in administrative or protective segregation at a federal penitentiary is not per se cruel and unusual treatment. On the other hand it may become so if it is so excessive as to outrage standards of decency: Olson v. The Queen (1987), 38 C.C.C. (3d) 534, 62 O.R. (2d) 321, 32 O.A.C. 287 (C.A.), aff'd 47 C.C.C. (3d) 491, [1989] 1 S.C.R. 296, 68 O.R. (2d) 256n.

The provisions of the Criminal Code which provide for a minimum sentence of life imprisonment without eligibility for parole for certain types of murders, in particular murder while committing an offence such as kidnapping, do not violate this section. The punishment is not excessive and clearly does not outrage our standards of decency. It is within the purview of Parliament, in order to meet the objectives of a rational system of sentencing, to treat the most serious crime with an appropriate degree of certainty and severity. Moreover, even in such a case, Parliament has been sensitive to the particular circumstances of each offender by providing various mechanisms for earlier parole: R. v. Luxton (1990), 58 C.C.C. (3d) 449 (S.C.C.) (7:0).

There are two aspects to the analysis of alleged invalidity of a statutory minimum penalty. The first aspect involves the assessment of the challenged penalty from the perspective of the person actually subjected to it, balancing the gravity of the offence itself with the particular circumstances of the offence and the personal characteristics of the offender. If it is found that the challenged provision provides for or would actually impose on the offender, a sanction so excessive or grossly disproportionate as to outrage decency in those real and particular circumstances, then it will amount to a prima facie violation of this section and must be justified under s. 1. Even if the particular facts do not warrant a finding of gross disproportionality then the court must also consider reasonable hypothetical circumstances to determine whether the provision will authorize the imposition of cruel or unusual punishment: R. v. Goltz (1991), 67 C.C.C. (3d) 481, 8 C.R. (4th) 82, 61 B.C.L.R. (2d) 145 (S.C.C.).

This section was of no application to the decision of the Minister to extradite a fugitive to the United States where the fugitive faced the death penalty. The decision to surrender a fugitive does not constitute the imposition of cruel and unusual punishment by a Canadian government. The fugitive may, however, be entitled to rely upon s. 7: Kindler v. Canada (Minister of Justice) (1991), 67 C.C.C. (3d) 1, 84 D.L.R. (4th) 438, 8 C.R. (4th) 1, 6 C.R.R. (2d) 193 (S.C.C.).

SELF-CRIMINATION.

13. A witness who testifies in any proceedings has the right not to have any incriminating evidence so given used to incriminate that witness in any other proceedings, except in a prosecution for perjury or for the giving of contradictory evidence.

ANNOTATIONS

A retrial of the same offence or one included therein ordered by a Court of Appeal is an "other proceeding" within the meaning of this section. The purpose of this section when viewed in the context of s. 11(c) and (d) is to protect the individuals from being indirectly compelled to incriminate themselves, to ensure that the Crown will not be able to do indirectly what s. 11(c) prohibits. Further, the right guaranteed by this section inures to an individual at the moment an attempt is made to utilize previous testimony to incriminate him. Therefore, the time at which the previous testimony was given is irrelevant for the purpose of determining who may claim benefit of this section and thus the section would apply notwithstanding that previous testimony had been given prior to proclamation of the Charter. This section unlike s. 5(2) of the Canada Evidence Act does not require any objection on the part of the person giving the testimony, nor does it refer to any compulsion to answer and accordingly would apply to a voluntary witness such as an accused at his own trial. The testimony in question need not have been incriminating at the first proceedings. Rather, the use which the Crown seeks to make of the evidence can only be ascertained at the time of the second proceeding and any evidence the Crown tenders as part of its case against the accused is, for the purpose of s. 13, incriminating. Thus an attempt by the Crown to introduce as part of its case in chief the accused's testimony at the first trial would constitute an incriminating use within the meaning of this section: Dubois v. The Queen (1985), 22 C.C.C. (3d) 513, [1985] 2 S.C.R. 350, 48 C.R. (3d) 193.

The accused's rights as guaranteed by this section were also infringed where she was cross-examined by Crown counsel on testimony that he had given on his prior trial for the same offence after a new trial ordered by the Court of Appeal. The purpose of the cross-examination was to demonstrate a consciousness of guilt on the part of the accused and was clearly used to incriminate him. The evidence was relied upon by the Crown to establish his guilt: R. v. Mannion (1986), 28 C.C.C. (3d) 544, [1986] 2 S.C.R. 272, 53 C.R. (3d) 193.

This section does not prevent cross-examination of an accused on testimony given in another proceeding, where the purpose of the cross-examination is to impeach the accused's credibility and not to incriminate him. In such a case, however, the previous statement may not be used to establish the truth of its contents and the trial judge must so instruct the jury: R. v. Kuldip (1990), 61 C.C.C. (3d) 385, [1990] 3 S.C.R. 618, 1 C.R. (4th) 285 (4:3).

This section is violated by testimony of a police officer that he was able to identify the accused as a result of hearing him testify in another proceeding: R. v. Skinner (1988), 42 C.C.C. (3d) 575 (Ont. C.A.).

A voir dire is another proceeding and thus the accused's testimony on the voir dire is protected from use by the Crown during the trial proper: R. v. Tarafa (1989), 53 C.C.C. (3d) 472, [1990] R.J.Q. 427 (S.C.).

This section does not apply so as to prevent the use, at disciplinary proceedings taken against a nurse, of her testimony at her own criminal trial on a charge of theft: Knutson v. Sask. Registered Nurses' Assn., [1991] 2 W.W.R. 327, 75 D.L.R. (4th) 723 (Sask. C.A.).

This section does not fully define the scope of evidentiary immunity provided to a witness compelled to testify in criminal proceedings against a separately charged co-accused. Section 7 of the Charter provides additional protection to the witness. Thus, derivative evidence which could not have been obtained, or the significance of which could not have been appreciated, but for the testimony of the witness ought generally to be excluded under s. 7 of the Charter at the witness' subsequent trial since its admission would tend to affect the fairness of the trial: R. v. S. (R.J.), [1995] 1 S.C.R. 451, 96 C.C.C. (3d) 1, 36 C.R. (4th) 1.

INTERPRETER.

14. A party or witness in any proceedings who does not understand or speak the language in which the proceedings are conducted or who is deaf has the right to the assistance of an interpreter.

ANNOTATIONS

As a general rule, courts should appoint an interpreter when it becomes apparent to the judge that an accused is, for language reasons, having difficulty expressing himself or understanding the proceedings and that the assistance of an interpreter would be helpful; or the accused or counsel for the accused requests the services of an interpreter and the judge is of the opinion that the request is justified. There is, however, no requirement that the courts inform all accused appearing before them of the existence of the right to interpreter assistance. Where the accused at trial claims the Charter right to an interpreter, assistance should not be denied unless there is cogent and compelling evidence that the accused's request is not made in good faith but rather for an oblique motive. The quality of interpretation must be high under this section but the standard is not one of perfection. The interpretation of the proceedings should be continuous and precise. Summaries of the testimony are unlikely to meet the general standard of interpretation required. The interpretation must be objective and unbiased, although this standard may have to be relaxed where the urgency of the situation may require the use of a person as interpreter who is closely connected to the events. The interpretation must be of a high enough quality to ensure that justice is done and seen to be done. This means that, at minimum, the accused has a right to competent interpretation. An interpreter must at least be sworn by taking the interpreter's oath before beginning to interpret the proceedings. The interpretation must take place contemporaneously with the proceeding in question. In court proceedings, this will usually mean that the interpretation be consecutive (after the words are spoken) rather than simultaneous (at the same time as the words are spoken): R. v. Tran, [1994] 2 S.C.R. 951, 92 C.C.C. (3d) 218, 32 C.R. (4th) 34.

It is not every deficiency from the protected standard of interpretation which will constitute a violation of this section. The accused must establish that the lapse in interpretation which occurred was in respect of the proceedings themselves, thereby involving the vital interests of the accused, and was not merely in respect of some collateral or extrinsic matter, such as an administrative issue relating to scheduling. In determining whether the alleged deviation in interpretation was part of an occurrence which actually served in some way to advance the case and thus involved the accused's vital interests, the court will consider whether there was an unfolding or development in the proceeding with respect to a point of evidence and/or law. The Court is not looking to the effect of the occurrence in question. Since the right to interpreter assistance is not only a fundamental constitutional guarantee in its own right but also an important means of ensuring a full, fair public hearing as protected under ss. 7 and 11(d), it will be more difficult to waive s. 14 Charter rights than may have been the case under the common law and under statutory enactments. In fact, there will be situations where the rights simply cannot, in the greater public interest, be waived. Where waiver of the right to interpreter assistance is possible, the threshold will be very high. The waiver must be clear and unequivocal and must be done with full knowledge of the rights the procedure was enacted to protect and the effect that the waiver will have on those rights. The waiver should be made personally by the accused, if necessary following an inquiry by the court through an interpreter to ensure that the accused truly understands what he is doing, unless counsel for the accused is fluent in the accused's language or has communicated with the accused through an interpreter before coming to court and satisfies the court that the nature of the right and the effect on the right of waiving it has been explained to the accused: R. v. Tran, [1994] 2 S.C.R. 951, 92 C.C.C. (3d) 218, 32 C.R. (4th) 34.

Equality Rights

EQUALITY BEFORE AND UNDER LAW AND EQUAL PROTECTION AND BENEFIT OF LAW / Affirmative action programs.

15. (1) Every individual is equal before and under the law and has the right to the equal protection and equal benefit of the law without discrimination and, in particu- lar, without discrimination based on race, national or ethnic origin, colour, religion, sex, age or mental or physical disability.

(2) Subsection (1) does not preclude any law, program or activity that has as its object the amelioration of conditions of disadvantaged individuals or groups including those that are disadvantaged because of race, national or ethnic origin, colour, religion, sex, age or mental or physical disability.

Note: By s. 32(2) of the Constitution Act, 1982, the above section came into force April 17, 1985.

ANNOTATIONS

Section 15(1) is not a general guarantee of equality; it does not provide for equality between individuals or groups within society in a general or abstract sense, and does not impose on individuals or groups an obligation to accord equal treatment to others. It is concerned with the application of the law. The ideal embodied in the section is that a law expressed to bind all should not, because of irrelevant personal differences, have a more burdensome or less beneficial impact on one than another. It is not every distinction or differentiation in treatment at law which will violate the equality guarantee. In order to govern effectively legislatures must treat different individuals and groups in different ways. To achieve true equality it will frequently be necessary to make distinctions. This section spells out four basic rights which apply to all persons whether citizens or not: the right to equality before the law, the right to equality under the law, the right to equal protection of the law and the right to equal benefit of the law. Its purpose is to ensure equality in the formulation and application of the law and the right to equal benefit of the law. All these four rights are granted with the direction that they be without discrimination. Discrimination exists where a distinction, whether intentional or not but based on grounds relating to personal characteristics of the individual group, has the effect of imposing burdens, obligations or disadvantages not imposed upon others, or withholding or limiting access to opportunities, benefits and advantages available to other members of society. Discrimination under this section is limited to discrimination caused by the application or operation of law. The grounds of discrimination enumerated in this section are not exclusive and both they and other possible grounds of discrimination recognized under this section must be interpreted in a broad and generous manner. At a minimum s. 15(1) extends to grounds of discrimination analogous to the enumerated grounds: Andrews v. Law Society of British Columbia (1989), 56 D.L.R. (4th) 1, [1989] 1 S.C.R. 21, [1989] 2 W.W.R. 289.

Equality before the law at a minimum requires that no individual or group of individuals be treated more harshly than another under that law. However, there will only be a violation of s. 15 if the infringement of a right to equality before the law results in discrimination. Discrimination is a distinction based on grounds relating to personal characteristics of the individual or group which has the effect of imposing burdens, obligations or disadvantages on such individual or group not imposed on others. Finding that discrimination exists will in most cases necessarily entail a search for a disadvantage that exists apart from and independent of the particular legal distinction being challenged. Thus, victims of discrimination will often be members of a discrete and insular minority who come within the protection of s. 15. Provisions of the Criminal Code which formerly give only residents of Alberta the right to elect trial by judge alone on serious offences such as murder do not violate s. 15. It could not be said that persons resident outside Alberta are members of a discrete and insular minority. There is none of the usual indicia of discrimination such as stereotyping, historical disadvantage or vulnerability to political and social prejudice. While it may be that a person's province of residence or place of trial could in some circumstances be a personal characteristic of the individual or group capable of constituting a ground of discrimination, that was not the case with respect to this Criminal Code provision and it is not a fundamental principle under s. 15 that the criminal law apply equally throughout the country: R. v. Turpin (1989), 48 C.C.C. (3d) 8, [1989] 1 S.C.R. 1296, 69 C.R. (3d) 97.

Merely because a statutory provision addresses a group that is defined by reference to a characteristic, such as sex, that is enumerated in subsec. (1) does not automatically lead to an infringement of this section. There must also be a denial of an equality right that results in discrimination. In the context of the criminal law, a distinction based on sex may legitimately be made where, as a matter of biological fact, the offence can be committed by one sex only. Such an offence was former s. 146(1) of the Criminal Code which made it an offence to have sexual intercourse with a girl under the age of 14 years. In view of the Criminal Code definitions, it was clear that only males over 14 years are capable of committing the offence. Whether or not a female who commits a similar offence with a young male should be subject to the same societal disapprobation is a matter for Parliament, not the courts: R. v. Nguyen (1990), 59 C.C.C. (3d) 161, [1990] 2 S.C.R. 906, 79 C.R. (3d) 332 (5:2).

The failure of the provincial Attorney General to implement a programme of alternative measures is not "the law" for the purposes of a challenge under this section, and thus a challenge under s. 15 to the exercise of that discretion given the Attorney General by the legislation [the Young Offenders Act, s. 4] must fail. The non-exercise of discretion cannot be constitutionally attacked simply because it creates differences as between provinces. To find otherwise would potentially open to Charter scrutiny every jurisdictionally permissible exercise of power by a province, solely on the basis that it creates a distinction in how individuals are treated in different provinces: R. v. S.(S.) (1990), 57 C.C.C. (3d) 115, [1990] 2 S.C.R. 254 (7:0).

The word "individual" in this section does not include corporations: R. v. Paul Magder Furs Ltd. (1989), 49 C.C.C. (3d) 267, 69 O.R. (2d) 172, 33 O.A.C. 81 (C.A.), leave to appeal refused 51 C.C.C. (3d) vii, 70 O.R. (2d) x.

Official Languages of Canada

OFFICIAL LANGUAGES OF CANADA / Official languages of New Brunswick / Advancement of status and use.

16. (1) English and French are the official languages of Canada and have equality of status and equal rights and privileges as to their use in all institutions of the Parliament and government of Canada.

(2) English and French are the official languages of New Brunswick and have equality of status and equal rights and privileges as to their use in all institutions of the legislature and government of New Brunswick.

(3) Nothing in this Charter limits the authority of Parliament or a legislature to advance the equality of status or use of English and French.

ENGLISH AND FRENCH LINGUISTIC COMMUNITIES IN NEW BRUNSWICK / Role of the legislature and government of New Brunswick.

16.1 (1) The English linguistic community and the French linguistic community in New Brunswick have equality of status and equal rights and privileges, including the right to distinct educational institutions and such distinct cultural institutions as are necessary for the preservation and promotion of those communities.

(2) The role of the legislature and government of New Brunswick to preserve and promote the status, rights and privileges referred to in subsection (1) is affirmed.

---

PROCEEDINGS OF PARLIAMENT / Proceedings of New Brunswick legislature.

17. (1) Everyone has the right to use English or French in any debates and other proceedings of Parliament.

(2) Everyone has the right to use English or French in any debates and other proceedings of the legislature of New Brunswick.

---

PARLIAMENTARY STATUTES AND RECORDS / New Brunswick statutes and records.

18. (1) The statutes, records and journals of Parliament shall be printed and published in English and French and both language versions are equally authoritative.

(2) The statutes, records and journals of the legislature of New Brunswick shall be printed and published in English and French and both language versions are equally authoritative.

---

PROCEEDINGS IN COURTS ESTABLISHED BY PARLIAMENT / Proceedings in New Brunswick courts.

19. (1) Either English or French may be used by any person in, or in any pleading in or process issuing from, any court established by Parliament.

(2) Either English or French may be used by any person in, or in any pleading in or process issuing from, any court of New Brunswick.

---

COMMUNICATIONS BY PUBLIC WITH FEDERAL INSTITUTIONS / Communications by public with New Brunswick institutions.

20. (1) Any member of the public in Canada has the right to communicate with, and to receive available services from, any head or central office of an institution of the Parliament or government of Canada in English or French, and has the same right with respect to any other office of any such institution where

- (a) there is a significant demand for communications with and services from that office in such language; or
- (b) due to the nature of the office, it is reasonable that communications with and services from that office be available in both English and French.

(2) Any member of the public in New Brunswick has the right to communicate with, and to receive available services from, any office of an institution of the legislature or government of New Brunswick in English or French.

---

CONTINUATION OF EXISTING CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS.

21. Nothing in sections 16 to 20 abrogates or derogates from any right, privilege or obligation with respect to the English and French languages, or either of them, that exists or is continued by virtue of any other provision of the Constitution of Canada.

RIGHTS AND PRIVILEGES PRESERVED.

22. Nothing in sections 16 to 20 abrogates or derogates from any legal or customary right or privilege acquired or enjoyed either before or after the coming into force of this Charter with respect to any language that is not English or French.

Minority Language Educational Rights

LANGUAGE OF INSTRUCTION / Continuity of language instruction / Application where numbers warrant.

23. (1) Citizens of Canada

- (a) whose first language learned and still understood is that of the English or French linguistic minority population of the province in which they reside, or
- (b) who have received their primary school instruction in Canada in English or French and reside in a province where the language in which they received that instruction is the language of the English or French linguistic minority population of the province, have the right to have their children receive primary and secondary school instruction in that language in that province.

(2) Citizens of Canada of whom any child has received or is receiving primary or secondary school instruction in English or French in Canada, have the right to have all their children receive primary and secondary school instruction in the same language.

(3) The right of citizens of Canada under subsections (1) and (2) to have their children receive primary and secondary school instruction in the language of the English or French linguistic minority population of a province

- (a) applies wherever in the province the number of children of citizens who have such a right is sufficient to warrant the provision to them out of public funds of minority language instruction; and
- (b) includes, where the number of those children so warrants, the right to have them receive that instruction in minority language educational facilities provided out of public funds.

Enforcement

ENFORCEMENT OF GUARANTEED RIGHTS AND FREEDOMS / Exclusion of evidence bringing administration of justice into disrepute.

24. (1) Anyone whose rights or freedoms, as guaranteed by this Charter, have been infringed or denied may apply to a court of competent jurisdiction to obtain such remedy as the court considers appropriate and just in the circumstances.

(2) Where, in proceedings under subsection (1), a court concludes that evidence was obtained in a manner that infringed or denied any rights or freedoms guaranteed by this Charter, the evidence shall be excluded if it is established that, having regard to all the circumstances, the admission of it in the proceedings would bring the administration of justice into disrepute.

ANNOTATIONS

Standing – A corporation charged with breach of a federal statute, here the Lords Day Act, has standing to defend the charge on the basis that the Act violates the guarantee to freedom of conscience and religion and is therefore of no force and effect by reason of s. 52 of the Constitution Act 1982. Section 24(1) sets out a remedy for individuals, whether real persons or artificial ones such as corporations, whose rights under the Charter have been infringed. It is not however the only recourse in the face of unconstitutional legislation. Where the challenge is based on the unconstitutionality of the legislation, recourse to s. 24(1) is unnecessary and the particular effect of the challenging party is irrelevant. Whether a corporation can enjoy or exercise freedom of religion was there-

Similarly it was open to a corporation to challenge a provision of a federal statute on the basis that it imposed absolute liability and thus infringed the provisions of s. 7 of the Charter even though a corporation is not entitled to the protection of s. 7. Although a corporation cannot rely upon s. 7 in circumstances such as an application for a declaration that a law is invalid, it cannot be convicted under a law that violates s. 7. Once charged with an offence a corporation is entitled to submit that the legislation under which it is charged is unconstitutional because it infringes the right to life, liberty and security of the human being and thus violates s. 7: R. v. Wholesale Travel Group Inc. (1989), 52 C.C.C. (3d) 9, 73 C.R. (3d) 320, 63 D.L.R. (4th) 325 (C.A.), revd on other grounds 67 C.C.C. (3d) 193, 84 D.L.R. (4th) 161, 4 O.R. (3d) 799n (S.C.C.).

The mere fact that an accused does not have a possessory or proprietary interest in the articles seized as may have been necessary to challenge the validity of a search warrant prior to the proclamation of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, does not mean that the accused in a proper case would not have standing to challenge the validity of a search or seizure. There is an important distinction between an application to quash a search warrant and an accused's objection at his criminal trial to the admissibility of evidence obtained pursuant to such process. The search warrant replaced the property owner's permission to enter premises, which would otherwise be necessary, and, therefore, the only person who could challenge the validity of a search warrant or demand the return of goods seized was a person whose permission to enter the premises and take possession of the goods would otherwise be required. In considering an application to exclude evidence based on an alleged violation of s. 8, the question is whether the accused can assert a right to privacy. Section 8 is directed to the protection of the security of the person, not the protection of his property, and it is the accused's personal exposure to the consequences of search and seizure that gives him the right to challenge, not the search warrant itself, but the admission into evidence at his trial of the fact of the search and the account of what was seized: R. v. Pugliese (1992), 71 C.C.C. (3d) 295 (Ont. C.A.). Also see: R. v. Paolitto (1994), 91 C.C.C. (3d) 75 (Ont. C.A.).

It would seem that the trial judge could exclude evidence as a remedy under subsec. (1) where the evidence was not obtained in violation of the Charter (having been obtained outside Canada by officials who were not acting as agents of any Canadian government) but its admission into evidence would result in the trial being unfair. On the other hand, evidence may be obtained in circumstances that would not meet the rigorous standards of the Charter and yet, if admitted into evidence, would not result in the trial being unfair. Canada cannot impose its procedural requirements on proceedings undertaken by other states in their own territories. Canada is not, however, bound by the law of other countries in conducting trials in Canada and the courts must, in determining whether evidence should be admitted, be guided by our sense of fairness as informed by the underlying principles of the Canadian legal system as it applies to the specific context of the case. It was unnecessary in this case to articulate the test to be applied. Thus, for example, it may be that excluding the evidence only where the manner in which it was obtained shocks the conscience sets the standard too low. What is sought is a fair trial in the specific context and it may be that this requirement cannot be satisfied by the rejection of foreign evidence only in the most egregious circumstances: R. v. Harrer, [1995] 3 S.C.R. 562, 101 C.C.C. (3d) 193, 42 C.R. (4th) 269.

Court of competent jurisdiction – The superior court in Ontario was a court of competent jurisdiction under s. 24(1) for the purpose of considering an application by an inmate in Ontario for a remedy by way of habeas corpus notwithstanding that the facts underlying the application arose out of her trial in another province. The remedy of habeas corpus has traditionally run from the courts of the jurisdiction in which the person seeking review of the legality of her detention is confined: R. v. Gamble (1988), 45 C.C.C. (3d) 204, [1988] 2 S.C.R. 595, 66 C.R. (3d) 193.

A provincial court judge presiding at an accused's preliminary inquiry is not a court of competent jurisdiction for the purpose of an application to stay proceedings for unreasonable delay or for the purpose of excluding evidence on the basis of an alleged infringement of the Charter: Mills v. The Queen (1986), 26 C.C.C. (3d) 481, [1986] 1 S.C.R. 863, 52 C.R. (3d) 1.

While the trial court is, as a general rule, a court of competent jurisdiction, the superior court should also have a constant, complete and concurrent jurisdiction for an application under s. 24(1). The superior court should decline to exercise its discretionary jurisdiction however unless in the opinion of that court and given the nature of the violation or any other circumstances it is more suited than is the trial court to assess and grant a remedy that is just and appropriate. An appropriate case where the superior court would exercise its jurisdiction is where an allegation of unreasonable delay is based on the conduct by the trial court: Rahey v. The Queen (1987), 33 C.C.C. (3d) 289, [1987] 1 S.C.R. 588, 57 C.R. (3d) 289.

Generally speaking, issues, including those with a constitutional dimension, which arise in the context of a criminal prosecution should be raised and resolved within the confines of the established criminal process, rather than by way of an interlocutory application to the superior court. On the other hand, where the circumstances are such that the interests of justice require immediate intervention by the superior court then that jurisdiction can and will be exercised. An issue, however, such as the compellability of a witness [here the common law spouse of the accused] is a matter best left for the trial court which is in the best position to determine issues based on a complete record: R. v. Duvivier (1991), 64 C.C.C. (3d) 20 (Ont. C.A.).

Neither s. 24(1) nor s. 52 of the Constitution Act have enlarged the jurisdiction of the Court of Appeal. In particular, s. 24(1) does not create courts of competent jurisdiction but merely vests additional powers of courts which are already found to be competent independently of the Charter: R. v. Meltzer (1989), 49 C.C.C. (3d) 453, [1989] 1 S.C.R. 1781, 97 N.R. 92; R. v. Heikel (1989), 49 C.C.C. (3d) 462, [1989] 1 S.C.R. 1776, 100 A.R. 396.

The application of s. 24(1) requires an infringement or denial of a Charter-based right. Thus in Borowski v. Canada (Attorney General) 1989, 47 C.C.C. (3d) 1, [1989] 1 S.C.R. 342, 57 D.L.R. (4th) 231, it was held that the plaintiff's claim that the therapeutic abortion provisions of the Criminal Code violated ss. 7 and 15 of the Charter did not meet this requirement as he alleged the rights of a foetus, not his own rights, had been violated.

While there is no general power to award costs in indictable matters, in a proper case, it would be open to a trial judge to award costs against the Crown as a remedy for violation of an accused's Charter rights. Where, however, an application for costs is joined with an application for damages then both issues should be determined in the same action by way of a civil proceeding: R. v. McGillivray (1990), 56 C.C.C. (3d) 304 (N.B.C.A.).

A summary conviction court is a court of competent jurisdiction with the power to award costs against the Crown in a proper case as a remedy for infringing the defendant's Charter rights: R. v. Pang (1994), 95 C.C.C. (3d) 60, 35 C.R. (4th) 371, [1994] 4 W.W.R. 442 (Alta. C.A.).

The National Parole Board is not a court of competent jurisdiction within the meaning of s. 24: Mooring v. Canada (National Parole Board) (1996), 104 C.C.C. (3d) 97, [1996] 3 W.W.R. 305, 192 N.R. 161 (S.C.C.) (5:2).

Procedure – In considering an application to stay proceedings based on undue delay in laying charges thus infringing the accused's right to a fair trial, no particular procedure need be employed. Thus, the parties may be able to agree on a statement of facts or submit evidence by way of affidavit or argue the motion at the end of the Crown's case. However, it was not proper for the trial judge to make findings of fact against the complainants based on credibility when he had not seen them testify and was merely relying upon portions of the transcript of the preliminary inquiry which were drawn to his attention: R. v. L. (W.K.) (1991), 64 C.C.C. (3d) 321, [1991] 4 W.W.R. 385, 6 C.R. (4th) 1 (S.C.C.).

In general, an accused who intends to raise a Charter challenge at trial or any other hearing should give the Crown a reasonable notice of such proceeding. It is preferable that there be a formal notice of motion indicating the nature and grounds of the challenge along with affidavit and other material relied upon in support of the application. In the case of an application under s. 11(b), the transcript of any prior proceedings should be placed before the trial court: R. v. Franklin (1991), 66 C.C.C. (3d) 114, 3 O.R. (3d) 597, 6 C.R. (4th) 73 (C.A.).

A trial judge to whom a motion is made to declare unconstitutional the provisions under which the accused is charged has a discretion whether or not to proceed to hear the motion or reserve the decision until the end of the case. In the exercise of that discretion, the judge should have regard to the two policy considerations favouring disposition of the issue at the end of the case, namely, that criminal proceedings should not be fragmented by interlocutory proceedings and that the adjudication of constitutional issues should be discouraged where there is no factual foundation. On the other hand, the judge did not err in determining the constitutional issue at the beginning of the case where it raised an apparently meritorious challenge which was not dependent on facts to be elicited during the trial: R. v. DeSousa 76 C.C.C. (3d) 124, [1992], 2 S.C.R. 944, 15 C.R. (4th) 66 (5:0).

An objection to the admissibility of evidence, including an objection based on a Charter infringement, should be made before or when the evidence is proffered and not at the end of the Crown's case. In the interests of conducting an orderly trial, the judge is entitled to insist that defence counsel state his position on possible Charter issues either before or at the outset of the trial. Failing timely notice, a trial judge, having taken into account all relevant circumstances, is entitled to refuse an application to assert a Charter remedy. The trial judge would, however, have a discretion to allow counsel to challenge evidence already received and will do so where the interests of justice so warrant. The accused cannot be required to swear an affidavit in support of the application for relief under the Charter: R. v. Kutynec (1992), 70 C.C.C. (3d) 289, 7 O.R. (3d) 277 (C.A.).

Where there has been a violation of s. 14, it was for the court to fashion an appropriate and just remedy tailored to the particular circumstances of the case under this section. Neither s. 686(1)(b)(iii) nor s. 686(1)(b)(iv) of the Criminal Code has any application. As a matter of law, a violation of s. 14 of the Charter precludes application of these curative provisions of the Code. To the extent that a particular Charter violation is more or less serious, prejudicing an accused to a greater or lesser degree, this raises remedial issues which fall to be decided under subsec. (1), not under the Criminal Code: R. v. Tran, [1994] 2 S.C.R. 951, 92 C.C.C. (3d) 218, 32 C.R. (4th) 34.

The trial judge having held that the infringement of the accused's right to counsel should not lead to exclusion of the narcotics found on the accused in the course of an otherwise lawful search erred in refusing the sentence below what would ordinarily be appropriate. The actions of the police were entirely divorced from the commission of the offence and it was inappropriate, in the circumstances of this case, to use the sentence proceedings as an avenue for sending a message to the law enforcement agencies: R. v. Glykis (1995), 100 C.C.C. (3d) 97, 41 C.R. (4th) 310, 24 O.R. (3d) 803 (C.A.). However, compare R. v. MacPherson (1995), 100 C.C.C. (3d) 216, 166 N.B.R. (2d) 81 (C.A.), where the court reduced the accused's sentence for possession of stolen goods because he had not been taken before a justice without unreasonable delay as required by s. 503 of the Criminal Code. Even though the chances that the accused would have been released on bail were negligible, a reduction of the sentence was required to emphasize that violation of the accused's rights under s. 9 was serious.

Exclusion of evidence – The focus of subsection (2) is the effect of the admission of the evidence in the proceedings, the purpose of the subsection being to prevent the administration of justice from being brought into further disrepute by the admission of the evidence. The test to be applied is whether the evidence "could" bring the administration of justice into disrepute in the eyes of a reasonable person, dispassionate and fully apprised of the circumstances of the case. Thus if the admission of the evidence in some way affects the fairness of the trial then the admission of the evidence would tend to bring the administration of justice into disrepute and, subject to considerations of other factors, the evidence generally should be excluded. On the other hand, real evidence that was obtained in a manner that violated the Charter will rarely operate unfairly for that reason alone. Different considerations apply however where after a violation of the Charter the accused is conscripted against himself through a confession or other evidence emanating from him. The use of such evidence would render the trial unfair for it did not exist prior to the violation and it strikes at one of the fundamental tenets of a fair trial, the right against self-incrimination. Another group of factors are those going to the seriousness of the breach such as whether the police acted in good faith and the availability of other investigatory techniques. Finally, the court must consider whether the judicial system's repute will be better served by the admission or the exclusion of the evidence. Thus the administration of justice would be brought into disrepute by the exclusion of evidence essential to substantiate the charge because of a trivial breach of the Charter. The seriousness of the offence is also relevant consideration but its relevancy depends on the nature of the breach. Thus, if the admission of the evidence were to operate unfairly then, the more serious the offence, the more damaging to the system's repute would be an unfair trial. The fact that other remedies are available is an irrelevant consideration: Collins v. The Queen (1987), 33 C.C.C. (3d) 1, [1987] 1 S.C.R. 265, 56 C.R. (3d) 193.

In some cases the harm to the integrity of the judicial system resulting from the excluding of evidence would be so great that exclusion and not admission would bring the administration of justice into disrepute. This would be the case if evidence necessary to substantiate a charge were excluded on the basis of a trivial Charter violation. Evidence as to the finding of narcotics carried by the accused although obtained following a breach of the accused's rights under ss. 8 and 10(b) could not affect the fairness of the trial. The accused was in no way conscripted against herself and the customs officers in searching the accused acted in good faith based on accepted customs procedure. The evidence therefore should be admitted: R. v. Simmons (1988), 45 C.C.C. (3d) 296, [1988] 2 S.C.R. 495, 66 C.R. (3d) 297. Similarly, see R. v. Jacoy (1988), 45 C.C.C. (3d) 46, [1988] 2 S.C.R. 548, [1989] 1 W.W.R. 354.

While the purpose of the rule in s. 24(2) is not to allow an accused to escape conviction, neither should it be interpreted as available only in those circumstances where exclusion of evidence would have no effect at all on the result of the trial. A consideration whether to exclude evidence should not be so closely tied to the ultimate result in a particular case. While the courts must consider the effect on the administration of justice of excluding evidence, that factor alone should not decide a case. Rather in considering whether or not to exclude evidence the court must consider the three groups of factors as set out in Collins v. The Queen, supra. While the purpose of s. 24(2) is not to deter police from unlawful conduct, the court should be reluctant to admit evidence that shows signs of being obtained by an abuse of common law and Charter rights by the police. In this case, although the evidence sought to be excluded was real evidence, it was obtained through serious violations of s. 8 in circumstances that led to the conclusion that the admission of the evidence would bring the administration of justice into disrepute: R. v. Genest (1989), 45 C.C.C. (3d) 385, [1989] 1 S.C.R. 59, 67 C.R. (3d) 224.

In Sieben v. The Queen (1987), 32 C.C.C. (3d) 574, [1987] 1 S.C.R. 295, 38 D.L.R. (4th) 427, narcotics had been found in the accused's dwelling house following execution of a writ of assistance as then permitted under provisions of the Narcotic Control Act. The Crown did not seek to uphold the use of the writ of assistance and therefore the case was to be approached on the basis that the search was unreasonable. The Charter breach was not sufficiently serious that admission of the evidence would bring the administration of justice into disrepute. The officers had reasonable grounds to enter and search the premises and were acting in good faith reliance on powers granted them by a statute which at the time had not been held to be unconstitutional.

Although breathalyzer evidence is statutorily compellable, its admission can affect the fairness of the trial. The scope of available legal advice in this context is necessarily limited, but it is improper to speculate about the nature of the advice that a detainee would have received and whether the evidence would have been obtained had the right not been infringed. The burden is on the Crown to show that the accused would not have acted any differently had his s. 10(b) rights been fully respected and that, accordingly, the evidence would have been obtained irrespective of the breach. There is sufficient scope for legal advice to a detainee who has received a breathalyzer demand to say that the courts must not speculate about the nature of that advice and whether it would have made any difference to the outcome of the case. One of the purposes of s. 10(b) is to provide detainees with an opportunity to make informed choices about their legal rights and obligations. This opportunity is no less significant when breathalyzer charges are involved: R. v. Bartle, [1994] 3 S.C.R. 173, 92 C.C.C. (3d) 289, 33 C.R. (4th) 1.

The requirement under s. 24(2) that evidence was obtained in a manner that infringed or denied any rights or freedoms guaranteed by the Charter is met where it is established that a Charter violation occurred in the course of obtaining the evidence. It is not necessary that there be a strict causal nexus between the Charter violation and the obtaining of the evidence. A temporal link however between infringement of the Charter and the discovery of the evidence will not always be determinative since situations may arise where the obtaining of the evidence, although following a breach of the Charter, will be too remote from the violation to be obtained in a manner that infringed the Charter. In most cases the real issue will be whether the admission of the evidence would bring the administration of justice into disrepute within the meaning of s. 24(2). Section 24(2) is not an automatic exclusionary rule and routine exclusion of evidence necessary to substantiate charges may itself bring the administration of justice into disrepute: R. v. Strachan (1988), 46 C.C.C. (3d) 479, [1988] 2 S.C.R. 980, 67 C.R. (3d) 87.

Even though a search warrant is held to be valid, if the obtaining of the warrant was preceded by an unreasonable warrantless perimeter search, this provision is triggered and the court must consider whether the admission of the evidence would bring the administration of justice into disrepute: R. v. Grant, [1993] 3 S.C.R. 223, 84 C.C.C. (3d) 173, 24 C.R. (4th) 1 (9:0).

Any evidence obtained after violation of the Charter by conscripting the accused against himself through a confession or other evidence emanating from him would tend to render the trial process unfair. While the identity of the accused is not evidence emanating from the accused, identification evidence obtained through a lineup is evidence that cannot be obtained but for the participation of the accused and it is not simply pre-existing real evidence. When participating in a lineup, the accused is participating in the construction of credible inculpatory evidence and where such evidence has been obtained following violation of the right to counsel its admission would tend to render the trial unfair: R. v. Ross (1989), 46 C.C.C. (3d) 129, [1989] 1 S.C.R. 3, 67 C.R. (3d) 209.

In R. v. Black (1989), 50 C.C.C. (3d) 1, [1989] 2 S.C.R. 138, 70 C.R. (3d) 97, evidence had been obtained following a serious violation of the accused's right to counsel. The court however distinguished between real evidence obtained following a violation and self-incriminating evidence and concluded that her confession and her conduct in leading the police to the murder weapon should be excluded since its admission would tend to render the trial unfair. However, the knife itself was a piece of real evidence and should have been admitted as an exhibit.

As a general rule, self-incriminating evidence obtained following violation of s. 10(b) of the Charter is inadmissible because it would adversely affect the fairness of the trial and bring the administration of justice into disrepute. Thus, while bad faith on the part of the police may strengthen the case for exclusion, good faith will not strengthen the case for admission to cure an unfair trial as the result of the admission of self-incriminating evidence. Further, it is not open to the court to admit the evidence on the theory that the accused would probably have confessed in any event. The court cannot speculate as to what the accused might have said or done at the time of his detention had he been advised of his right to counsel or even of his right to remain silent. In considering the factor of urgency or necessity, the focus must be on the necessity or urgency of obtaining the information before advising the accused of his right to counsel and not merely on the necessity to, for example, detain the accused for a short time while investigating the alleged crime: R. v. Elshaw (1991), 67 C.C.C. (3d) 97, 7 C.R. (4th) 333, 59 B.C.L.R. (2d) 143 (S.C.C.) (6:1).

Similar reasoning was applied to exclude incriminating statements made by the accused to a police agent in violation of his rights under s. 7: R. v. Broyles (1991), 68 C.C.C. (3d) 308, [1992] 1 W.W.R. 289, 84 Alta. L.R. (2d) 1 (S.C.C.) (7:0).

The application of subsec. (2) may result in the exclusion of the evidence of a live witness where the evidence would never have been discovered but for that Charter violation: R. v. Goldhart (1995), 42 C.R. (4th) 22, 25 O.R. (3d) 72, 83 O.A.C. 300 (C.A.).

A violation of the sanctity of a person's body is much more serious than search of an office or even a home. Even where a blood sample was taken from an accused by a physician and the police were not directly implicated in the invasion of the accused's body, the dignity of the human being is equally seriously violated when use is made of bodily substances taken by others for medical purposes in a manner that does not respect that limitation. The trust and confidence of the public in the administration of medical facilities would be seriously taxed if an easy and informal flow of information and particularly of bodily substances from hospitals and police were allowed. Such a practice would bring the administration of health services and the administration of justice into disrepute. Accordingly, evidence obtained as a result of the unlawful seizure should be excluded: R. v. Dymont (1988), 45 C.C.C. (3d) 244, [1988] 2 S.C.R. 417, 66 C.R. (3d) 348.

Blood and urine samples initially obtained by hospital staff with the accused's consent for use for medical purposes, without the involvement of the state, were "real evidence" for the purpose of determining whether admission of the results of analysis of the samples would affect the fairness of the trial. The fact that the samples existed independently of the subsequent Charter violations by the authorities was an important consideration favouring admission of the evidence: R. v. Colarusso, [1994] 1 S.C.R. 20, 87 C.C.C. (3d) 193, 26 C.R. (4th) 289.

Notwithstanding the seriousness of the offence with which the accused was charged, importing heroin, the serious nature of the violation of the accused's rights under ss. 8 and 10(a), (b), which formed part of a pattern of disregard of the accused's rights, required exclusion of real evidence, being the discovery of a quantity of heroin following a rectal examination. The accused had not been informed of his right to counsel when subjected to a search by customs officers and had been told that he was arrested on a traffic warrant. The Crown, not having established that the police had reasonable grounds to arrest the accused for a narcotics offence, the rectal examination as an incident to an arrest for outstanding traffic tickets must be viewed as an extremely serious intrusion. In the circumstances, it was imperative that the court, having regard for the long-term consequences of admitting evidence obtained in these circumstances, disassociate itself from the conduct of the police. The administration of justice would be brought into greater disrepute if the court were to condone the practice of using an arrest for traffic warrants as an artifice to conduct a rectal examination of a person whom the police do not have reasonable and probable grounds to believe is carrying drugs: R. v. Greffe (1990), 55 C.C.C. (3d) 161, 75 C.R. (3d) 257, [1990] 1 S.C.R. 755 (4:3).

In R. v. Kokesch (1990), 61 C.C.C. (3d) 207, 1 C.R. (4th) 62, [1991] 1 W.W.R. 193 (S.C.C.) (4:3) the court excluded evidence obtained by execution of a Narcotic Control Act search warrant at the accused's home. The evidence to obtain the warrant was based on information gathered by a police officer through a warrantless "perimeter search" of the accused's home at a time when the officer merely had a suspicion that the accused was cultivating marijuana on the premises. This was an extremely serious violation of the Charter. The lack of availability of other investigative means was not a mitigating factor. To the contrary, where the police have nothing but suspicion and no legal way to obtain other evidence then they must leave the suspect alone and not proceed to obtain evidence illegally. The illegal intrusion onto the accused's property must be seen as far from trivial and a search conducted in the knowledge that legal search powers are unavailable is not capable of being characterized as demonstrating good faith. The officer either knew or ought to have known that he was trespassing. In either case, this was not good faith. Notwithstanding that the marijuana seized was real evidence whose admission would not affect the fairness of the trial, the evidence must be excluded. The administration of justice would suffer far greater disrepute from its admission than its exclusion. The court must not be seen to condone deliberate unlawful conduct designed to subvert both the legal and constitutional limits of police power to intrude on individual privacy.

In R. v. Mellenthin (1992), 76 C.C.C. (3d) 481, [1992] 3 S.C.R. 615, 16 C.R. (4th) 273, it was held that the accused's rights under s. 8 were violated when, after he was stopped at a police check stop, the accused was questioned by the officer about the contents of a bag in the car and as a result the accused produced the bag which was found to contain narcotics. When he questioned the accused, the officer did not have any suspicion that the accused was in possession of contraband. The check stop is justified as a means of detecting impaired drivers or dangerous vehicles but not as a means to conduct an unfounded general inquisition or an unreasonable search. In the circumstances, it could be assumed that the accused felt compelled to respond to the police questions and it was not shown that any search was as a result of an informed consent. Further, it would affect the fairness of the trial to permit the Crown to introduce "real evidence" which could not have been discovered without the compelled assistance of the accused.

In R. v. Grant, supra, the court held that an important factor in the decision not to exclude the evidence was the fact that the police were acting in good faith reliance upon a provision of a statute which authorized a warrantless search and which had not been struck down in the particular province. Also of significance was that the narcotics offences were serious and exclusion of the evidence would render a conviction an impossibility.

An accused has standing to raise the violation of s. 8 of the Charter by reason of a consent interception between an alleged co-conspirator and an undercover police officer. The accused was entitled to have the evidence of this communication excluded pursuant to s. 24(2) of the Charter if to admit the evidence would bring the administration of justice into disrepute: R. v. Montoute (1991), 62 C.C.C. (3d) 481, 113 A.R. 95 (C.A.).

Evidence which has been ruled inadmissible at one stage in a trial pursuant to subsec. (2) may be admitted at another point in the trial only if there has been a material change in circumstances. It will only be in very limited circumstances that a change in use of the evidence will qualify as a material change of circumstances that would warrant the reopening of the issue once evidence has been excluded under this subsection. The admission of statements obtained from the accused in breach of the Charter generally turns on the effect of its admission on the fairness of the trial. The effect on the repute of the administration of justice is to be assessed by reference to the standard of the reasonably well informed citizen who represents community values. The effect of destroying the credibility of an accused who takes the stand in his defence, using evidence obtained from the mouth of the accused in breach of his Charter rights, will usually have the same effect as use of the same evidence when adduced by the Crown in its case-in-chief for the purpose of incrimination. A jury instruction as to the limited use of the evidence does not mean that the admission of the evidence will have a less detrimental effect on the case of the accused. If use of the statement is deemed to be unfair by reason of having been obtained in breach of an accused's Charter rights, it is not likely to be seen to be less unfair because it was only used to destroy credibility. Where the Crown seeks to use the excluded statement for a restricting purpose, a ruling may be obtained either during its case or before cross-examining the accused in a voir dire: R. v. Calder (unreported, March 21, 1996, S.C.C.) [096/085/065-35 pp.].

Although the burden of establishing a violation of a Charter right is upon the accused, this does not mean that the accused must formally prove every single fact upon which the claim of a violation is based, including one which is not in dispute between the parties and is or should be common knowledge amongst members of the criminal bar and those on the bench. For example, the existence of duty counsel services in the province was not a matter which required independent proof by the accused. Duty counsel and legal aid services are an intrinsic part of the practice of criminal law in this country and courts are entitled to take judicial notice of the broad parameters of these services, such as their existence and how they are generally accessed: R. v. Cobham, [1994] 3 S.C.R. 360, 92 C.C.C. (3d) 333, 33 C.R. (4th) 73.

General

ABORIGINAL RIGHTS AND FREEDOMS NOT AFFECTED BY CHARTER.

25. The guarantee in this Charter of certain rights and freedoms shall not be construed so as to abrogate or derogate from any aboriginal, treaty or other rights or freedoms that pertain to the aboriginal peoples of Canada including

- (a) any rights or freedoms that have been recognized by the Royal Proclamation of October 7, 1763; and
- (b) any rights or freedoms that now exist by way of land claims agreements or may be so acquired. SI/84-102, Sch.

OTHER RIGHTS AND FREEDOMS NOT AFFECTED BY CHARTER.

26. The guarantee in this Charter of certain rights and freedoms shall not be construed as denying the existence of any other rights or freedoms that exist in Canada.

MULTICULTURAL HERITAGE.

27. This Charter shall be interpreted in a manner consistent with the preservation and enhancement of the multicultural heritage of Canadians.

ANNOTATIONS

In considering whether the hate literature provisions of s. 319(2) of the Criminal Code constituted a reasonable limit on freedom of expression, the court took into account the commitment to a multicultural vision. The principle of non-discrimination and the need to prevent attacks on the individual's connection with his or her culture, and, hence, upon the process of self-development, are recognized by s. 27: R. v. Keegstra (unreported, December 13, 1990, S.C.C. (4:3)) [090 352 004 - 229 pp.].

RIGHTS GUARANTEED EQUALLY TO BOTH SEXES.

28. Notwithstanding anything in this Charter, the rights and freedoms referred to in it are guaranteed equally to male and female persons.

ANNOTATIONS

The guarantee in this provision does not prevent Parliament from creating an offence that, as a matter of biological fact, can only be committed by one sex. The importance of this provision lies in the fact that it is not open to the legislature to deny an accused, who is charged with such an offence, rights and freedoms guaranteed to all persons under the Charter. A person cannot receive less protection under the Charter on account of his or her sex: R. v. Nguyen (1990), 59 C.C.C. (3d) 161, [1990] 6 W.W.R. 289 (S.C.C.) (5:2).

RIGHTS RESPECTING CERTAIN SCHOOLS PRESERVED.

29. Nothing in this Charter abrogates or derogates from any rights or privileges guaranteed by or under the Constitution of Canada in respect of denominational, separate or dissentient schools.

APPLICATION TO TERRITORIES AND TERRITORIAL AUTHORITIES.

30. A reference in this Charter to a province or to the legislative assembly or legislature of a province shall be deemed to include a reference to the Yukon Territory and the Northwest Territories, or to the appropriate legislative authority thereof, as the case may be.

---

LEGISLATIVE POWERS NOT EXTENDED.

31. Nothing in this Charter extends the legislative powers of any body or authority.

---

Application of Charter

---

APPLICATION OF CHARTER / Exception.

32. (1) This Charter applies

- (a) to the Parliament and government of Canada in respect of all matters within the authority of Parliament including all matters relating to the Yukon Territory and Northwest Territories; and
- (b) to the legislature and government of each province in respect of all matters within the authority of the legislature of each province.

(2) Notwithstanding subsection (1), section 15 shall not have effect until three years after this section comes into force.

---

ANNOTATIONS

In R. v. Herrer, [1995] 3 S.C.R. 562, 101 C.C.C. (3d) 193, 42 C.R. (4th) 269, the court left open the question of whether the Charter could have extraterritorial application. The court did point out that automatic exclusion of Charter application outside Canada might unduly restrict the protection Canadians have a right to expect against the interference with their rights by the Canadian governments or their agents. In this case, however, the United States authorities were not acting on behalf of any of the governments of Canada, the provinces or the territories, the state actors to which, by virtue of this section the application of the Charter is confined. The Charter thus had no direct application to the interrogations in the United States. Accordingly, the rights flowing from s. 10(b) of the Charter to persons arrested or detained had no application. In those circumstances, the application of the Charter could only be triggered when the Canadian police began proceedings against the accused on her return to Canada. Since the accused did not complain of any improper police action in Canada, the only grounds available to her were that the admission of the evidence would violate the accused's liberty interests in a manner that was not in accordance with the principles of fundamental justice of the Charter or would violate the guarantee of a fair trial. Concepts of fairness and principles of fundamental justice involve a delicate balancing to achieve a just accommodation between the interests of the individual and those of the state in providing a fair and workable system of justice.

OFFENCE GRID

This grid covers offences under the Criminal Code, the Food and Drugs Act, and the Narcotic Control Act. It shows:

- whether an offence is indictable, summary, or hybrid,
- whether an offence is absolute jurisdiction,
- the maximum and minimum sentence,
- available sentencing options,
- illegal sentences,
- orders that you may wish to consider or that are mandatory,
- and more.

CAUTION: The applicability of remarks in the comments column depends upon the circumstances of a particular case. Thus, for example, where the comment “S. 491 mandatory weapon forfeiture order” appears, the order is mandatory only if the requirements of s. 491 are met. Likewise, where the comment “S. 100(1) mandatory firearms order” appears, the order is mandatory only if the requirements of s. 100(1) are met.

FORMS OF CHARGES

INTRODUCTORY NOTE

The Appendix contains a collection of suggested forms of charges pursuant to Form 2 of the Criminal Code for the offences most commonly encountered by police officers. It is suggested that the Crown Attorney or his appropriate counterpart be consulted in the case of offences not included in these pages, and in all cases where the facts are complicated.

The charges are arranged under the sections of the Code to which they relate, in numerical sequence. If the particular section number is not known, it can be readily found by reference to the Index preceding these pages. The section numbers of the Code and the subject-matter of each charge are printed in bold face type.

The use of square brackets and italic type should be explained. Square brackets are used either to set out editorial instructions, which are in all cases printed in italics, or to indicate alternate words or phrases which are printed in ordinary type. See, for example, the first form of charge for an offence under s. 57(1)(a), the opening charge, in which the editorial instruction "specify the forged passport" is printed in italics within square brackets, and the charge under s. 81(1)(a) in which the alternate words "was likely to cause serious damage to property" are printed in ordinary type within square brackets preceded by the word "or" which is printed in italics to indicate that it is not part of the charge. Round brackets within square brackets indicate an alternative within the alternative (see, for example, the charge under s. 81(1)(b)(ii)).

It will be noted that every charge ends with the word "contrary etc.". This phrase has been used to avoid needless repetition, but the actual charge should state the section of the Code under which it is laid, e.g., ". . . contrary to section 81(1)(a) of the Criminal Code".

CONSEQUENTIAL AMENDMENTS

Due to consequential amendments, the following sections read as follows:

Section 743.5

743.5 (1) Where a person is sentenced for an offence while subject to a disposition made under paragraph 20(1)(f), (k) or (k.1) of the Young Offenders Act, on the application of the Attorney General or the Attorney General's agent, a court of criminal jurisdiction may, unless to so order would bring the administration of justice into disrepute, order that the remaining portion of the disposition made under that Act be dealt with, for all purposes under this Act or any other Act of Parliament, as if it had been a sentence imposed under this Act.

(2) Where an order is made under subsection (1), in respect of a disposition made under paragraph 20(1)(k) or (k.1) of the Young Offenders Act, the remaining portion of the disposition to be served pursuant to the order shall be served concurrently with the sentence referred to in subsection (1), where it is a term of imprisonment, unless the court making the order orders that it be served consecutively.

(3) For greater certainty, the remaining portion of the disposition referred to in subsection (2) shall, for the purposes of section 139 of the Corrections and Conditional Release Act and section 743.1 of this Act, be deemed to constitute one sentence of imprisonment.

PERSONS UNDER EIGHTEEN

745.1 The sentence to be pronounced against a person who was under the age of eighteen at the time of the commission of the offence for which the person was convicted of first degree murder or second degree murder and who is to be sentenced to imprisonment for life shall be that the person be sentenced to imprisonment for life without eligibility for parole until the person has served

- (a) such a period between five and seven years of the sentence as specified by the judge presiding at the trial, or if no period is specified by the judge presiding at the trial, five years, in the case of a person who was under the age of sixteen at the time of the commission of the offence;
- (b) ten years, in the case of a person convicted of first degree murder who was sixteen or seventeen years of age at the time of the commission of the offence; and
- (c) seven years, in the case of a person convicted of second degree murder who was sixteen or seventeen years of age at the time of the commission of the offence.

---

Section 745.3

PERSONS UNDER SIXTEEN

745.3 Where a jury finds an accused guilty of first degree murder or second degree murder and the accused was under the age of sixteen at the time of the commission of the offence, the judge presiding at the trial shall, before discharging the jury, put to them the following question:

You have found the accused guilty of first degree murder (or second degree murder) and the law requires that I now pronounce a sentence of imprisonment for life against the accused. Do you wish to make any recommendation with respect to the period of imprisonment that the accused must serve before the accused is eligible for release on parole? You are not required to make any recommendation but if you do, your recommendation will be considered by me when I am determining the period of imprisonment that is between five years and seven years that the law would require the accused to serve before the accused is eligible to be considered for release on parole.

IDEM

745.5 At the time of the sentencing under section 745.1 of an offender who is convicted of first degree murder or second degree murder and who was under the age of sixteen at the time of the commission of the offence, the judge who presided at the trial of the offender or, if that judge is unable to do so, any judge of the same court, may, having regard to the age and character of the offender, the nature of the offence and the circumstances surrounding its commission, and to the recommendation, if any, made pursuant to section 745.3, by order, decide the period of imprisonment the offender is to serve that is between five years and seven years without eligibility for parole, as the judge deems fit in the circumstances.

---

Section 746

TIME SPENT IN CUSTODY

746. In calculating the term of imprisonment served for the purposes of section 745, 745.1, 745.4, 745.5 or 745.6, there shall be included any time spent in custody between

- (a) in the case of a sentence of imprisonment for life after July 25, 1976, the day on which the person was arrested and taken into custody in respect of an offence for which that person was sentenced to imprisonment for life and the day the sentence was imposed; or
- (b) in the case of a sentence of death that has been or is deemed to have been commuted to a sentence of imprisonment for life, the day on which the person was arrested and taken into custody in respect of the offence for which that person was sentenced to death and the day the sentence was commuted or deemed to have been commuted to a sentence of imprisonment for life.

Full analysis of the new, Controlled Drugs and Substances Act

Bruce MacFarlane, Robert Frater, Chantal Proulx

This completely revised edition of Drug Offences in Canada examines the new Controlled Drugs and Substances Act, which replaces the Narcotic Control Act and parts of the Food and Drugs Act.

The new Act has increased Parliament's reach into this area of law by enacting new provisions in several areas including: proceeds of crime; police reverse sting operations; seizure and disposition of "offence-related property"; provisions dealing with so called "designer drugs"; significant changes to the sentencing provisions and increased use of the summary conviction option in cases of trafficking. Plus, areas of the law important in drug prosecutions, covered under the Criminal Code are comprehensively analyzed, including electronic surveillance and conspiracy law.

The third edition reflects all the new changes:

- New chapters on Proceeds of Crime,

Offence-Related Property and Police Reverse Sting Operations

- Analysis of important legislative developments, including the Controlled Drugs and Substances Act, the Seized Property Management Act, the Proceeds of Crime (Money Laundering) Act
- Updated and expanded commentary and analysis, including increased reference to helpful foreign law, in areas such as search and seizure, police informants and principles of sentencing
- A Table of Statutes
- Table of Concordance for the Controlled Drugs and Substances Act, the Narcotic Control Act and the Food and Drugs Act.

Published in looseleaf format, the third edition will accommodate updating releases containing new developments in the law.

CONTROLLED DRUGS AND SUBSTANCES ACT

1996, Chap. 19, ss. 1 to 60 (to come into force by order of the Governor in Council) (but see ss. 61 to 63). The Act, which is not yet in force, is printed in lightface italics.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Controlled Drugs and Substances Act creates a new scheme for the regulation of certain dangerous drugs and narcotics, now known as "controlled substances". In effect, the Act replaces the Narcotic Control Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. N-1 and Part III [Controlled Drugs] and Part IV [Restricted Drugs] of the Food and Drugs Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. F-27. The essential scheme of the legislation is similar to the former Narcotic Control Act and the Food and Drugs Act.

Schedules – An important part of the legislation is the schedules to the Act: Schedule I - includes the most dangerous drugs and narcotics, such as phencyclidine, heroin and cocaine. Schedule II - lists cannabis and its derivatives. Schedule III - includes many of the more dangerous drugs which previously were included in schedules G and H to the Food and Drugs Act, such as the amphetamines and lysergic acid diethylamide (LSD). Schedule IV - includes many of the drugs formerly included in Schedule G to the Food and Drugs Act. These drugs, such as the barbiturates, while dangerous, have therapeutic uses. As was the case under Part III of the Food and Drugs Act, simple possession of Schedule IV drugs is not an offence.

Possession – Under s. 4(1), simple possession of any of the drugs and narcotics listed in Schedules I, II and III of the Controlled Drugs and Substances Act is an offence unless the person is authorized to be in possession by the regulations. The offence under s. 4(1) is a Crown option offence. The penalty for breach of s. 4(1) depends upon the Schedule in which the substance is included. In addition, a special penalty scheme has been included for possession of small quantities of Schedule II [cannabis] offences. Where the subject matter of the offence is a Schedule II substance in an amount that does not exceed the amount set out in Schedule VIII, then the accused is guilty only of a summary conviction offence and the maximum penalty is a $1,000 fine and/or six months' jail. Further, even where the amounts exceed the Schedule VIII amounts and the Crown proceeds by indictment, the offence is within the absolute jurisdiction of the provincial court where the substance is listed in Schedule II,

"Double-doctoring" – Under s. 4(2), it is an offence to seek or obtain any of the scheduled substances from a practitioner, such as a physician, without disclosing particulars relating to the acquisition of any of the scheduled substances within the preceding 30 days. This is the so-called "double-doctoring" offence which was found in both the Food and Drugs Act and the Narcotic Control Act. Again, this is a Crown option offence. The maximum penalty for the offence where the Crown proceeds by indictment depends upon the schedule in which the substance is found. If the Crown proceeds by way of summary conviction, then the penalty is the same irrespective of the schedule.

Trafficking – Under s. 5(1), it is an offence to traffic in any of the scheduled substances and under s. 5(2) it is an offence to be in possession for the purpose of trafficking. The definition of "traffic", which of course includes sell, when combined with the definition of "sell" is very broad and covers virtually the same activity as was prohibited under the predecessor legislation. These definitions are found in s. 2. The penalty and classification of the offence depend upon the schedule in which the substance is found. For the Schedule I and II substances, it is a pure indictable offence with a maximum punishment of life imprisonment, except where the offence relates to trafficking in smaller amounts of the Schedule II (cannabis) substance. Under s. 5(4), where the amount of the Schedule II substance does not exceed the amount listed in Schedule VII, the maximum penalty is five years less one day. This offence is also listed in s. 553(c) of the Criminal Code and thus is within the absolute jurisdiction of the provincial court. For the Schedule III and IV offences, the offence is a Crown-option offence with lesser maximum punishments.

Importing – Section 6 creates the importing offence for substances included in Schedules I to VI. Schedules V and VI list chemicals which can be employed in the manufacture of substances listed in the earlier Schedule. Where the substance is listed in Schedules I and II, the offence is indictable and punishable by life imprisonment. Where the substance is listed in the other schedules, the offence is a Crown-option offence with the maximum penalty depending upon the schedule in which the substance is found.

Production – Section 7 prohibits the production of any of the substances in Schedules I to IV except as authorized by regulations. The term “produce” is defined in s. 2 and includes manufacture and cultivation. For Schedule I and II substances, the offence is indictable with a maximum punishment of life imprisonment unless the substance is marihuana in which case the maximum is seven years. Where the substance is listed in Schedule III or IV, the offence is Crown-option with lesser maximum punishments.

Proceeds of Crime – Sections 8 and 9 recreate the proceeds of crime and money-laundering offences in terms similar to the former provisions of the Narcotic Control Act and the Food and Drugs Act.

Sentencing – Section 10 sets out the principles of sentencing and includes a list of aggravating circumstances such as that the accused used a weapon in relation to the commission of the offence or committed the trafficking offence near a school. Where one of these aggravating circumstances exists but the judge does not impose a prison term, the judge is required to give reasons for that decision.

Search and Seizure – Sections 11 to 13 set out the powers of search and seizure in respect of offences under this Act. The terms are similar to those found in the Criminal Code. In addition, special provision is made in s. 11(7) for a warrantless search in exigent circumstances.

Restraint and Forfeiture – Sections 14 to 23 deal with restraint orders and forfeiture orders in terms similar to Part XII.2 of the Criminal Code. This is a departure from the scheme under the Narcotic Control Act and the Food and Drugs Act which had simply adopted the provisions of Part XII.2 with the necessary modifications. A significant difference between the procedure under this Act and the procedure under the Criminal Code is that the Attorney General is not required to give an undertaking as to damages and costs when seeking a restraint order under the Act.

Disposal of seized substances – Part III of the Act deals with the disposal of substances seized or found by a peace officer or inspector. Part IV sets out the scheme for appointment of inspectors and the administrative enforcement of the Act and regulations in terms similar to Part II of the Food and Drugs Act. Part V sets out a special scheme for enforcement of “designated regulations”. Under this Part, the Minister may make an emergency order where there is a substantial risk of immediate danger to the health or safety of any person.

Miscellaneous – Part VI contains a number of miscellaneous provisions. Most important are those relating to the admissibility of certificates of analysis [ss. 51 and 52], continuity of exhibits [s. 53], admissibility of copies of records seized under the Act or regulations [s. 54], and the limitation period of one year where the Crown proceeds by way of summary conviction [s. 47]. Under s. 48, the evidentiary burden is initially upon the accused to show that any certificate, licence, permit or other qualification operates in the accused's favour. Section 55 gives the Governor in Council wide regulation-making powers.

Section 60 permits the Governor in Council to add or delete items from any of the Schedules. An important innovation in this Act is the concept of "analogue" defined in s. 2 as a substance that, in relation to a controlled substance, has "a substantially similar chemical structure". Thus, for example, Schedule III lists amphetamines, their salts, derivatives, isomers and "analogues". This concept was apparently added to attempt to deal with the problem of chemists manufacturing drugs with a slightly different chemical structure than those actually listed in the schedule. Previously, the government would have been required to amend the schedules to prohibit or regulate the trafficking or production of such substances.

"Controlled substance" – It should also be noted that s. 2(2)(b) provides that a reference to a "controlled substance" includes a reference to all synthetic and natural forms of the substances. This specifically meets an argument which had been made under the former Narcotic Control Act that certain synthetic forms of narcotics were not covered by the Act.

  - (ii) is guilty of an offence punishable on summary conviction and liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding one year.

POSSESSION OF PROPERTY OBTAINED BY CERTAIN OFFENCES / Punishment.

8.(1) No person shall possess any property or any proceeds of any property knowing that all or part of the property or proceeds was obtained or derived directly or indirectly as a result of

- (a) the commission in Canada of an offence under this Part except subsection 4(1) and this subsection;
- (b) an act or omission anywhere that, if it had occurred in Canada, would have constituted an offence referred to in paragraph (a); or
- (c) a conspiracy or an attempt to commit, being an accessory after the fact in relation to, or any counselling in relation to, an offence referred to in paragraph (a) or an act or omission referred to in paragraph (b).

(2) Every person who contravenes subsection (1)

- (a) is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years, where the value of the property or the proceeds exceeds one thousand dollars; or
- (b) is guilty
  - (i) of an indictable offence and liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, or
  - (ii) of an offence punishable on summary conviction and liable to a fine not exceeding two thousand dollars or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, or to both, where the value of the property or the proceeds does not exceed one thousand dollars.

LAUNDERING PROCEEDS OF CERTAIN OFFENCES / Punishment.

9.(1) No person shall use, transfer the possession of, send or deliver to any person or place, transport, transmit, alter, dispose of or otherwise deal with, in any manner or by any means, any property or any proceeds of any property with intent to conceal or convert that property or those proceeds and knowing that all or part of that property or those proceeds was obtained by or derived directly or indirectly as a result of

- (a) the commission in Canada of an offence under this Part except subsection 4(1);
- (b) an act or omission anywhere that, if it had occurred in Canada, would have constituted an offence referred to in paragraph (a); or
- (c) a conspiracy or an attempt to commit, being an accessory after the fact in relation to, or any counselling in relation to, an offence referred to in paragraph (a) or an act or omission referred to in paragraph (b).

(2) Every person who contravenes subsection (1)

- (a) is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years; or
- (b) is guilty of an offence punishable on summary conviction and liable to a fine not exceeding two thousand dollars or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, or to both.

Sentencing

PURPOSE OF SENTENCING / Factors to be considered / Reasons of court.

10 (1) Without restricting the generality of the Criminal Code, the fundamental purpose of any sentence for an offence under this Part is to contribute to the respect for the law and the maintenance of a just, peaceful and safe society while encouraging rehabilitation, and treatment in appropriate circumstances, of offenders and acknowledging the harm done to victims and to the community.

(2) Where a person is convicted of a designated substance offence, the court imposing sentence on the person shall consider as an aggravating factor that the person

- (a) in relation to the commission of the offence,
  - (i) carried, used or threatened to use a weapon,
  - (ii) used or threatened to use violence,
  - (iii) trafficked in a substance included in Schedule I, II, III or IV or possessed such a substance for the purpose of trafficking, in or near a school, on or near school grounds or in or near any other public place usually frequented by persons under the age of eighteen years, or
  - (iv) trafficked in a substance included in Schedule I, II, III or IV, or possessed such a substance for the purpose of trafficking, to a person under the age of eighteen years;
- (b) was previously convicted of a designated substance offence; or
- (c) used the services of a person under the age of eighteen years to commit, or involved such a person in the commission of, a designated substance offence.

(3) Where, pursuant to subsection (1), the court is satisfied of the existence of one or more of the aggravating factors enumerated in that subsection, but decides not to sentence the person to imprisonment, the court shall give reasons for that decision.

Part II/ENFORCEMENT

Search, Seizure and Detention

INFORMATION FOR SEARCH WARRANT / Application of section 487.1 of the Criminal Code / Execution in another province / Effect of endorsement / Search of person and seizure / Seizure of things not specified / Where warrant not necessary / Seizure of additional things.

11 (1) A justice who, on ex parte application, is satisfied by information on oath that there are reasonable grounds to believe that

- (a) a controlled substance or precursor in respect of which this Act has been contravened,
- (b) any thing in which a controlled substance or precursor referred to in paragraph (a) is contained or concealed,
- (c) offence-related property, or
- (d) any thing that will afford evidence in respect of an offence under this Act is in a place may, at any time, issue a warrant authorizing a peace officer, at any time, to search the place for any such controlled substance, precursor, property or thing and to seize it.

(2) For the purposes of subsection (1), an information may be submitted by telephone or other means of telecommunication in accordance with section 487.1 of the Criminal Code, with such modifications as the circumstances require.

(3) A justice may, where a place referred to in subsection (1) is in a province other than that in which the justice has jurisdiction, issue the warrant referred to in that subsection and the warrant may be executed in the other province after it has been endorsed by a justice having jurisdiction in that other province.

(4) An endorsement that is made on a warrant as provided for in subsection (3) is sufficient authority to any peace officer to whom it was originally directed and to all peace officers within the jurisdiction of the justice by whom it is endorsed to execute the warrant and to deal with the things seized in accordance with the law.

(5) Where a peace officer who executes a warrant issued under subsection (1) has reasonable grounds to believe that any person found in the place set out in the warrant has on their person any controlled substance, precursor, property or thing set out in the warrant, the peace officer may search the person for the controlled substance, precursor, property or thing and seize it.

(6) A peace officer who executes a warrant issued under subsection (1) may seize, in addition to the things mentioned in the warrant,

- (a) any controlled substance or precursor in respect of which the peace officer believes on reasonable grounds that this Act has been contravened;*
- (b) any thing that the peace officer believes on reasonable grounds to contain or conceal a controlled substance or precursor referred to in paragraph (a);*
- (c) any thing that the peace officer believes on reasonable grounds is offence-related property; or* (d) any thing that the peace officer believes on reasonable grounds will afford evidence in respect of an offence under this Act.

(7) A peace officer may exercise any of the powers described in subsection (1), (5) or (6) without a warrant if the conditions for obtaining a warrant exist but by reason of exigent circumstances it would be impracticable to obtain one.

(8) A peace officer who executes a warrant issued under subsection (1) or exercises powers under subsection (5) or (7) may seize, in addition to the things mentioned in the warrant and in subsection (6), any thing that the peace officer believes on reasonable grounds has been obtained by or used in the commission of an offence or that will afford evidence in respect of an offence.

ASSISTANCE AND USE OF FORCE.

12. For the purpose of exercising any of the powers described in section 11, a peace officer may

- (a) enlist such assistance as the officer deems necessary; and*
  - (b) use as much force as is necessary in the circumstances.*

SECTIONS 489.1 AND 490 OF THE CRIMINAL CODE APPLICABLE / Idem / Provisions of this Act applicable / Report to justice / Idem / Recognizance.

13 (1) Subject to subsections (2) and (3), sections 489.1 and 490 of the Criminal Code apply to any thing seized under this Act.

(2) Where a thing seized under this Act is offence-related property, sections 489.1 and 490 of the Criminal Code apply subject to sections 16 to 22 of this Act.

(3) Where a controlled substance is seized under this Act or any other Act of Parliament or pursuant to a power of seizure at common law, this Act and the regulations apply in respect of that substance.

(4) Subject to the regulations, every peace officer who, pursuant to section 11, seizes a controlled substance shall, as soon as is reasonable in the circumstances after the seizure,

- (a) prepare a report identifying the place searched, the controlled substance and the location where it is being detained;
- (b) cause the report to be filed with the justice who issued the warrant or another justice for the same territorial division or, where by reason of exigent circumstances a warrant was not issued, a justice who would have had jurisdiction to issue a warrant; and
- (c) cause a copy of the report to be sent to the Minister.

(5) A report in Form 5.2 of the Criminal Code may be filed as a report for the purposes of subsection (4).

(6) Where, pursuant to this section, an order is made under paragraph 490(9)(c) of the Criminal Code for the return of any offence-related property seized under this Act, the judge or justice making the order may require the applicant for the order to enter into a recognizance before the judge or justice, with or without sureties, in such amount and with such conditions, if any, as the judge or justice directs and, where the judge or justice considers it appropriate, require the applicant to deposit with the judge or justice such sum of money or other valuable security as the judge or justice directs.

Restraint Orders

APPLICATION FOR RESTRAINT ORDER / Procedure / Restraint order / Minister of Supply and Services / Conditions / Order in writing / Service of order / Registration of order / Order continues in force / Offence.

14 (1) The Attorney General may make an application in accordance with this section for a restraint order under this section in respect of any offence-related property.

(2) An application made under subsection (1) for a restraint order in respect of any offence-related property may be made ex parte and shall be made in writing to a judge and be accompanied by an affidavit sworn on the information and belief of the Attorney General or any other person deposing to the following matters:

- (a) the offence against this Act to which the offence-related property relates;
- (b) the person who is believed to be in possession of the offence-related property; and
- (c) a description of the offence-related property.

(3) Where an application for a restraint order is made to a judge under subsection (1), the judge may, if satisfied that there are reasonable grounds to believe that the property is offence-related property, make a restraint order

- (a) prohibiting any person from disposing of, or otherwise dealing with any interest in, the offence-related property specified in the order otherwise than in such manner as may be specified in the order; and
- (b) at the request of the Attorney General, where the judge is of the opinion that the circumstances so require,
  - (i) appointing a person to take control of and to manage or otherwise deal with all or part of that property in accordance with the directions of the judge, and
  - (ii) requiring any person having possession of that property to give possession of the property to the person appointed under subparagraph (i).

(4) Where the Attorney General so requests, a judge appointing a person under subparagraph (3)(b)(i) shall appoint the Minister of Supply and Services.

(5) A restraint order made by a judge under this section may be subject to such reasonable conditions as the judge thinks fit.

(6) A restraint order made under this section shall be made in writing.

(7) A copy of a restraint order made under this section shall be served on the person to whom the order is addressed in such manner as the judge making the order directs or in accordance with the rules of the court.

(8) A copy of a restraint order made under this section shall be registered against any property in accordance with the laws of the province in which the property is situated.

(9) A restraint order made under this section remains in effect until

(a) an order is made under subsection 490(9) or (11) of the Criminal Code in relation to the property; or

(b) an order of forfeiture of the property is made under subsection 16(1) or 17(2) of this Act or section 490 of the Criminal Code.

(10) Any person on whom a restraint order made under this section is served in accordance with this section and who, while the order is in force, acts in contravention of or fails to comply with the order is guilty of an indictable offence or an offence punishable on summary conviction.

SECTIONS 489.1 AND 490 OF THE CRIMINAL CODE APPLICABLE / Recognizance.

15 (1) Subject to sections 16 to 22, sections 489.1 and 490 of the Criminal Code apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, to any offence-related property that is the subject-matter of a restraint order made under section 14.

(2) Where, pursuant to subsection (1), an order is made under paragraph 490(9)(c) of the Criminal Code for the return of any offence-related property that is the subject of a restraint order under section 14, the judge or justice making the order may require the applicant for the order to enter into a recognizance before the judge or justice, with or without sureties, in such amount and with such conditions, if any, as the judge or justice directs and, where the judge or justice considers it appropriate, require the applicant to deposit with the judge or justice such sum of money or other valuable security as the judge or justice directs.

Forfeiture of Offence-related Property

ORDER OF FORFEITURE OF PROPERTY ON CONVICTION / Property related to other offences / Appeal.

16 (1) Subject to sections 18 and 19, where a person is convicted of a designated substance offence and, on application of the Attorney General, the court is satisfied, on a balance of probabilities, that any property is offence-related property and that the offence was committed in relation to that property, the court shall

(a) in the case of a substance included in Schedule VI, order that the substance be forfeited to Her Majesty in right of Canada and disposed of by the Minister as the Minister thinks fit; and

(b) in the case of any other offence-related property,

(i) where the prosecution of the offence was commenced at the instance of the government of a province and conducted by or on behalf of that government, order that the property be forfeited to Her Majesty in right of that province and disposed of by the Attorney General or Solicitor General of that province in accordance with the law, and

(ii) in any other case, order that the property be forfeited to Her Majesty in right of Canada and disposed of by such member of the Queen's Privy Council for Canada as may be designated for the purposes of this subparagraph in accordance with the law.

(2) Where the evidence does not establish to the satisfaction of the court that the designated substance offence of which a person has been convicted was committed in relation to property in respect of which an order of forfeiture would otherwise be made under subsection (1) but the court is satisfied, beyond a reasonable doubt, that that property is offence-related property, the court may make an order of forfeiture under subsection (1) in relation to that property.

(3) A person who has been convicted of a designated substance offence or the Attorney General may appeal to the court of appeal from an order or a failure to make an order under subsection (1) as if the appeal were an appeal against the sentence imposed on the person in respect of the offence.

APPLICATION FOR IN REM FORFEITURE / Order of forfeiture of property / Accused deemed absconded / Who may dispose of forfeited property.

17 (1) Where an information has been laid in respect of a designated substance offence, the Attorney General may make an application to a judge for an order of forfeiture under subsection (2).

(2) Subject to sections 18 and 19, where an application is made to a judge under subsection (1) and the judge is satisfied

- (a) beyond a reasonable doubt that any property is offence-related property,
- (b) that proceedings in respect of a designated substance offence in relation to the property referred to in paragraph (a) were commenced, and
- (c) that the accused charged with the designated substance offence has died or absconded, the judge shall order that the property be forfeited and disposed of in accordance with subsection (4).

(3) For the purposes of subsection (2), an accused shall be deemed to have absconded in connection with a designated substance offence if

- (a) an information has been laid alleging the commission of the offence by the accused,
- (b) a warrant for the arrest of the accused has been issued in relation to that information, and
- (c) reasonable attempts to arrest the accused pursuant to the warrant have been unsuccessful during a period of six months beginning on the day on which the warrant was issued, and the accused shall be deemed to have so absconded on the last day of that six month period.

4) For the purposes of subsection (2),

- (a) in the case of a substance included in Schedule VI, the judge shall order that the substance be forfeited to Her Majesty in right of Canada and disposed of by the Minister as the Minister thinks fit; and
- (b) in the case of any other offence-related property,
  - (i) where the proceedings referred to in paragraph (2)(b) were commenced at the instance of the government of a province, the judge shall order that the property be forfeited to Her Majesty in right of that province and disposed of by the Attorney General or Solicitor General of that province in accordance with the law, and
  - (ii) in any other case, the judge shall order that the property be forfeited to Her Majesty in right of Canada and disposed of by such member of the Queen's Privy Council for Canada as may be designated for the purposes of this subparagraph in accordance with the law.

VOIDABLE TRANSFERS.

8 A court may, before ordering that offence-related property be forfeited under subsection 6(1) or 17(2), set aside any conveyance or transfer of the property that occurred after the seizure of the property, or the making of a restraint order in respect of the property, unless the conveyance or transfer was for valuable consideration to a person acting in good faith.

NOTICE / Manner of giving notice / Order of restoration of property.

19 (1) Before making an order under subsection 16(1) or 17(2) in relation to any property, a court shall require notice in accordance with subsection (2) to be given to, and may hear, any person who, in the opinion of the court, appears to have a valid interest in the property.

(2) A notice given under subsection (1) shall

- (a) be given or served in such manner as the court directs or as may be specified in the rules of the court;*
- (b) be of such duration as the court considers reasonable or as may be specified in the rules of the court; and*
- (c) set out the designated substance offence charged and a description of the property.*

(3) Where a court is satisfied that any person, other than

- (a) a person who was charged with a designated substance offence, or*
- (b) a person who acquired title to or a right of possession of the property from a person referred to in paragraph (a) under circumstances that give rise to a reasonable inference that the title or right was transferred for the purpose of avoiding the forfeiture of the property,* is the lawful owner or is lawfully entitled to possession of any property or any part of any property that would otherwise be forfeited pursuant to an order made under subsection 16(1) or 17(2) and that the person appears innocent of any complicity in an offence referred to in paragraph (a) or of any collusion in relation to such an offence, the court may order that the property or part be returned to that person.

APPLICATION / Fixing day for hearing / Notice / Order declaring interest not affected by forfeiture / Appeal from order made under subsection (4) / Return of property.

20 (1) Where any offence-related property is forfeited to Her Majesty pursuant to an order made under subsection 16(1) or 17(2), any person who claims an interest in the property other than

- (a) in the case of property forfeited pursuant to an order made under subsection 16(1), a person who was convicted of the designated substance offence in relation to which the property was forfeited,*
- (b) in the case of property forfeited pursuant to an order made under subsection 17(2), a person who was charged with the designated substance offence in relation to which the property was forfeited, or*
- (c) a person who acquired title to or a right of possession of the property from a person referred to in paragraph (a) or (b) under circumstances that give rise to a reasonable inference that the title or right was transferred from that person for the purpose of avoiding the forfeiture of the property,* may, within thirty days after the forfeiture, apply by notice in writing to a judge for an order under subsection (4).

(2) The judge to whom an application is made under subsection (1) shall fix a day not less than thirty days after the date of the filing of the application for the hearing of the application.

(3) An applicant shall serve a notice of the application made under subsection (1) and of the hearing of it on the Attorney General at least fifteen days before the day fixed for the hearing.

(4) Where, on the hearing of an application made under subsection (1), the judge is satisfied that the applicant

- (a) is not a person referred to in paragraph (1)(a), (b) or (c) and appears innocent of any complicity in any designated substance offence that resulted in the forfeiture of the property or of any collusion in relation to such an offence, and
- (b) exercised all reasonable care to be satisfied that the property was not likely to have been used in connection with the commission of an unlawful act by the person who was permitted by the applicant to obtain possession of the property or from whom the applicant obtained possession or, where the applicant is a mortgagee or lienholder, by the mortgagor or lien-giver, the judge may make an order declaring that the interest of the applicant is not affected by the forfeiture and declaring the nature and the extent or value of the interest.

(5) An applicant or the Attorney General may appeal to the court of appeal from an order made under subsection (4), and the provisions of Part XXI of the Criminal Code with respect to procedure on appeals apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, in respect of appeals under this subsection.

(6) The Minister shall, on application made to the Minister by any person in respect of whom a judge has made an order under subsection (4), and where the periods with respect to the taking of appeals from that order have expired and any appeal from that order taken under subsection (5) has been determined, direct that

- (a) the property, or the part of it to which the interest of the applicant relates, be returned to the applicant; or
- (b) an amount equal to the value of the interest of the applicant, as declared in the order, be paid to the applicant.

APPEALS FROM ORDERS UNDER SUBSECTION 17(2).

21 Any person who, in their opinion, is aggrieved by an order made under subsection 17(2) may appeal from the order as if the order were an appeal against conviction or against a judgment or verdict of acquittal, as the case may be, under Part XXI of the Criminal Code, and that Part applies, with such modifications as the circumstances require, in respect of such an appeal.

SUSPENSION OF ORDER PENDING APPEAL.

22 Notwithstanding anything in this Act, the operation of an order made in respect of property under subsection 16(1), 17(2) or 20(4) is suspended pending

- (a) any application made in respect of the property under any of those provisions or any other provision of this or any other Act of Parliament that provides for restoration or forfeiture of the property, or
- (b) any appeal taken from an order of forfeiture or restoration in respect of the property, and the property shall not be disposed of or otherwise dealt with until thirty days have expired after an order is made under any of those provisions.

Forfeiture of Proceeds of Crime

APPLICATION OF SECTIONS 462.3 AND 462.32 TO 462.5 OF THE CRIMINAL CODE RESPECTING PROCEEDS / Idem.

23 (1) Sections 462.3 and 462.32 to 462.5 of the Criminal Code apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, in respect of proceedings for a designated substance offence.

(2) For the purposes of subsection (1),

- (a) a reference in section 462.37 or 462.38 or subsection 462.41(2) of the Criminal Code to an enterprise crime offence shall be deemed to be a reference to a designated substance offence;
- (b) a reference in subsection 462.37(1) or 462.42(6), paragraph 462.43(c) or section 462.5 of the Criminal Code to the Attorney General in relation to the manner in which forfeited property is to be disposed of or otherwise dealt with shall be deemed to be a reference to
  - (i) where the prosecution of the offence in respect of which the property was forfeited was commenced at the instance of the government of a province and conducted by or on behalf of that government, the Attorney General or Solicitor General of that province, and
  - (ii) in any other case, such member of the Queen's Privy Council for Canada as may be designated for the purposes of this subparagraph; and
- (c) a reference in subsection 462.38(2) of the Criminal Code to the Attorney General in relation to the manner in which forfeited property is to be disposed of or otherwise dealt with shall be deemed to be a reference to
  - (i) where the prosecution of the offence in respect of which the property was forfeited was commenced at the instance of the government of a province, the Attorney General or Solicitor General of that province, and
  - (ii) in any other case, such member of the Queen's Privy Council for Canada as may be designated for the purposes of this subparagraph.

Part III/DISPOSAL OF CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES

APPLICATION FOR RETURN OF SUBSTANCE / Order to return substance forthwith / Order to return substance at specified time / Order to return substance refused /
 Payment of compensation in lieu.

24.(1) Where a controlled substance has been seized, found or otherwise acquired by a peace officer or an inspector, any person may, within sixty days after the date of the seizure, finding or acquisition, on prior notification being given to the Attorney General in the prescribed manner, apply, by notice in writing to a justice in the jurisdiction in which the substance is being detained, for an order to return that substance to the person.

(2) Where, on the hearing of an application made under subsection (1), a justice is satisfied that an applicant is the lawful owner or is lawfully entitled to possession of the controlled substance and the Attorney General does not indicate that the substance or a portion of it may be required for the purposes of a preliminary inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this or any other Act of Parliament, the justice shall, subject to subsection (5), order that the substance or the portion not required for the purposes of the proceeding be returned forthwith to the applicant.

(3) Where, on the hearing of an application made under subsection (1), a justice is satisfied that an applicant is the lawful owner or is lawfully entitled to possession of the controlled substance but the Attorney General indicates that the substance or a portion of it may be required for the purposes of a preliminary inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this or any other Act of Parliament, the justice shall, subject to subsection (5), order that the substance or the portion required for the purposes of the proceeding be returned to the applicant

- (a) on the expiration of one hundred and eighty days after the application was made, no proceeding in relation to the substance has been commenced before that time; or
- (b) on the final conclusion of the proceeding or any other proceeding in relation to the substance, where the applicant is not found guilty in those proceedings of an offence committed in relation to the substance.

4) Where, on the hearing of an application made under subsection (1), a justice is not satisfied that an applicant is the lawful owner or is lawfully entitled to possession of the controlled substance, the justice shall order that the substance or the portion not required for the purposes of a preliminary inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this or any other Act of Parliament be forfeited to Her Majesty to be disposed of or otherwise dealt with in accordance with the regulations or, if there are no applicable regulations, in such manner as the Minister directs.

5) Where, on the hearing of an application made under subsection (1), a justice is satisfied that an applicant is the lawful owner or is lawfully entitled to possession of a controlled substance, but an order has been made under subsection 26(2) in respect of the substance, the justice shall make an order that an amount equal to the value of the substance be paid to the applicant.

DISPOSAL BY MINISTER WHERE NO APPLICATION.

5 Where no application for the return of a controlled substance has been made under subsection 24(1) within sixty days after the date of the seizure, finding or acquisition by a peace officer or inspector and the substance or a portion of it is not required for the purposes of any preliminary inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Act or any other Act of Parliament, the substance or the portion not required for the purposes of the proceeding shall be delivered to the Minister to be disposed of or otherwise dealt with in accordance with the regulations or, if there are no applicable regulations, in such manner as the Minister directs.

SECURITY, HEALTH OR SAFETY HAZARD / Idem.

6 (1) Where the Minister has reasonable grounds to believe that a controlled substance that has been seized, found or otherwise acquired by a peace officer or inspector constitutes a potential security, public health or safety hazard, the Minister may, on prior notification being given to the Attorney General in the prescribed manner, at any time, make an application, ex parte, to a justice for an order that the substance or a portion of it be forfeited to Her Majesty to be disposed of or otherwise dealt with in accordance with the regulations or, if there are no applicable regulations, in such manner as the Minister directs.

2) Where, on the hearing of an application made under subsection (1), a justice is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds to believe that the controlled substance constitutes a potential security, public health or safety hazard, the justice shall order that the substance or any portion not required for the purposes of a preliminary inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this or any other Act of Parliament be forfeited to Her Majesty to be disposed of or otherwise dealt with in accordance with the regulations or, if there are no applicable regulations, in such manner as the Minister directs.

DISPOSAL FOLLOWING PROCEEDINGS.

7 Subject to section 24, where, pursuant to a preliminary inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this or any other Act of Parliament, the court before which the proceedings have been brought is satisfied that any controlled substance that is the subject of proceedings before the court is no longer required by that court or any other court, the court

(a) shall

(i) where it is satisfied that the person from whom the substance was seized came into possession of the substance in accordance with the regulations and continued to deal with it in accordance with the regulations, order that the substance be returned to the person, or

(ii) where it is satisfied that possession of the substance by the person from whom it was seized is unlawful and the person who is lawfully entitled to its possession is

- known, order that the substance be returned to the person who is the lawful owner or is lawfully entitled to its possession; and
- (b) may, where it is not satisfied that the substance should be returned pursuant to subparagraph (i) or (ii) or where possession of the substance by the person from whom it was seized is unlawful and the person who is the lawful owner or is lawfully entitled to its possession is not known, order that the substance be forfeited to Her Majesty to be disposed of or otherwise dealt with in accordance with the regulations or, if there are no applicable regulations, in such manner as the Minister directs.

DISPOSAL WITH CONSENT.

28 Where a controlled substance has been seized, found or otherwise acquired by a peace officer or inspector under this Act or the regulations and the substance or a portion of it is not required for the purposes of a preliminary inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this or any other Act of Parliament, the person who is the lawful owner or is lawfully entitled to its possession may consent to its disposal, and on such consent being given the substance or portion is thereupon forfeited to Her Majesty and may be disposed of or otherwise dealt with in accordance with the regulations or, if there are no applicable regulations, in such manner as the Minister directs.

DESTRUCTION OF PLANT.

29 The Minister may, on prior notification being given to the Attorney General, cause to be destroyed any plant from which a substance included in Schedule I, II, III or IV may be extracted that is being produced otherwise than under the authority of and in accordance with a licence issued under the regulations.

Part IV/ADMINISTRATION AND COMPLIANCE

Inspectors

DESIGNATION OF INSPECTORS / Certificate of designation.

30 (1) The Minister may designate, in accordance with the regulations made pursuant to paragraph 55(1)(n), any person as an inspector for the purposes of this Act and the regulations.

(2) An inspector shall be furnished with a prescribed certificate of designation, and on entering any place pursuant to subsection 31(1) shall, on request, produce the certificate to the person in charge of the place.

POWERS OF INSPECTOR / Warrant required to enter dwelling-place / Authority to issue warrant / Use of force / Assistance to inspector / Storage of substances seized / Notice / Return by inspector / Return or disposal by Minister.

31 (1) Subject to subsection (2), an inspector may, to ensure compliance with the regulations, at any reasonable time enter any place the inspector believes on reasonable grounds is used for the purpose of conducting the business or professional practice of any person licensed or otherwise authorized under the regulations to deal in a controlled substance or a precursor and may for that purpose

- (a) open and examine any receptacle or package found in that place in which a controlled substance or a precursor may be found;
- (b) examine any thing found in that place that is used or may be capable of being used for the production, preservation, packaging or storage of a controlled substance or a precursor;
- (c) examine any labels or advertising material or records, books, electronic data or other documents found in that place with respect to any controlled substance or precursor, other than the records of the medical condition of persons, and make copies thereof or take extracts therefrom;

- (d) use or cause to be used any computer system at that place to examine any electronic data referred to in paragraph (c);
- (e) reproduce any document from any electronic data referred to in paragraph (c) or cause it to be reproduced, in the form of a printout or other output;
- (f) take the labels or advertising material or records, books or other documents referred to in paragraph (c) or the printout or other output referred to in paragraph (e) for examination or copying;
- (g) use or cause to be used any copying equipment at that place to make copies of any document;
- (h) examine any substance found in that place and take, for the purpose of analysis, such samples thereof as are reasonably required; and
- (i) seize and detain in accordance with this Part, any controlled substance or precursor the seizure and detention of which the inspector believes on reasonable grounds is necessary.

(2) Where a place referred to in subsection (1) is a dwelling-place, an inspector may not enter the dwelling-place without the consent of an occupant thereof except under the authority of a warrant issued under subsection (3).

- (3) Where, on ex parte application, a justice is satisfied by information on oath that
  - (a) a place referred to in subsection (1) is a dwelling-place but otherwise meets the conditions for entry described in that subsection,
  - (b) entry to the dwelling-place is necessary for the purpose of ensuring compliance with the regulations, and
  - (c) entry to the dwelling-place has been refused or there are reasonable grounds to believe that entry will be refused, the justice may issue a warrant authorizing the inspector named in it to enter that dwelling-place and exercise any of the powers mentioned in paragraphs (1)(a) to (i), subject to such conditions as may be specified in the warrant.

(4) In executing a warrant issued under subsection (3), an inspector shall not use force unless the inspector is accompanied by a peace officer and the use of force is specifically authorized in the warrant.

(5) The owner or other person in charge of a place entered by an inspector under subsection (1) and every person found there shall give the inspector all reasonable assistance in the power of that person and furnish the inspector with such information as the inspector may reasonably require.

(6) Where an inspector seizes and detains a controlled substance or a precursor, the substance or precursor may, at the discretion of the inspector, be kept or stored at the place where it was seized or, at the direction of the inspector, be removed to any other proper place.

(7) An inspector who seizes a controlled substance or a precursor shall take such measures as are reasonable in the circumstances to give to the owner or other person in charge of the place where the seizure occurred notice of the seizure and of the location where the controlled substance or precursor is being kept or stored.

(8) Where an inspector determines that to ensure compliance with the regulations it is no longer necessary to detain a controlled substance or a precursor seized by the inspector under paragraph (1)(i), the inspector shall notify in writing the owner or other person in charge of the place where the seizure occurred of that determination and, on being issued a receipt for it, shall return the controlled substance or precursor to that person.

(9) Notwithstanding sections 24, 25 and 27, where a period of one hundred and twenty days has elapsed after the date of a seizure under paragraph (1)(i) and the controlled substance or precursor has not been returned in accordance with subsection (8), the controlled substance or precursor shall be returned, disposed of or otherwise dealt with in such manner as the Minister directs, in accordance with any applicable regulations.

OBSTRUCTING INSPECTOR / False statements / Interference.

32 (1) No person shall, by act or omission, obstruct an inspector who is engaged in the performance of duties under this Act or the regulations.

(2) No person shall knowingly make any false or misleading statement verbally or in writing to an inspector who is engaged in the performance of duties under this Act or the regulations.

(3) No person shall, without the authority of an inspector, remove, alter or interfere in any way with anything seized, detained or taken under section 31.

Part VI/ADMINISTRATIVE ORDERS FOR CONTRAVENTIONS OF DESIGNATED REGULATIONS

DESIGNATION OF REGULATIONS.

33. The Governor in Council may, by regulation, designate any regulation made under this Act (in this Part referred to as a "designated regulation") as a regulation the contravention of which shall be dealt with under this Part.

CONTRAVENTION OF DESIGNATED REGULATION.

34 Where the Minister has reasonable grounds to believe that a person has contravened a designated regulation, the Minister shall

- (a) in the prescribed manner, serve a notice to appear on the person; and*
- (b) send a copy of the notice to appear to an adjudicator and direct the adjudicator to conduct a hearing to determine whether the contravention has occurred and to notify the Minister of the adjudicator's determination.*

INTERIM ORDER / Idem.

35 (1) Where the Minister has reasonable grounds to believe that a person has contravened a designated regulation and the Minister is of the opinion that, as a result of that contravention, there is a substantial risk of immediate danger to the health or safety of any person, the Minister may, without giving prior notice to the person believed to have contravened the designated regulation, make an interim order in respect of the person

- (a) prohibiting the person from doing anything that the person would otherwise be permitted to do under their licence, permit or authorization, or*
- (b) subjecting the doing of anything under the designated regulation by the person to the terms and conditions specified in the interim order,* and may, for that purpose, suspend, cancel or amend the licence, permit or authorization issued or granted to the person or take any other measures set out in the regulations.

(2) Where the Minister makes an interim order under subsection (1), the Minister shall forthwith

- (a) in the prescribed manner, serve the interim order on the person;*
- (b) in the prescribed manner, serve a notice to appear on the person; and*
- (c) send a copy of the interim order and the notice to appear to an adjudicator and direct* the adjudicator to conduct a hearing to determine whether the contravention has occurred and to notify the Minister of the adjudicator's determination.

HEARING BY ADJUDICATOR / Change of hearing date / Proceedings on default / Time and place.

36 (1) Where an adjudicator receives from the Minister a copy of a notice to appear under paragraph 34(b) or 35(2)(c), the adjudicator shall conduct a hearing on a date to be fixed by the adjudicator at the request of the person on whom the notice was served, on two days notice being given to the adjudicator, which hearing date may not

(a) in the case of a notice served under paragraph 34(a), be less than thirty days, or more than forty-five days, after the day of service of the notice; or

(b) in the case of a notice served under paragraph 35(2)(b), be less than three days, or more than forty-five days, after the day of service of the notice.

(2) Where the adjudicator is unable to conduct a hearing on the date referred to in subsection (1), the adjudicator shall forthwith notify the person and fix, for the purpose of holding the hearing, the earliest possible date to which the adjudicator and the person agree.

(3) Where an adjudicator has received a copy of a notice to appear referred to in subsection (1) and where the person on whom the notice is served has not requested a date for a hearing within forty-five days after the notice was served on that person, or where the person, having requested a hearing, fails to appear for the hearing, the adjudicator shall proceed to make a determination in the absence of the person.

(4) An adjudicator may, subject to the regulations, determine the time and place of any hearing or other proceeding under this Part.

---

NOTICE TO APPEAR.

37 A notice to appear served on a person under paragraph 34(a) or 35(2)(b) shall
(a) specify the designated regulation that the Minister believes the person has contravened;

(b) state the grounds on which the Minister believes the contravention has occurred;

(c) state that the matter has been referred to an adjudicator for a hearing to be conducted on a date within the applicable period described in paragraph 36(1)(a) or (b); and

(d) set out such other information as is prescribed.

---

PROOF OF SERVICE.

38 Proof of service of any notice, order or interim order under this Part shall be given in the prescribed manner.

---

POWERS OF ADJUDICATOR.

39 For the purposes of this Act, an adjudicator has and may exercise the powers of a person appointed as a commissioner under Part I of the Inquiries Act.

---

HEARING PROCEDURE.

40 An adjudicator shall deal with all matters as informally and expeditiously as the circumstances and considerations of fairness and natural justice permit.

DETERMINATION BY ADJUDICATOR / Notice of determination / Ministerial orders / Idem.

41 (1) An adjudicator shall, after the conclusion of a hearing referred to in subsection 36(1) or a proceeding referred to in subsection 36(3), within the prescribed time, make a determination that the person who is the subject of the hearing or proceeding contravened or did not contravene the designated regulation.

(2) Where an adjudicator has made a determination under subsection (1), the adjudicator shall

- (a) forthwith notify the person and the Minister of the adjudicator's determination and the reasons; and
- (b) where the adjudicator has determined that the person has contravened the designated regulation, notify the person of the opportunity to make representations to the Minister in writing in accordance with the regulations and within the prescribed time.

(3) Where an adjudicator has made a determination referred to in paragraph (2)(b) and the Minister has considered the determination and any representations referred to in that paragraph, the Minister shall forthwith make an order

- (a) prohibiting the person from doing anything that they would, if they were in compliance with the designated regulation, be permitted to do, or
- (b) subjecting the doing of anything under the designated regulation by the person to the terms and conditions specified in the order, and may, for that purpose, suspend, cancel or amend any licence, permit or authorization issued or granted to the person under the regulations or take any other measures set out in the regulations.

(4) An order made under subsection (3) shall be served on the person to whom it is directed in the prescribed manner.

EFFECT OF ORDER / Cessation of effect / Application to revoke order / Revocation of order.

42 (1) An interim order made under subsection 35(1) and an order made under subsection 41(3) have effect from the time that they are served on the person to whom they are directed.

(2) An interim order that was made in respect of a person believed to have contravened a designated regulation ceases to have effect

- (a) where the Minister makes an order under subsection 41(3), at the time the order is served on the person; and
- (b) where an adjudicator has determined that the person did not contravene the designated regulation, at the time the adjudicator makes the determination.

(3) A person in respect of whom an order was made under subsection 41(3) may make an application in writing to the Minister in accordance with the regulations to revoke the order.

(4) The Minister may, in the prescribed circumstances, revoke, in whole or in part, any order made under subsection 41(3).

OFFENCE FOR CONTRAVENTION OF ORDER.

43 Every person commits an offence who contravenes an order or an interim order made under this Part.

---

Part VII/GENERAL

Analysis

DESIGNATION OF ANALYSTS.

44 The Minister may designate, in accordance with the regulations made pursuant to paragraph 55(1)(o), any person as an analyst for the purposes of this Act and the regulations.

ANALYSIS / Report.

5 (1) An inspector or peace officer may submit to an analyst for analysis or examination any substance or sample thereof taken by the inspector or peace officer.

2) An analyst who has made an analysis or examination under subsection (1) may prepare a certificate or report stating that the analyst has analysed or examined a substance or a sample thereof and setting out the results of the analysis or examination.

Offence and Punishment.

PENALTY.

6 Every person who contravenes a provision of this Act for which punishment is not otherwise provided or a regulation, other than a designated regulation within the meaning of Part V,

(a) is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three years, or to both; or

(b) is guilty of an offence punishable on summary conviction and liable to a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, or to both.

Evidence and Procedure

IMITATION / Venue.

7 (1) No summary conviction proceedings in respect of an offence under subsection 4(2) or 2(2), section 43 or the regulations shall be commenced after the expiration of one year after the time when the subject-matter of the proceedings arose.

2) Proceedings in respect of a contravention of any provision of this Act or the regulations may be held in the place where the offence was committed or where the subject-matter of the proceedings arose or in any place where the accused is apprehended or happens to be located.

BURDEN OF PROVING EXCEPTION, ETC. / Idem.

8 (1) No exception, exemption, excuse or qualification prescribed by law is required to be set out or negated, as the case may be, in an information or indictment for an offence under this Act or the regulations or under section 463, 464 or 465 of the Criminal Code in respect of such an offence.

2) In any prosecution under this Act, the prosecutor is not required, except by way of rebuttal, to prove that a certificate, licence, permit or other qualification does not operate in favour of the accused, whether or not the qualification is set out in the information or indictment.

COPIES OF DOCUMENTS / Authentication / Evidence inadmissible under this section.

9 (1) A copy of any document filed with a department, ministry, agency, municipality or other body established by or pursuant to a law of a province, or of any statement containing information from the records kept by any such department, ministry, agency, municipality or body, purporting to be certified by any official having custody of that document or those records, is admissible in evidence in any prosecution for an offence referred to in subsection 8(1) and, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, is proof of the facts contained in that document or statement, without proof of the signature or official character of the person purporting to have certified it.

(2) For the purposes of subsection (1), an engraved, lithographed, photocopied, photographed, printed or otherwise electronically or mechanically reproduced facsimile signature of an official referred to in that subsection is sufficient authentication of any copy referred to in that subsection.

(3) Nothing in subsection (1) renders admissible in evidence in any legal proceeding such part of any record as is proved to be a record made in the course of an investigation or inquiry.

CERTIFICATE ISSUED PURSUANT TO REGULATIONS / Idem.

50 (1) Subject to subsection (2), any certificate or other document issued pursuant to regulations made under paragraph 55(2)(c) is admissible in evidence in a preliminary inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this or any other Act of Parliament and, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, is proof that the certificate or other document was validly issued and of the facts contained in it, without proof of the signature or official character of the person purporting to have certified it.

(2) The defence may, with leave of the court, require that the person who issued the certificate or other document

(a) produce an affidavit or solemn declaration attesting to any of the matters deemed to be proved under subsection (1); or

(b) appear before the court for examination or cross-examination in respect of the issuance of the certificate or other document.

CERTIFICATE OF ANALYST / Attendance of analyst / Notice.

51 (1) Subject to this section, a certificate or report prepared by an analyst under subsection 45(2) is admissible in evidence in any prosecution for an offence under this Act or the regulations or any other Act of Parliament and, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, is proof of the statements set out in the certificate or report, without proof of the signature or official character of the person appearing to have signed it.

(2) The party against whom a certificate or report of an analyst is produced under subsection (1) may, with leave of the court, require the attendance of the analyst for the purpose of cross-examination.

(3) Unless the court otherwise orders, no certificate or report shall be received in evidence under subsection (1) unless the party intending to produce it has, before its production at trial, given to the party against whom it is intended to be produced reasonable notice of that intention, together with a copy of the certificate or report.

PROOF OF NOTICE / Idem.

52 (1) For the purposes of this Act and the regulations, the giving of any notice, whether orally or in writing, or the service of any document may be proved by the oral evidence of, or by the affidavit or solemn declaration of, the persons claiming to have given that notice or served that document.

(2) Notwithstanding subsection (1), the court may require the affiant or declarant to appear before it for examination or cross-examination in respect of the giving of notice or proof of service.

CONTINUITY OF POSSESSION / Alternative method of proof.

53 (1) In any proceeding under this Act or the regulations, continuity of possession of any exhibit tendered as evidence in that proceeding may be proved by the testimony of, or the affidavit or solemn declaration of, the person claiming to have had it in their possession.

(2) Where an affidavit or solemn declaration is offered in proof of continuity of possession under subsection (1), the court may require the affiant or declarant to appear before it for examination or cross-examination in respect of the issue of continuity of possession.

COPIES OF RECORDS, BOOKS OR DOCUMENTS.

54 Where any record, book, electronic data or other document is examined or seized under this Act or the regulations, the Minister, or the officer by whom the record, book, electronic data or other document is examined or seized, may make or cause to be made one or more copies thereof, and a copy of any such record, book, electronic data or other document purporting to be certified by the Minister or a person authorized by the Minister is admissible in evidence and, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, has the same probative force as the original record, book, electronic data or other document would have had if it had been proved in the ordinary way.

Regulations, Exemptions and Disqualifications

REGULATIONS / Regulations pertaining to law enforcement / Incorporation by reference.

55 (1) The Governor in Council may make regulations for carrying out the purposes and provisions of this Act, including the regulation of the medical, scientific and industrial applications and distribution of controlled substances and precursors and the enforcement of this Act and, without restricting the generality of the foregoing, may make regulations

- (a) governing, controlling, limiting, authorizing the importation into Canada, exportation from Canada, production, packaging, sending, transportation, delivery, sale, provision, administration, possession or obtaining of or other dealing in any controlled substances or precursor or any class thereof;
- (b) respecting the circumstances in which, the conditions subject to which and the persons or classes of persons by whom any controlled substances or precursor or any class thereof may be imported into Canada, exported from Canada, produced, packaged, sent, transported, delivered, sold, provided, administered, possessed, obtained or otherwise dealt in, as well as the means by which and the persons or classes of persons by whom such activities may be authorized;
- (c) respecting the issuance, suspension, cancellation, duration and terms and conditions of any class of licence for the importation into Canada, exportation from Canada, production, packaging, sale, provision or administration of any substance included in Schedule I, II, III, IV, V or VI or any class thereof;
- (d) respecting the issuance, suspension, cancellation, duration and terms and conditions of any permit for the importation into Canada, exportation from Canada or production of a specified quantity of a substance included in Schedule I, II, III, IV, V or VI or any class thereof;
- (e) prescribing the fees payable on application for any of the licences or permits provided for in paragraphs (c) and (d);
- (f) respecting the method of production, preservation, testing, packaging or storage of any controlled substance or precursor or any class thereof;
- (g) respecting the premises, processes or conditions for the production or sale of any controlled substance or any class thereof, and deeming such premises, processes or conditions to be or not to be suitable for the purposes of the regulations;
- (h) respecting the qualifications of persons who are engaged in the production, preservation, testing, packaging, storage, selling, providing or otherwise dealing in any controlled substance or precursor or any class thereof and who do so under the supervision of a person licensed under the regulations to do any such thing;

- (i) prescribing standards of composition, strength, concentration, potency, purity or quality or any other property of any controlled substance or precursor;
- (j) respecting the labelling, packaging, size, dimensions, fill and other specifications of packages used for the importation into Canada, exportation from Canada, sending, transportation, delivery, sale or provision of or other dealing in any substance included in Schedule I, II, III, IV, V or VI or any class thereof;
- (k) respecting the distribution of samples of any substance included in Schedule I, II, III, IV, V or VI or any class thereof;
- (l) controlling and limiting the advertising for sale of any controlled substance or precursor or any class thereof;
- (m) respecting the records, books, electronic data or other documents in respect of controlled substances and precursors that are required to be kept and provided by any person or class of persons who imports into Canada, exports from Canada, produces, packages, sends, transports, delivers, sells, provides, administers, possesses, obtains or otherwise deals in any controlled substance or precursor or any class thereof;
- (n) respecting the qualifications for inspectors and their powers and duties in relation to the enforcement of, and compliance with, the regulations;
- (o) respecting the qualifications for analysts and their powers and duties;
- (p) respecting the detention and disposal of or otherwise dealing with any controlled substance;
- (q) respecting the disposal of or otherwise dealing with any precursor;
- (r) respecting the taking of samples of substances under paragraph 31(1)(h);
- (s) respecting the communication of any information obtained under this Act or the regulations from or relating to any person or class of persons who is or may be authorized to import into Canada, export from Canada, produce, package, send, transport, deliver, sell, provide, administer, possess, obtain or otherwise deal in any controlled substance or precursor or any class thereof
  - (i) to any provincial professional licensing authority, or
  - (ii) to any person or class of persons where, in the opinion of the Governor in Council, it is necessary to communicate that information for the proper administration or enforcement of this Act or the regulations;
- (t) respecting the making, serving, filing and manner of proving service of any notice, order, report or other document required or authorized under this Act or the regulations;
- (u) prescribing the circumstances in which an order made under subsection 41(3) may be revoked by the Minister pursuant to subsection 42(4);
- (v) prescribing forms for the purposes of this Act or the regulations;
- (w) establishing classes or groups of controlled substances or precursors;
- (x) conferring powers or imposing duties and functions on adjudicators in relation to hearings conducted and determinations made by them under Part V;
- (y) governing the practice and procedure of hearings conducted and determinations made by adjudicators under Part V;
- (z) exempting, on such terms and conditions as may be specified in the regulations, any person or class of persons or any controlled substance or precursor or any class thereof from the application of this Act or regulations; and
- (z.1) prescribing anything that, by this Act, is to be or may be prescribed.

(2) The Governor in Council, on the recommendation of the Solicitor General of Canada, may make regulations that pertain to investigations and other law enforcement activities conducted under this Act by a member of a police force and other persons acting under the direction and control of a member and, without restricting the generality of the foregoing, may make regulations

- (a) authorizing the Solicitor General of Canada, or the provincial minister responsible for policing in a province, to designate a police force within the Solicitor General's jurisdiction or the minister's jurisdiction, as the case may be, for the purposes of this subsection;

- (b) exempting, on such terms and conditions as may be specified in the regulations, a member of a police force that has been designated pursuant to paragraph (a) and other person acting under the direction and control of the member from the application of any provision of Part I or the regulations;
- (c) respecting the issuance, suspension, cancellation, duration and terms and conditions of a certificate, other document or, in exigent circumstances, an approval to obtain a certificate or other document, that is issued to a member of a police force that has been designated pursuant to paragraph (a) for the purpose of exempting the member from the application of this Act or the regulations;
- (d) respecting the detention, storage, disposal or otherwise dealing with any controlled substance or precursor;
- (e) respecting records, reports, electronic data or other documents in respect of a controlled substance or precursor that are required to be kept and provided by any person or class of persons; and
- (f) prescribing forms for the purposes of the regulations.

(3) Any regulations made under this Act incorporating by reference a classification, standard, procedure or other specification may incorporate the classification, standard, procedure or specification as amended from time to time, and, in such a case, the reference shall be read accordingly.

EXEMPTION BY MINISTER.

56 The Minister may, on such terms and conditions as the Minister deems necessary, exempt any person or class of persons or any controlled substance or precursor or any class thereof from the application of all or any of the provisions of this Act or the regulations if, in the opinion of the Minister, the exemption is necessary for a medical or scientific purpose or is otherwise in the public interest.

POWERS, DUTIES AND FUNCTIONS OF MINISTER OR SOLICITOR GENERAL OF CANADA.

57 Any power, duty or function of

- (a) the Minister under this Act or the regulations, or
- (b) the Solicitor General of Canada under the regulations may be exercised or performed by any person designated, or any person occupying a position designated, by the Minister or the Solicitor General, as the case may be, for that purpose.

PARAMOUNTCY OF THIS ACT AND THE REGULATIONS.

58 In the case of any inconsistency or conflict between this Act or the regulations made under it, and the Food and Drugs Act or the regulations made under that Act, this Act and the regulations made under it prevail to the extent of the inconsistency or conflict.

OFFENCE OF MAKING FALSE OR DECEPTIVE STATEMENTS.

59 No person shall knowingly make, or participate in, assent to or acquiesce in the making of, a false or misleading statement in any book, record, return or other document however recorded, required to be maintained, made or furnished pursuant to this Act or the regulations.

Amendments to Schedules

SCHEDULES.

60 The Governor in Council may, by order, amend any of Schedules I to VIII by adding to them or deleting from them any item or portion of an item, where the Governor in Council deems the amendment to be necessary in the public interest.

SCHEDULE I

(Sections 2 to 7, 29, 55 and 60)

1. Opium Poppy (Papaver somniferum), its preparations, derivatives, alkaloids and salts, including:

- (1) Opium
- (2) Codeine (methylmorphine)
- (3) Morphine (7,8-didehydro-4,5-epox-17-methylmorphinan-3,6-diol)
- (4) Thebaine (paramorphine), and the salts, derivatives and salts of derivatives of substances set out in subitems (1) to (4), including:
- (5) Acetorphine (acetyletorphine)
- (6) Acetyldihydrocodeine (4,5-epoxy-3-methoxy-17-methylmorphinan-6-ol acetate)
- (7) Benzylmorphine (7,8-didehydro-4,5-epoxy-17-methyl-3-(phenylmethoxy)morphinan-6-ol)
- (8) Codoxime (dihydrocodeinone O-(carboxymethyl) oxime)
- (9) Desomorphine (dihydrodeoxymorphine)
- (10) Diacetylmorphine (heroin)
- (11) Dihydrocodeine (4,5-epoxy-3-methoxy-17-methylmorphinan-6-ol)
- (12) Dihydromorphine (4,5-epoxy-17-methylmorphinan-3,6-diol)
- (13) Ethylmorphine (7,8-didehydro-4,5-epoxy-3-ethoxy-17-methylmorphinan-6-ol)
- (14) Etorphine (tetrahydro-7 $\alpha$ -(1-hydroxy-1-methylbutyl)-6,14-endo-enthenooripavine)
- (15) Hydrocodone (dihydrocodeinone)
- (16) Hydromorphinol (dihydro-14-hydroxymorphine)
- (17) Hydromorphone (dihydromorphinone)
- (18) Methyl-desorphine ( $\Delta^6$ -deoxy-6-methylmorphine)
- (19) Methyldihydromorphine (dihydro-6-methylmorphine)
- (20) Metopon (dihydromethylmorphinone)
- (21) Morphine-N-oxide (morphine oxide)
- (22) Myrophine (benzylmorphine myristate)
- (23) Nalorphine (N-allylnormorphine)
- (24) Nicocodine (6-nicotinylcodeine)
- (25) Nicomorphine (dinicotinylmorphine)
- (26) Norcodeine (N-desmethylcodeine)
- (27) Normorphine (N-desmethylmorphine)
- (28) Oxycodone (dihydrohydroxycodeinone)
- (29) Oxymorphone (dihydrohydroxymorphinone)
- (30) Pholcodine (3-[2-(4-morpholinyl)ethyl]morphine)
- (31) Thebacon (acetyldihydrocodeinone)

but not including

- (32) Apomorphine
(5,6,6a,7-tetrahydro-6-methyl-4H-dibenzo[de,g]-quinoline-10,11-diol)

- (33) Cyrenorphine
(N-(cyclopropylmethyl)-6,7,8,14-tetrahydro-7 $\alpha$ -(1-hydroxy-1-methylethyl)-6,14-endo-ethenonororipavine)
- (34) Naloxone (4,5 $\alpha$ -epoxy-3,14-dihydroxy-17-(2-propenyl)morphinan-6-one)
- (35) Narcotine
(6,7-dimethoxy-3-(5,6,7,8-tetrahydro-4-methoxy-6-methyl-1,3-dioxolos[4,5-g]isoquinolin-5-yl)-1(3H)-isobenzofuranone)
- (36) Papaverine
(1-[(3,4-dimethoxyphenyl)methyl]-6,7-dimethoxyisoquinoline)
- (37) Poppy seed

2. Coca (Erythroxylon), its preparations, derivatives, alkaloids and salts, including:

- (1) Coca leaves
- (2) Cocaine (benzoylmethylecgonine)
- (3) Ecgonine (3-hydroxy-2-tropane carboxylic acid)

3. Phenylpiperidines, their intermediates, salts, derivatives and analogues and salts of intermediates, derivatives and analogues, including:

- (1) Allylprodine (3-allyl-1-methyl-4-phenyl-4-piperidinol propionate)
- (2) Alphameprodine ( $\alpha$ -3-ethyl-1-methyl-4-phenyl-4-piperidinol propionate)
- (3) Alphaprodine ( $\alpha$ -1,3-dimethyl-4-phenyl-4-piperidinol propionate)
- (4) Anileridine (ethyl 1-[2-(p-aminophenyl)-4-phenylpiperidine-4-carboxylate])
- (5) Betameprodine  $\beta$ -3-ethyl-1-methyl-4-phenyl-4-piperidinol propionate)
- (6) Betaprodine ( $\beta$ -1,3-dimethyl-4-phenyl-4-piperidinol propionate)
- (7) Benzethidine (ethyl 1-(2-benzyloxyethyl)-4-phenylpiperidine-4-carboxylate)
- (8) Diphenoxylate (ethyl 1-(3-cyano-3,3-diphenylpropyl)-4-phenylpiperidine-4-carboxylate)
- (9) Difenoxin
(1-(3-cyano-3,3-diphenylpropyl)-4-phenylpiperidine-4-carboxylate)
- (10) Etoxidine (ethyl 1-[2-(2-hydroxyethoxy) ethyl]-4-phenylpiperidine-4-carboxylate)
- (11) Furethidine (ethyl 1-(2-tetrahydrofurfuryloxyethyl)-4-phenylpiperidine-4-carboxylate)
- (12) Hydroxypethidine (ethyl 4-(m-hydroxyphenyl)-1-methylpiperidine-4-carboxylate)
- (13) Ketobemidone
(1-[4-(m-hydroxyphenyl)-1-methyl-4-piperidyl]-1-propanone)
- (14) Methylphenylisonipeconitrile (4-cyano-1-methyl-4-phenylpiperidine)
- (15) Morpheridine (ethyl 1-(2-morpholinoethyl)-4-phenylpiperidine-4-carboxylate)
- (16) Norpethidine (ethyl 4-phenylpiperidine-4-carboxylate)
- (17) Pethidine (ethyl 1-methyl-4-phenylpiperidine-4-carboxylate)
- (18) Phenoperidine (ethyl 1-(3-hydroxy-3-phenylpropyl)-4-phenylpiperidine-4-carboxylate)
- (19) Piminodine (ethyl 1-[3-(phenylamino)propyl]-4-phenylpiperidine-4-carboxylate)
- (20) Properidine (isopropyl 1-methyl-4-phenylpiperidine-4-carboxylate)
- (21) Trimeperidine (1,2,5-trimethyl-4-phenyl-4-piperidinol propionate)
- (22) Pethidine Intermediate C (1-methyl-4-phenylpiperidine-4-carboxylate)

but not including

- (23) Carbamethidine (ethyl
1-(2-hydroxy-2-phenyl-ethyl)-4-phenylpiperidine-4-carboxylate)

- (24) Oxpheneridine (ethyl 1-(2-hydroxy-2,2-phenyl ethyl)-4-phenylpiperidine-4-carboxylate)
4. Phenazepines, their salts, derivatives and salts of derivatives including:
- (1) Proheptazine (hexahydro-1,3-dimethyl-4-phenyl-1H-azepin-4-ol propionate)
- but not including
- (2) Ethoheptazine (ethyl hexahydro-1-methyl-4-phenyl-azepine-4-carboxylate)
- (3) Metethoheptazine (ethyl hexahydro-1,3-dimethyl-4-phenylazepine-4-carboxylate)
- (4) Metheptazine (ethyl hexahydro-1,2-dimethyl-4-phenylazepine-4-carboxylate)
5. Amidones, their intermediates, salts, derivatives and salts of intermediates and derivatives including:
- (1) Dimethylaminodiphenylbutanonitrile (4-cyano-2-dimethylamino-4,4-diphenylbutane)
- (2) Dipipanone (4,4-diphenyl-6-piperidino-3-heptanone)
- (3) Isomethadone (6-dimethylamino-5-methyl-4,4-diphenyl-3-hexanone)
- (4) Methadone (6-dimethylamino-4,4-diphenyl-3-heptanone)
- (5) Normethadone (6-dimethylamino-4,4-diphenyl-3-hexanone)
- (6) Norpipanone (4,4-diphenyl-6-piperidino-3-hexanone)
- (7) Phenadoxone (6-morpholino-4,4-diphenyl-3-heptanone)
6. Methadols, their salts, derivatives and salts of derivatives including:
- (1) Acetylmethadol (6-dimethylamino-4,4-diphenyl-3-heptanyl acetate)
- (2) Alphacetylmethadol ( $\alpha$ -6-dimethylamino-4,4-diphenyl-3-heptanol acetate)
- (3) Alphamethadol ( $\alpha$ -6-dimethylamino-4,4-diphenyl-3-heptanol)
- (4) Betacetylmethadol ( $\beta$ -6-dimethylamino-4,4-diphenyl-3-heptanol acetate)
- (5) Betamethadol ( $\beta$ -6-dimethylamino-4,4-diphenyl-3-heptanol)
- (6) Dimepheptanol (6-dimethylamino-4,4-diphenyl-3-heptanol)
- (7) Noracymethadol ( $\alpha$ -6-methylamino-4,4-diphenyl-3-heptanol acetate)
7. Phenalkoxams, their salts, derivatives and salts of derivatives including:
- (1) Dimenoxadol (dimethylaminoethyl 1-ethoxy-1,1-diphenylacetate)
- (2) Dioxaphetylbutyrate (ethyl 2,2-diphenyl-4-morpholino butyrate)
- (3) Dextropropoxyphene ([S-(R\*,S\*)]-( $\alpha$ -[2-(dimethylamino)-methylethyl]-( $\alpha$ -phenylbenzene-ethanol, propanoate ester))
8. Thiambutenes, their salts, derivatives and salts of derivatives including:
- (1) Diethylthiambutene (N,N-diethyl-1-methyl-3,3-di-2-thienylallylamine)
- (2) Dimethylthiambutene (N,N,1-trimethyl-3,3-di-2-thienylallylamine)
- (3) Ethylmethylthiambutene (N-ethyl-N,1-dimethyl-3,3-di-2-thienylallylamine)
9. Moramides, their intermediates, salts, derivatives and salts of intermediates and derivatives including:
- (1) Dextromoramide (d-1-(3-methyl-4-morpholino-2,2-diphenylbutyryl)pyrrolidine)
- (2) Diphenylmorpholinoisovaleric acid (2-methyl-3-morpholino-1,1-diphenylpropionic acid)
- (3) Levomoramide (l-1-(3-methyl-4-morpholino-2,2-diphenylbutyryl)pyrrolidine)
- (4) Racemoramide (d,1-1(3-methyl-4-morpholino-2,2-diphenylbutyryl)pyrrolidine)
10. Morphinans, their salts, derivatives and salts of derivatives including:

- (1) Buprenorphine (17-(cyclopropylmethyl)-(α-(1,1-dimethylethyl)-4,5-epoxy-18,19-dihydro-3-hydroxy-6-methoxy-(α-methyl-6,14-ethenomorphinan-7-methanol)
- (2) Drotebanol (6(β,14-dihydroxy-3,4-dimethoxy-17-methylmorphinan)
- (3) Levomethorphan (1-3-methoxy-17-methylmorphinan)
- (4) Levorphanol (1-3-hydroxy-17-methylmorphinan)
- (5) Levophenacymorphan (1-3-hydroxy-17-phenacyl-morphinan)
- (6) Norlevorphanol (1-3-hydroxymorphinan)
- (7) Phenomorphan (3-hydroxy-17-(2-phenylethyl) morphinan)
- (8) Racemethorphan (d,1-3-methoxy-17-methylmorphinan)
- (9) Racemorphan (3-hydroxy-N-methylmorphinan)

but not including

- (10) Dextromethorphan (d-1,2,3,9,10,10a-hexahydro-6-methoxy-11-methyl-4H-10,4a-iminoethano-phenanthren)
- (11) Dextrorphan (d-1,2,3,9,10,10a-hexahydro-11-methyl-4H-10,4a-iminoethanophenanthren-6-ol)
- (12) Levallorphan (1-11-allyl-1,2,3,9,10,10a-hexahydro-4H-10,4a-iminoethanophenanthren-6ol)
- (13) Levangorphan (1-11-propargyl-1,2,3,9,10,10a-hexahydro-4H-10,4a-iminoethanophenanthren-6-ol)
- (14) Butorphanol (17-(cyclobutylmethyl)morphinan-3,14-diol)
- (15) Nalbuphine (17-(cyclobutylmethyl)-4,5α-epoxymorphinan-3,6α,14-triol)
11. Benzazocines, their salts, derivatives and salts of derivatives including:
  - (1) Phenazocine (1,2,3,4,5,6-hexahydro-6,11-dimethyl-3-phenethyl-2,6-methano-3-benzazocin-8-ol)
  - (2) Metazocine (1,2,3,4,5,6-hexahydro-3,6,11-trimethyl-2,6-methano-3-benzazocin-8-ol)
  - (3) Pentazocine (1,2,3,4,5,6-hexahydro-6,11-dimethyl-3-(3-methyl-2-butenyl)-2,6-methano-3-benzazocin-8-ol)

but not including

- (4) Cyclazocine (1,2,3,4,5,6-hexahydro-6,11-dimethyl-3-(cyclopropylmethyl)-2,6-methano-3-benzazocin-8-ol)
12. Ampromides, their salts, derivatives and salts of derivatives including:
  - (1) Diampromide (N-[2-(methylphenethylamino) propyl] propionanilide)
  - (2) Phenampromide (N-(1-methyl-2-piperidino) ethyl) propionanilide)
  - (3) Propiram (N-(1-methyl-2-piperidinoethyl)-N-2-pyridylpropionamide)
13. Benzimidazoles, their salts, derivatives and salts of derivatives including:
  - (1) Clonitazene (2-(p-chlorobenzyl)-1-diethylaminoethyl-5-nitrobenzimidazole)
  - (2) Etonitazene (2-(p-ethoxybenzyl)-1-diethylaminoethyl-5-nitrobenzimidazole)
  - (3) Bezitramide (1-(3-cyano-3,3-diphenylpropyl)-4-(2-oxo-3-propionyl-1-benzimidazolyl)-piperidine)
14. Phencyclidine (1-(1-phenylcyclohexyl)piperidine), its salts, derivatives and analogues and salts of derivatives and analogues
15. Piritramide (1-(3-cyano-3,3-diphenylpropyl)-4-(1-piperidino)piperidine-4-carboxylic acid amide), its salts, derivatives and salts of derivatives
16. Fentanyls, their salts, derivatives, and analogues and salts of derivatives and analogues, including:
  - (1) Accetyl-α-methylfentanyl (N-[1-(α-methylphenethyl)-4-piperidyl] acetanilide)

- (2) Alfentanil (N-[1-[2-(4-ethyl-4,5-dihydro-5-oxo-1H-tetrazol-1-yl)ethyl]-4-(methoxymethyl)-4-piperidyl]propionanilide)
- (3) Carfentanil (methyl 4-[(1-oxopropyl)phenylamino]-1-(2-phenethyl)-4-piperidinecarboxylate)
- (4) p-Fluorofentanyl (4'fluoro-N-(1-phenethyl-4-piperidyl) propionanilide)
- (5) Fentanyl (N-(1-phenethyl-4-piperidyl) propionanilide)
- (6)  $\beta$ -Hydroxyfentanyl (N-[1-( $\beta$ -hydroxyphenethyl)-4-piperidyl] propionanilide)
- (7)  $\beta$ -Hydroxy-3-methylfentanyl (N-[1-( $\beta$ -hydroxyphenethyl)-3-methyl-4-piperidyl] propionanilide)
- (8)  $\alpha$ -Methylfentanyl (N-[1-( $\alpha$ -methylphenethyl)-4-piperidyl] propionanilide)
- (9)  $\alpha$ -Methylthiofentanyl (N-[1-methyl-2-(2-thienyl) ethyl]-4-piperidyl] propionanilide)
- (10) 3-Methylfentanyl (N-(3-methyl-1-phenethyl-4-piperidyl) propionanilide)
- (11) 3-Methylthiofentanyl (N-[3-methyl-1-[2-(2-thienyl) ethyl]-4-piperidyl]propionanilide)
- (12) Sufentanil (N-[4-(methoxymethyl)-1-[2-(2-thienyl)ethyl]-4-piperidyl] propionanilide)
- (13) Thiofentanyl (N-[1-[2-(2-thienyl)ethyl]-4-piperidyl]propionanilide)
17. Tilidine (ethyl12-(dimethylamino)-1-phenyl-3-cyclohexene-1-carboxylate), its salts, derivatives and salts of derivatives

SCHEDULE II

(Sections 2,3, 4 to 7, 10, 29, 55 and 60)

1. Cannabis, its preparations, derivatives and similar synthetic preparations, including:
  - (1) Cannabis resin
  - (2) Cannabis (marihuana)
  - (3) Cannabidiol (2-[3-methyl-6-(1-methylethenyl)-2-cyclohexen-1-yl]-5-pentyl-1,3-benzenediol)
  - (4) Cannabinol (3-n-amy-6,6,9-trimethyl-6-dibenzopyran-1-ol)
  - (5) Nabilone (( $\pm$ )-trans-3-(1,1-dimethylheptyl)-6,6a,7,8,10,10a-hyaxhydro-1-hydroxy-6,6-dimethyl-9H-dibenzo[b,d]pyran-9-one)
  - (6) Pyrahexyl (3-n-hexyl-6,6,0-trimethyl-7,8,9,10-tetrahydro-6-dibenzopyran-1-ol)
  - (7) Tetrahydrocannabinol (tetrahydro-6,6,9-trimethyl-3-pentyl-6H-dibenzo[b,d]pyran-1-ol)
- but not including
  - (8) Non-viable Cannabis seed
  - (9) Mature Cannabis stalks do not include leaves, flowers, seeds or branches; and fibre derived from such stalks

SCHEDULE III

(Sections 2 to 7, 29, 55 and 60)

1. Amphetamines, their salts, derivatives, isomers and analogues and salts of derivatives, isomers and analogues including:
  - (1) amphetamine ( $\alpha$ -methylbenzeneethanamine)
  - (2) methamphetamine (N, $\alpha$ -dimethylbenzeneethanamine)

- (3) N-ethylamphetamine (N-ethyl- $\alpha$ -methylbenzeneethanamine)
- (4) 4-methyl-2,5-dimethoxyamphetamine (2,5-dimethoxy-4, $\alpha$ -dimethylbenzeneethanamine)
- (5) 3,4-methylenedioxyamphetamine ( $\alpha$ -methyl-1,3-benzodioxole-5-ethanamine)
- (6) 2,5-dimethoxyamphetamine (2,5)-dimethoxy- $\alpha$ -methylbenzeneethanamine)
- (7) 4-methoxyamphetamine (4-methoxy- $\alpha$ -methylbenzeneethanamine)
- (8) 2,4,5-trimethoxyamphetamine (2,4,5-trimethoxy- $\alpha$ -methylbenzeneethanamine)
- (9) N-methyl-3,4-methylenedioxyamphetamine (N, $\alpha$ -dimethyl-1,3-benzodioxole-5-ethanamine)
- (10) 4-ethoxy-2,5-dimethoxyamphetamine (4-ethoxy-2,5-dimethoxy- $\alpha$ -methylbenzeneethanamine)
- (11) 5-methoxy-3,4-methylenedioxyamphetamine (7-methoxy- $\alpha$ -methyl-1,3-benzodioxole-5-ethanamine)
- (12) N,N-dimethyl-3,4-methylenedioxyamphetamine (N,N, $\alpha$ -trimethyl-1,3-benzodioxole-5-ethanamine)
- (13) N-ethyl-3,4-methylenedioxyamphetamine (N-ethyl- $\alpha$ -methyl-1,3-benzodioxole-5-ethanamine)
- (14) 4-ethyl-2,5-dimethoxyamphetamine (DOET) (4-ethyl-2,5-dimethoxy- $\alpha$ -methylbenzeneethanamine)
- (15) 4-bromo-2,5-dimethoxyamphetamine (4-bromo-2,5-dimethoxy- $\alpha$ -methylbenzeneethanamine)
- (16) 4-chloro-2,5-dimethoxyamphetamine (4-chloro-2,5-dimethoxy- $\alpha$ -methylbenzeneethanamine)
- (17) 4-ethoxyamphetamine (4-ethoxy- $\alpha$ -methylbenzeneethanamine)
- (18) Benzphetamine (N-benzyl-N, $\alpha$ -dimethylbenzeneethanamine)
- (19) N-Propyl-3,4-methylenedioxyamphetamine ( $\alpha$ -methyl-N-propyl-1,3-benzodioxole-5-ethanamine)
2. Methylphenidate ( $\alpha$ -phenyl-2-pyridineacetic acid methyl ester) and any salt thereof
3. Methaqualone (2-methyl-3-(2-methylphenyl)-4(3H)-quinazolinone) and any salt thereof
4. Mecloqualone (2-methyl-3-(2-chlorophenyl)-4(3H)-quinazolinone) and any salt thereof
5. Lysergic acid diethylamide (LSD) (N,N-diethyllysergamide) and any salt thereof
6. N,N-Diethyltryptamine (DET) (3-[2-diethylamino) ethyl]indole) and any salt thereof
7. N,N-Dimethyltryptamine (DMT) (3-[(2-dimethylamino)ethyl]indole) and any salt thereof
8. N-Methyl-3-piperidyl benzilate (3-[(hydroxydiphenylacetyl)oxy]-1-methylpiperidine) and any salt thereof
9. Harmaline (4,9-dihydro-7-methoxy-1-methyl-3H-pyrido(3,4-b)indole) and any salt thereof
10. Harmalol (4,9-dihydro-1-methyl-3H-pyrido (3,4-b)indol-7-ol) and any salt thereof
11. Psilocin (3-[2-(dimethylamino)ethyl]-4-hydroxyindole) and any salt thereof
12. Psilocybin (3-[2-(dimethylamino)ethyl]-4-phosphoryloxyindole) and any salt thereof
13. N-(1-phenylcyclohexyl)ethylamine (PCE) and any salt thereof
14. 1-[1-(2-Thienyl) cyclohexyl]piperidine (TCP) and any salt thereof

15. 1-Phenyl-N-propylcyclohexanamine and any salt thereof
16. 1-(1-Phenylcyclohexyl)pyrrolidine and any salt thereof
17. Mescaline (3,4,5-trimethoxybenzeneethanamine) and any salt thereof, but not peyote (lophophora)
18. 4-Methylaminorex (4,5-dihydro-4-methyl-5-phenyl-2-oxazoline) and any salt thereof
19. Cathinone ((-)- $\alpha$ -aminopropiophenone) and any salt thereof
20. Fenetylline (d.1-3,7-dihydro-1,3-dimethyl-7-(2-[(1-methyl-2-phenethyl)amino]ethyl)-1H-purine-2,6-dione) and any salt thereof
21. 2-Methylamino-1-phenyl-1-propanone and any salt thereof
22. 1-[1-(Phenylmethyl)cyclohexyl]piperidine and any salt thereof
23. 1-[1-(4-Methylphenyl)cyclohexyl]piperidine and any salt thereof

SCHEDULE IV

(Sections 2 to 4, 5 to 7, 29, 55 and 60)

1. Barbiturates, their salts and derivatives including
  - (1) Allobarbitol (5,5-diallylbarbituric acid)
  - (2) Alphenal (5-allyl-5-phenylbarbituric acid)
  - (3) Amobarbitol (5-ethyl-5-(3-methylbutyl)barbituric acid)
  - (4) Aprobarbitol (5-allyl-5-isopropylbarbituric acid)
  - (5) Barbitol (5,5-diethylbarbituric acid)
  - (6) Barbituric Acid (2,4,6(1H,3H,5H)-pyrimidinetrione)
  - (7) Butabarbitol (5-sec-butyl-5-ethylbarbituric acid)
  - (8) Butalbital (5-allyl-5-isobutylbarbituric acid)
  - (9) Butallylonal (5-(2-bromoallyl)-5-sec-butylbarbituric acid)
  - (10) Butethal (5-butyl-5-ethylbarbituric acid)
  - (11) Cyclobarbitol (5-(1-cyclohexen-1-yl)-5-ethylbarbituric acid)
  - (12) Cyclopal (5-allyl-5-(2-cyclopenten-1-yl)barbituric acid)
  - (13) Heptabarbitol (5-(1-cyclohepten-1-yl)-5-ethylbarbituric acid)
  - (14) Hexethal (5-ethyl-5-hexylbarbituric acid)
  - (15) Hexobarbitol (5-(1-cyclohexen-1-yl)-1,5-dimethylbarbituric acid)
  - (16) Mephobarbitol (5-ethyl-1-methyl-5-phenylbarbituric acid)
  - (17) Methabarbitol (5,5-diethyl-1-methylbarbituric acid)
  - (18) Methylphenobarbitol (5-ethyl-1-methyl-5-phenylbarbituric acid)
  - (19) Propallylonal (5-(2-bromoallyl)-5-isopropylbarbituric acid)
  - (20) Pentobarbitol (5-ethyl-5-(1-methylbutyl)barbituric acid)
  - (21) Phenobarbitol (5-ethyl-5-phenylbarbituric acid)
  - (22) Probarbitol (5-ethyl-5-isopropylbarbituric acid)
  - (23) Phenylmethylbarbituric Acid (5-methyl-5-phenylbarbituric acid)
  - (24) Secobarbitol (5-allyl-5-(1-methylbutyl)barbituric acid)
  - (25) Sigmodal (5-(2-bromoallyl)-5-(1-methylbutyl) barbituric acid)
  - (26) Talbutal (5-allyl-5-sec-butylbarbituric acid)
  - (27) Vinbarbitol (5-ethyl-5-(1-methyl-1-butenyl) barbituric acid)
  - (28) Vinylbital (5-(1-methylbutyl)-5-vinylbarbituric acid)
2. Thiobarbiturates, their salts and derivatives including:
  - (1) Thialbarbitol (5-allyl-5-(2-cyclohexen-1-yl)-2-thiobarbituric acid)
  - (2) Thiamylal (5-allyl-5-(1-methylbutyl)-2-thiobarbituric acid)
  - (3) Thiobarbituric Acid (2-thiobarbituric acid)
  - (4) Thiopental (5-ethyl-5-(1-methylbutyl)-2-thiobarbituric acid)
3. Chlorphentermine (1-(p-chlorophenyl)-2-methyl-2-aminopropane) and any salt thereof

4. Diethylpropion (2-(diethylamino)propiofenone) and any salt thereof
5. Phendimetrazine (d-3,4-dimethyl-2-phenylmorpholine) and any salt thereof
6. Phenmetrazine (3-methyl-2-phenylmorpholine) and any salt thereof
7. Pipradol ( $\alpha,\alpha$ -diphenyl-2-piperidinemethanol) and any salt thereof
8. Phentermine ( $\alpha,\alpha$ -dimethylbenzeneethanamine) and any salt thereof
9. Butorphanol (1-N-cyclobutylmethyl-3,14-dihydroxymorphinan) and any salt thereof
10. Nalbuphine (N-cyclobutylmethyl-4,5-epoxy-morphinan-3,6,14-triol) and any salt thereof
11. Gluethimide (2-ethyl-2-phenylglutarimide)
12. Clotiazepam (5-(o-chlorophenyl)-7-ethyl-1,3-dihydro-1-methyl-2-H-thieno [2,3-e]-1,4-diazepin-2-one)
13. Ethchlorvynol (ethyl-2-chlorovinyl ethynyl carbinol)
14. Ethinamate (1-ethynylcyclohexanol carbamate)
15. Mazindol (5-(p-chlorophenyl)-2,5-dihydro-3H-imidazo[2,1-a]isoindol-5-ol)
16. Meprobamate (2-methyl-2-propyl-1,3-propanediol dicarbamate)
17. Methypylon (3,3-diethyl-5-methyl-2,4-piperidinedione)
18. Benzodiazepines, their salts and derivatives, including:
  - (1) Alprazolam (8-chloro-1-methyl-6-phenyl-4H-s-triazolo[4,3-a][1,4] benzo-diazepine)
  - (2) Bromazepam (7-bromo-1,3-dihydro-5-(2-pyridyl)-2H-1, 4-benzodiazepin-2-one)
  - (3) Camazepam (7-chloro-1,3-dihydro-3-(N,N-dimethylcarbamoyl)-1-methyl-5-phenyl-2H-1,4-benzodiazepin-2-one)
  - (4) Chlordiazepoxide (7-chloro-2-(methylamino)-5-phenyl-3H-1,4-benzodiazepine-4-oxide)
  - (5) Clobazam (7-chloro-1-methyl-5-phenyl-1H-1,5-benzodiazepine-2,4(3H,5H)-dione)
  - (6) Clonazepam (5-(o-chlorophenyl)-1,3-dihydro-7-nitro-2H-1,4-benzodiazepin-2-one)
  - (7) Clorazepate (7-chloro-2,3-dihydro-2,2-dihydroxy-5-phenyl-1H-1,4-benzodiazepine-3-carboxylic acid)
  - (8) Cloxazolam (10-chloro-11b-(o-chlorophenyl)-2,3,7,11b-tetrahydrooxazolo[3,2-d][1,4] benzodiazepin 6-(5H)-one)
  - (9) Delorazepam (7-chloro-5-chlorophenyl)-1,3-dihydro-2H-1,4-benzodiazepin-2-one)
  - (10) Diazepam (7-chloro-1,3-dihydro-1-methyl-5-phenyl-2H-1,4-benzodiazepin-2-one)
  - (11) Estazolam (8-chloro-6-phenyl-4H-s-triazolo[4,3-a][1,4]benzodiazepine)
  - (12) Ethyl Loflazepate (ethyl 7-chloro-5-(o-fluorophenyl)-2,3-dihydro-2-oxo-1H-1,4-benzodiazepine-3-carboxylate)
  - (13) Fludiazepam (7-chloro-5-(o-fluorophenyl)-1,3-dihydro-1-methyl-2H-1,4-benzodiazepin-2-one)
  - (14) Flunitrazepam (5-(o-fluorophenyl)-1,3-dihydro-1-methyl-7-nitro-2H-1,4-benzodiazepin-2-one)
  - (15) Flurazepam (7-chloro-1-[2-(diethylamino) ethyl]-5-(o-fluorophenyl)-1,3-dihydro-2H-1,4-benzodiazepin-2-one)
  - (16) Halazepam (7-chloro-1,3-dihydro-5-phenyl-1-(2, 2,2-trifluoroethyl)-2H-1,4-benzodiazepin-2-one)
  - (17) Haloxazolam (10-bromo-11b-(o-fluorophenyl)-2,3,7,11b-tetrahydrooxazolo[3,2-d][1,4]benzodiazepin-6(5H)-one)

- (18) Ketazolam (11-chloro-8,12b-dihydro-2,8-dimethyl-12b-phenyl-4H-[1,3]-oxazino-[3,2-d][1,4] benzodiazepine-4,7(6H)-dione)
- (19) Loprazolam (6-(o-chlorophenyl)-2,4-dihydro-2-[(4-methyl-1-piperazinyl)methylene]-8-nitro-1H-imidazo[1,2-a][1,4]benzodiazepin-1-one)
- (20) Lorazepam (7-chloro-5-(o-chlorophenyl)-1,3-dihydro-3-hydroxy-2H-1,4-benzodiazepin-2-one)
- (21) Lormetazepam (7-chloro-5-(o-chlorophenyl)-1,3-dihydro-3-hydroxy-1-methyl-2H-1,4-benzodiazepin-2-one)
- (22) Medazepam (7-chloro-2,3-dihydro-1-methyl-5-phenyl-1H-1,4-benzodiazepine)
- (23) Nimetazepam (1,3-dihydro-1-methyl-7-nitro-5-phenyl-2H-1,4-benzodiazepin-2-one)
- (24) Nitrazepam (1,3-dihydro-7-nitro-5-phenyl-2H-1,4-benzodiazepin-2-one)
- (25) Nordazepam (7-chloro-1,3-dihydro-5-phenyl-1 (2H)-1,4-benzodiazepin-2-one)
- (26) Oxazepam (7-chloro-1,3-dihydro-3-hydroxy-5-phenyl-2H-1,4-benzodiazepin-2-one)
- (27) Oxazolam (10-chloro-2,3,7,11b-tetrahydro-2-methyl-11b-phenyloxazolo [3,2-d][1,4]benzodiazepin-6(5H)-one)
- (28) Pinazepam (7-chloro-1,3-dihydro-5-phenyl-1-(2-propynyl)-2H-1,4-benzodiazepin-2-one)
- (29) Prazepam (7-chloro-1-(cyclopropylmethyl)-1,3-dihydro-5-phenyl-2H-1,4-benzodiazepin-2-one)
- (30) Temazepam (7-chloro-1,3-dihydro-3-hydroxy-1-methyl-5-phenyl-2H-1,4-benzodiazepin-2-one)
- (31) Tetrazepam (7-chloro-5-(cyclohexen-1-yl)-1,2,3-dihydro-1-methyl-2H-1,4-benzodiazepin-one)
- (32) Triazolam (8-chloro-6-(o-chlorophenyl)-1-methyl-4H-s-triazolo [4,3-a][1,4]benzodiazepine)
19. Catha edulis Forsk., its preparations, derivatives alkaloids and salts, including:
  - (1) Cathine (d-threo-2-amino-1-hydroxy-1-phenylpropane)
20. Fencamfamin (d,1-N-ethyl-3-phenylbicyclo[2,2,1]heptan-2-amine) and any salt thereof
21. Fenproporex (d,1-3-[( $\alpha$ -methylphenethyl)amino]propionitrile) and any salt thereof
22. Mefenorex (d,1-N(3-chloropropyl)- $\alpha$ -methylbenzeneethanamine) and any salt thereof
23. Anabolic steroids and their derivatives including:
  - (1) Androisoxazole (17 $\beta$ -hydroxy-17 $\alpha$ -methylandrostando[3,2-c]isoxazole)
  - (2) Androstanolone (17 $\beta$ -hydroxy-5 $\alpha$ -androstan-3-one)
  - (3) Androstenediol (androst-5-ene-3 $\beta$ ,17 $\beta$ -diol)
  - (4) Bolandiol (estr-4-ene-3 $\beta$ ,17 $\beta$ -diol)
  - (5) Bolasterone (17 $\beta$ -hydroxy-7 $\alpha$ ,17-dimethylandrostand-4-en-3-one)
  - (6) Bolazine (17 $\beta$ -hydroxy-2 $\alpha$ -methyl-5 $\beta$ -androstan-3-one azine)
  - (7) Boldenone (17 $\beta$ -hydroxyandrosta-1,4-dien-3-one)
  - (8) Bolenol (19-nor-17 $\alpha$ -pregn-5-en-17-ol)
  - (9) Calusterone (17 $\beta$ -hydroxy-7 $\beta$ ,17-dimethylandrostand-4-en-3-one)
  - (10) Clostebol (4-chloro-17 $\beta$ -hydroxyandrostand-4-en-3-one)
  - (11) Drostanolone (17 $\beta$ -hydroxy-2 $\alpha$ -methyl-5 $\alpha$ -androstan-3-one)
  - (12) Enestebol (4,17 $\beta$ -dihydroxy-17-methylandrosta-1,4-dien-3-one)
  - (13) Epitiostanol (2 $\alpha$ , 3 $\alpha$ -epithio-5 $\alpha$ -androstan-17 $\beta$ -ol)
  - (14) Ethylestrenol (19-nor-17 $\alpha$ -pregn-4-en-17-ol)

- (15) 4-Hydroxy-19-nor testosterone
- (16) Fluoxymesterone (9-fluoro-11 $\beta$ ,17 $\beta$ -dihydroxy-17-methylandrosta-4-en-3-one)
- (17) Formebolone (11 $\alpha$ ,17 $\beta$ -dihydroxy-17-methyl-3-oxoandrosta-1,4 di-2n-2-carboxaldehyde)
- (18) Furazabol (17-methol-5 $\alpha$ -androstan[2,3-c]furazan-17 $\beta$ -ol)
- (19) Mebolazine (17 $\beta$ -hydroxy-2 $\alpha$ ,17-dimethyl-5 $\alpha$ -androstan-3-one azine)
- (20) Mesabolone (17 $\beta$ -[(1-methoxycyclohexyl)oxy]-5 $\alpha$ -androsta-1-en-3-one)
- (21) Mesterolone (17 $\beta$ -hydroxy-1 $\alpha$ -methyl-5 $\alpha$ -androstan-3-one)
- (22) Metandienone (17 $\beta$ -hydroxy-17-methylandrosta-1,4-dien-3-one)
- (23) Metenolone (17 $\beta$ -hydroxy-1-methyl-5 $\alpha$ -androsta-1-en-3-one)
- (24) Methandriol (17 $\alpha$ -methylandrosta-5-ene-3 $\beta$ ,17 $\beta$ -diol)
- (25) Methyltestosterone (17 $\beta$ -hydroxy-17-methylandrosta-4-en-3-one)
- (26) Metribolone (17 $\beta$ -hydroxy-17-methylestra-4,9,11-trien-3-one)
- (27) Mibolerone (17 $\beta$ -hydroxy-7 $\alpha$ ,17dimethylestra-4-en-3-one)
- (28) Nandrolone (17 $\beta$ -hydroxyestra-4-en-3-one)
- (29) Norboletole (13-ethyl-17 $\beta$ -hydroxy-18,19-dinorpregn-4-en-3-one)
- (30) Norclostebol (4-chloro-17 $\beta$ -hydroxyestra-4-en-3-one)
- (31) Norethandrolone (17 $\alpha$ -ethyl-17 $\beta$ -hydroxyestra-4-en-3-one)
- (32) Oxabolone (4,17 $\beta$ -dihydroxyestra-4-en-3-one)
- (33) Oxandrolone (17 $\beta$ -hydroxy-17-methyl-2-oxa-5 $\alpha$ -androstan-3-one)
- (34) Oxymesterone (4,17 $\beta$ -dihydroxy-17-methylandrosta-4-en-3-one)
- (35) Oxymetholone (17 $\beta$ -hydroxy-2-(hydroxymethylene)-17-methyl-5 $\alpha$ -androsta-3-one)
- (36) Prasterone (3 $\beta$ -hydroxyandrosta-5-en-17-one)
- (37) Quinbolone (17 $\beta$ -(1-cyclopenten-1-yloxy)androsta-1,4-dien-3-one)
- (38) Stanozolol (17 $\beta$ -hydroxy-17-methyl-5 $\alpha$ -androstan[3,2-c]pyrazole)
- (39) Stenbolone (17 $\beta$ -hydroxy-2-methyl-5 $\alpha$ -androsta-1-en-3-one)
- (40) Testosterone (17 $\beta$ -hydroxyandrosta-4-en-3-one)
- (41) Tibolone (17-hydroxy-7 $\alpha$ -methyl-19-norpregn-5(10)-en-20-yn-3-one)
- (42) Tiomesterone (1 $\alpha$ ,7 $\alpha$ -bis(acetylthio)-17 $\beta$ -hydroxy-17-methylandrosta-4-en-3-one)
- (43) Trenbolone (17 $\beta$ -hydroxyestra-4,9,11-trien-3-one)
24. Zeranol (3,4,5,6,7,8,9,10,11,12-decahydro-7,14,16-trihydroxy-3-methyl-1H-2-benzoxacetyldecalin-1-one)

SCHEDULE V

(Sections 2, 4, 6, 55 and 60)

1. Phenylpropanolamine (2-amino-1-phenyl-1-propanol) and any salt thereof
2. Propylhexedrine (1-cyclohexyl-2-methylaminopropane) and any salt thereof
3. Pyrovalerone (1-(1-pyrrolidinyl)butyl p-tolyl ketone and any salt thereof)

SCHEDULE VI

(Sections 2, 6, 55 and 60)

1. Benzyl methyl ketone (P2P (1-phenyl-2-propanone))
2. Ephedrine (1-erythro-2-(methylamino)-1-phenylpropan-1-ol)
3. Ergometrine (9,10-didehydro-N-(2-hydroxy-1-methylethyl)-6-methylergoline-8-carboxamide)

- 4. Ergotamine (12'-hydroxy-2'-methyl-5'-(phenylmethyl)ergotaman-3',6',18-trione)
- 5. Lysergic acid (9,10-didehydro-6-methylergoline-8-carboxylic acid)
- 6. Pseudoephedrine (d-threo-2-(methylamino)-1-phenylpropan-1-ol)

SCHEDULE VII

(Sections 5 and 60)

Substance	Amount
1. Cannabis resin	3 kg
2. Cannabis (marihuana)	3 kg

SCHEDULE VIII

(Sections 4 and 60)

Substance	Amount
1. Cannabis resin	1 g
2. Cannabis (marihuana)	30 g
